Professor T. R. Loudon, professor of applied mechanics at the University of Toronto, has been promoted to the rank of Wing Commander in the Royal Canadian Expeditionary Force as a lieutenant in the Canadian Engineers. He served through numerous engagements overseas, including the First Battle of the Somme and the Third Battle of Ypres. He was a major in the 1st Battalion, Canadian Railway Troops, when he was wounded at Ypres in 1917, and mentioned in despatches.

Professor Loudon, B.A.Sc., graduated from this university in 1906. In the First World War he joined the Canadian Expeditionary Force as a lieutenant in the Canadian Engineers. He served through numerous engagements overseas, including the First Battle of the Somme and the Third Battle of Ypres. He was a major in the 1st Battalion, Canadian Railway Troops, when he was wounded at Ypres in 1917, and mentioned in despatches.

Professor Loudon, having been promoted to the rank of colonel, acted as Commanding Officer of the University of Toronto Contingent, Canadian Officers' Training Corps, from 1925 to 1930. He served four years as president of the Students' Administrative Council, and also acted as president of the Amateur Athletic Union of Canada for a time.

CADWELL TO DESCRIBE AIR RAID PRECAUTIONS

Lecture Course to Include Practical Demonstration and Drill as well as Basic A.R.P. Organization

TO BE HELD IN O.C.E.

Basic Air Raid Precaution Training will be the subject of the lecture given to the members of the Women's Service Training Detachment next Thursday night in Room 331, O.C.E.

The lecturer will be Mr. J. Roy Cadwell, inspector of legal offices for the Ontario government and secretary of the Civilian Defense Committee. This committee was established by Order-in-Council of the Ontario government on Sept. 4th. Hon. Gordon D. Conant, the Attorney-General, is chairman.

Mr. Cadwell will give two lectures on this subject. The first will be on Basic A.R.P. organization and training. The second, it was stated, will probably include a practical demonstration and drill.

was the most efficient way of handling large numbers and exercised the greatest degree of control.

He also announced that section commanders, one for each line of a platoon, would soon be appointed. These could be used to check the attendance for squadron leaders, he explained, for, although this was not universally done in the army it would help to speed up things in the unit.

Senior Lieutenant, Miss A. E. M. Parkes, who then took over the command, announced that the regular drill on Thursday would be held as soon after five p.m. as possible, with dismissal at six p.m.

So-Long For Now!

It's going to be hard to write an editorial about Norm Altstetter leaving for the Air Force. It probably won't be an editorial at all, for editorials are supposed to follow an ordered pattern and this is just going to be the rambling thoughts that pass through our mind when we part temporarily with a fellow worker and a friend.

Throughout his whole college career Norm has been intimately associated with The Varsity, rising from reporter to managing editor. There has probably been no one who has worked harder or more conscientiously for the good of this paper. A long recital of his work is unnecessary. We who have worked with him know it, and that is sufficient.

It would be a difficult task to explain to an outsider the feeling one gets from working on The Varsity. We on the staff feel it; we cannot explain it. Perhaps it is that sense of kinship born of a common endeavour toward a common goal, the feeling of comradeship that develops out of the task of publishing five issues of The Varsity every week. At any rate that is the feeling we have about Norm. He has been an unselfish worker and a real friend.

So lots of luck to you, Norm, in your new assignment, and may you be back with us soon for your full share of by-lines in future editions.

Spare The Roses

As we write these lines we are figuratively dodging a barrage of feminine brickbats. But we'll dodge and write on. The point is this. Before the social season goes much farther we feel that there should be a general agreement on the campus that corsages be eliminated this year as a useless expense. Added to the brickbats from the feminine section of this campus, we can visualize the sour glances and words hurled in our direction by Toronto florists. We still feel that corsages should be eliminated.

This year we have been urged to keep our social activities on a moderate scale. So far there has been little evidence that this has been done apart from a number of informal parties held by the various colleges. Big dances are still being held at the hotel; fraternities are still holding formals; and women's residences are still holding their usual formals. The expense entailed in these is not much less than in former years. When the price of a corsage is added to the price of admission, the result, apart from an occasional enhancement of the co-ed's beauty, is a considerable slice into an ed's budget. The formals given by women's residences are considered by the women as a nice free party for the boys, a friendly gesture of thanks for past attentions. But if a chap has to hand out several dollars for a corsage, the free evening pretty well disappears.

We feel that in the interests of general economy the women's residences, and any group giving a formal dance, should openly discourage in advance the sending of corsages. The practice is a nice social convention; in times of prosperity it is perhaps justified. But in these times it is unnecessary and it is blatantly wasteful. After all, our co-eds do not need floral tributes to make them beautiful. And with that parting bouquet to stay the blast of feminine criticism we leave the thought with you. We hope it will be acted upon.

Parking Made Easy

Toronto citizens, weary and exasperated by the constant effort of trying to find a parking place in the downtown area, would be well-advised to give some consideration to the parking meter system which is gaining popularity in the United States. At present the system is in successful operation in over 200 cities, several of which are in the 500,000 to 1,000,000 population bracket.

The advantages of the system are chiefly that it affords satisfactory parking facilities for a greater number of cars and it makes enforcement of parking regulations easier. The street is lined in twenty-foot spaces, seven feet in length, and one meter is provided for each space. The insertion of a five-cent piece gives the motorist exactly one hour of legal parking. At the expiration of the time limit a signal indicates that the legal parking time has been completed and a policeman can easily spot the offending vehicle. This eliminates the old system of chalk marks on tires, and by relieving the enforcement duties of the police force, provides more policemen for systematic traffic direction. The main value of the system is in eliminating the all-day parker who came with the dawn and stayed till evening on the busiest street in town. The result in actual practice has been that there are about five vacant spaces in a block at any given time, and has led to a larger turnover of cars. A shopper can come downtown, park conveniently near his destination, pay but five cents instead of the usual quarter in a parking lot, and can be gone after he has completed his business. This saves time for the parker. Furthermore, each parker does not have to pay five cents, for if the first parker only stayed twenty minutes, someone else can use that space for forty minutes. As many as ten cars have been checked in and out of one space in an hour by official count.

There are some disadvantages naturally. Suburban or neighbourhood merchants have found some of their former customers going down to the larger shops to do their buying, but the complaint has not been general. Well over 95 percent of the American cities which installed the system have reported satisfaction, and those who introduced it as a trial measure are for the most part adopting it as a permanent feature. It is a development which deserves serious investigation by the planning commissions of any large modern city with a traffic problem.

APRIL MUSIC

The Marriage of St. Francis

(Through editorial oversight, which we sincerely regret, the review of The Marriage of St. Francis was left out of yesterday's issue. We publish it herewith.)

Magnificent pictorial appeal was the outstanding feature of St. Michael's College production of The Marriage of St. Francis. The story traces in tableau form the conflict of Francis Bernardone, played by Tom McDermott, after his betrothal to Lady Poverty, played by Maureen Murphy, with misunderstanding on every hand. He finds few enough "stones" with which to build his House of God, but these few surround him as a faithful little band, although even they are unable to follow him to the heights of ecstasy which he experiences, or into the depths of misery where he is dragged by the conviction of his own sin.

The dramatist set out to portray the development of a man's soul; the production concentrated on what was evidently felt to be a great spiritual message—of triumph through faith. If the production had concerned itself with the play as drama, the message would still have been clear without its bogging down and befuddling the action of the play. A sharp pair of shears would have helped the script immeasurably. It was an extremely wordy play that would have challenged the most expert handling to rouse a word-weary audience.

The tableau at the end was reminiscent of Sinclair Lewis' curtain speech after Angela's Ashes—the play would have been better off without it.

Sets were handled most effectively, as well as the complicated lighting. But here and now we institute a campaign for stage lighting with some purpose other than that of bizarre effect. Dawn and dusk succeeded each other with alarming rapidity in one scene—in others it was not clear whether the time was night or day; the same blue light being used as background for both.

In the earnestly sincere, beautifully simple performance of Tom McDermott as St. Francis, we felt no subtle development or deepening in the exposition of character. But against the lack of polish and ability to dominate was set constant sympathy between him and his audience. Maureen Murphy has a beautiful voice and admirably clear diction. Her

Student Directory Out!

The Student Directory is once again on your favorite news-stand. This year's edition has resulted in many changes, and the student will be pleased to find a completely renovated book.

Although the price remains at thirty-five cents, there will be no cause for complaint. Firstly, the Directory will now be presented in a special deluxe No. 1 grade leather bound edition. Another special feature will be the illustrated section. This will consist of pictures of all co-eds with, of course, telephone number to match. This will eliminate all guess work on the part of male students. As an added attraction all Follies girls will be in Technicolour.

A lucky number may also be found on page three. The draw will be held next week, and prizes will consist of the answers to the French 1A final examination. The authorities expect a record number of Pass Arts students in the draw. There will also be fun and favours to all those participating.

This year, the Press has also introduced a tie-up with all local neighbourhood theatres. Instead of giving away sets of Pink Pandora dishes, encyclopedias or Giant Comics, a Student Directory will be received gratis for every admission paid. All theatre managers are firmly convinced that these books will do away with Dish and Bank Night fads. Imagine the wealth of material to be found in one of these little books. The book offers such information concerning Mabel (Ms. 2244) or Mabel (L.L. 3344), address, phone number, and what she is doing next Saturday night.

After the book is purchased, and if one has a free phone available, think of the fun to be had of a Sunday evening. It is little wonder that the Book of the Month has already stated this handy book as its selection, not to mention Mabel (Ms. 2244).

As a last added attraction, the book is also suitable for framing.

Hank Rooster

words fell musically and rhythmically, but they failed utterly to carry the weight of conviction. Nearly all the minor parts were well drawn.

The scene in Act III presenting the traditional legend of St. Francis and the birds was most refreshingly charming. Childish voices contrasted well with the solemnity of the rest of the play.

A program note stressed "that divine fire of which St. Francis speaks." If that Divine fire did not glow in last night's production, at least a fine flame was there—a flame that can and should grow with successive performances. These players have one of the prime necessities of successful production—the courage of their convictions.

Toronto Symphony

The Toronto Symphony Orchestra offered an extremely pleasant well-balanced program with which they dealt in their usual fine style. Sir Ernest MacMillan's able conducting once again led the orchestra through delicate and tempestuous passages alike to the delight of his audience.

The Brahms Overture proved to be more appealing than his better known Academic Festival Overture. Throughout it was a number of brooding melancholy now rising to severe and even fierce heights.

Following the Overture, the Concerto lacked some of the usual Beethoven appeal although certainly the guest artist, Norman Wilks, displayed great technical skill. Piano and orchestra were intricately and pleasantly woven with each other and especially in the more rapid delicate passages did this partnership show off to splendid advantage. Mr. Wilks' remarkable talent for quick light piano work was most impressive. As a result, the Allegro played rather slowly perhaps but with a beautiful development of theme—and the final Rondo quickened the interest and approval to a greater extent; the Chopin encores suited the artist's Agamemnon, sitting in his wooden horse, Smoked Picobac to make the Trojans come across.

Who would not—and does not—"go" for the rich, ripe aroma of Picobac? And its nutty flavour is equally enticing. It is the pick of Canada's Burley crop—always a mild, cool, sweet smoke. Students may feel that the charms of the Iliad are professorially over-rated; but not the charms of Picobac!

Correspondence

The Editor, The Varsity.

Dear Sir,—

Many letters are being received from students advising of a change in their address due to the fact that they are attending school or college. If their permanent home residence is not changed while they are attending college they do not need to notify this bureau. However, if they should change their permanent home address during the school year, or if they do not return to their home address at the end of the school year, they must notify the Dominion Statistician at once.

Yours very truly,

R. H. Coats,

style precisely.

The inclusion of two works by Sir Edward Elgar in the program might at first glance have seemed an unhappy choice. But when the better known Pomp and Circumstance No. 2 had been joyously concluded the first few bars of Symphony No. 1 dispelled all doubts as to the wisdom of this action. The Elgar Symphony in a glorious pattern of moods swept from Andante to breathless Allegro—to finish at last in a superb rush of melody. Throughout it all there ran the one recurring theme, heard vaguely through the passing conflict of moods. This was perhaps the most outstanding number on the program and set a triumphant and stormy ending for a pleasant performance.

let's go places

A double bill made up of a musical and a film about a German sea-raider provides good light entertainment at Shea's this week. "The Hit Parade of 1941" is a dressed-

SHEA'S HIT PARADE with only the SEA RAIDER vaguest hint of a plot. The story, where it turns up, is about an uncle and nephew (Hugh Herbert and Kenney Baker) who substitute on radio programs the voice of Frances Langford for that of the sponsor's daughter (Ann Miller), a tap-happy hoover whose voice resembles that of an hysterical host-owl. Frances Langford sings as well as always, and Ann Miller by her acting and dancing shows that she has a lot on the ball. Kenney Baker still talks like that cute kid across the street, the one aged six.

"The Mystery Sea Raider" unmasks the German spy almost immediately, so that he can continue in the film as an out-and-out villain without confusing anyone. This picture is a "Give-them-a-shot-across-the-bow" type, complete with submarines, and ships being captured at sea by enemy agents, and then being used as raiders against other vessels. The different nations involved in the plot are distinguished by the use of very definite accents, with hero Henry Wilcoxon's spotty Brooklyn Irish dialect coming in a limping fourth behind the English, French and German.

Speaking OF SPORT

By Owen Prichard

THOUGHTS AT RANDOM ABOUT AMERICAN FOOTBALL

The reports which came from the recent luncheon of the New York Football Writers' Association being the whole question of "big gates" in American football into the limelight in an interesting fashion.

"Chick" Meehan was the protagonist of the wide-open system of going after big gate receipts, while Ken Fairman, graduate manager of athletics at Princeton, defended the simon-pure attitude, predicting an expansion of Princeton's intramural athletic program.

We can view the whole squabble with impersonal eyes, because the situation which prevails in the States is very unlikely to occur on this campus. However, it presents very clearly the conflicting ideas on intercollegiate athletics in general. Speaking of the rise in importance of certain southern and southwestern colleges which have "all-star" teams, Meehan came out flat-footed with the statement, "Those teams weren't built up by the colleges alone. The Rotary Clubs, the business men, the Chambers of Commerce—they all pitched in. Why? Because it was good business for them."

This plain talk is refreshing in that Meehan doesn't quibble in stating his viewpoint. However, we personally climb aboard with the Princeton advocate. We like to see lots of people making heads and tails of dough, but it seems to us that the purpose of college athletics is to develop ability and sportsmanship among college students, or are we old-fashioned? If colleges exist so that ribbon-sellers and hotel-keepers and restaurant-owners can rake in the shekels, then why don't the people concerned stage mammoth intercollegiate bingos and leave college athletics to pursue a sensible course of development?

A PLEA TO MANAGERS

It is the practice at each intercollegiate event for the referee to bring a score-sheet supplied by the Athletic Office, on which managers are to enter the names of their players. That these names, and the additional information such as scores, be legible and complete is of the utmost importance. Some score-sheets reach the Athletic Office with only vague hints as to the identity of the players who scored points and in what period these points were made. A little extra effort on the part of score-keepers would help immeasurably. This corner also suggests that the players' numbers be written on the sheet by the manager at the beginning of the game, so that a greater degree of accuracy may be attained in the reporting of the games in this and other papers.

CONCERNING NOVICE BOXING

The list of those taking instruction in the novice boxing class shows that 31 students are signed up for these tutorials. Eleven Schoolmen compose the largest group from any one faculty, while St. Mike's and U.C. are second and third in the list with seven and six entries respectively. Vic has four men entered so far. A popular division is the 155-pound department, which has a fair share of the class. The top-weights are scarce, with only one at 165. University College is having a meeting on Thursday to drum up some interest among the new men in the college. Valuable point for the T. A. Reed Trophy standing will come the way of whatever faculty cops the novice and senior boxing meets. From where we sit it looks as if S.P.S. have the edge at present, but St. Mike's and U.C. have a good chance to bring home a championship in the fist-cliff loop.

STUDENT TICKETS FOR SATURDAY'S GAME

According to the custom in past years, Saturday's game, being a play-off fixture, students will not be admitted free. However, Section T has been reserved, and student tickets for that section will go on sale today in the Athletic Office. More than one ticket may be bought at a time, and students are advised to bring their registration cards when coming to purchase their ducats.

Senior School walloped the Dents stickmen yesterday afternoon in the big gym by a 9-2 count. Their group also includes O.C.E., and has gone into a kind of merry-go-round. O.C.E. trimmed School, Dents beat O.C.E., and now the Engineers have downed Dents, creating a three-way tie for first place. The Engineers took a 3-0 lead in the first half, and were never threatened after that. Both squads scored twice in the second, and the Blue and Gold topped off their count with three in the third chapter and a solo effort in the final.

Smoke Snookum accounted for both Dent tallies. Fred Starr lived up to his name and copped a trio of goals. Bryce, Radmore, and Quist bagged a brace apiece.

Dents: Goodison, Snookum, Cameron, Sland, DeLagran, Hambley, McCartney, Coffin, Sproule.

SPORT SCHEDULES

Following are two revisions in this week's sport schedule:

The O.C.E.-Sr. S.P.S. lacrosse game scheduled for Friday, Nov. 15, has been postponed on account of the U.C. Follies.

The Pharmacy-Dents soccer game, rained out Monday, will be played on Friday, Nov. 15, on the Vic field at 4.30.

Vic Hopes For Play-Off
Dimmed By Defeat

By Beryl Pollock

Attention all baseball players! From all reports we hear that the league hopes to get under way this week. The schedule is not definite yet, but St. Mike's and Vic are both entering teams. If you are interested, turn out and give your team some support. The games are to be played in Little Vic gym.

All those interested in the Badminton Club, please note that if the fees for this club are not paid at once, to the representatives of the different colleges, they will not be able to rent the courts. The representatives are: Victoria, Jean Stirling; U.C., Jean Wallace; Trinity, Adene Seagram; St. Mike's, Betty Kirby. The club is hoping to get the courts at St. Paul's Church, Bloor and Church Streets, and want to start as soon as possible.

The basketball game is fast approaching the play-offs, and for the group winners, judging from past performances, we pick U.C. Juniors, Vic Seniors, O.C. and Physiotherapy, and either Vic Freshies or St. Hilda's Seniors. How about giving your teams some encouragement by coming out? By the way, you will see some very fine basketball.

Last night's results of the games at O.C.E. show Meds 18 and U.C. Srs. 9, and U.C. Jr.s victorious over Housebold Science by a score of 35-11. For tonight at 6 o'clock, Vic Freshies take on Nurses; at 7 o'clock Physical Education play U.C. Juniors; St. Hilda's Juniors and U.C. Freshies are slated for 8 o'clock.

JR. SCHOOL DEFEATS MEDS
IN VOLLEYBALL GAME

Junior School took the measure of Junior Meds in a three-set volleyball game played on the upper gym floor yesterday afternoon, 15-4, 9-15, 15-11.

Jr. S.P.S.: Lucas, Gibson, Bill, Isbister, Christlaw, Smith, Darling, Wilson, Parchello, Jones, Crawford.

Jr. Meds: Rosenberg, Davies, Rotenberg, Goodman, Goldstein, Jaffe, Sherman, Hotz, Giardine, Ella, Seigel.

KNOX DEFEATS WYCLIFFE
4-0 IN SOCCER MATCH

Wycliffe's soccerites are still the scoreless wonders of the intercollegiate loop, having continued their scoreless streak into another game yesterday as Knox blanked them by a 4-0 margin.

Fergy Barr opened the scoring for the Presbyterians with a counter in the first half. Later in the frame Barr sent a pass over to Dick Stewart, who tallied to make it 2-0 for Knox at the interval. Dick Stewart got another goal in the second stanza, and Dill Evans completed the scoring with a nice shot past Coleman in the Wycliffe nets.

For the Anglicans, Ed Abbott, former Varsity intermediate player, shone on the half-line. Despite the number of goals that filtered past him, Bill Coleman played a nice game between the posts for Wycliffe.

HEINBUCH STARS FOR VIC

Vic's hopes of gaining the intercollegiate rugby playoffs grew dimmer last night as Junior School took them into camp by a narrow 1-0 margin and at the same time the Intramural Committee, after a meeting with the officials of the Trinity-Vic game ruled that the contest, protested by Vic, stands as played.

That means that the Scarlet and Gold are clinging to the thin straw of mathematical possibility, for if Trinity and Vic defeat the Red and White in their two remaining games Vic will squeeze into a second place tie with U.C. With their triumph, the Engineers better their position in top-spot. They have amassed eight points in five games. U.C., with five points, may still wind up on the top of the heap if School is toppled by Trinity and the Artsmen win both of their remaining games. Mathematics plays a large part in determining the final victor.

Red Heinbuch brought the stands to its feet in the last minute of play when he snuffed an Engineer forward on his own five yarder and careened down the field goal-ward. Vic supporters resumed their seats without a murmur, however, when Vic's punter, dog-tired after a full time stretch, fagged at mid-field and was tackled from the rear.

Up to that point the two squads had waged foot football on even terms. In the third quarter Vic stopped an S.P.S. onrush at their ten after the Engineers had staged a march beginning at Vic's 40. But ball was close enough for the all-important single, and "Long John" Simpson made no mistake as he hoisted a towering punt high into the end-zone stands.

Both lines turned in great performances. The Engineers failed to dent the Vic forward wall, and the Scarlet and Gold plunged with like results. Heinbuch and Simpson waged a kicking duel in the first half, with the Engineer holding the edge over his Vic rival. The play went right from one end of the field to the other, but both teams were playing heads-up ball and refused to fumble or make a miscue to the other's benefit.

In the second canto, S.P.S. kicked off to Vic. Heinbuch returned a tremendous punt that went at his own 40. Whizzer White, smart quarter of the Blue and Gold outfit, faked a pass and galvanized for 10 yards. On the next play Don Grosskurth snared a pass and fought his way to the Vic 7. Hal Fleming tore into an Engineer extension play and threw the threatening team for a 10 yard loss. But on the next play Simpson accounted for the point that was good enough for victory.

Vic engineered a passing attack in the last chapter, but to no avail. Most of the heavens went wild as the passer was hurried, and two were intercepted. The Engineers were threatening once more after intercepting a Vic forward, when Heinbuch grabbed the School pass and nearly pulled the now commonplace last-minute victory stunt.

Both lines deserve great credit. Harry Rutledge again impressed on the Vic secondary. Hal Fleming, who sprained his shoulder late in the game, turned in a great defensive effort, while Heinbuch in the kicking department was shaded only by Simpson. The School backfield, headed by Bill "Whizzer" White and the indomitable Don Grosskurth, and ably assisted by Simpson, Hamlin and Bill Henry, played a heads-up game.

Jr. S.P.S.: Grosskurth, Quinton, Baillie, Rowland, Hambley, O'Donnell, Clarke, Rettie, McIntyre, Penoyer, Hamlin, Henry, White, Brennan, Spence, Simpson, Kelly, Biggs, Gow, Prentice.

Vic: Hogg, Heinbuch, Fleming, Lewis, Bailey, Rutledge, Carson, Irwin, Quinlan, McRae, Smallwood, Whallon, Campbell, Jones, Shugart, Gibbs, Cross, Davis, Bradford, Wolfman.

Wide-Eyed In Gotham

It looks like Roosevelt, but by a cat's whisker. Well, I proclaim to one and all that the President will be re-elected by my uncle's beard. . . . And my uncle has some beard. . . .

Times Square on election night. Kindly natives of New York say that it happens only once in four years. I was on Times Square last night, and hazard that the like will never take place again. Where Seventh Avenue and Broadway meet like Theorem I of your high school geometry, and Forty-second Street cuts through the intersection, hundreds of thousands of people gathered. Eyes were craned to the truncated triangle of the New York Times Building, right on the square, where a moving electric sign brought the latest results. Shouting, yelling, blowing horns and noisemakers, cheering for Roosevelt, booing the other fellow, from Forty-Eighth down to Thirty-Eighth, hundreds of thousands of people. . . .

The trends became apparent at about ten-thirty. At eight o'clock, the hawkers sold synthetic Bronx cheers and large "I told you so" buttons. By ten o'clock it was "Roosevelt—I told you so". People started throwing campaign buttons in the air and waving hats and newspapers for the benefit of the news photographers and the eyes and ears of the world. Ten-thirty, and the issue was settled. There was still every chance that Willkie would be elected, but the crowd had convinced themselves. Riots would have ensued if the President had been defeated. The Broadway button hawkers were trying to get rid of the huge six-inch-diameter buttons with photographs of Roosevelt and Willkie. "Come and get 'em, Roosevelt or Willkie. Willkie buttons half price—today, only."

Do you remember Borough President George U. Harvey of Queens? Surely you do—the man who was going to move to Canada if Willkie were defeated. Well, he is staying right here. "I have changed my mind," he told the newspapers. "I'm not going to Canada. If 130,000,000 Americans can take it, so can I. They need me now more than ever." Which leaves him wide open for a remark, but I cannot think of one strong enough. Harvey's statement is somewhat similar to that of a businessman I heard downtown, who told a friend, "These people who voted for Roosevelt, they're un-American." There were thirty millions of them, mister. . . .

At about ten, when things were just beginning to jell, a huge, new limousine drove east along Forty-Sixth and stepped at Broadway. In one corner of the windshield was an inconspicuous red, white and blue "Win With Willkie" sticker. The chauffeur helped the neatly-dressed little old lady out, and over to the Main Stem. The little old lady looked about her, and watched the sign on the Times Building, and heard the people cheering. "Oh, my God!" she said quietly, and went back to the car.

Many of the crowd used liquid to bolster their enthusiasm, and some of them were cock-eyed. One of the latter group came reeling by us at eleven o'clock, his feet wide apart and staggering, his head down as if a bull charging, shouting "Hooryay for Willkie!" Someone caught him by the collar and asked, "What's that?" He drew back slightly and managed to pronounce, "Don't mind me, brother, I'm drunk!"

The hundreds (no fooling) of policemen were all the trolleys get through. Automobile traffic was halted at a little after ten in the evening, but lanes had to be maintained for trolleys, buses and ambulances. . . .

With returns from a few obscure southern and New England hamlets in the morning papers put out their bulldog editions (tomorrow's news tonight) at ten o'clock on Election Day. The headlines mumbled obscurely about a close election, and pictured countless candidates' grinning teeth at the polls. . . .

In the morning, the Times and the Herald-Trib were unctuous, and the Mirror frothing at the mouth. They had supported Willkie. . . . The afternoon saw the World-Telegram and The Sun still publishing, even though freedom would end with the third term—aye, and forever. . . . They mentioned the fact that Roosevelt, F. D., had polled some few votes more than Willkie, W. L. . . .

But the New York Post was happy. The isolationist Daily News' support of the President had been half-hearted. PM is a miserable dying thing, so that The Post carried Roosevelt's fight in this city single-handed. And in letters fully a foot high (864 point, for you journalists) it proclaimed FDR—no more. It was a miserable, cloudy day today, with scattered rain and general chillaballs, but The Post said "Weather—Marvellous!" That strange sound emanating from several buildings downtown is said to come from the stomachs of various columnists and editorial writers as they start, slowly, to eat their words. . . .

And since this column has been such a successful prognosticator, we pick Philip Murray as next president of the CIO and an almost immediate rapprochement between the two labour bodies. . . .

One taxi driver just off the Square refused a prospective customer and told him to "stay and watch Roosevelt win." As the night progressed, everyone became comradely and slapped strangers on the back, shouting, "It looks like we're winning!" When McNary conceded the election, the roar was deafening. Every time Roosevelt went up in lights, cheers echoed from three hundred thousand throats, but a mention of Willkie or a plug for the New York Times brought hisses and catcalls. So, it's burrah, for our side, and, by the time you read this there aren't fifty ways to Britain, I'll eat General Johnson.

At about three o'clock, the crowd began to disperse. Thence home by the wrong subway and much walking, to soak our feet in hot water, and so to bed. . . .

"LINES"—an essay

Dear Teacher: Lines are of three sorts. First, the sort of line that sister's boy friend gives her after Ma and Pa are gone to bed, and he gave me a dime to go to the store for candy, only I'd rather hide behind the drapes and listen. Second, Lines like in the Varsity. These lines are very expensive for people who advertize, like Sovern Custom Tailors. They cost 3-1.2 cents each. Which adds up. But when there is no one to pay the bill, the lines are worth almost nothing—like in the Chamopus Cat.

Third and best of all. Smart Streamlines like in a slick three-button drape model jacket made by SOVERN KUSTOM TAILORS.

War Reading Discussed By Lecturer

Canadian Authors Association Features Short Talks About the Book World at its Annual Display

OPEN ALL WEEK

"Reading in war time" was the subject of a talk last Tuesday by Miss Ethel Chapman, author of several books and editor of the women's section of the Farmer's Magazine. She said that there were excellent pamphlets on current affairs, and suggested one that is a summary of the lengthy Sirosi Report.

Expressing her views on "escape" literature, Miss Chapman said, "The old type is definitely not for this war. The persistent reading of romantic novels by women and detective novels by men is just as bad as going off and getting (Continued on Page 2)

S.C.M. Group Hears Talk By Angus

Place of Bible as Textbook and Student Guide Draws Comment from Engineering Professor

SUNDAY FOR REST

Professor R. W. Angus of Mechanical Engineering told the S.C.M. at noon yesterday that men can use the church as a help in their ordinary life just as they use their professional societies to provide a background to their work life. "In secular affairs," he said, "people always tend to band themselves together, and in religious affairs the church fulfills that need." Professor Angus then presented the advantages common to any form of group life.

"The Bible can be compared to a textbook to guide one through life," said Professor Angus. "The help given in church seems to be analogous to the help given by the professors in the university," he said, pointing out that one can learn a great deal of textbooks but that for real understanding some guidance such as that of the professors in the one case and of the church in the other was necessary.

Professor Angus thought it was a great mistake to work all Sunday as students often do nowadays. In his day at the university, he said, the churches were almost always overcrowded despite the smaller population of the city. He himself thinks there is nothing comparable to being able to lay aside all work on Saturday evening and get oneself away from the busy material world for 32 hours.

U.C. MAGAZINE SNAPSHOTS FORM PUBLICITY EXHIBIT

"Nothing will bring people to a halt and draw their interest more than photographs, especially if they themselves figure in them," said Kenneth McNaught, editor-in-chief of the Undergraduate magazine, speaking of the snapshots on display in U.C. rotunda.

"The purpose of the display is chiefly one of publicity," he continued, "with the aim of encouraging people of the college to enter the photo competition staged by the Literary Society with which the Undergraduate is co-operating. The best of these and those which are most representative of the events where they were taken will be printed in the Undergraduate with stories written

U.C. GAINS VICTORY OVER EMMANUEL

Emmanuel's rugged lacrosse team dropped into second place in group three yesterday afternoon as they lost a 10-4 verdict to U.C. This gave the Royal College their third consecutive win and sole leadership of the group. The Theologs drove hard all the way but didn't show the goal-scoring polish of their opposition. Although they had as many scoring chances, too many of the shots missed the net.

U.C. jumped into the lead shortly after the opening whistle and stayed ahead all the way, leading by a score of 7-3 at half time.

McDiarmid and Francis each scored two goals for the winners, while Hignell, Campbell and McCulloch got one apiece.

ten around them, thus utilizing the principle of pictorial reporting.

"The pictures also draw attention to the more comprehensive nature of the new policy of the magazine with more and more people discussing its publication as they pause to view the display, and perhaps consider how they too can contribute to its success this year," added McNaught.

He also stated that the photos sold as a result of this advertising display will help to take care of the photographers' costs and thus provide additional incentive for them to continue this work.

Professor Fairley will Give Critical Review of 1939's Best Selling American Writer and His Works

FOURTH IN SERIES

The fourth in the series of lectures on modern American writers will be presented by Professor Barker Fairley of University College in West Hall today at five o'clock. "John Steinbeck" will be the topic.

Steinbeck, a young Californian, has been bombarding the market with his manuscripts for the last ten years, and of these the last two, "Of Mice and Men" and "The Grapes of Wrath," have received as much attention as any works since their publication, said Professor Fairley yesterday.

Steinbeck, a man of forty, and once a university student, has spent a great deal of time "knocking about and working with his hands." When he went to college he informed the registrar that he didn't intend to take a degree, and he stuck to his intentions. Unmolested, he went about the university taking (Continued on Page 4)

SCHOOL OF NURSING ENTERTAIN AT DANCE

Members of the School of Dental Nursing turned the tables on their boy-friends last night as they entertained at their fall dance. The affair was staged in the Imperial Room of the Royal York Hotel, with the minstrelsy being provided by Horace Lapp and his orchestra.

Every undergraduate member of the faculty was present as its social season got well under way with the annual event which has become such a part of the tradition of the college.

1940 Acta Victoriana Is Streamlined Version

The first issue of Acta Victoriana is out. It's a breakaway from Victoriana tradition and comes out in a streamlined version. The editor, Lloyd Haines, admits he didn't know what it was going to look like when he started, but that he was not unpleasantly surprised with the results.

The editorial "we" has been abandoned as a distasteful form of circumlocution. There is a jackpot contest featured for the first year as well as a contest which includes all students. The poetry divides itself into humorous, aesthetic, and philosophic. Worthy of special praise is the poem, "Death Is Nothing" by Rigmore Christopheron. There is an address by Dr. Robbins giving mature advice to the student in war time. You will also enjoy the story by Tom Paton of Hell and Heaven and another by Rigmore Christopheron concerning an animated statue.

Possibly the focal point of interest is Perce Gardiner's review of the Academy Exhibition. Paintings by Comfort and Paxton are attractively disposed.

The departments consist of college chatter edited by Norman Christopheron and Mary Carter. Book Review column and a humor section known as Patonies created by Thomas Paton. The publication finishes off with a ludicrous photograph of the Bob.

The editor hopes that the new form which the magazine has been given will prove to be attractive to the reading public and encouraging to potential contributors.

Doctor Pratt Issues New Epic Poem

Author of "Brebeuf and His Brethren" to be Heard This Afternoon on Program with Sir Charles G. D. Roberts

BENSON ALSO TO SPEAK

Among the interesting books on display this week at the Book Show sponsored by the Canadian Authors' Association at 99 Yonge Street, are a number of poetical works by Dr. E. J. Pratt of Victoria College.

Holding the centre of attention in the poetry group is Dr. Pratt's latest work, an epic poem, entitled "Brebeuf and His Brethren". While this volume has received outstanding commendation during the past week at the Book Show, Dr. Pratt's former works, among them "Many Moods" and "The Witches' Brew", continue to maintain their popularity.

Professor Pratt and Sir Charles G. D. Roberts will be guest speakers at the Book Show this afternoon, which is dedicated to Canadian poets. At the (Continued on Page 4)

STORY OF PERSIA TOLD BY TRAVELLER

Old and New in Persian Life Presents Varied Scene to Mrs. Young, Back from Twelve Year Stay in Persia

"A BIZARRE MIXTURE"

Back from a twelve year stay in Persia, Mrs. Young spoke to the Oriental Society yesterday on the subject, "Persia Today".

"Persia, emerging with a great struggle from the past, has advanced rapidly under the spirit of our mechanized modern era, blending the old and the new into a bizarre mixture," said Mrs. Young. She added that to get into the soul of the present day Persia, one must not lose sight of the constant struggle between the old and new in every phase of Persian life.

Mrs. Young was convinced that Persia, set in the midst of contrasting influences, socially, politically and economically, and thus forced to face the outside world and to think for itself, was doing both admirably well under the traditional despot rule of the Rajah Khan, a man of the soil.

Members of the Toronto Household Science Alumnae Giving Assistance and Supervising at City Schools

A NATIONAL WAR SERVICE

With the advent of the war and the consequent increased drain on the vitality of the average individual, the Health League of Canada has called upon members of the Household Science Alumnae to aid in the presentation of a series of lectures designed to provide information regarding the principles of nutrition, economical buying of foods and cooking methods and also to aid in the reduction of food waste, according to information obtained at the Health League.

Miss Elsie Middleton, a member of the staff of Central Technical School, is chairman of the Curricula Committee. Miss Edith Cosens, of the staff of Jarvis Collegiate and Miss Gertrude Gavin, research assistant in the Department of Physiological Hygiene, are also members of this committee. About fifty members of the Household Science Alumnae are now teaching or assisting with these classes. Acknowledgment was also made by Miss Gavin for the very willing co-operation of nutritionists trained in other institutions.

There will be six lectures on six successive weeks. The first of these took place last week. Twenty-seven city schools and nine township schools are being utilized for the purpose. The groups of foods to be studied include whole grain cereals, milk, milk products and eggs, meat and fish, vegetables and fruits. The final lecture will include meal planning and food budgets.

According to the information received the Health League has done all the organization such as the work of registration and obtaining permission for the use of school buildings and are supplying all the food used in the demonstration.

TORONTO PHYSIOTHERAPISTS DO MEDICAL CORPS DUTY

Seven graduates of Physiotherapy, an extension course of the University of Toronto, have been attached to the R.C.A.M.C. for overseas duty, it has been learned.

Kathleen Lake, 3T3, has for several years been second in charge of the Physiotherapy Department of the Toronto General Hospital.

Bernice Nichol, also 3T3, held the position of head of the Physiotherapy Department of Kingston General Hospital prior to her overseas appointment, while Thelma Liberty, 3T5, has been on the staffs both of the Hospital for Sick Children and Toronto General.

Thelma Stewart, 3T8, has worked on the staff of the Workmen's Compensation Board since her graduation.

Helen-Marie Stevens, 3T7, has been doing physiotherapy in the Niagara peninsula and in Port Arthur, but recently she has been engaged in private practice in Toronto.

Money from Competitions will be Used to Form a Memorial Reference Collection for Applied Mathematics

AT UNIVERSITY COLLEGE

The Department of Applied Mathematics has decided to establish a new mathematical library with the prize money which University of Toronto teams have won during the past few years in the William Lowell Putnam Competition. Professor W. J. Webber revealed to The Varsity today. This collection, to be called the Putnam Memorial Library, will consist of a number of new mathematical books and will be installed in a special section of its own in the University College Library, in the east hall at University College.

The new reference library will be open to the use of all mathematics students in the university and will be under the jurisdiction of the University College librarian.

The William Lowell Putnam Competition, which is under the sponsorship of the Mathematical Society of America, is open to all universities and colleges in the United States and Canada. Each institution enters a team of three men. The prize of five hundred dollars goes to the school whose team scores the (Continued on Page 2)

BIOLOGY CLUB HOLD 'BRAIN WAVE' TALK

"We are having brain waves all the time even if we do not get bright ideas," revealed Dr. K. C. Fisher in a discussion on "Brain Waves" at a meeting of the Biology Club last night.

Dr. Fisher said that a person whose brain wave frequency is ten times per second is a "dominant alpha" and that contrary to expectation brain waves are most evident when a person is in a lethargic condition. He added that to record brain waves the subject must be in a state of repose and that if he opens his eyes, works a mental problem or is given an auditory stimulus, the brain waves would disappear.

"No practical use has yet been found for 'brain waves,'" continued Dr. Fisher, "but they are fun."

The speaker said it was believed that nature provides a constantly oscillating activity in the central nervous system to ensure that a creature is sensitive to certain stimuli so that its system is always on the alert.

Until their recent appointments, Marjorie Spence, 3T8, and Neville Hamilton, 3T9, have been in Winnipeg Children's and Winnipeg General Hospital, respectively.

Physiotherapy is a two-year course with eight months' training in the physical treatment of injuries, using heat, light, massage, corrective remedial exercises and hydro-therapy.

Until this year, only women have registered but in the first year class of about forty students, two are men. University of Toronto has the only physiotherapy course in Canada.

It is believed that the war will provide a far greater need for physiotherapists than has been felt in this country.

Never Say Die

Wendell Willkie may have been defeated at the polls last week but evidently he is not through yet. He is determined that his election ideas will be carried out. In his radio address to the nation Monday night he called upon his supporters to form a "loyal opposition" because he believes that the present trend in government, if permitted to continue unchecked by a strong and vigorous opposition party, will lead down the road to full State socialism.

Willkie, who is opposed to many of the present government's policies, believes that many millions of Americans are likewise opposed to these policies and are determined to unite against them. Such an opposition, he holds, is not unpatriotic but instead is essential if American democracy is to be preserved.

To this end Willkie believes that all the groups which supported him must consolidate into an opposition party. This theory in all probability would eventually bring about a drastic revision of the present Republican party.

The response to Willkie's speech was immediate and tremendous. The president of the 10,000 Associated Willkie clubs throughout the States announced that they would continue in operation and become a vital part of the "loyal opposition". The clubs would probably be known in the future, he said, as "We, the People", since it was Willkie's request that they drop his name from their title in order to dissociate the opposition to the New Deal from any personal political movement. At a conference of leading club workers of the 10,000 units next month, definite plans for the clubs' future activities will be drawn up.

The Willkie leaders in this move to create an opposition party believe that a large majority of the 22,000,000 who voted for Mr. Willkie are in accord with the general principles outlined by the candidate during the campaign. Willkie will be the leading spokesman of this party, in spite of his urge Monday night that his followers divorce him from the picture as the leader of the movement. He held that 1944 will "take care of itself". He believes that when the next Presidential convention is held the opposition will choose as a candidate a "man who fits the times". Although he is willing to be that man, he will under no condition attempt to use the establishment of the opposition party as a purely personal political vehicle.

Since the elections last week, Willkie has received nearly 50,000 telegrams and letters from supporters all over the country. After his speech Monday night, he received an additional 2,500 telegrams of congratulation, which he contends are visible signs of the awakened interest in the country of the need for a strong opposition party.

Willkie, it is known, is seriously concerned over the possibility that the traditional American two-party system, with a strong minority acting as a check on the party in control of the national administration, may be cast aside under a plea for national unity. He believes that any such move would have the effect of disuniting the American people and would eventually lead to ultimate dictatorship. He believes the opposition to the New Deal should be a constructive opposition and should be composed of a consolidation of the three main campaign organizations which supported him, the Republican party, the Willkie clubs, and the democrats-for-Willkie.

Willkie also believes that the Republican party must have a more liberal leadership if it is to act effectively as the mainspring of the opposition. He desires to get the Republican party, through an injection of new blood into its leadership, to take a more humane and social approach to the nation's problems and to oust from party power the more reactionary leaders.

Explanation Bureau

The propaganda bureau must be working overtime in Germany these days to explain the failure of the air blitzkrieg on England, judging from some of the reasons being handed out to the German people.

After so many rash promises of an early victory and so many propaganda stories concerning the weakness and low morale of the English citizen, it is not strange that German authorities now find it necessary to rack their brains for plausible explanations of the manner in which England is standing up under bombardment.

A few weeks ago the Schwärze Korps, official organ of Adolph Hitler's Elite Guard, "solved the puzzle of British toughness and endurance" for the benefit of the German people. Such endurance is not due to British ability to "take it", said the Schwärze Korps, but—

"Rather, this England approaches death with sensual pleasure and smacks its lips over every phase and bears every humiliation and every cynicism if only it can hope that, in dying, it may also drag its enemy into the abyss. The psychopath knows that in such cases pleasure in destruction parallels pleasure in self-destruction. Thus is solved the puzzle of British toughness and endurance."

In case this solution failed to meet with the approval of all, the puzzle was again solved for the people the other day by Goebbel's propaganda purveyor, the Boersen Zeitung. The English have been able to withstand "this fearful reality" (meaning the blitzkrieg) "thanks to the Germanic strain in their race."

How fully these explanations meet with the approval of German citizens it is difficult to imagine, but evidently Goebbel's feels that there is no end to their credulity. Not only have they been convinced that it was the German who won the battle of Waterloo after the English had lost it, but since Japan's alliance with the Axis it has been proved to them that the Japanese are really Aryan.

In view of these products of the German propaganda bureau, it would seem that nothing is too difficult for it to undertake to prove. The question is, "How successful are its attempts?"

In Behalf Of Books

About this time of the season the libraries are usually filled with students preparing their first bunch of essays for the year, and therefore a much-needed plea is in order for the proper treatment of library books. Too many people treat them as if they were their own property and proceed to heavily underline passages which they want to use, or what is worse, to make remarks and criticisms in the margins.

Any student should realize how annoying this habit must be to the thousands of other people who will read the book after him. Underlined phrases or sentences momentarily distract the attention and thus generally have to be read twice. Margin comments are equally distracting and even more annoying. If you have an opinion of the reading matter to which you simply must give vent, put it in your essay and leave the book alone. The rest of the university will not be interested in it. Or if your intention was merely to be amusing, you might remember that such remarks seldom amuse other readers.

In other words, don't be selfish; if you must mark up books, mark up your own at home.

Drama Committee

"Heaven on Earth", written by Philip Johnston and presented by the Victoria College Dramatic Society in the Wednesday afternoon series at Hart House, was rather better than its predecessors with the exception of Trinity's production of "The Rising of the Moon". The play is breezy and funny, both of which qualities were enjoyed by the audience. Complications arising when an intellectual cave-man of the down-to-earth type invades an orthodox and respectable home with the intention of carrying off its daughter, and the efforts of the girl's parents to keep the catastrophe from occurring, form the plot. Adrian, the exponent of Strength through Joy around whom the play revolves, was very ably played by John Mantley who strode through his part

The Story OF The Lonely Hoot Owl

There once was a lonely owl named Henry, who sat and sat on his doorstep hooting plaintively and whiling away the hours by lining up acorns and making difficult angle shots with a discarded sucker-stick.

One day Henry was approached by two other owls, Hormone and Dorothea, who asked him to come out and play.

"Hoot!" said Henry, sinking a difficult triple-carom-warum only to see his cue-acorn roll down the sewer. So they went to play, and Henry said: "Hoot! Let us play pool."

"What pool?" asked Dorothea, with a giggle. "Oh, the pool," laughed Hormone. So they went to the pool.

Now the pool was deep, dark, dank, steep, stark, and stank.

"Isn't it pink!" cried Dorothea rapturously. "It looks good enough to drink, almost."

"It is good enough to drink, I betcha," said Hormone, yawning blithely, "And besides I feel thirsty."

"I am thirsty," said Henry hungrily. "I bet I can drink more of it than you can."

"How much of a handicap will you give us?" said Hormone, smacking her lips.

"Don't need a handicap," muttered Henry morosely. "I can drink it all."

"Them's fightin' words, huh," said Dorothea, producing a South'n accent from the hinterland of her costume.

But Henry did not listen to her. He knelt down on the soft turf beside the pool and began to drink.

Two hours passed. Two more hours passed. By this time the water level of the pool was considerably lower.

"Pass the hours," said Henry, looking up and hooting happily. Another hour was passed.

By this time the water level of the pool was lowered still further, revealing three corpses and a somewhat counter-soiled copy of the Students' Directory.

With one mighty gulp, Henry drained the pool to the lees. "Hoot!" he hooted thickly, and rolled over and burst.

"I wasn't thirsty anyway," said Hormone bitterly.

And the moral of this story is that one shouldn't try to drink and play pool at the same time.

ST. MIKE'S OUTCLASSED IN VOLLEYBALL TILT

St. Mike's Seconds were outclassed by a strong volleyball squad from Wycliffe last night on the upper gym floor. The match went only to two sets as the Theologs took both, 15-7 and 15-10. St. Mike's: B. Sullivan, Kelley, Flaherty, Burger, Foley, Cloonan, Barrett, Killea.

and delivered his lines in rich and ringing tones. His vitality dominated the scenes he was in. Unfortunately the other members of the cast failed to play up to him, with the result that pace of the play was very uneven.

The first scene dragged owing to the unsure technique of Mary Campbell in the role of Jill, the daughter. Her later scenes, and particularly her intense irritation after Adrian exited grandly with the parting shot that "it was for women like you that God made aspidochelons", were better handled. With practice Miss Campbell will make an accomplished actress.

Barbara McNabb, as Jill's meek-acting but cunning-minded mother, carried her part capably but was handicapped by a voice with little carrying power. Bryce Wilson, playing Jill's father, was well cast but appeared at times to be suffering from insufficient rehearsing.

The play was well chosen and so was the cast, but here I put in a plea for more time and care taken with rehearsing. Few plays can survive without them.

The prize was first won for the University of Toronto in 1937 by I. Kaplansky, A. J. Coleman, and N. S. Mendelsohn (now a member of the Department of Allied Mathematics here). In 1939 a team composed of J. R. Crosby, J. C. Maynard and the late G. H. K. (Pat) Strathy, who was killed in action recently, won the competition again for the University of Toronto.

The University of Toronto did not compete in 1938. According to the terms of the competition the Department of Mathematics of the winning university act as judges in the next year's contest.

A committee under the convensorship of Prof. W. H. Webber is now compiling a list of volumes to be purchased for the new library.

drunk." For restful and inspiration reading she suggested such books as "Brent and His Brethren," the latest work by Professor E. J. Pratt, and "Quietly my Captain Waits" by Evelyn Eaton.

"There has been a transfer of interest in Canadian literature," Mr. W. A. Oaeson, literary editor of the Globe and Mail, remarked afterwards. "Authors have previously avoided the here and now. They have written about Wolfe at Quebec and other romantic events of the past. There has been no opinion writing, no interest in affairs, for we have considered ourselves as colonials and have had things settled for us. Only in the last two or three years have Canadian writers been called upon to give intellectual leadership to the country," Mr. Deacon said.

SPORT SPLASHES

By Doug Green

Dents defeated Knox 23-10 in the first meet held last night in Hart House pool. This victory keeps them out in front in their group. Dents started strongly when they won the first relay and kept up the string of first places by finishing a man out in front in the remaining four races.

The second meet of the afternoon saw a determined Emmanuel outfit vanquish their neighbours from St. Mike's 16-13.

St. Mike's won the first relay and the three points. Emmanuel came back to stay in the race when Green and Whallon placed first and third in the 50 back on either side of Crane for St. Mike's, who finished second. This was Whallon's first effort in the pool and he gave further proof of his versatility.

Eagle and Green of Emmanuel won the 50 breast and 50 free, adding 10 points, which made up their total of 16. St. Mike's had no difficulty in winning the final relay and almost lapped their tired opponents.

DENTS FOOTBALLERS DEFEAT FORESTRY IN STADIUM CLASH

Assume Leadership of Group by Means of Well Sustained Power of Attack

SCORE WAS 8-0

Dentistry's footballers forged ahead in Group III of the interfaculty loop yesterday, assuming the leadership of their group by defeating Forestry 8-0 in a slow encounter at Varsity Stadium.

This win gives Dents a margin over the second place Junior Meds, who must defeat Forestry in their next tussle to remain in the running for a play-off berth.

A sustained drive in the initial quarter brought the Molarmen into scoring position after McKee and Ferguson had made substantial gains through the line. Murray Hawton then hoisted one from the 25-yard line to open scoring at 1-0.

In the second frame play dragged, with few plays being made to open up the game. Near the end of this stanza the Woodsmen found themselves in a tough spot when Hawton returned a Forestry punt to the five-yard stripe of the Men in Green. The Tooth-Tuggers tried to get the ball again in order to push over a major tally, but the Forestry squad squeezed the ball for the next few plays, and were still in possession when the half-time whistle blew.

The Molarmen counted another single off the kick-off, Murray Hawton kicked off for Dents to a Forestry half who was nailed for a rouge.

Dentistry's big scoring chance came in the final quarter as Forestry fumbled a Dents kick on their own ten-yard line, Dents recovering. A neat pass from Cosmo Castaldi to Bob Green was good for a touchdown which was converted, making the count 8-0.

Another Dents pass which appeared labelled for a touch was knocked down by Pud Puttock, who with Hawton played a nice game for the Woodsmen.

Forestry's most spectacular play in the closing minutes, came when "Irish" Monaghan grabbed a loose ball on a blocked Dents kick and raced 80 yards for the goal-line, but the play was ruled void by the referee.

Dents: Hawton, Ferguson, McKee, Humenick, Hambley, Milan, Beatty, Franssi, Castaldi, Green, Wood, Webster, Crouch, Hutchison.

Forestry: Puttock, Allman, Eccles, Price, McBride, Gray, Hall, Wheatley, Lake, Day, Tucheck, Purdy, Rosenberg, Bruce, Kissick, Monaghan, and Bentley.

Speaking OF SPORT

By Dave MacIntosh

EN GARDE

The list of sports grows, and behold, now on display in the window of the university sport shop is another which has received little or no attention. In the salle d'armes of Hart House once more rings the clash of foil, epee and sabre—fencing is under way.

The athletic wing of the Male Mansion would seem to have a bad case of smell—o. Hundreds, yea even thousands of studes disregard it entirely. The ability to play at least one sport, and play it well, is something that every man should try to acquire. We realize that there are late labs and lectures, military drill and all the various activities of campus life that must be attended to in one way or another, but even one hour a day or less, usually whiled away in idle confab may be spent advantageously along the Muscle Midway.

All this serves to introduce the noble and time-honoured art of fencing. Some of the best instruction and newest equipment is being provided this year, for beginners especially. As in previous years, heading the department, is Mr. Charlie Walters, the Grand Old Man of Canadian fencing, and his salle d'armes is one of the outstanding centres of fencing in Canada. In his day he was Dominion champion several times, and even now he gets out on the floor and fences with the boys under his tutelage. Also aiding in the coaching are Jim Tapsell, now in his second year at Vic, and who went to the Dominion finals last spring, losing out to Don Collings, also of Toronto. Then there are Bill Horsey, another Dominion finalist, and Johnny Clarkson of Trinity, a lad from England. A couple of Norwegian Air Force men who are skilled duellists also are expected to stand and stab.

Brand-new equipment for beginners has been purchased, which means that there will be absolutely no cost for those wishing to take up fencing. We can't promise that every guy who takes a whirl at this sport will automatically become another "Sea Hawk" or "Prisoner of Zenda", but there's more than a little skill and fun involved. The instructors and the equipment are of the best. The time is every Monday, Wednesday and Friday at five bells. En garde, messieurs.

A PROPOS LIFE SAVING CLASSES

It is necessary that those intending to enrol in the Life Saving classes should do so before this Friday, which, if memory serves, is tomorrow. Either that, or you will find yourself too far behind in the instruction already given to the early-birds. As requirements of the Royal Life Saving Society are pretty rigid, it is imperative to start at once if at all.

NOTE

Last Saturday intercollegiate sport got up steam again in the west as the University of Alberta and the University of Saskatchewan tangled in a rugby game. As The Gateway, organ of the U. of Alta. has it, this is but the beginning of a bull intercollegiate program. Manitoba and U.B.C. are expected into the fold soon. We will do without the evident comment.

By Marg. Foulds

Well, we fought our way through another triple-header last night, and came out without a scratch, thanks. But if this keeps up—?—the pace is terrific!

The Nurses felt the boot once more, we are sorry to say, though by a good close score. Vic Freshies were the lucky reason-why and that's all right with us, except that we'd like the Nurses to win. Not that we don't want Vic Freshies to win! Oh, we do—but we just wanted both to win, that's all.

Physical Ed and U.C. Seniors slid around the gym floor at O.C.E. in the next game, and we aren't trying to be funny—nope, not this time! As far as dusting was concerned, it was a real good game, and for speedy basketball it wasn't bad at times either, but we still can't see why people have to get so excited they simply throw themselves on the ball whenever they get the chance—it's just a little insignificant ball, y'know, really. However, there were some really bright spots, such as Pat Austin sinking some beauties from around the centre-regions, and everyone seemed to be having a good time, anyway.

At eight bells, those plucky U. C. Freshies we told you about the other day—and they don't like being called kids either, if you please—hurled the same enthusiasm, previously raved about, at the Saint Freshies and came out on top. As a matter of fact, both fluous energy means anything, and we teams showed lots of promise if super-predict they'll be going great guns when we are old and grey—a year or two from now.

Tonight finds St. Hilda's Seniors called against Vic Srs. at 6.30 and Physical Ed to meet Meds at 8.00. Good games, too!

SR. SCHOOL STUNS ST. MIKE'S RUGBYISTS WITH 16-0 VICTORY

Engineers Emerge as Group Winners by Virtue of Their Victory at the Varsity Stadium Yesterday Afternoon

Senior School emerged group winners as they crashed through to a stunning 16-0 victory over St. Mike's in an interfaculty rugby game played at Varsity Stadium yesterday. Although the Artsmen battled gamely all the way, the result was seldom in doubt. Stu Munro of the Engineers was the individual star for the winners and was easily the best player on the field.

Stu started with a rush, with Munro doing some great plunging. But St. Mike's stopped the rally when Schantz intercepted an Engineer forward pass and ran it back fifteen yards then passed to Roberts who added another five to give the Artsmen the ball on their own 50-yard line. The Double Blue failed to gain yards, and from then on it was School all the way.

In the second quarter Plaxton intercepted a St. Mike's forward to put the Engineers in scoring position. An attempted placement failed to click, but shortly afterwards a Plaxton-to-Fugler gave the Men of Science a touchdown which was not converted.

On the kick-off the St. Mike's half was roused to make the score 6-0 for S.P.S.

The third quarter featured strong plunging and running by Plaxton, Munro, and Fugler. Van Smith went over the line for the only points in this chukker to make the count 11-0.

Doug Marshall of intercollegiate hockey fame provided the thrills in the last stanza with some hard plunging. Plaxton tossed a forward to Fugler for the final score of the game.

Munro, Plaxton, Fugler, and Keuben played heads-up football for the Engineers. St. Mike's were outplayed all the way, but fought gallantly to the final whistle. Roberts showed up best for the Artsmen, especially in the tackling department.

O.C.E., UNIVERSITY COLLEGE VOLLEYBALL WINNERS

The volleyball schedule for Group I got under way in the upper gym last night with U.C. taking two straight from S.P.S., 15-5, 15-8. Sammy Stellman did the spiking for the Artsmen with the aid of Ballagh. The spiker for School was Maclean.

O.C.E. I volleyball squad went into a first place tie with Dents by virtue of a two out of three game victory over Knox A last night. The scorers were 15-6, 14-16, 15-7. The Brown twins led the Teachers' attack, with Weir making the best effort for Knox.

Girls As Responsive As Boys Says Corporal Purser Of W.S.T.D.

By Olga Chunnik

"Drill is useful for women in that it teaches them self-control, an essential quality in meeting all emergencies," stated Corporal Purser, when interviewed by The Varsity, on the U.C. quadrangle just before the drill of W.S.T.D. on Thursday. "Of course," he continued, "fire-drill and other forms of regimented behaviour serve this purpose as well."

The training program for the co-eds does not include bayonet or rifle drill. Revolver practice, he believes, might be "a very good thing" for the girls if one could make sure that they would not use the skill for other than legitimate purposes. Gas-mask drill might prove useful and is possible at the girls may yet get a taste of it.

Contrary to popular belief of males, although lacking the necessary "Corporal Purser finds that the girls' serious attitude are as just as quick to learn and just as responsive as the boys.

Dr. Shore, Vic Professor, Goes Today For Service With Canadian Air Force

Carnegie Records Are Delayed

It was announced yesterday morning that the annual of the library of musical records being donated to the university by the Carnegie Corporation of New York, has been delayed. It is expected that shipment will be made on the fifteenth of December, so the records should be available to students around the first of the year.

The records will probably be kept in the women's common room of University College, although that has not been definitely decided. However, they will be kept in a place where they will be available to both men and women students between four and six in the afternoon. They will feature the works of the greatest masters, but just what the records are has not been revealed.

This presentation is being made at the request of Dr. Cody and will be the second made by the corporation, which sent a gift to the Fine Art library ten years ago.

Will Take Four-Week Preparatory Course at Trenton Before Joining Air Force Intelligence Service

It has been announced that Dr. T. C. Shore, assistant professor of German at Victoria College, will leave tomorrow to report for service with the Royal Canadian Air Force. A Queen's graduate, he has been on the staff of Victoria College since the autumn of 1932.

Dr. Shore will go from here to Trenton for a four weeks' course in administration preparatory to joining the Air Force Intelligence Service.

After graduating from Queen's Dr. Shore remained there to take his M.A. In 1927 he went to Pickering College as modern language master. After four years he left Pickering to continue his graduate studies at Harvard. In 1932 when a position fell vacant on the staff of Victoria College, he came to this university to take up professional duties. In 1934 and 1935 the then Master of Arts was granted a leave of absence to return to Harvard to complete his graduate studies in romance languages which culminated in an A.M. degree. In 1938 his summers of study gained him a Ph.D. award by Harvard.

FAIRLEY DISCUSSES WRITING PROGRESS OF JOHN STEINBECK

American Vernacular Allows Freedom of Expression, which English Writers Cannot Attain, Fairley Says

"John Steinbeck and the twentieth century were both born in 1900 and both raced ahead between thirty-five and forty," said Professor Barker Fairley, of University College, in the fourth in the current series of lectures on modern authors, yesterday.

Professor Fairley traced Steinbeck's literary development from his first book, "The Cup of Gold," to his best seller, "The Grapes of Wrath." He related that Steinbeck's early writings were not particularly good and at this time a false step would have been fatal. However, the author didn't make a false step, but rather, he emerged with "Of Mice and Men", which carried him beyond the stage of merely a talented (Continued on Page 2)

Earl Of Athlone To Pay Official Campus Visit To U. of T. For First Time

D. L. Bailey, Ph.D. Speaks Tomorrow

The third in the series of Saturday evening lectures will be delivered in Convocation Hall at 8.15 tomorrow by D. L. Bailey, Ph.D., associate professor of plant pathology of the Department of Botany at this university.

Speaking on the subject, "Disease in Plants", Prof. Bailey will discuss the cause of plant diseases and after describing a few widely known diseases, will deal with the problem of their control. The lecture will be illustrated with Kodachrome lantern slides.

Prof. Bailey formerly held the position of senior pathologist-in-charge of the Dominion Rust Research Laboratory in Winnipeg. In the course of his lecture he will deal broadly with the influences of plant diseases on human welfare, and will relate how they have caused famines, eliminated certain plant species, and caused continuous waste of our national resources.

Believing that public education in science is essential in a democracy, the Royal Canadian Institute has arranged this series of twenty lectures on the miracles of modern science.

COMELY CHORINES IN COLOSSAL COLLABORATION

ANNUAL SCHOOL DINNER TO HAVE ENTERTAINERS

Something new is being planned this year to entertain the engineers at their annual School Dinner next Thursday evening in the Great Hall at Hart House. The entertainment committee have engaged novel entertainers, who will literally roll the engineers in the aisles from sheer glee. A ventriloquist will be on hand who is second to none. There will also be a xylophonist in attendance to delight the engineers.

The Engineering Society is subsidizing the dinner to the extent of 25c a plate so that every good Schoolman will find it within his means to come.

Tonight is the night! At last, if you were lucky enough to secure a ticket, you may attend that colossal extravaganza, the U.C. Follies. There shall be music, soft lights, hearty laughter, and thrills raved in song. This evening of fun and frolic directed by Tom Jarvis is sure to end as a delightful night in the never-to-be-forgotten class.

A chorus of 16 beautiful girls will whirl before you in such precision that you will think that they are classically controlled. This is due to the expert direction of Jack Lemen. You will chuckle and roar at the antics of such comers as Al Park, Sandy Wood, Frank Winn and others. You will see and hear a girls' trio and be thrilled by eight scintillating tunes that run the gamut of emotions. A glee club of 20 male voices will also give forth.

S.C.M. "Work and Play" Project To Discuss Non-College Youth

What do young people not at college do with their lives? How do they earn a living? What are their interests, their hopes and ambitions, their problems?

These are the questions which University College S.C.M. will be trying to answer through its new "Work and Play" project.

First on its program is a Sunday afternoon get-together scheduled for November 17, where one will be able to meet and talk with a girl who out to watch him put the girls through their paces.

That evening the group will visit bowling alleys, dance halls, and so on, to see what recreation these young people get and what they do with their spare time. Some of the young people themselves will act as guides in order that one may really join into the spirit of the thing, become one of them for that night and take away in one's mind an accurate picture of their outlook on life.

And finally after these three studies their will be another session to talk over all that has been seen, and to try to reach conclusions about the undergraduates' attitudes and responsibilities toward the great masses of people who are not fortunate enough to be able to receive the education and opportunities of college students.

Members of the S.C.M. executive feel that the student, moving as he does between Bloor and College, Bay Street and St. George, should take this opportunity of looking into the life of the big industrial city that lies all around him, constantly at work and scarcely noticed.

A similar group will be conducted by the women's group in U.C., with Mrs. Helen Freeman in charge. The young people will be interviewed Sunday, November 17, visited at their recreation places the following Saturday, and the places where they work will be visited a week later.

PROF. DR. B. WILKINSON WILL ADDRESS S.C.M.

Dr. B. Wilkinson, Professor of Mediaeval History in the university, will discuss "History and Christianity" today at 5 p.m. in the Women's Union, in the fourth address of the S. C. M. Meet the Professor series. As usual tea will be served from 4.30-5 p.m.

Dr. Wilkinson took his Ph.D. at Manchester University, coming to Toronto a few years ago as the first person to hold the Chair of Mediaeval History in the university.

Last week Dean Brett of the Philosophy Department led a discussion on "Science and Religion." Prof. Wilkinson has promised to leave ample time for the discussion of his views.

Most Bristling Brush Cuts Belong To Men From St. Mike's

Most of those bristling brush cuts you see about the campus belong to men from St. Mike's, it was learned at the Hart House barber shop yesterday. The short-cropped coiffure has spread all the rage among the Irishmen for about three years.

Shearing the locks down to stubble length is no easy task for the barber, especially when dealing with black hair. "Although the charge is the same as the usual hair cut," declared Mr. Wilson, the head barber, "we ought to charge a dollar." The majority of the customers, however, leave what is called the business man's hair cut.

Mr. Wilson stated that the practice among many young men of going without a hat, winter and summer, has had a beneficial effect on the hair. "But I am not advising them to go bareheaded," he added. "I always wear a hat myself." The main difficulty with regard to many Varsity men's hair, as seen by Mr. Wilson, is created by their visits to the pool and numerous shower baths. If a bathing cap is not worn, the water washes out the natural hair oils and the result is unruly hair. Although the application of olive oil helps to a certain extent, this undesirable situation may be remedied by the use of a dry scalp massage.

Mr. Wilson and the three other barbers, Mr. Morton, Mr. Wiggins and Mr. Mahood have over eight years of experience between them in the dipping profession. And if these clippers are kept busy they can do close to a hundred jobs a day.

The shop is kept open during the summer with two barbers on duty and last summer they snipped the hair of some of the British children who were quartered in the various residences.

Wartime Problem

Of all the problems produced by a war, generally one of the most serious is the problem of diseases arising from war-time conditions in countries where active warfare takes place. Since the last war, medicine and science have made progress along various lines that will be of benefit to soldiers injured in battle, but this gain is offset by the greatly increased danger to civilian health due to the large numbers of people being herded together daily into air-raid shelters.

In any country where the food is rationed there is always the danger of an increase of disease because people are not eating the right kind and amount of food and thus fall prey to diseases which go along with war and which spread in the period immediately following. This aspect of the situation is discussed in a booklet prepared by the Canadian Medical Association. The introduction explains that the book "is published at this particular time because history shows that in times of war tuberculosis, influenza and many other diseases may spread rapidly, claiming the lives of men, women and children who have become slowly weakened from lack of the right kind of food."

However, this is a comparatively simple problem compared to the one caused by wholesale use of air-raid shelters. An article on the subject in the latest edition of the British Medical Journal states that Britain must budget for a large increase in disease, whatever precautions are taken. Advocating recognition of the fact that the problem of shelters is at least as much medical as constructional, and insisting on active, intelligent precautions against bureaucratic interference the Journal says that the British will be fortunate beyond belief if they escape lightly from the effects of herding millions into overcrowded shelters during the winter. "We can foresee with the approach of winter a state of affairs in respect of contagious and infectious diseases more devastating than the Blitzkrieg," says the Journal.

An article in the New Statesman and Nation attempted to solve the problem in part. The article stated that the winter campaign would be waged not by the R.A.F. nor the Army nor the Navy, but by the doctors on the home front. It claimed that diseases were spreading among Londoners in the dank, ill-ventilated, evil-smelling air-raid shelters, where hundreds of thousands of young and old, sick and well, huddled together every night.

Said the New Statesman and Nation, "The lice and flea population is multiplying and that is alarming doctors. Doctors are concerned about the risks of cerebrospinal meningitis, the dreaded spotted fever. It has been epidemic for a year, although for obvious reasons little public attention has been drawn to it. Indeed in one week the figure was the highest in the records of British public health. This is the cycle year for influenza. In every shelter can be heard that hacking shelter cough and the wheezy sleep of the bronchial cases."

Advancing its solution to the problem, the New Statesman and Nation urged that the War Office see this not only as a social measure but as a first-class military issue. It also urged immediate evacuation from London of women, children, aged and infirm, reform of shelter life to include better sanitary facilities; daily inspection by medical officers and cleansing by trained squads; more light and warmth, and bunks arranged to keep sleepers' heads apart.

No doubt it is a difficult problem for Britain to be faced with, in addition to all her other burdens, but air-raid shelters have only been used to any great degree for the past few months and thus it is a very recent problem. No doubt the British government and medical association, given a little time, can solve it.

Luxurious Living

Something that is not found in Canadian universities, unfortunately, is the Student Union that is common in the larger American colleges. Complete even to night clubs and cinemas, these Unions are the social and recreational centre of the entire university. They usually contain dining halls, ballrooms, bowling alleys, soda fountains, lounges, music rooms, cinemas and night clubs.

Last week the University of Minnesota, second largest university in the States, opened its new $1,850,000 Union to Minnesota's 15,000-odd students and dedicated it to their late President Louis Coffman, whose ambition it had been to build such a social centre for the students. Funds were supplied by students, faculty and alumni, aided by the P.W.A.

Minnesota's new Union, described in one enthusiastic report as rivaling the Hanging Gardens of Babylon, contains, among other things, such furnishings as thick red carpets and purple and cream chairs; a two-story lounge with gold pillars and black marble fireplaces; a two-story ballroom with ottomans and leather-covered doors; a garden terrace overlooking the Mississippi; a tearoom; a cafeteria with 630 seats; twelve private dining rooms; a room for students who bring their lunch. In addition there are thirty bridge tables, sixteen bowling alleys, fifteen billiard tables, sixteen grand pianos, a Hammond electric organ, a broadcasting system — and 18,000 mailboxes.

University of Minnesota students should be able to pass a comfortable year in such quarters. Male students at the University of Toronto are equally fortunate of course in that they have Hart House. If there were some similar centre for women, the University of Toronto would rival the largest and wealthiest universities in the States. Such a centre is naturally an impossible expense in times like these, but it will no doubt be a reality in the not-too-distant future.

Student Holiday

Tomorrow is a big day in and around the campus — it's time for the Santa Claus parade again. It is true the parade passes through Queen's Park for the benefit of the extreme youth of the city and not to amuse supposedly uninterested university students. Nevertheless the enthusiastic annual turnout by the university must gratify—and amuse and amaze—the company that stages the giant spectacle. It is doubtful if the youngsters get as much fun out of it.

Tomorrow will probably be no different from other years. Professors will be teaching half empty classes — if they turn up at all; some students will be held up by the parade and "forced" to stay and watch it; another group will struggle in the middle of a class with a satisfied look on their faces and explain that they got tangled up in a group of fugitives from a nursery rhyme and couldn't get away—and out in Queen's Park you won't be able to see the children for crowds of Meds and S.P.S. and Arts students, all having twice as much fun as the youngsters for whom the show is staged.

One of these years the university authorities are going to realize that the parade is something with which classes cannot hope to compete, and thus will cancel them so that the entire university, professors and students alike, can attend the Santa Claus parade with free minds.

Hank Rooster and the Boys in the Back Room are all out investing in International Nickel, so they decided not to let the Cat out of the bag today.

A boy and a girl were wandering down the stairs at Vic the other day. Said the boy, contemplating the quick way down, "Too bad they don't put a pile of feather beds at the bottom." She replied warmly, "You do have the costliest ideas." ... VICTORIANS TOO!!

Scene on the library steps.
Boy kneeling; girl pacing agitatedly up and down. He said he was cleaning his pipe! HOW REVERENT!!!

The goddess in saddle shoes wandered into a lecture ten minutes late a couple of days ago. There was a shocked lull. From the corridor came, "Goodbye darling." The never-to-be-found-at-a-loss professor quipped, "That should hold you for a while." POOR GIRL.

writer. In this book, he is inside of his speech and can lift it above itself without falsifying it, the speaker continued. He is unhampered and can let himself go into the American vernacular. Prof. Fairley added that Steinbeck is not content with keeping the vulgar language merely for conversation, but soon whole chapters are flooded with the vernacular.

The professor described "The Grapes of Wrath" as written in the epic style. He believes that the epic pertains to today, as it is better suited to deal tangibly with the outer world of men and things.

"The Grapes of Wrath" has all the weight of American tradition behind it; it has behind it, Abraham Lincoln, the popular song and a long genuinely democratic tradition and speech," the speaker stated.

Professor Fairley explained that the English writers can't acquire Steinbeck's style. The American writers have access to the vernacular, in which they can be themselves, while there is something in English life to prevent this.

by h. d. h.

Through the searchlight shadows of the back campus moved a column of uniformed C.O.T.C. men, carrying rifles in a little uncertainty. The last man in the column, in fact, was so uncertain that he just stood right there shouldering his rifle when his column moved off. Taking in the situation at a glance as a highly irregular one, an officer came up to him. "Are you a sentry?" he queried in a curt whisper.

Add the answer to your list of time-honoured remarks: "No. Are you an officer?"

There are 15 buttons and two hooks and eyes on the greatcoats of the new uniforms. These are supposed to be kept shiny and bright, like stars. Best answer we can offer for sporting a dull set of buttons is to look surprised and say: "Oh! I thought we were supposed to keep them dull so the enemy couldn't see us."

He was standing on a corner as the zero hour approached for a route march. "Well," he murmured with finality, "I guess I better go and find my platoon."

"Tell me," she whispered, full of curiosity, "what is a platoon? Something you wear?"

NOW IT CAN BE TOLD. Last Saturday a grad company of the C.O.T.C. on military manoeuvres in High Park was proceeding with the utmost caution. Not a twig was broken, not a leaf stirred as the men wormed forward on their stomachs. Suddenly they came upon a touching little scene taking place between an impulsive young thing and a lad in air force blue. Uncertain about whether to proceed into a situation which the rule books completely ignore, they sent a frantic message back to company headquarters asking for guidance. Headquarters was entirely unsympathetic; the manoeuvre must go on. "Tell the air force man to withdraw," it ordered.

Last Saturday at High Park was full of surprises. Two companies were engaged in battle drill, and patrols were peering across a ravine at each other, ready to take action against any enemy who came within the regulation distance of 10 yards. All was going well until one young officer decided to sneak over to the other side and forage about for himself. His approach was watched by the enemy until he was about to trip over them. Then the bushes seemed alive with them as they sprang out with cries of "East!" which means "You're dead!" in C.O.T.C. Overwhelmed at seeing the enemy on every side, our hero faltered out, "Oh, pardon me!" and beat a hasty retreat.

Bustling with uniformed medical officers and unclad Auxiliaries, Hart House Gallery this week is probably featuring the largest and most varied collection of nudes in its history. Unprecedented, but quite proper, all of the nudes are male figures.

SPEEDS THE STREAM OF VITAL PETROLEUM

EMPIRE OIL FIELDS AND REFINERIES today are straining their productive capacity. Empire pumps, oil lines, tankers, speed oil to its destination. In the petroleum industry, as in our mines and forests, our factories and our railroads, Canadian Nickel plays its part in swelling the stream of production.

In the oil fields Nickel Alloys stand up under the grinding erosion of sand-laden water, and resist corrosion by sulphur, acids, salt water. In the refineries Nickel Alloys give strength and toughness at temperatures ranging from 400° below zero to 2000° above, at pressures up to 3000 pounds per square inch. Canadian Nickel eliminates replacement delays, keeps equipment operating at capacity.

From Canadian mines today comes an increasing stream of Nickel for use in building the equipment for the Empire's expanding industry.

Battalions Reviewed In First Winter Snow Storm

Major General Constantine, D.S.O., Takes Salute of 3,000 Men of Both G.O.T.C. Battalions

DR. CODY DN STAND

In the face of an unusual November snowstorm the 3000 cadets of both battalions of the University of Toronto Contingent, C.O.T.C., passed in review Saturday afternoon before Major-General C. F. Constantine, D.S.O., Officer Commanding Military District No. 2. The C.O.T.C. Battalion led the column past the saluting base at four o'clock in their first review since being issued battle dress. The Training Centre Battalion followed in multi.

With Major-General Constantine at the saluting base were Doctor H. J. Cody, President of the university, the Officers Commanding the University of Toronto Battalions, District Headquarters Staff Officers and their wives.

After passing in review the battalions formed up by half companies on the muddy campus facing University College. From the start of the march past the storm increased in intensity until it had reached blizzard proportions by the time the battalions were dismissed.

THIRD YEAR DENTAL CLASS HOLD ANNUAL FALL DANCE DESPITE WINTER'S THREAT

The third year dental class braved wintry winds and icy roads to hold their annual fall dance at the Brant Inn last Friday night.

Although Jack Frost turned the tables on the Molamens their ardour for a good time never cooled. The smooth rhythm of Mart Kenny and his Western Gentlemen was greatly enjoyed, especially the band's own arrangement of the Blue and White and the Dental song. In spite of literally sliding back home again, there were not any accidents to mar the occasion, stated Lloyd Lunan, president of the class.

EDITORS, NEWSMEN, CUBS TO FLING AWAY CARES

Varsity reporters will toss their copy pencils aside and let the lintotype machine click unheeded when they take a night off next Wednesday for the first Varsity party.

Combining the lead slugs out of their hair and digging themselves out from behind layers of printer's ink, the reporters will hie themselves to the Royal York Hotel for an evening of fun and frolic that promises to make up for the many nights of drudgery that have gone before.

Leaving a pair of Trappist monks, especially imported from Unoccupied France, to look after the Press in their absence, the staff will trip a stately measure or two under the benevolent guidance of a fatherly druid, who will call out the steps in the true celtic style. A floor-show will be provided by the celebrated dance team of Mimos and Omar, and Heinrich D. Horowitz will entertain during the intermission by balancing a grand piano on the tip of his nose.

Presses may roll half-empty, and Thursday's readers may miss the score of the Big Game, but The Varsity staff aren't worried; they're off duty for the night.

DR. CODY PRESENT

The group of Chinese students who came to Varsity this year on the Boxer Scholarships were guests at a tea in the Leonard Library of Wycliffe College on Saturday afternoon.

The occasion was the opening of a room in Wycliffe which has been placed at the disposal of the students during their stay at this university. Until the present they have had no central meeting place on the campus. Furnishings for the room were supplied through the generosity of President Cody, who with Mrs. Cody, was present at the tea. Speaking of plant diseases at the weekly Royal Canadian Institute lecture on Saturday night, D. L. Unless eradicated, the elm disease is likely to destroy our American elm, Professor Bailey said. Slides were shown of avenues before and after the blight had attacked the elms which lined it. The elm disease is confined in America to an area around New York

TRINITY COLLEGE REVIEW NOW AMALGAMATED WITH ST. HILDA'S CHRONICLE

Today marks the publication of the first issue of the Trinity University Review for 1940-41; and it further marks a very important milestone in the history of the magazine. It is the first issue published under the amalgamation, put into effect last term, of the Review with St. Hilda's Chronicle. The magazine, published six times a year, is now the official voice of the women as well as the men.

The magazine is now twelve pages larger and Paul Christie, Editor-in-Chief, claims that the introduction of the feminine element has raised the quality considerably. Contributions are evenly divided between the sexes, and range from farce to profundity. The editor says, "It is hoped that the new magazine will do much to serve the college; by expressing the ideas of its members, offering scope to a variety of talents, and extending to its new readers the type of reading material they desire."

Theatre Bulges As U.C. Follies Are Produced

Crowded Merry-makers Disport Themselves in Fun-Making Frolic. House Filled to Overflowing

GYMNASTS STAGE SHDW

Hart House bulged with entertainment Friday night as about 2,000 people flocked the gothic halls to indulge in the variety of activities offered at the U.C. Follies of 1940 and pronounce it an evening of "capital entertainment".

In addition to the usual three packed shows in Hart House theatre and dancing from nine to two, the University of Toronto gymnasts staged a performance on high bars, parallels and mats in the gymnasium, and two complete aquatic shows were given in the swimming pool. Swimming pool spectators were particularly lavish in their praise for the mermaids.

Music was provided in the gymnasium, east common room and orderly room respectively by Frank Bogart and his orchestra, Cliff McKay and his orchestra, and "The Commodores."

An official party of staff members of University College and members of the Students' Administrative Council, led by President and Mrs. H. J. Cody and Principal and Mrs. M. W. Wallace, arrived at nine o'clock and were taken on an extensive tour of the Follies.

Varsity S.C.M. Initiated Plans for Student House

By John Coleman

The tempestuous history of the Student Christian Movement goes back to 1871, when a group of men in University College first felt the need of a religious union to develop Christian character and influence the life of the college.

The origins of University College are heavily enshrouded in the smoke and fire of denominational controversy and so the college authorities looked upon the new society with some degree of apprehension and the University College Y.M.C.A. which was soon organized was, as an old account puts it, "officially discountenanced" by the College Council.

However, the subterranean movement achieved official recognition in 1873 and made an important advance in 1885 when the association raised a building of its own on the site of what is now the School of Hygiene. The entire cost of $7,000 was subscribed by graduates, students and faculty.

It was then that the Massey Foundation undertook to provide a new type of building for the Y.M.C.A. which would include social, recreational and auditorium facilities. The idea was gradually enlarged until Hart House as we now have it was finally pre-empted to the university. It was formally opened in November 1919, accommodation in it being provided for the Y.M.C.A.

In the early days much of the work now done by the Students' Administrative Council, such as printing the student handbook, inspecting boarding houses and organizing the university symphony was done by the Y.M.C.A. After the war it was felt that much

DEAN G. S. BRETT ATTENDS MEETINGS IN WASHINGTON

President H. J. Cody has announced that Dean G. S. Brett, head of the School of Graduate Studies, left Saturday for Washington to attend the annual meeting of the Association of American Universities which is to be held in Washington.

In the membership of this association there are only thirty-one universities, twenty-nine of them located in the United States and two — Toronto and McGill — in Canada. The universities holding membership in the association are only those which give special attention to graduate work and have graduate schools.

It is hoped that the association may hold its annual meeting in Toronto in 1941.

UNIVERSITY RELAXES AS SANTA CLAUS PARADES

By Melba Lent

Santa Claus and Company arrived in Toronto on Saturday and it was a toss-up who enjoyed the parade more, the children for whom it was intended, or the Varsity students.

The most popular float in the parade, a survey among Varsity students disclosed, was the huge Gulliver among the tiny Lilliputians and their dwarfed buildings, because it was "something different". "The Water Babies," "Queen of Hearts," "North Pole" and of course, Santa himself, were close rivals.

The Engineers, however, were greatly disappointed in Santa. Last year he joined with wild abandon in the famous Toke-Oke yell but this year, doubtless remembering the decorum befitting a gentleman of his years and position — he merely led them. He was no S.P.S. man! mourned one Schoolman.

The gay, carefree "Spirit of Xmas" was abroad throughout the campus to

Earl and Countess of Athlone Attend Traditional Ceremony — His Excellency Gives Address

MULOCK GIVES DEGREE

By Neil MacDonald

"Act as men of thought; think as men of action". This, His Excellency, the Earl of Athlone, Governor-General of Canada, told the large audience which had assembled on Friday afternoon in Convocation Hall to witness Sir William Mulock, Chancellor of the university, grant him the degree of Doctor of Laws, must constantly be our watchword.

After inspecting a specially picked guard of honour of men from the C.O.T.C., the Governor-General entered Convocation Hall, where Dr. H. J. Cody, president of the university, in his speech commented that "Through him we again pledge our devotion to the Throne and those great ideals for which it stands, and on the defense and maintenance of which in this hour of testing depends the future of our humane and Christian civilization."

The Governor-General directed his address to the young people who made up the greater part of his audience, saying: "For those of you who leave the university when the war is still in progress, your consciences will require you to give your life in some way or another to the service of your country. But I venture to suggest that in both peace and war there is no higher calling..."

We shall have to mobilize not only all our natural resources to defeat the common enemy of mankind, His Excellency stressed, but we shall have to utilize all our intellectual abilities to make full use of these resources. Here was the place for universities. The art of government was no "chance calling"; instead he stated "we shall soon enter upon a phase in which the phrase 'government by the people' will give way to the expression 'government by the best people'."

The Governor-General strongly condemned the distrust of the intellectual in politics. "I have no use for the weaver of theories," he said, "but I have the greatest respect for the true intellectual who is able and willing to place the fruits of his superior intelligence at the service of his fellow-men."

His Excellency Visits

Another name has been added to the long list of distinguished men upon whom the University of Toronto has conferred the honorary degree, Doctor of Laws. On Friday afternoon, His Excellency the Earl of Athlone, Governor-General of Canada, received the degree at a special convocation held in Convocation Hall on the occasion of his first official visit to the campus. His Excellency also inspected a guard of honour specially drawn from the U. of T. contingent of the C.O.T.C.

The representative in Canada of the Crown voiced some pertinent and serious thoughts in his message to the assemblage when he warned Canadians against the mistake of divorcing intellectuals "from practical affairs." The art of government "is just as intricate and difficult as any other profession and requires just as much training." This is a truth becoming ever more apparent in Canada, a comparatively young country which thus has the opportunity to benefit from the lessons of others. The old criterion of "privilege" with regard to government gave way in England, said His Excellency, to the newer criterion of "intellect" or ability, and this latter criterion is becoming more and more important in the light of a highly organized, intricate world. "It is a suicidal delusion to imagine that a nation can deal competently with such a world, in peace or war, by instinct and improvisation and 'muddling through!'" The best people, best in the sense of ability and mentality, must be made to realize that theirs should be the responsibility of governing.

In urging the universities to encourage promising young men to enter politics, the Governor-General brought to mind the plea uttered last March in the Great Hall of Hart House by a fine man and a fine politician, Norman Rogers, who only a short time later was killed in a flying accident. The former Minister of National Defence, and earlier Minister of Labour, appealed for a "never-ending stream" of young men to enter Canada's public life.

People are too prone to criticize politics as "dirty" or "under-handed" and give that as the reason why young men do not enter the field of public service. If they would but stifle their criticism and encourage the right type of person to enter politics (and this is not to state that there are not many fine public-spirited men in politics today) perhaps they could remove the cause for criticism. And we wonder if those people who do criticize take the trouble of going to the polls on election day? Talk about democracy and its glories is all well and good. But democracy can all too soon become a myth if some thought and effort are not put into its preservation. Our present day political system is supposedly the active expression of democracy. That may or may not be the truth, but certainly if ill-advised criticism goes on and promising young men are discouraged from entering their country's government, our political system and our democracy and everything connected with them will be swept into the discard.

Super Highway

Ontario has taken the lead in Canada in recognizing and attempting to satisfy the demands of modern motor traffic through the construction of the still-uncompleted Queen Elizabeth Way. The most modern highway in Canada, and one of the most modern on the continent from the point of view of design if not of actual construction and practical operation, the Way has been built at an estimated cost of $20,000,000.

Ultimately the new highway will connect New York state boundary with the metropolis of Ontario and the jumping-off place for northern tourist resorts. It will run from Fort Erie, the Canadian terminus of the Buffalo-to-Canada Peace Bridge, to Toronto, a distance of 91 miles, but at present only 74.2 miles, from Niagara Falls to Toronto, have been constructed. Much of the preparatory work has been completed on the final section up the Niagara River, and hopes are expressed that the portion will be stone-surfaced by next summer, although paving will await the end of the war.

The highway is of the four-lane type, two lanes for each direction, with a centre boulevard. The whole route from Fort Erie to Toronto will have only 35 curves as compared with 218 in the old route, and the sharpest curve will be 2½ degrees. With one exception the maximum grade will be three percent. All cities and towns are skirted, and a majority of railway and road crossings have been eliminated by the forty bridges which mark the route. The entire highway will be illuminated by a non-glare lighting system installed for several years on some portions of the road.

To people residing in the central part of Ontario the Way is no novelty for the Toronto-Hamilton section has been used for several years. But it will undoubtedly be a great achievement when the whole route is completed, and it should illustrate the need for a similarly-constructed network across Canada. It is felt in some parts, however, that before Ontario gets the final section completed the original part will be battered and torn by the heavy pounding it is now getting from trucks. Anyone driving over the Hamilton-Toronto section now can readily notice the great amount of patching that has had to be done already. Suggestions have been made that trucks be shifted to the older highways, saving the new one for passenger traffic. The reverse suggestion has also been advanced.

The increase in truck transport has become a serious problem, and while we can offer no real solution here, we can point out that the problem of rail and motor transport, its finance and jurisdiction is considered vitally important by the Sirois Commission authors who recommend that it be given immediate and serious attention. The aim must be to achieve some systematic control of highway expansion, which is a provincial jurisdiction, so that money is not wasted in a cut-throat competition with the railways. At present there certainly is a high degree of duplication in transport services. And the taxpayer is bearing the brunt for he has to help absorb railway deficits through the Dominion treasury and he provides highways through the provincial treasuries. Heavy provincial gasoline and automobile taxes practically amount to a subsidy for commercial motor shippers. If competition between the two brings about decreases in rates and consequent increases in operating expenses of railroads and increases in provincial taxes to keep up roads for the trucks, poor Mr. Taxpayer is going to be unable to enjoy the scenic beauties and engineering marvels of his new Queen Elizabeth Way—unless he hitch-hikes! Something should materialize when the Dominion-Provincial conference meets in January.

Pamphlet Literature

One of the phenomena of this war has been the rapid development of a literary form not greatly used for many years, it seemed. We refer to the growth in the past several years of a prolific pamphlet literature.

Before the war students on the local campus became familiar with the Oxford Pamphlets on World Affairs. They are still being published but since the outbreak of war they have been rather lost in the flood of literature that has been produced in pamphlet form for easy popular consumption. The Foreign Policy association has been offering pamphlets of a more meaty, serious character. It publishes a report twice a month, including a general roundup and articles on currently vital topics, and also a weekly bulletin. The F.P.A. also prints for popular consumption what are known as the "Headline" books, dealing with topics "behind the headlines."

As mentioned above, there is a veritable flood of literature available to the citizen today and the chief danger is that he may get too much of it or that out of the wealth of material he may get only the inadequate literature. The pamphlet publications of the F.P.A., of the Canadian Institute of International Affairs, and the Oxford Pamphlets, have been recommended to local students as perhaps the best of the flood.

Schoolman Razes Campus Trees

Forestry Declares Art of Mutilation Unconstitutional as Crazy Engineer Makes Figures Check by Violence

HATCHET MURDER

Culminating days of patient sleuthing, discovery of the reason for the lopping off 31 feet from the ground of a stout old elm in front of Hart House was made late last night by H. Kugpar O'Prichintosh, Varsity cup reporter.

Badgered and beaten for hours under efficient third-degree treatment in a lonely Queen's Park apartment, Cardwell J. Fiske, a timid first-year Schoolman, faltered out the confession.

"I did it with my little hatchet," he sobbed effusively.

"Yes, yes, go on," said the eager Varsity newshound, deftly exchanging a piece of rubber hose for a pencil, "tell it all to H. Kugpar."

"You see, when I figured out my surveying results," he said, getting a grip on himself, "the stout old elm came out to 31 feet. The thing got about, and my friends shunned me. I lay awake nights. What would my professor say? I consulted Artsmen. I tore my hair and stopped eating lunch in the Tuckshop. I even re-checked my figures."

"Then the idea struck me. The only thing to do was make the tree come out even."

Bewildered, Fiske then told how he procured a hatchet and ladder from the university workshop and measured the tree with his slide rule in the dead of night to cut the tree off at the exact height.

"I hoped nobody would notice it," he continued, "but it looked so funny after the top was off that I thought I'd better take off the branches too, just to make sure."

"But it was no use," he cried bitterly, "you found me out. Yuh won't tell my professor about it, willyuh?" he pleaded queedingly.

The admission not only cleared up the reason for the tree's strange transformation, but explained why nearby residents were awakened one night last week with a banshee-like wail of "Timber!"

The incident recalled a similar case six years ago when a schoolman named George figured out a tree as rising 47 feet above the level of the water in Hart House pool, thus necessitating an excavation of 103 feet to make his calculations come out correctly. A similar situation arose in 1896, when a mis-carriage of the plotting of the highest point in University College forced the placing of the spike atop the tower—altch.

U.C. Follies

The U.C. Follies has passed into history. It is rather a pity that this excellent show is produced only once—the little first night imperfections would have ironed themselves out with a few more productions. These were not many—a few dead places in the script which could have been easily corrected and some obvious overacting by actors who were only veneered. The production brought down the house times without number and that is the real praise which matters.

As in any production, especially amateur, there were high spots and low spots and a great deal in between. The absence of Frank Shuster and Lou Weingarten from the writing teams which produced this year's script was unfortunately all too evident. Three stars go to the professional looking chorus, whose routines were, when I saw them, practically flawless; one

Lumbermen Triumphant On the Gridiron at Last

Friday afternoon, on the snow-clad gridiron of Trinity's back campus, Forestry blasted Jr. Meds' hopes of attaining a playoff berth by conquering the Anatomists 3-1. Dents, consequently, will represent Group II in the Mulock Cup semi-finals against Jr. S.P.S.

Much credit is due the short-handed Lumbermen—they dressed only twelve men, but each proved a stout oak—for their gallant stand against the title-hungry Med squad.

The Medicos drove deep into Forestry territory immediately after the opening whistle, and before long assumed a one-point lead when Allman was stopped in the end zone on Owen Gray's long punt.

From then until half-time play slowed up considerably, numerous fumbles turning the affair into a weird "Comedy of Errors".

"Bud" Puttock opened the third quarter with a sensational 45 yard run-back of Meds' kickoff and from the thirty Ron Lake, with a magnificent 30 yd. field goal, scuttled the victory aspirations of the Medical machine. The Doctors never recovered, Lake's consistent booting kept Forestry out of danger until the full-time whistle.

Jr. Meds: Ben Seigal, Crompton, Gardine, Arthur, Beattie, Bryans, Collings, Brown, Gray, Sterioff, Arnp, Kuchepora, Elia, Campbell, Karry, Ludwig, Walters, King.

Forestry: Eccles, Gray, Whitely, Puttock, Bentley, Lake, McBride, Jull, Hall, Purdy, Tuckeh, Allman.

KNOX WINS THRILLER SCORE IN FINAL PERIOD

The Knox B volleyball team came back with a rush in the final instalment of a three-game match played on the upper gym floor Saturday afternoon, to down S.P.S. Fourths 15-7, 12-15, 15-4.

Knox B: Rogers, Stiles, Crawford, Means, Moorehead, Hamilton, McKay. S.P.S. IV: Kuhn, Wilmet, Lewis, Penfold, Moses, Turner, Pettman, Nelson, Webb.

DENTS END WITH WIN DEFEAT PHARMACY

In a game that counted for nothing in group standings, Dents wound up their soccer schedule with a 3-1 verdict over Pharmacy in a game played Friday afternoon on the Vic field.

All goals were scored in the second canto. Walt Lee booted the lone counter for the Druggists, while Bob Elliot tallied once for the Tooth-Tuggers and Jack Mullett, better known for his accomplishments in the realm of inter-collegiate tennis, hoofed home a brace of counters.

Dents: John, McFarlane, Moore, Clee, Elliot, Scott, Cork, Roberts, Mason, Mullett, Feasby.

Pharmacy: Garrett, Lee, Boyes, Skitch, Walther, Dunning, Binning, Newman, Quirk, Russell, Campbell.

VIC PLAYS SCHOOL IN SOCCER PLAYOFFS

Vic will tangle with School in the initial game for soccer supremacy tomorrow, it was announced by the Athletic Office on Friday.

These two squads finished their schedule in a first-place tie for Group III honours, with two victories and two draws apiece. Both defeated U.C. by top-sided scores, and then tied each other twice by the same count, 1-1.

The game will be staged on the back east campus and will start at four bells. There will be two thirty-minute periods of regulation time, with overtime, if required. Forbes Thomson will officiate.

On Wednesday, Trinity, who finished up in second place in Group II, will go against Meds, winners of Group I by a large margin, at four o'clock on the Trinity field.

On Friday Knox, victors in Group I, will meet the winner of the S.P.S.-Vic tussle.

The sudden-death final is scheduled to take place on the back campus Tuesday, November 26 at 2.30.

S.P.S. EDGE OUT IRISH SAINTS LOSE FIRST SPOT

"Ferocious" Frankie Kellam led Jr. S.P.S. to a closely-contested 6-4 victory over St. Mike's in Friday afternoon's boxia fixture in the big gym. The Engineers thus moved into first place while the Irish retired to second place in Group I. The game was a close-checking affair and was turned in favour of School only by dint of the tireless efforts of Kellam, who scored 5 out of the 6 S.P.S. goals.

Kent started the scoring for the Engineers and Hector promptly tied it for St. Mike's. Kellam and Fitzpatrick, an outstanding St. Mike's forward, then went through the same process and the first quarter ended S.P.S. 2, St. Mike's 2.

In the second quarter Kellam again outgassed Bennett in the Double Blue goal, but Gendron headed a Gael attack to duplicate the feat and leave the score still tied as the third quarter got under way.

The third and final quarter saw Frankie in rare form and did not come to an end until his galle stick had sent three goals past the bewildered Irish. Fitzpatrick of St. Mike's succeeded in slipping the last goal past School before time was called.

Despite St. Mike's emergence on the short end of the score the players of both squads had nothing but praise for the Blue's goal-keeper, Frank Bennett, who was moved back from the forward line and made a valiant first-time effort in the nets. Cassidy and Hector also made a good showing along the losers' forward line.

S.P.S.: Lavarne, Crosby, Currie, Kent, Rankine, Gorman, Prentice, Cooper, Kellam.

St. Mike's: Bennett, Cassidy, Hector, Gendron, Fitzpatrick, Morrison, Lanery, Buckley.

Speaking OF SPORT

By Owen Prichard

CONGRATULATIONS, MR. FITZGERALD

The Varsity is pleased to have this opportunity of sending best wishes to J. P. Fitzgerald, Sports Editor of the Toronto Evening Telegram. Mr. Fitzgerald has just completed forty years of covering the sports scene in this city.

We have always found his observations on athletics based on real information, devoid of "robure", and wholly dedicated to the advancement of the finer side of sport. Speaking from the viewpoint of one interested chiefly in college sports, we wish to thank Mr. Fitzgerald for his consistently adequate and fair treatment of intercollegiate and interfaculty athletics.

A VARSITY DREAM TEAM

Last night at the Press sports-writer Bill Quigley started us wishfully thinking of what a whole of a hockey team this university could send out onto the ice if only. . . . We present the following names as the mythical team he dreamed up, composed of players at present studying at Varsity who would be eligible for the squad this winter if only. . . .

The brackets contain the names of the teams for which these lads played last year.

GOAL: Claude Morrison (Varsity Juniors), Bill Hunnisset (Varsity). DEFENCE: Doug Marshall (Varsity), George McNamara (Marlboroughs), "Beefy" McMillan (Varsity).

This roster does not include the whole list of those who could play hockey for the Blue and White this winter, but it gives you a fair idea of what Varsity could do, if only. . . .

FORESTRY FINALLY DOES IT

The Forestry rugby squad ended its schedule on Friday with the only win of the season, and we think they deserve more credit for their showing than any team in the league. Always the "weak sisters" of the interfaculty loop, the Woods-men had difficulty in getting a full squad out to practices, but did very well for a faculty of about half a hundred students. This season they were bolstered somewhat by the inclusion of a few players from Aerial Navigation.

"Tiger" Hall turned in a great performance in Friday's victory, standing on the line like a Colossus, and snugging any Medsman who came within wing-spread of his far-reaching mitts. "The Tiger" gave us a chuckle the other day at the Stadium when the Lumbermen were playing a game with Dents. The half-time interval was over, and the two teams were lined up for the kick-off. "Tiger" was sitting behind us in the grandstand, taking it easy after playing the side-lines for the first half. Then just before the whistle blew, Forestry's coach turned around and spied Hall. "Hey!" yelled the mentor, "you're supposed to be on the field!" With a nonchalant "Oh," Hall climbed down out of his comfortable pew and shuffled out to get in the game. But last Friday "Tiger" was inspired, as was the whole Forestry crew, as they pulled out their 3-1 victory over Junior Meds.

The man most tickled with the win of the Men in Green is their coach Murray Graham. Murray has contributed a wealth of experience to the men under his tutelage this season, just as he has done with various teams in former years. We recall watching his early efforts with the Forestry squad one afternoon this fall, when he had about five uniformed players out on the back campus, and the task of showing them how to play the line. To fill up the holes Graham pressed into service a chapie who was standing nearby with his books on his arm. Then with infinite pains he went about to show the lads the rudiments of stance and movement in blocking. His courtesy and patience were remarkable, not because the boys were slow on the up-take, but because of the natural sense of discouragement any coach would have to overcome when confronted with such a small faculty from which to create a team. He finally whipped a team into shape, and it played the whole season, even though the final game saw the squad with no substitutes. Now they have given their coach a victory. He's happy about the whole thing, and so are we.

TRINITY ENTERS PLAYOFFS KNOX GAINS SECOND SPOT

Trinity's soccer eleven snaffed a play-off berth Friday afternoon as they blanked Wycliffe 2-0 on the back campus. Their victory was merely double insurance, for Knox's 1-0 triumph over the Emmanuelites was enough to secure second place for the Anglicans.

Art Jackson, star wing for Trinity, booted the first goal past Coleman of Wycliffe midway through the second frame. Phillips tucked the game away with another shortly after.

Trinity: Riley, Baillie, Grever, L. Delaney, Blaker, Wagland, Dawson, Jackson, Stinson, Phillips, R. Delaney, Clarkson.

In a rough affair Knox eked out their win with a fluke goal to send the Emmanuel bunch into the class of also-rans. A kick by Art Hamilton, Emmanuel's goalie, in the first period, collided with the tummy of Jimmie Jack, and the ball bounced back into the net for the only score of the game. Jack for the only score of the game. Jack for the only score of the game. Jack for the only score of the game.

Emmanuel: Hamilton, Hall, Stapleton, Tucker, Morewood, Oliver, Fennell, Proctor, Dobson, Hord, Daynard, Jull.

Forestry continued their winning ways in their lacrosse group as they defeated Pharmacy B 5-3 in a Saturday afternoon tussle in the big gym.

By common agreement the three rest-periods between quarters were abolished, and the squads played out the regulation time without a break.

Grant Puttock kept his head throughout a bruising tilt, in which a goodly number of penalties were meted out to both teams, and netted three. Bert Gray polished off the Treemen's record with a brace of goals. Cox and Kitchen were the scorers for the Druggists, the former bagging a pair.

Vic Downs U.C. in Snow Narrow 1-0 Victory

Vic's gridders kept their play-off hopes alive as they completed their schedule with a narrow 1-0 victory over University College Friday afternoon on a snow-blanketed Stadium field.

The Scarlet and Gold's all-important single came in the second quarter on a boot off the educated toe of Red Heinrich. That one kick sent Vic into a second-place tie with the Red and White squad, who, to clinch second place and a play-off berth, must win over Trinity today. If, however, the Red-and-Black clad crew outscore U.C., it will create a three-way tie for second spot. U.C.'s loss insured top-spot to Junior School.

It was an icy wind that really decided the game, although it might have just as easily shifted the victory to the losers. U.C. used the breezes to good advantage in the first quarter to keep Vic from making any threats whatsoever.

In the second stanza, a short kick gave the ball to the Red and White, on Vic's 40. A punt shoved Vic back to their own 20. From there Red Heinrich hoisted a tremendous punt, which, with the help of the wind, travelled all the way down to U.C.'s goal-line, and on the ensuing exchange of kicks, the big Vic had little trouble in securing the game's lone tally.

Again in the fourth quarter Vic played havoc with Vic's attempts to get an attack organized, to say nothing of the great secondary play of Alcie Alcombrack, stand-out for the U.C. squad. Heinrich lifted a towering punt that the wind threw back at him, and the ball went out of touch on Vic's fifteen. Instead of playing for a sure tie, Cuddy Faber gambled for a win by calling for a placement. Bob Irwin and Jimmie Carson cleared a roadway for Johnny Hog who roared down the alley to block the attempted three-pointer. Heinrich scooped up the pigskin, dashed to his own 25. Whallon went to the 43 on an end run, and the Red and White threat disappeared.

Vic played the smartest game of their schedule. George Lewis, at the quarterback slot, turned in his best performance of the season, both in calling plays and at the catching position. Red Heinrich was a full-time threat, and handled his kicking department to perfection. Johnny Whallon played a heads-up game, and Harry Rutledge turned in his usual dependable game as secondary.

Neither of the team's forward wails could be denied, but it was Alcie Alcombrack who was always on the spot to bolster a U.C. line that threatened at times to wobble. Alcombrack knocked down passes, plunged hard, tackled ferociously. In short, he was the best man on the field, in spite of the great effort of Red Heinrich.

After wiggling our way out of several rather minute—that's our opinion—blunders in last week's announced schedule, we are determined to put an all-time high in women's sports announcements. We are going to get it all right. We have put on our glasses, and are now quite, quite sure of the following statements:

Mon, at 6, Vic Freshies vs St. Hilda's Seniors; at 8, U.C. Juniors vs Household Science.

Tues, at 6.30, U.C. Seniors vs O.T. & P. Wed, at 6, U.C. Freshies vs St. Hilda's Juniors; at 7, St. Hilda's Seniors vs Nurses; at 8, St. Mike's vs U.C. Juniors.

Thurs, at 6, U.C. Seniors vs Physical Ed.

Fri, at 6, St. Hilda's Seniors vs Vic Freshies.

Pretty good, eh? Hit everyone right on the head, eh? That's us every time—except sometimes!

The completion of this schedule will end the regular series, and determine which four teams will meet in the finals. From each of the four groups, each group consisting of three teams, one star-studded sextette will blossom forth and these will meet for the play-offs probably some time next week. Last year we had two Vic and two U.C. teams battling it out, but this year looks like a more cosmopolitan affair—is that the word? Anyway, we are looking for more variety and we guess we got it.

For you two or three who haven't been able to make the games in O.C.E., the finals and probably semi-finals will most likely be played in Hart House a la last year. Sounds a bit indefinite but we intend to know all come next week, first thing.

U.C. ATHLETIC BOARD—

"We looked to British history to justify our policy and we hoped that the wheel of fortune would turn in our favour, but history shows us that nations perish if they cannot trim the sails of their traditions and methods to suit shifting winds."

"It is a suicidal delusion," he continued, "to imagine that a nation can deal competently with such a world, in peace or war, by instinct and improvisation and 'muddling through'."

OUR INACCURATE CHUMS on the staff of The Manitoban refer to the University of Manitoba Symphony Orchestra as "Canada's Only University Symphony". Delving deep into the recesses of our troubled mind, we seem to recall some mention around the campus of a little swing-band entitled the University of Toronto Symphony Orchestra. . . . If memory fails not, we suggest to The Manitoban that THIS SORT OF THING MUST STOP.

THE TRIALS OF A CUB REPORTER are superbly illustrated by an incident recorded in Southern Cal's Daily Trojan. . . . The lad was sent to cover a meeting of a debating society and failed to return. . . . A worried search party found the following note pinned under the door of the debating room:

"Dear Fellows—
When I first got here there were eight persons in the room. There were three arguments going on. Two freshmen remained silent.
"Then there were two arguments, and only one freshman was silent. Now there is only one argument, and no one is silent.
"I am about to join in, as these fellows have the whole question wrong.
"Just in case, notify my family. I AM STILL WORKING ON THE STORY."

A SALUTE from one campus daily to another for the Cornell Daily Sun. . . . The Ithaca inklingers showed large quantities of the better-service-for-our-readers spirit in publishing a football extra carrying the result and play-by-play account of Saturday's Dartmouth-Cornell battle. . . . The special edition was on the streets an hour after the final whistle. . . . And another thing we admire about the Sun. . . . THEY QUOTE CONSTANTLY FROM THE HITHER AND YON.

PICTURE . . . The corridor deep in the interstices of Hart House which leads to the Tuck Shop, on Friday afternoon, shortly before the vice-regal visit. . . . The campus is teeming with all sorts and descriptions of cops. Being a cop on a snowy day is cold work, so two of the gentlemen in blue decide that they will breeze down to the Tuck Shop and snag a quick coffee before going on duty. En route they pause, full of interest and envy, outside the door of the pool room. Their coffee forgotten, they remain there, their noses glued to the glass, utterly fascinated. . . . FADEOUT.

candle power less to Susan Goulding, the actress of the evening. She loses her candle power because she tried to sing—I couldn't hear her. She, however, made the show whenever she appeared.

Very little of the scintillating wit which has come to be associated with these productions was evident. The best Folly was the first, So this is Superman (credit Miss Goulding) followed closely by the third, The Greeks had a word for it, whose final quip was the highlight of the evening. Folly Four would have made a better show by its omission. There was really nothing in it but some excellent lighting, and a great deal of sentimentality which I abhor.

The lyrics were excellent amateur attempts. Three Little Freshettes by Larry Smith had the advantage of good presentation added to its own excellence. As a whole, the music lacked punch. The best combination of words and music was Mavor Moore's Time Waits on Me, but it was very good.

The show was enjoyable (very much so) but it seemed disappointing to this reviewer because he had been carefully prepared for something infinitely better.

let's go places

"Third Finger, Left Hand" entered the Loew's Theatre this week with very little advance publicity. A competent cast take a threadbare plot, and work hard enough to make it LOEW'S click. Mrs. Thin Man DOUBLE handles most of the continuity in her usual competent manner, and Melvyn Douglas takes care of the male angle more than adequately. Felix Bressart does an excellent little characterization, and Bonita Granville is rapidly growing into an excellent actress. However, even with a good cast, and competent direction by Robert Leonard, the show misses fire. Frothy little comedies are on their way out, and if they aren't, they should be. The cycle has worn thin.

Haunted Honeyman deals with a young romantic couple who agree to set aside his detective business and her crime yarns for a honeymoon of peace and romance. The inevitable happens, and they are plunged into a very interesting murder mystery. Continuity moves along at a fairly smooth pace, and Robert Montgomery, as well poised as ever, contributed a sound piece of work. Constance Cummings does the crime writing wife brightly and the picture is filled out with more than adequate characterizations contributed by Leslie Banks and Sir Seymour Hicks. However, although there are some laughs, and a neatly worked-out plot, the vehicle is not particularly fair to Montgomery's talents. He is worthy of better things.—F.S.

"I came down intending to take one or two pictures and ended by taking seven, there was so much of the parade I couldn't resist," revealed Florence Joy, I Pass, who had never seen Santa arrive before. ### TRINITY RUGBY TEAM CONTINUE COMEBACK TO DEFEAT U.C. 12-7

Boxer and McMillan Give Brilliant Display to Put Anglicans in Three-Way Tie for Second Place

TRINITY TAKES EARLY LEAD

The Trinity colours were raised again in victory as the Red and Black blazed along the come-back trail with a smashing 12-7 football win over U.C. at Varsity Stadium yesterday, resulting in a three-way tie for second place in this group.

Trinity were quick to capitalize on their rivals' misplays, and a stout secondary defence knocked down or intercepted numerous attempted forwards. "Becy" McMillan once again featured with his deadly tackling.

The second half saw the Red and White throw caution to the winds with a forward passing attack in an effort to overcome the 12-1 lead held by the Anglicans. But the Trinity defense held tight until the final whistle.

Five minutes after the opening whistle sounded, Joe Harris intercepted a U.C. forward and out-footed the Red and White tacklers to race 30 yards for a touchdown which Don Boxer converted, giving the Red and Black a 6-0 lead. There was no further scoring in this quarter.

Shortly after the start of the second quarter, U.C. kicked over the Trinity touchline to rouse the Trinity half-back, making the score 6-1. But the Anglicans came back strong. With the ball on the U.C. 40-yard line, Boxer tossed a long forward to Henderson, who crossed the line standing up. Boxer converted to make the score 12-1.

Half-way through the third quarter a Nelson-to-McKinley forward pass advanced the ball from the Trinity 45-yard line to their 2-yard line as the Red and White started to click. Alcombrack went through centre for the touch and also came through with the convert to end scoring for the day.

The fourth quarter featured even play, with Trinity playing a cautious game, and letting U.C. take all the chances. McMillan and Boxer were a tower of strength for the Anglican lads. The game ended with U.C. vainly trying to penetrate the net-work defense which Trinity set up.

FORMER STUDENT KILLED STARRED IN BASKETBALL FOR ST. MIKE'S FROSH

Word reached Toronto yesterday that Freddie Hamilton, popular freshman at St. Michael's College last year, had been killed in an automobile accident Saturday at Auburn, N.Y.

Freddie represented his class on the Athletic Directorate and was an outstanding basketball player. News of his sudden death was received with great shock and sorrow by the faculty and student body of St. Michael's.

MacRae and French Prove Russo-German Pact to be Invalid as Armed Alliance for Joint Aggression

HAVELOCK COMMENTS

That Russia is playing the same game with Germany as she played in the past with Japan, was the opinion held by the opposition in Victoria College Debating Parliament last night. The subject for this first big debate of the year was, "Resolved that this house is of the opinion that the Russo-German pact is an armed alliance for joint aggression."

The opposition was upheld by Betty MacRae and Goldwin French. Betty Boyd and John Coleman supported the defeated government.

"Russia is stalling for time," Betty MacRae said. "She does not want war with the democracies yet. She is only protecting her frontiers from Germany, also her ideology."

Supporting the argument Betty Boyd held that hating Russia, Hitler realizes her uses to him. "The economic part of the pact," she said, "petered out in two months. It was but a diplomatic stepping stone."

John Coleman said that Russia sees in democracy a greater enemy than fascism, hence an armed alliance with Germany is to her advantage, temporarily.

Professor Havelock remarked on the timeliness of the subject, since it is being debated in councils in Europe in these days.

PROBLEMS OVERCOME IN FAMILY PORTRAIT

Vic Dramatic Society to Copy Colour Scheme of Broadway Production in Toronto Premiere

TICKETS NOW ON SALE

A colour scheme similar to the one in the Broadway production of "Family Portrait" will be worked out in the Victoria College Dramatic Society presentation on Dec. 5, 6, and 7, at Hart House.

The variety of accents in the play has been one of the problems which the director Mr. W. S. Milne has had to overcome. The difficulty of portraying a small boy has been solved by the importation of a young lad.

Phyllis McKenzie will play the role made famous by Judith Anderson. Miss McKenzie has had extensive experience in the Vic Dramatic Society. The cast will also include Betty Blair, Dorothy Ferguson, Tom Paton, Betty MacRae, John Mantley, Bob Miller and many others.

Tickets for this Toronto premiere can be obtained at the Victoria College box office or Hart House box office. All seats are reserved.

MUSIC PROGRAM

Donald Ewing, IV Victoria, will give the following program at 1:30 p.m. today in the east common room, Hart House:
Chorale "Awake the Voice Command" .. Bach-Busoni
Two movements from Sonata in E minor .. Grieg
The Prize Song from "Die Meistersinger" .. Wagner-Bundel
Pastorale .. Sibelius

CANADIAN MUSIC NOW HAS BRIGHT PROSPECT MAINLY IN TORONTO

In Past Year Canadian Music Has Progressed and is Now Being Played by Top-Notch Orchestras

WIDENED INTEREST

"Up to a year ago the future of a young Canadian musician, either performer or composer, was precarious to say the least," said Miss Frances Campbell, of the Toronto Conservatory of Music, when interviewed by The Varsity, "but for the past few months the prospect has become steadily brighter. Canadian music is coming into its own. The Toronto Symphony has been playing Canadian music, so has Frank Black's String Symphony. And the Vogt Society, its protégé the Junior Vogt, and the Chamber Music Club, all in Toronto, have been doing magnificent work in bringing the work of our own composers before the public."

Miss Campbell added, "Of course Canadian music must be good before it can be performed, just as any other music must be good, but it is most encouraging to see how favourably our own composers compare with their contemporaries in other countries."

Augustus Bridle, of the Toronto Star, last year made a survey and found

NEW MILITARY RULES PROPOSED IN OTTAWA

C.O.T.C. Men May Have to Work Up in Ranks for Commissioners and N.P.A.M. Train Longer

LAST WAR DIFFERENT

How plans, recently broached at Ottawa in regard to the granting of commissions to officers, will affect the local unit of the C.O.T.C. is not known, said Lt.-Col. H. H. Madill, officer commanding. Nor is it known what arrangements may be made in regard to another proposal to increase the training period for the non-permanent active militia from one month to four months. "All these plans are in the mind of a Cabinet Minister, and nothing concrete has been done in regard to the C.O.T.C.," said Madill.

If the local officers-in-training were forced to enlist in the ranks and work up toward their commissions, such an arrangement would be a new one, as the C.O.T.C. members were allowed to take commissions direct from completion of their training, during the last war.

HARRIS TO INTRODUCE TOWN FORUM SERIES

Rev. Thomas Harris, M.A., will introduce the first of a Popular Forum series at the Canadian Foresters Hall, Friday, November 29. His subject is "America in the world today."

According to the program director of Town Forum, Mr. Cowan, Mr. Harris has had considerable experience in lecturing before large audiences. The variety of his experience permits him a wide range of topics and adapts him to very varied audiences. He is considered one of the best orators heard in New York City in many months.

Mr. Harris wrote "Christian Public Worship" which was used for a time as a text at Victoria College. Guest chairman will be Rev. Gordon Domm, M.A., B.D., of Bathurst United Church.

TRINITY TO PRESENT CHEKOV'S 'THE BEAR'

"The Bear", a play written by Anton Chekov, will be presented by Trinity College tomorrow afternoon in the series sponsored by the University Drama Club, under the direction of Paul Christie.

Those in the cast are Miss Sheila Sharpe who will play the part of Elena Ivanovna Popova, a land owning widow, Mr. Arthur Gibson who will take the role of Gregory Stepanovitch Smirnov, a middle-aged landowner, and Mr. Peter Boyd-Bowman who will portray Luka, an aged footman.

The play is a jest in one act. The middle-aged landowner is furiously intent on collecting a debt from the land-owning widow but winds up marrying the debtor.

The feature three-act Trinity play originally scheduled for December has been postponed until the middle of the coming term. Present plans now fix the date early in March.

VIC RECORD CLUB HOLDS THIRD MEETING OF YEAR

The Vic Record Club started by Yvonne McQuinn, held its third meeting yesterday at 1:30 in Alumnae Hall. Some of the selections played were Sonata Pathétique and The Treador's Song from "Carmen". These records are played with an electric pickup and turntable through the amplifying system of a radio.

The club has been gradually building up its membership and classical records are donated by its members.

The club first started with a gramophone but has a broadcasting system now extending from Middle House to Alumnae Hall. It is believed that this is the first club of its kind on the campus and everyone is welcome to attend its meetings.

MUSIC COMMITTEE

Members of the Music Committee of Hart House who have not yet picked up their copies of the recital program for this week are requested to do so today.

On inclement Days Lectures to be Given by Members of the Battalion Command on Military Training

WIDE VARIETY OF SUBJECTS

The training centre battalion, formerly known as the auxiliary battalion of the C.O.T.C., will continue to drill whenever the weather permits. This was the word from the Orderly Room in Hart House as given by Lt. E. A. Macdonald, adjutant of the battalion.

There is also to be a series of lectures which will probably be given on inclement days, but schedules are as yet uncertain. All the winter's instruction will be rounded off at the camp to which the battalion will go next spring.

The lectures are to be given by various members of the battalion command, and the university is co-operating to the fullest extent in regard to providing lecture halls. Subject matter for the lectures covers many aspects of military training. They include camp duties, that is, guards and pickets, arms and musketry, games and gas defence, anti-aircraft defence, military engineering such as the building of trenches and firing pits, hygiene, and bayonet training.

Bayonet fighting will be taken up soon, stated Lt.-Col. Wilson. A number of official Enfield rifles are on hand for use in musketry training which provides a knowledge of the operation and care of rifles. The Remingtons, at present in use for rifle drill, will be used for rifle and bayonet drill only.

Crane to Address Engineers Friday

Mr. Crane, who has been associated with the Turnbull Elevator Co. for sixteen years, will illustrate his talk with slides.

Members are invited to join the executive at dinner at the Engineers' Club at 7 p.m. Friday night and all those who wish to attend the dinner should notify the secretary.

What do You Think of Corsages? Co-eds Opinion on Campus Differs

Should he or should he not "say it with flowers"? The girls around the campus all have very different opinions on the question.

Lois Jurgenson of Vic enthusiastically stated that "Flowers are what make a perfect evening pluperfect," while Vanua Alford, IV Fine Art at U.C. declared that "Corsages are very unnecessary now and could easily be done away with."

Mary Irwin and Gwen Bray, Vic freshies in Fine Art, said, "We love our corsages, but would willingly give them up if necessary." Mary Tipton, 3rd year Psychology at U.C., was more doubtful, saying, "We could do without them, but—"

Nancy Lamb, Vic freshie, said, "Corsages are really nice, but I always have been allergic to pansies," while Evelyn Gardhouse suggested that just flowers for the hair or a bracelet of flowers would be nice for a change.

Jean Virtue, Occupational Therapy, expressed the opinion that "Corsages are not absolutely necessary but they certainly give an added thrill to the evening."

Elizabeth Jackson of Vic, said, "We still want our corsages, because the boys

U.C. FRENCH CLUB TO HEAR ADDRESS BY PROF. CLERC

Professor J. Clerc of Trinity College will address the second meeting of the University College French Club tomorrow night on the subject, "France—Voltaire to Pétain."

As in the past, the U.C. French Club extends a cordial invitation to all students interested in the French language, including those not enrolled in French courses.

Relief of Famine

Talk of famine in Nazi-dominated European countries this winter has naturally brought up the question, in neutral countries such as the United States, as to whether food supplies should be exported to such countries in an effort to relieve them. They have been urged on many sides, from a "humanitarian" viewpoint, to send food and thus save millions from starving. They have been urged by still greater numbers to do so under no condition, since such food would only fall into German hands and thus weaken Britain's blockade and prolong the war. Although everyone sympathizes with the position of these unfortunate people, no one would be difficult to see how anything else could be expected to happen. These countries are starving only because they have been overrun by Nazis and their products sent to better Germany's condition.

One of the hardest working and most enthusiastic of the American sponsors of this scheme to relieve the starving civilian populations of Northern Europe is former-president Herbert Hoover. At the time of the Finnish campaign he was active in raising funds to help the Finnish people carry on. For some time now he has been strongly urging a program of relief for famine-threatened European countries, but he has met with little success. The people are not unsympathetic, but evidently they are heeding the warnings of those who say that they will only be aiding the dictators. It is a risk few would be willing to take.

A few days ago an American minister, John Haynes Holmes, undertook to clear up what he termed "misconceptions" that have arisen about Herbert Hoover's plan. He claimed that the only role the United States Government would play would be to use its influence with the Germans and British to permit food to reach the starving people.

"Hoover's plan," he said, "provides that the countries affected — Holland, Belgium, Norway, Poland and Denmark — will use their own money to purchase food in the United States, and that they will use their own ships to transport the food home for the relief of their own people. And Mr. Hoover, as a man of experience in these matters, says that he guarantees that not one pound of this food will get into the hands of the German Government or the German people."

Mr. Holmes said that the "modest conditions" of the Hoover plan comprise a practical program for meeting one of the greatest crises in the world today; a crisis in which more than 25,000,000 people face starvation. Despite the fact that the program springs from all generous impulses in the human heart, he said, there has been no great response from either the United States Government or people.

"One of the reasons for fighting this war is to liberate these people, and the question now is we are going to let them starve in the process," he asserted.

In the light of Mr. Holmes' explanation, the Hoover plan seems reasonable and workable enough. However it would also seem that it depends in part on Germany's word, and everyone knows that Germany's word would be better disregarded. If the scheme has to depend upon it to any great extent, then it is a dangerous scheme and likely to be a disastrously unsuccessful one. As such it deserves no more support than it is getting. In addition, it is difficult to understand how Mr. Hoover could guarantee that "not one pound of this food will get into the hands of the German Government or the German people." That would appear to be a greater responsibility than one man could undertake.

The Faculty Disapproved

It's the sort of thing that doesn't happen up here but it happened in the States, at the University of Wisconsin. At the beginning of the 1940-41 school year author Sinclair Lewis had a sudden desire to be an English professor and offered to lecture to English students at the University of Wisconsin without pay. Needless to say his offer was accepted and a few fortunate students became English pupils of Professor Lewis. He taught creative writing.

Things were more than fine as far as the students were concerned, wildly enthusiastic about Lewis as they were. His advice to them was "If you really want to write, to be something, to aim as high as Shakespeare, you'll find English courses absolutely useless." To his students he suggested plots, explained tricks of his trade, and read and criticized countless of their writings.

With faculty members Sinclair Lewis was not nearly so popular. Relations between staff members and the famous author were definitely strained. They avoided him and criticized him until, last week, he departed college life as abruptly as he had entered it and returned to New York. Accounting for this sudden departure one Minnesota newspaper claimed that the faculty feared Lewis was studying them in preparation for a novel about them. If there was any justification for their fear it is little wonder that they were uneasy.

The Lighter Side

Amazing as it seems there always appears to be something for Londoners to be amused at, in between bombings, no matter how serious their situation becomes. An old joke now is their alteration of the long-standing sign, "Open for business as usual," to "More open than usual," on stores that have been partly demolished by bombs. It may not be extremely amusing but still it is indicative of the London spirit.

Among the hundreds of minor problems caused by nightly air attacks on London is the problem of transportation, the getting to and fro from work of the average citizen without a car, since buses and trams can no longer be depended upon. The common difficulty has given rise to a spirit of friendly co-operation and it is said that no one drives to and from work without picking up a car full of workers on their way, all of which has resulted in an amusing situation. The not-so-pretty women of London are complaining because the prettier girls are always the ones picked up by motorists and driven to work. Said one such complainant, "I have seen motorists creeping along the curb, ignoring requests from older and less attractive women, till they come across a pretty one. It is really most unfair."

It's an amusing situation — and a logical one.

Art Gallery of Toronto

The Great Masters show at the Toronto Art Gallery, which was opened last Friday night by His Excellency the Governor-General, could hardly be equalled, let alone bettered. Colonel R. Y. Eaton, president of the council of the Gallery, said in his introductory address that the current exhibition in aid of the Red Cross exceeded even the famous loan exhibition which christened the Gallery at its opening. Without the energy of Mr. Baldwin, curator of the gallery, and the great generosity of galleries and private collectors in the United States and Canada, the show could never have been realized.

The foreword of the catalogue explains: "The scheme of the exhibition is to show great works by fine artists of Great Britain, Holland, Belgium, France, Spain, and the United States; covering a period of some four hundred years. . . . Naturally both German and Italian paintings are omitted, with the result that we have here a representation of the painting history of those peoples whose shores are

One of the most important pictures in the early section is the Portrait of Henry, Prince of Wales by Isaac Oliver, sixteenth century British painter, which created a sensation when it first arrived in New York. From the same period but from Spain there are two El Greco, Virgin and Child with St. Anne, which shows El Greco at his best, was brought over from England on account of the war.

Frans Hals is represented by a pair of portraits; Rubens by four paintings, of which one, Mors, is worth the admission fee. There is a superb head and shoulders portrait of Philip IV of Spain, by Velasquez. Other artists of the same period which are represented are Brueghel, the Elder, Van Dyck, and Murillo. In the eighteenth century British section there are very happy choices from the paintings of Hogarth, and Reynolds among others, and a particularly good Gainsborough — The Everyone will have his own favourites among periods and painters, but for me the best part of the show was the section of Moderns, containing works by the best of the French school from Manet and Cezanne to Picasso. Manet's The Railroad, Cezanne's Mont St. Victoire, and Toulouse-Lautrec's The Beaucatcher, each brought a special thrill. There are two Van Goghs: Cloud Movements, Arles and Self Portrait. Both are well known and deservedly famous.

It was a shock finding Monet's wonderful Still Life with Apples and Grotes sandwiched in between D. G. Rossetti's Beato Beatrix and Millais's Master Movor. It was an individual arrangement to say the least, but it proved the more conclusively Monet's great artistry and mastery of his chosen medium.

All admission fees until the show closes on Dec. 15 are to be turned over to the Red Cross. University students, who usually get in free at all times, are expected in this case to pay their quarters along with everyone else.

Mr. Spergel opened his program with a scholarly performance of the Adagio from Haydn's Cello Concerto. His Jesu, Joy of Man's Desiring, retains more of Bach than is customary in arrangements. The Bournee, however, suffered from an accompaniment which was added without Bach's knowledge or consent. A movement from Schumann's Cello Concerto received an excellent interpretation and was quite the most musically interesting number of this group.

Throughout the evening, Miss Mildred Spergel's capable accompaniments enhanced not a little her brother's playing. She was at all times sympathetic to his desires and supported his musicianship with her own. DON MOIR

Speaking OF SPORT

By Stan Westcott

Trinity's Red and Black gridders fought a gallant, inspired battle on the trampled sward of Varsity Stadium yesterday afternoon and forced themselves right back into the football picture. A ferocious undeniable first half assault against U.C. carried the hard-fighting lads to an eleven point lead. It was impossible to maintain the driving pressure, but they clung on grimly, desperately, hard enough to win 12-7.

Now the group is all snarled up again with Vic, U.C. and Trinity in a three-way tie for second place behind Jr. S.P.S. These three teams must play off to decide which of them will enter the semi-finals against Sr. School. Trinity drew a bye for the first of the deciding contests while Vic and the Royal College go to bat against each other this afternoon at 4 p.m. (Everybody Out.) The Red and Black meet the winner of this clash on Thursday.

This Trinity outfit is the group of nondescript players about whom only two short weeks ago everyone was saying, "Well it's too bad about Trinity. If it weren't for them Group I would be very evenly balanced. They were only lucky last year anyway." At that time they had lost weakly to each of the other three teams in the group and were floundering badly. Then they slowly started to roll, gradually gaining momentum as they defeated Victoria on a last minute play, tied the leading Engineers and then overwhelmed the University College boys yesterday. If that momentum continues to gather impetus, Trinity will be hard to take. On the other hand it may crack at the seams very embarrassingly at some extremely inopportune moment.

Trinity, unlike some other rugby squads hereabouts, is a team, not a group of individuals. They feature team-play, back-slapping, and continuous pep talks all through a game. There are no outstanding stars on the Red and Black line-up, gleefully smacking their chops in eager expectancy of the vast credit which will be added to their honourable names when the game is completed. The boys are all out to win the game for Dear Old Trinity, and not for Dear Old Macdonaldvitchiki--All-American, or All-Intercollegiate. And yesterday they combined to scrap with everything they had in a tooth-and-nail struggle for survival. They won and will continue to scrap win or lose.

Beefy McMillan, as usual, played a wonderful defensive game, smearing the U.C. plungers with savage finality. Crashley wasn't far behind him in blocking offensive attempts, and Baxter too did more than his share of tackling. Don Boxer's kicking and passing was of inestimable assistance, and he intercepted a long forward that might have proved extremely harmful. Captain Joe Harris galloped thirty yards for the first touchdown after intercepting a U.C. pass. In the second quarter Trinity blocked two of their opponents' kicks in succession. McCormick, who did some great plunging, recovered the second one, and ran fifteen yards to the U.C. 40. Johnny Henderson snatched a long Boxer forward and raced across the goal line standing up for the second five-pointer.

The Red and White pressed hard and savagely in the closing quarter. After recovering a Trinity fumble at mid-field Nelson heaved a 45 yard pass to McKinley on the opposing three yard line. Alcombrack dove through the line the necessary yards for the touch and also converted it. A barrage of passes were carrying the team up the field again when the closing whistle blew.

SCARLET AND GOLD

Although they couldn't win their way into the Mulock Cup festivities when they seemed a sure thing, Victoria backed into the playoffs when Trinity downed U.C., causing the three-way tie. Vic have a great two-way team this autumn, but the tragic truth about them, at least so far, is that they have been able to back up with much more alacrity than they could advance. In fact, on two tragic occasions, one minute, the game's sixtieth and last, was sufficient for Vic to fade about 75 yards to a position behind their own goal line. If they could have remained in front of that fatal white chalk strip for a few more seconds either time the boys would not have had to use the servant's entrance into the inter-collegiate big time.

SPORT SPLASHES

By Doug Green

S.P.S. III's swim to victory over St. Michael's squad last night in the only meet of the evening, defeating them 20-13.

School won three firsts and two seconds to gather in their 20 points. Their medley threesome of Byrnes, Payne and Charde placed out in front by a narrow margin, due to Payne, their breast stroker, who gained considerably on his opponent, Flaherty, the St. Mike's sprint man, won back four of the five yards lost and just missed taking the event.

Crane, for St. Mike's, won the back stroke by a touch over Byrnes of School. S.P.S. III's went into a big lead when Boa and Payne placed first and second in the 50 breast for eight points.

St. Mike's came back strongly in the 50 free, however, and just missed closing the gap when they almost placed first and second.

Remmer for St. Mike's won this race and Flaherty of the Irish natators was just edged out for second place by Christolaw of School. Boa, Christolaw, Hill and Mock of School easily won the final relay over Crane, Dunn, Flaherty and Remmer, St. Mike's representatives.

Results:—

50 Back: 1. Crane, St. Mike's; 2. Byrnes, S.P.S.; 3. Bennett, St. Mike's.

We're from U.C. alright, alright, but get this straight, we're not prejudiced! But we still think that U.C. junior team is one of the flashiest teams we've seen since our day. They've got the goods.

Last night at 8 Household Science went down to defeat by the rather sumptuous score of 42-14. For the first few minutes, things were tight—things, we said—but after that U.C. had it in the bag. Betty Mortimer scoring 18 points and Betty Allen 17 did some neat work around the basket, while Marg. Stock and Zoe Christie held up a stalwart defence line. As a matter of fact, to be strictly honest with you, every one of those nine "toughies" are well worth their salt. If they don't make the finals, we miss our guess—which just doesn't happen! Pat Brown hit the top for Household Science.

In a really close fight St. Hilda's seniors overcame Vic freshies by the score of 21-11. It was pretty well anybody's game throughout, but St. Hilda's seemed to have just that little bit more to produce a win. Joyce Porritt was top scorer for St. Hilda's while Betty Weall scored high for Vic.

Tonight we have U.C. seniors playing O.T. & P. at 6.30. O.T. & P. are the threat for the lead of this group. We think they're worth watching, you all!

is stranded in the Orient and the really comes from Flatbush, Brooklyn.

Meanwhile, the audience is provided with Dotty in a nifty white sun-suit to contrast with her even tan, two songs which are not so hot, a really high class floor fire and a log jam which is a pip.

Although the ever-present triangle is included and the jungle business has been done once or twice or twenty times before some of the gags and wisecracks are quite good and the whole show is pleasant fare. "Moon over Burma" will never give you a headache and will probably give you a big kick.

"Malibu Beach Party" is a Leon Schlesinger cartoon in which "Jack Bunny's" parties are caricatured and various actors satirized. It draws a few laughs but is not particularly funny.

"Information Please", well known radio program, is presented on the screen and is very interesting and amusing. The "March of Time" presentation is about the best we have ever seen because it described and showed the war situation dramatically yet simply and truly.—S.K.

CANADIAN MUSICAL FUTURE HAS BRIGHTER PROSPECTS

that Toronto had a larger percentage of artists, particularly young performers, than any other North American city. Due to this widened interest in music in Canada the future of the young Canadian composer in his own country is optimistic.

This stimulated interest has made feasible the publishing of a new magazine, "Canadian Music", edited by Christopher Wood, Toronto critic and member of the Conservatory staff. According to Miss Campbell, the magazine will be rather like "Etude" in form and general style, but for the most part it will be concerned with recording the musical scene from coast to coast in Canada.

Schoolmen To Celebrate At Hart House Dinner

LONDON PROFESSOR TO LECTURE TODAY

Doctor Greenwood of Birkbeck College will speak on "The Aims of Social Philosophy" at U.C.

FAMEO EDITOR AND AUTHOR

Doctor Thomas Greenwood of the University of London will lecture on "The Aims of Social Philosophy" in Room 8 of University College this afternoon at five o'clock.

Professor Greenwood has been lecturing at Birkbeck College in the University of London since 1930. For two years, he had been the Honorable Lecturer at King's College of the same university.

Since 1926, he has been the visiting lecturer at a great number of universities and learned institutions, and has been on many committees of learned and professional societies.

As well as lecturing, Dr. Greenwood has made a name for himself in the field of writing. He is the author of a number of memoirs on logic and the history of science.

He has held a great many important editorships; from 1926 to 1929, he was the editor of the Europress Service of London and Vienna; and as well he has edited "The Philosopher" and the International Series of Logique et Methodologie.

Dr. Greenwood received his education in Britain and on the continent, having attended the Universities of London, Paris, and Vienna.

Admission to the lecture is free, and the public, as well as the staff and students, is invited to attend.

Collegiates Issue New Publication

"Our paper is by far the most widely spread of its kind in the world. It has a circulation of 35,000 copies, while one of its nearest rivals has a circulation of only about 6000," stated Ben Holdsworth, editor of the "Canadian High News".

The "Canadian High News" is one of the most recent ventures in the journalistic field, only its third edition having been published as yet. It is a fortnightly publication, edited by students and circulated throughout the Toronto secondary schools.

It is the outgrowth of an idea originated by a journalistic fraternity, which has been taken over by a group of high school editors. During the past two years, those in charge have spent considerable time in discussion with the most eminent journalists and printers of the country in an endeavour to attain the most modern journalistic set-up. ### Schoolmen to Proclaim Buildings "Going, Going, Gone" at Auction

University College, Meds building and other sundries will go on the auction block today at 1.30 as the annual S.P.S. Auction Sale gets under way in front of the School building.

Auctioneers Gord Kirk and Bill Brisco will take turns at the gavel as they attempt to enliven the purchasing public into "taking something home for the little woman".

Replete with a public address system, the Schoolmen will prevail on everyone within the four corners of the campus to come and see their wares.

Hon. G. Howard Ferguson is Guest Speaker; will Give Talk on "Canada's Part in Relation to the War"

TO RECEIVE GOLO KEYS

The 51st annual School Dinner will be held in Hart House tomorrow. Hon. G. Howard Ferguson will be the guest speaker, and will speak on Canada's part in relation to the war. Dr. T. A. Hogg, past president of the Engineering Society, will present the awards.

The work of making this enormous affair a success rests on the shoulders of Bruce Davis, chairman, W. E. K. Brown, in charge of arrangements, vice-chairman H. L. Foster, and F. C. Routhwaite, in charge of decorations.

Over 600 are expected to be in attendance. The amazing sale of tickets is attributed to the enticement of a full course chicken dinner. Fourth year is leading the sale of tickets having about 65 per cent of the tickets sold. The ticket sale will close today and the remainder of the tickets will be sold at the society office.

GRADUATE EDUCATION DEBATED AT MEETING

The Association of American Universities will Hold Their Annual Meeting in Toronto Next Year

TORONTO, MCGILL PRESENT

The Association of American Universities will hold its annual meeting in Toronto in 1941, it was announced today by Dean G. S. Brett, head of the School of Graduate Studies. Dean Brett has just returned from the forty-second annual meeting held in Washington, Nov. 14, 15, 16.

The Universities of Toronto and McGill are the only Canadian universities having membership in this association which includes only those having graduate schools recognized by the association itself. Members join by application but it is not known that any other Canadian universities having graduate schools are considering membership. Members are responsible for attendance of meetings and following regulations concerning awarding of scholarships.

CORRECTION

The item in yesterday's Varsity regarding a meeting of the U.C. French Club contained an error which all concerned will please note. The meeting, which was billed as taking place tonight, is actually to be held a week from tonight.

PRAGUE MASSACRES ARE COMMEMORATED AT MONTREAL SERVICE

"Students will Fight for Freedom of Czechoslovak Nation," Said Manifesto Read by Dr. Pavlasek

UNIVERSITIES ABOLISHED

By Tom Finley
Montreal, Nov. 17.—Members of the Czechoslovak community in Montreal gathered tonight to honour the memory of hundreds of young Prague university students who were massacred and sent to German concentration camps last November after they staged a demonstration against their Nazi oppressors.

Dr. F. Pavlasek, Czech consul-general in Montreal, was the chief speaker at the meeting, commemorating the first anniversary of what may go down in history as "the Prague massacres."

He described the outburst of heroic idealism by the men and women students of one of Europe's oldest universities and told how the demonstration brought the abolition of all universities and schools of university standard in Czechoslovakia.

PHARMACISTS' DANCE TO FEATURE BOGART

The time draws near when the Drugists-to-be will tread a stately measure or two or otherwise at their first big dance of the season. Festive and merriment, and graduate beakers will be laid aside, and attention will be diverted to the girl friends and gaiety.

Friday night will find the Junior Pharmacy dance in full swing in the Alexandra Room of the King Eddie. Dealing out the rhythm for the evening will be Frank Bogart and his musicians, who recently held sway at the Sky Club, Brent Inn, and who composed the orchestra featured at the U.C. Follies.

Festivities are to begin at nine and will continue until two o'clock; dress will be informal.

Dr. Defries is chairman of the editorial board of the Canadian Public Health Journal; a member of the Academy of Medicine, Toronto; of the Canadian Medical Association; of the Canadian Public Health Association; and of the Ontario Medical Association. He is a fellow of the American Public Health Association.

REV. OR. J. H. ARNUP

"World Church Community" is to be the subject of the address to be given in Hart House music room at 1.30 today by the Rev. Dr. J. H. Arnup, secretary of the United Church Board of Foreign Missions and member of the Senate and Council of Victoria University. Dr. Arnup's special field is that of foreign missions, and so, following on the "Basic Convictions" series of this term's noon-hour addresses, today's talk will deal with the conviction that Christianity is the only faith that can answer the needs of the whole world.

Dr. Arnup graduated from Victoria in 1909 with the Prince of Wales Gold Medal and the Literary Society Medal in Oratory and has been doing mission administration work ever since.

NOTICE C.O.T.C. EXAMS

Candidates for qualifying examinations (NPAM) on December 14th and 15th are reminded that application forms must be returned to 119 St. George Street not later than 1800 hours, Wednesday 20th November. Forms are available at the above address.

MULOCK CUP BATTLE TO BE WAGED TODAY

Junior School and Dents will Engage in Gridiron Drama in Blue Bowl, for First Game of Series

S.P.S. SURE OF VICTORY

This afternoon at 2.30 in the Blue Bowl the first act of the battle for the Mulock Cup is to be staged with Junior S.P.S. and Dents providing the fireworks.

The Engineers, because of the fact that they wound up on top in the loop's strongest section, Group I, have been made heavy favourites to brush aside the Dentists in this sudden death semifinal and thus advance into the grand finale a week tomorrow.

Dynamic Don Grosskurth, considered by many as the year's most versatile back, will lead a decidedly confident School squad into the fray.

Dents, on the other hand, refuse to be ruffled by the undeniable prowess of the Blue and Gold. "We prefer to settle the argument at the Stadium," commented Bill Hambley, one of the Exodontists' outstanding performers. If Dents' heavy wing-line play up to form, the kicking of Murray Hawton should be as good as any seen in the league this year. With chunky Terry McKee and Wilf Ferguson will lie the responsibility of lugging the apple through the School front wall. And they aren't exactly novices either! Thus all grid fans witnessing the spectacle should be provided with plenty of excitement.

University Debating Team To Visit Western States

Toronto Team to Argue "That the U.S.A. Should Join a Federation of English-Speaking Nations"

TOUR TO START SUNDAY

A University of Toronto debating team, composed of Ted Gray, president of the Victoria College Union, and Edward Crawford, president of the Students' Administrative Council of St. Michael's College, will leave Sunday on a tour to compete with debating teams at universities of the middle western states, it was learned last night.

The argument which the Toronto team will attempt to carry against debaters at each of the universities visited will be "that the U.S.A. should join a federation of the English-speaking nations." The schedule includes Northwestern University in Evanston, Illinois, the University of Kansas at Lawrenceville, University of Missouri at Columbia, and Washington University, St. Louis, Mo.

FIRST SKI CLUB MEETING WILL BE HELO TOMORROW

The U. of T. Ski Club is holding its first meeting of the season tomorrow. The meeting will get under way at 5 p.m. in the Medical Building, Room 43, with a few words from the president Jack Fleming, concerning the other members of the executive and the year's program.

Continuing its policy of last year, instruction will be given at specified times during January and February by Hugh Gallie, chief of instruction. A map is being made by the trail committee for distribution among the members, showing all trails and land-marks. During January and February it is expected that the S.A.C. will sponsor trips to Limberlost for all university students. Although time is scarce this year weekly contests will be held at the property and it is hoped that the team under the leadership of Russ Smart will be hosts to several outside colleges including Dartmouth. Newer and better skiers are greatly needed to make yourself known at the meeting.

VISITORS' DAY

Sunday 24th November will be Visitors' Day in Hart House when members may introduce visitors including ladies into the House between the hours of 2 and 4 p.m. Members will be asked to show their membership cards at the door.

The building will be open for inspection. Afternoon tea will be served in the graduate dining-room.

VIC DRAMA TO HAVE A CAST OF FORTY

Costumes for Family Portrait to be Designed by Well-Known Director's Wife

CONTROVERSY EXPECTED

"No doubt 'Family Portrait' will arouse quite a lot of controversy," said W. S. Milne, director of the Victoria College Dramatic Society. The story concerns the life of Christ's family during his ministry and after his death. It portrays the effect of the events of the time on them.

"The play is done in modern dress and in modern language," Milne explained. "There are seven scenes and over forty in the cast." The director is designing the sets for this year's production and Mrs. Milne, who is noted in Canadian dramatic circles for her costuming, is designing the costumes.

Mr. Milne, a graduate of University College, now teaches English at Northern Vocational where he also holds evening classes in dramatics. While at Varsity he served as Art, Music and Drama Editor of this paper and was in attendance at the birth of the Champus Cat in 1923.

To journalistic activities in his undergraduate days Mr. Milne added dramatics. He was among the founders (Continued on Page 4)

'Dr. Becker' Topic Of U.C. Lecture

The Dean of Residence of University College, Professor C. N. Cochrane, will lecture tomorrow afternoon in the Recent American Writers series. This is the last of six lectures devoted to the works of these outstanding authors and will be delivered in Room 8, of University College. The subject for this lecture is Carl Becker.

Becker is a professor of history and is well known for his many works on both history and politics. He was born in Iowa in 1873 and was educated at the University of Wisconsin and later at Columbia. Dr. Becker is a member of the American History Association and the American Academy of Arts and Sciences.

Professor Cochrane has been head of the Greek Department since 1929 and in 1924 when it was decided to resume the former practice of having a Dean of Residence in University College, Cochrane was appointed and has held that post ever since. During the last war he was very active in the C.O.T.C. and later received a commission. He has many books to his credit, covering topics ranging from Thucydides to H. G. Wells.

Women's Mysteries of Make-up To be Disclosed by Mere Man

Woman's realm is being invaded. Joining the scant ranks of the men who have ventured to advise the female of the species on an art peculiarly feminine, Mavor Moore, president of the U.C. Players' Guild, will climb right out on a limb at 4 p.m. today in the U.C. Women's Union and tell the assembled Guild members the secrets of artificial coloration.

Disregarding such minor elements of the occult art as adjusting a captivating eyelash, applying a surprising eyebrow, or dashing off an artistic mouth, Mr. Moore will concentrate his activities on stage make-up, it was announced last night.

How to transform a villainous countenance into that of a saint, or vice-versa, how to take 10 years off your life—or add 50, in a 10-minute backstage bout with powder and grease paint, will be demonstrated at the Guild meeting. Real live models will be used as practical examples by the paint expert, who has done most of the physical stage decorations in University College for the past few years.

The demonstration will be given only to members of the U.C. Players' Guild, and will have particular bearing on the Guild's Theatre Night in Hart House Nov. 29.

Rethinking Confederation

The result of monumental effort and research during the past three years, the Report of the Royal Commission on Dominion-Provincial Relations is approaching that critical time when Canadian legislators will discuss the possibility and advisability of implementing it. The Report, published last spring, has been devoured eagerly by Canadian citizens, although it is still a question whether certain provincial legislators have gone to the trouble of reading it. Prime Minister King has recommended adoption of its proposals and toward that end he has invited all provincial premiers to attend a Dominion-Provincial Conference in January. Needless to say, this Conference will be one of the most important in Canadian history.

Blueprint for re-Confederation

The Commission started its work in peace time, but its results were finally reached after war had broken out. It is safe to say that had there been no war the Report would have been the centre of more discussion possibly than any domestic issue since Confederation. For in reality the sweeping recommendations of the Rowell-Sirois group, affecting as they do every phase of the economic and social life of the nation, draw the blue-print for a re-Confederation. After the 1929 depression and the slow and not so sure return of prosperity, it was felt that economic and social developments since 1867 had been so great that they had thrown the original Confederation settlement out of alignment. The Fathers in 1867 were dealing with an infant nation which has grown by leaps and bounds, and they naturally failed to provide the degree of flexibility necessary to that growth. Consequently responsibilities have shifted from one jurisdiction to another without a resultant shift in income, or new responsibilities have come into being, proving heavy burdens to certain jurisdictions. Overlapping and duplication of services and expenditures became a common feature, and there was no longer a clear delineation of governmental powers and responsibilities due to a succession of Privy Council judicial decisions.

Re-examine Economical Basis

Therefore in August 1937 the Prime Minister by Order-in-Council appointed a Royal Commission with this as one of its main purposes: "That it is expedient to provide for a re-examination of the economic and financial basis of Confederation and of the distribution of legislative powers in the light of the economic and social developments of the last seventy years." The Commissioners were given further specific orders to investigate the allocation of revenue sources and governmental burdens, to determine whether the present taxation system is equitable and as efficient as possible without abuse, and to investigate public expenditures and debts and Dominion subsidies and grants to the provinces. It was a huge assignment and the printed result is a real tribute to the men who carried on the work and the many experts from specific branches who helped them. They have re-written Canadian history in the light of events coming almost to the present, and they have drawn up plans for realigning the constitutional division of revenue and function that is such a vital factor in a federal system.

Original Division of Powers—1867

We cannot present a review of the whole Report here, but from time to time we would like to discuss specific aspects of it. After giving the history and general background of the Report it might be well to trace the way in which the constitutional division of powers and revenue between the various governments seems to have got out of line. The very essence of a federal constitution is the division of legislative powers between the central authority, (the Dominion government in our case) and the component authorities, (the provincial parliaments). Included of course is the division of revenue sources so that each government may carry on its particular powers, functions and services. Due to the circumstances of the time, the geographic distances, the regional feelings, and the general opposition, a unitary government was impractical although John A. Macdonald wanted such a state. Consequently the Fathers followed American example by introducing a federal system. They gave the central government authority over matters of general interest and provincial governments authority over matters of local concern. Residuary powers however were given to the central government. The reverse of the procedure in the States. In sections 92 to 95 of the B.N.A. Act the main divisions were set forth.

Section 92 gave the provinces power over two vague subjects, "Property and Civil Rights in the Province" and "Generally all Matters of a merely local or private Nature in the Province." In addition certain enumerated subjects were placed under provincial jurisdiction: justice, municipal institutions, prisons, public lands, local works, and a power of direct taxation for provincial revenue purposes, although it was fully expected the latter would not have to be used.

Section 91 assigned to the Dominion the power "to make Laws for the Peace, Order and Good Government of Canada, in relation to all matters not coming within the Classes of Subjects by this Act assigned exclusively to the Legislatures of the Provinces." The specific enumeration included defence, criminal law, naturalization, postal system, trade and commerce, banking and coinage, weights and measures. It also gave the Dominion unlimited taxing powers.

Division Changed in Practice

Division in theory is a far different matter from division in practice, and many difficulties have resulted. Laws of the Dominion government are bound to affect some matters of local provincial concern and vice versa. At times it has amounted to a real invasion of the other's field. The Privy Council has been the final authority in determining jurisdiction and it has considered the literal meaning of some of those vague phrases without taking into account the general intentions of the framers of 1867. This of course is strict legal procedure. At any rate through the years the Privy Council has by a series of decisions given Section 92 primacy over Section 91, thus giving the provinces wider powers than perhaps they originally were intended to have. It has given a restricted meaning to the phrases "Peace, Order and Good Government" and "Regulation of Trade and Commerce" while giving an extended interpretation to the phrase in Section 92, "Property and Civil Rights in the Province," making it practically the residuary powers clause. It is hard to determine exactly what the Fathers meant and how far they wanted to go in giving the provinces power. Certainly they wanted a powerful central government for they endowed it with unrestricted taxing power and most of the important revenue sources as well as a right of disallowing provincial legislation.

The constitutional structure of Canada has been rendered weak in spots by time and new developments. The method for repairing the structure has been given the people and it is to be hoped that the provinces will forget sectional grievances long enough to give the plan the fairest of considerations. It is a vitally important document for the future of Canada, and students, busy as they may be, would be well-advised to spend a little time examining the aims and ideas of the Commission.

Organ Recital

Dr. Healey Willan could not be accused of playing hackneyed organ works at his Tuesday afternoon recitals. Of the five composers represented on the program in Convocation Hall yesterday, two are world famous. The short Sonata in C minor, second of the six for organ of Mendelssohn, was the chief work. An adagio typical of the composer was followed by an almost Schumannesque martial movement, leading in turn to the final fugue. The first of Six Fugues on the Name "BACH" by Schumann concluded the recital with a flourish.

The works of two English composers were included: Prelude and Fugue in G minor by Walter Hay Sangster, a work not unlike the great Preludes

POLICE RAID WHITNEY HALL

Elaborate Gambling Dive Uncovered by University Police in Surprise Raid on So-called "Residence"

SCHOOL MEN FOUND IN

The university police carried out a surprise daylight raid on Whitney Hall this morning and the building was found to enclose a huge gambling resort.

Raiding Whitney Hall was the Registrar's own idea. He accompanied the police throughout the entire raid. He also suggested that all other girls' residences should be raided but he was officially advised against it by his wife.

The police entered the establishment through a special trap-door and came upon both male and female students gamblers. Large groups of students were busy at croquille boards and playing tick tack toe with unforfeivable abandon. Checker boards, Yo-Yos, and countless sets of Jacks were seized.

Miss Ferguson denied any knowledge of the gambling ring, and most vigorously denied being a ring-leader. She will be held nevertheless. The Senate reminded that they had known about the establishment for years, and the place had been built up on their money. A member of the Capt said he was willing to swear that the ring had been in existence in 1843 when his grandfather was able to continue his studies in King's College with fees paid from his winnings.

Latest racing results were being posted by freshies when the police entered the building. Special underground wires leading directly to Hialeah and Pimlico were discovered beneath the flooring.

Results were that 429 Schoolmen who were found in were forced to ride in the Black Maria to Simcoe Hall where they will be held for questioning. In their drunken stupor and with cries of "More Pepsicola all around" they were dragged forcibly from the "residence".

"There will undoubtedly be a show-down," stated the registrar. "If there are other establishments of this sort on this campus, we will find them. At this very moment, we have received a hot tip to watch the boiler-room at Wycliffe. Who knows what this might lead to?"

S companies will attend in uniform. A special lecture has been arranged for next Monday at 7.30 to take the place of Thursday's lecture.

Gold keys will be presented to the graduating members of the Engineering Society and the athletic executives. Scholarship students will receive certificates to be presented by Dean Beatty.

Choicest chickens are being slaughtered by the hundreds and are to be prepared in the best manner possible so that the ever hungry engineers' appetites will be appeased. This occasion comes but once a year and so it is every Schoolman's duty to be there.

The dinner will be topped off by a light entertainment and a special announcement will be disclosed that will be of vital importance to every Schoolman.

Three selections by the French composer Alexandre Guilmant completed a program of the works of composers of three countries.

Dr. Willan performed admirably but the music selected for this recital was not as appealing as at the first concert two weeks ago.

If Brigham Young bore the slightest resemblance to Dean Jagger, there is little wonder that the Mormon people faced torture and starvation to build their city in the desolate promised land of Utah.

WE doubt seriously whether Muni himself could have endowed the Mormon leader with the moving eloquence and ecstatic fervor that Jagger brings to the role. The latter does not even need to appear on the screen, for he has an extraordinary voice, vibrant, compelling and—persuasive.

The cameraman shares the orchids. His filming of Mormon wheatfields black with locusts, and his close-ups of the voracious insects, are remarkably well done.

Beginning with mob violence and ending with a miracle—interspersed throughout with covered wagons, wives and befeathered Indians—"Brigham Young" might easily have sunk to blood and thunder melodrama. As it is, Jagger and the camera collaborate on a memorable picture.

Incidentally, the black-browed Tyrone is quite superfluous; likewise his leading lady (Linda Darnell) who is, as usual powerless to resist him. However, they and the Rockies are all very nice to look at.

Victoria Downs U.C. in Rugby

Decisive Victory of 7-0 Won at Varsity Stadium

Strong, Steady Pressure Gives Scarlet and Gold the Lead; Don Jones is Chief Scorer in the Game

FUMBLE GIVES SCORE

Applying a strong, steady pressure throughout the whole game Victoria's Scarlet and Gold gridders nudged U.C. into the football ashen at Varsity Stadium yesterday afternoon by the score of 7-0.

Vic started from the opening whistle to force their opponents inexorably back into the danger zone. An early touchdown gave the victors a lead to work on, and they fondled that margin lovingly. The boys proved the ancient adage that a good offense is the best defense and continued to carry the play, remaining the aggressor throughout.

The Royal College fielded a rather crippled outfit as Axon was on the sidelines with an injured leg. Cuddy Faber, although he gamely entered the fray, could barely hobble about. Alcombrack, the hardest tackler on the team, was severely banged around in the Trinity game, and played with difficulty. In fact the whole squad took quite a beating the day before with the fighting Red and Black in its victorious last ditch struggle.

This doesn't detract in any way from the marvellously calm, calculated manner with which Vic handled the contest. The Scarlet and Gold seemed to be coolly sure of themselves. They gave the impression that they were positive of victory, that they held all the cards, that it was only a matter of time until they would win. And they did win, decisively.

For the first time this year Victoria displayed an adequate pass defence. The lack of this art had caused their downfall on several previous occasions. But this time they had it figured out too. Their kicking strength and the power of their line had never been in doubt, and with this newly acquired armour they may go farther than expected in the Mulock Cup hunt.

Vic opened the scoring shortly after the game started. Jones sprang high into the air to snag a U.C. pass on the Red and White 40 yard line, and ran fifteen yards to the 25. Red Heinbrack lifted a high punt to McKinley behind the goal line. The big Vic hoover rushed up and tackled McKinley viciously as he leaped to make the catch.

The Royal College back muffed the catch, and Don Jones was the first of several Vic players to fall on it for five points. Hal Fleming kicked the convert.

Two minutes before the cease-firing gun sounded, Heinbrack kicked into the stands behind the deadline from twenty yards out for the game's final score.

Don Jones was one of the leading lights in the victory. Besides scoring the lone touchdown, he had made many fine tackles, and intercepted several of Sonny Nelson's very best passes to keep his team out of hot water.

Johnny Whallon was also a great help, especially on the outside of ends.

The line played their usual hard-driving game, with Carson, Irwin, McCrae and Rutledge featuring. Red Heinbrack's booting and passing were superb, giving the team its scoring breaks. Lewis made a la Coutier rumbuck of a kick, shaking loose from about half a dozen tacklers for a twenty yard gain. The whole outfit, in fact, were hot.

On behalf of the vanquished, Alkie Alcombrack stood out with his consistent defensive work, and fine plunging. McKinley proved a constant threat. Jim Bitove made two very nice runs, and the line, from end to end, was extremely difficult to crack.

Victoria: Rutledge, Carson, McCrae, Quentin, Irwin, Davis, Smallwood, Lewis, Fleming, Heinbrack, Whallon, Bailey, Hogg, Wolfraim, Shugart, Cross, Nixon, Gibbs, Bradford, Jones, Campbell, Young, Paisley.

U.C.: Cameron, Nickol, Feigman, Davey, Zierler, Cutler, Jarvis, Faber, Alcombrack, McKinley, Nelson, Bitove, Hair, McDonald, Ballagh, Duncan and Essery.

Dents won two firsts when Clark took the 50 free, and their four man relay squad of Brunton, Wills, Beatty and Clark eked out a win due to the sensational sprint of anchor-man Clark.

VIC TROUNCES S.P.S. IN SOCCER PLAYOFF

Frankie Powell Scores Only Goal as Vic Comes Through to Win Group III Championship

TO PLAY IN SEMI-FINAL

Frankie Powell booted Vic into the Group III championship and a play-off berth yesterday afternoon on the back campus, at the same time shunting the School eleven out of the soccer picture. The score was 1-0.

The goal came late in the first period after a mad scramble in front of the School cage. The blond Vic forward came from nowhere to bang in the lone tally of the match. In their two scheduled meetings during the regular season the two squads had tied at 1-1, and both times it was Powell who had booted the equalizer to keep the Scarlet and Gold off the list of the also-rans.

Vic had a tough time hanging onto their slim margin throughout the entire second half as the Engineers pressed constantly. Led by Hal Seymour, probably the ablest single scorers at Varsity, the Blue and White rushed in close time and again, and it was only the smart defensive play of the Art-men and some shoe-string saves by Frank Hoffman that kept the Engineers off the scoring side of the ledger. Play advanced into S.P.S. territory not more than half a dozen times.

Although Vic did not have control of the play by any means in the initial card, they held a wide margin, as Stone, MacLeod, Powell, Kirkland,

Speaking OF SPORT

By Sam Kelner

A SAO CASE OF INJURIES

University College footballers are out of the running. The Scarlet and Gold applied the finishing touches to the crumbling U.C. outfit in a dull contest at the Stadium yesterday and they won by the score of 7-0.

Escaping from an infernal all afternoon lab we hastened down to the Blue Bowl to witness the contest. Just outside the entrance it was very, very quiet and turning to our companion we asked "Are you sure there is a game going on?" "Sure," he replied, "but there probably is a lull in the game."

And so we went inside to find out what all the silence was about. What we saw was not a particularly pretty sight. You could just feel that something was missing. True, there was a rugby game going on and true, too, there was a fair crowd in the stands and truer still, U.C. was losing, yet the very air seemed to be overhanging with impending doom and gloom.

Looking towards the field of battle our crinkled brow lost its crinkled expression when we saw what was going on out there. The Red and White were walking around in a daze and Vic was taking advantage of the daze. U.C. left the impression that they were in there just to be in there although they did come through with a few good plays in spots.

Now that's really taking U.C. over the bumps and that is also as far as we would want it to go. Let's take a straight look at the facts. In the first place the Royal College crew were so injury-riddled that it wasn't even funny. Dynamic (does he hate to be called "dynamic") Cuddy Faber was suffering from a leg hurt that had him dragging his foot along like Tiny Tim and yet he went in the battle near the tail end and sparked his gang like nobody else can.

Then Alcombrack who had sustained a serious injury recently played a whole of a game. It is with little hesitation that we declare him to be the best second-day man in the intercollegiate field. "Alkie" is the quiet, efficient type on the field but one can hardly help notice his outstanding gridiron achievements. Cliff Ballagh, one of the boys in Physical Ed, was playing with a bad knee.

Tommy Jarvis was outstanding in the U.C. cause and pulled off some beautiful tackles. Tommy is another one of the lads who was just "not in the pink." His legs weren't functioning on full strength and he is recovering from a strenuous battle with kid U.C. Follies. Harold Axon was really missed out on the backfield and wasn't even able to dress for the tilt. He's got trouble with his knee which is liable to develop into one of those tricky affairs which keep coming back to hurt every time a rude jolt is received.

But don't take any credit away from Vic. They have got a heavy hard-driving line which cannot be denied—and wasn't. Hugh Bailey put in a terrific effort for the Scarlet and Gold and spelled disaster for the U.C. men on more than one occasion. Jones and Whallon played dandy games. All in all it was a sweet victory for Victoria College and one which places them right in the running for intercollegiate honours.

Tough luck U.C. Keep punching Vic!

WE AREN'T THE ONLY ONES

Nossir, we aren't the only ones who have Japanese instructors in the ancient and useful art of jiu jitsu. Down at the University of Minnesota they have a professor expounding the gentle business by the name of S. Takahashi.

The kid is organizing a student class and his lessons last an hour. But here is the catch and the difference between the lessons over there and the lessons here. F. Shimidzu, that genial gentleman of judo (some call it jiu jitsu, we call it madness) does not charge for his services as this Minnesota man does.

Monsieur Takahashi charges a dollar for five lessons which is really unfair to organized jiu jitsuers. But that is Minnesota's look-out and if they are going to get thrown around it serves them right. Incidentally, Takahashi means "high fall" in Japanese. To us it just means high prices.

But we have it from a very reliable source of information that if Takahashi likes you the lessons are free!

MacKenzie and Bryce carried the play continuously to the Schoolmen. But in the final chukker it was a different story. Al Frost and Bob and Hal Seymour were the bright lights for the losers; the last-mentioned was easily the outstanding man on the field, with his smart offensive and defensive play. There was little choice from Vic's team, but Powell gets the nod for his timely goal.

Pharmacists Win Double Header

Litchen and Cox Star Against Wycliffe and Jeffers, Boyes and Lee Stand Out in Jr. School Game

PHARMACY OUT IN FRONT

The fighting Pharmacists put on a desperate scoring spurt yesterday and gave impetus to their drive out of the cellar in the Reed Trophy race by taking both games of a double boxla feature played in the big gym at Hart House yesterday afternoon.

The druggists' B team managed to fight off a desperate last minute drive by Wycliffe and down the theologs 6-4. Led by Litchen and Cox Pharmacy breezed into an early lead which they never relinquished. Deadly shooting and hard checking by the druggists went a long way towards their victory. Wycliffe put on a desperate drive in the last quarter but were unable to whittle down the lead. Cardy with three goals to his credit stood out for the theologs while Litchen and Cox with two apiece shared top honours for Pharmacy.

In the second game a last quarter spurt by Pharmacy A carried them to a 9-7 victory over Jr. School. The game was fast and rough and frequent penalties kept what there was of the gallery on their feet.

Lewarne and Currie led the Engineers to a 6-4 lead at half-time. Goals by Lewarne and Jeffers in the third quarter kept School ahead. In the final eight minutes Grant Jeffers ran wild for the druggists and threw in three goals. School was held scoreless in the last quarter to complete their downfall.

Grant Jeffers was by far the best man on the floor. He scored five goals and got them when his team needed them most. Boyes of Pharmacy contributed three more while Wally Lee played a fine defensive game and got a goal to boot.

Lewarne with three goals led the Engineers offensively and defensively. Currie and Rankine with two apiece were the other scorers for School.
Pharmacy B: Passelman, Jourard, Mecklinger, Litchen, Kitchen, Newman, Cox, Dunning, Steele, Russell.
Wycliffe: Coleman, Cardy, Coburn, Knight, Harry Fry, Herschel Fry.

Pharmacy A: Harkness, Boyes, Lee, Jeffers, Jardine, Quirk, Hall, Thompson.
Jr. S.P.S.: Kellam, Capper, Lewarne, Currie, Kent, Gorman, Prentice, Rankine, Crosby.

O.C.E. was the scene of a neat bit of ball playing last night at 6:30. O.C. & P. really made the U.C. seniors go through their paces, but believe you me, the score, which was 58-6, was no indication of lack of spirit in the U.C. sextette.

The winners astounded the spectators—yes, we almost left the benches—with quick, overhead, one-arm passes and baskets. Wilma Perry and Elsie Saunders vied with one another for top honours making baskets so fast that we almost lost count. The U.C. seniors were upheld by Eric Armstrong, and Agnes Cameron even suffered a near black eye for the good old cause.

By the way, we're very sorry that some of you "gals" can't get your practising done because of the numerous games now being played during your practice times. Please, just grin and bear it, and do the best you can at the games.

Next week comes the dawn, and victorious teams will be drawn to play one another—four teams in all. Four games, in two sets, total points to count, will be played in the semi-finals, the opponents having been drawn. Then, on to the finals!

But, before the play-offs, don't forget about the games scheduled for tonight at O.C.E. Let's have everyone on time. U.C. freshmen and St. Hilda's juniors at 6; St. Hilda's seniors and Nurses at 7; St. Mike's and U.C. juniors at 8. Spectators are always a cheery sight to the players, so come one, come all.

BASEBALL SEASON STARTS WHEN VIC MEETS ST. MIKE'S

Monday night the first baseball game of the season took place in Little Vic gym when St. Mike's and Vic Sophs played a close match. Catcher Rita O'Donnell was a reliable member of the St. Mike's crew and Florence Cooper played an equally good game.

Other players included Betsy Gowan, Marjory Roach, Annabel Macdon, Aileen McVally, Mary Stortz, Anita McGrath, Peggy O'Brien, Rita Stortz. Helen Carefoot and Audrey Geer made as good a showing for Vic as anyone could desire, backed ably in the field by Elise Hurst and Isabel Parke. It was an evenly-matched game and made good watching for the spectators, ending with a score of 16-5 in Vic's favour at the close of the third inning.

Three of the members of its staff—head Ben Holdsworth, Mary Mothersill and Mary McCrimmon, are in attendance at the University of Toronto.

In speaking of this year's editorial convention, to be held at the University of Toronto on December 27 and 28, the editor expressed his conviction that it promises to be one of the most successful held to date.

These annual conventions came into being seventeen years ago for the benefit of those interested in high school publications. There are expected to be about 150 delegates in attendance this year, representing a variety of secondary schools of the province.

The first day's procedure is to feature the editing and publishing of a tabloid size newspaper by the delegates. In the evening, while the dance is in progress, the paper will be printed and will be distributed the following morning.

On the Saturday afternoon, there will be addresses on typography, feature writing and other branches of journalism by experts in the various fields. At night, following a banquet, numerous awards will be made for the outstanding high school publications in the province.

WIDE-EYED IN GOTHAM

By Reuven Frank

(A Canadian University Press Feature)

No Column Today

THE BRONX: The scene is laid in a small apartment, at a desk. Typing typically at the typewriter is me—am I—is I. Oh, let it go. The sheet of paper says "Wide-Eyed in Gotham, by Reuven Frank, a Canadian University Press Feature"—and that's all. I start to type again.

"NEW YORK: Let us look at P.M., that unique little newspaper. Unique? Of course, unique; it carries no advertisements, and has no circulation. What could be more unique? Why, I knew a man who used to work for the fellow who had an office."

The paper is extracted and deposited in a waste basket kept handy for such occasions. I head for the grapefruit juice and take a long swig, wiping my mouth upon the back of my hand. My mother says no good will come of this. I insert another sheet of paper.

I think.
I think some more.
—and then I type. "Wide-Eyed in Gotham, by Reuven Frank—" Why that's my name! Oh, is that where I saw it before? . . . May I present Mr. Frank? . . . I think we've met . . . What awful drizzle.

Stream of consciousness as technique in writing a column, undoubtedly a very good subject for a doctor's thesis, was discussed today by this writer before a gathering of plush-coloured nabobs who chewed peanut brittle. Among those present was a lady from Brooklyn, which reminds me I must write a column soon about Brooklyn. The baseball fans in the Bar & Grill over on Metropolitan Ave. in Williamsburg must be having a awful time pronouncing Peckinpach. . . .

NEW YORK: Wendell Willkie has launched a drive to keep the forces opposed to Mr. Roosevelt's New Deal active during the next four years. The Willkie clubs will henceforth be known as the We the People Clubs which is a great disappointment to this space which favoured the name. The Associated We Hold These Truths to Be Self Evident Clubs Inc. There is something decidedly pernicious about trying to keep up an active opposition going in addition to such legitimate channels of opposition as the Republican Party and the Republicans in Congress. But there is really nothing to worry about: six months from now the We the People Clubs will be one of those "Oh, yes I remember . . ." things. My older readers will remember the Leadership League.

Another aspect of the current post-election political situation is the position of Mayor LaGuardia. Since the last predictions I made came true before you even had a chance to read this column, I am unwise to make any more. But since you only live once, here goes. LaGuardia is not slated for a cabinet post, so far as my channels know, and they are "usually reliable." He is not exactly an ideal Secretary for War and too strong a personality to be the President's lieutenant in labour matters, since Roosevelt is himself interested in labour. The possibilities are that, in spite of the strong opposition of both major parties, LaGuardia will return as mayor of New York.

Been writing too much politics lately . . . Another sheet into the waste-basket.

Oh, yes, the Columbia Broadcasting System was all set for a special broadcast from Athens for the other night, and the announcer was all ready. "Hello, America," said the voice, "Hello NBC, hello National Broadcasting Company."

RCA communications, which handles all overseas broadcasts, got its wires mixed and sent the NBC beam from London into Columbia's studios.

Which isn't very funny, but it reminds us of the little incident that took place in September of last year, when things were just beginning to fry. There was a soap opera on at 5.45, and H. V. Kaltenborn was getting ready for his six o'clock broadcast in another studio. About ten minutes of the hour, announcer Bob Trout strolled in, waved to the engineer, and sat before the microphone to tune his pipes. Now, when you wave to an engineer, especially in parlous times, it means only one thing: put us on the air. So the listeners to the soap opera were surprised to hear the dramatic voice of Bob Trout singing merrily, "H. V. Kaltenborn, E-I-E-I-O."

I wish they hadn't closed the World's Fair. That was always good for a few thousand words. My professor says that the United States has only enough oil for twenty years, while there are a hundred billion barrels in Alberta; annexation, he says, is inevitable. I wonder what's doing in Toronto? Must write something.

NEW YORK: It was our pleasure the other day to spend an exciting twenty-five minutes in a Penny Arcade. Besides such artistic films as the much-heralded "Kiss of Dawn" and "A Fortnight in a Seraglio," the latter a British production, the 42nd St. Penny Arcade offers the chance of winning a pack of Lucky Strikes by hitting Hitler in the eye, and a trained flea circus and other jungle attractions for ten cents in the back. Just next door, is the lowest taxi dance dive in town. Perhaps we shall pluck up our courage, one of these days, and thereby hangs a column. . . .

Have you ever tried to wash your face while smoking a cigar?

NEW YORK: Gimbel's basement is something worth walking miles to see, although if you have a nickel for subway fare, I don't see why you walk.

NEW YORK: There are seven million people.

NEW YORK: Let me introduce . . .

NEW YORK: "So de dame . . ." NEW must gotta write a column for YORK canadian UNI wideyed in Gotham . . . cockeyed in Gotham gotheyed ha ha ha . . . heh . . .

The janitor, anxious over my continued absence and the neighbours' reports of violent noise last night found me out of my senses this morning. I was hunched up on the floor in what he described as "a most peculiar position" mumbering feebly, "Damn the Canadian University Press and a murrain on its features!" I am now in custody at the Psychiatric Ward of the Bellevue Hospital, which makes it quite obvious why there will be no column this week.

What a corny gag.

M. GOULDO TO SPEAK ON 'TOO LITTLE TIME'

The Student Christian Movement women's noon-hour series brings to the campus this week Miss Margaret Gould, associate-editor of the Toronto Daily Star. Miss Gould will speak in the Women's Union today from 1.30-1.55 p.m. on the subject "Too Little Time."

Well-known as an authority on welfare problems and widely travelled, the speaker will deal with the problem of lack of leisure time among many sections of the population. Her talk should be particularly interesting to university students in view of the fact that many of them when they graduate will be among the "privileged" groups who have more leisure than the average. On previous visits to the campus, Miss Gould's addresses have always been stimulating and rich with factual information.

the University of Missouri, by Bower Aly, director of forensics there, and was accepted by the S.A.C. at a recent council meeting. Other invitations were subsequently received and accepted and the team was chosen by the S.A.C.

"We were both very surprised to be chosen to make the tour, and are looking forward to it," Ed Crawford said last night, explaining that neither he nor his colleague had ever before travelled in that part of the country. Although the members of the team have never before been on a debating tour, both have had debating experience and are excellent speakers.

It is considered possible that other universities will extend similar invitations before the debaters return Dec. 1, Crawford said. The team's expenses will be paid by the universities attended.

Arrangements in connection with the trip are being completed by E. A. Macdonald, secretary of the S.A.C. "This is an undertaking of great importance and our representatives are preparing for the tour fully conscious of the responsibilities they will be carrying. I am sure we will all have reason to be very proud of them both when they return," he said.

PRAGUE MASSACRES ARE COMMEMORATED

November 16, 1939. During the night of November 16-17 thousands of Nazi soldiers surrounded the university buildings and struck while the students slept. Many were killed outright, others were executed afterwards, and still more were loaded into 31 buses that took them away to concentration camps.

Dr. Pavlashek read extracts from a manifesto issued by members of the National Union of Czechoslovak Students in London in connection with the massacres.

"We speak from a land of freedom," the manifesto read in part, "being some of those who escaped the Nazi inferno, in order that we may fight for the renewal of our country's stolen liberty, for law and justice, because we realize there can be no free Europe without the freedom of our Czechoslovak nation."

Part of the discussion at this year's session was in relation to the degree to which state universities should rely on and accept federal funds with the possibility of federal control being exerted. It was generally felt that the consequence would be interference with the policy of the university. This problem is not extant in Canadian universities.

Whitney Hall Places Veto On Corsages

St. Hilda's Girls Agree Corsages Unnecessary in War-Time Soys Principal Ferguson; Vic, Loretto Non-committal

MEN OPPOSE CUSTOM

The girls of Whitney Hall, University College women's residence, have decided that corsages are not to be worn at Friday's Whitney Hall Formal Dance. The Varsity learned yesterday. The decision has been reached in order to help university men cut down war-time expenditures.

"The girls made the decision themselves," Miss M. B. Ferguson, Dean of Women at University College, said yesterday. "I approve of it but I did not suggest it to them."

St. Hilda's girls agree that corsages are an unnecessary source of expense in war-time. Mrs. M. M. Kirkwood, principal of St. Hilda's College, told The Varsity. "Men are very charming about giving them, but I think that in most cases it is too much to expect of them during these days, and I believe (Continued on Page 2)

Government Is Sustained At Saskatoon

Student Forum of University of Saskatchewan Holds Stormy Session as C.C.F. Party Remains in Power

Saskatoon, Sask., November 18 — (CUP) — Amid much heckling and noisy interruptions the C.C.F. government of the Parliamentary Forum of the University of Saskatchewan was sustained Friday 15. Governor general J. S. Thomson read the Speech from the Throne, while Professor E. Whitmore acted as Speaker of the House.

Outlining the long struggle of the British to obtain such fundamentals as the Writ of Habeas Corpus, the Minister of Justice introduced Sections 21 and 26 of the Defense of Canada Regulations. These sections were rescinded 41-30. The Minister of Economic Planning introduced the motive of nationalizing the financial institutions of Canada, stating that the private profit system had already wrought havoc in the lives of Canadians. Although opposition argued against the motive under the principle that human nature was such that graft would take place under any system of finance, the bill was rescinded 43-30.

Engineers to Show Varied Talents At Annual Competition in January

Engineers will be given an opportunity to display their imagination, writing talent and public speaking ability at their Annual Students' Night Competition rolls around again some Thursday next January.

But what's more important at the moment is the fact that all entries must be filed by the last day of this month. To do so, competitors must state the subject they intend to write on, and leave their names, addresses and phone numbers for the records.

On or after Monday, December 9, the entrants must be prepared to present their papers before a committee chosen by the Engineering Society which will select the six papers to be given at the Students' Night Competition.

This Students' Night Competition has been sponsored for a number of years

Man's Characteristics Defined by Greenwood

Four Characteristics of Man: Rationality, Morality, Sociability and a Tendency Towards the Supernatural

FLAYS TOTALITARIAN LAWS

That society should be defined in terms of these four characteristics of man: rationality, morality, sociability, and a tendency towards the supernatural, was the view expressed by Dr. Thomas Greenwood of the University of London, England, in his address on "The Aims of Social Philosophy."

Dr. Greenwood said that laws "which follow from this analysis of man's four characteristics provide a good set of rules for a society to follow."

"In Europe," said Dr. Greenwood, "one cannot philosophize, yet they do it in practice. This war will cause people to think more about certain values. In England, the University of London holds luncheon hour lectures on philosophical problems for the general public. As many as 1,000 people have attended such a meeting seeking to find a refuge in philosophy."

"Laws in a totalitarian state do not protect the four characteristics of man," explained Dr. Greenwood. "If man is reasonable he will not have the right to express himself unless his views are in line with the qualities of the state. Therefore reason must be dimmed. Truth is not so important unless it can be tuned to the state," he added. Dr. Greenwood suggested that sociability of man, in the totalitarian state, is over-stressed to make it the primary characteristic.

Sunday Songster To be Held Dec. 2

Forcing re-consideration of a decision last month by the Music Committee to cancel Sunday Evening Songsters for the present school year, popular demand resulted in an announcement yesterday that a Songster will be held in Hart House music room December 1.

So great was the disappointment expressed that the regular fortnightly gatherings would not be held this year that it was decided to hold at least one Songster. Committee members felt that freshmen should have at least one opportunity of indulging in the evening of song.

In former years, under the direction of J. Campbell MacInnes, noted authority on old English folk-music, the informal gatherings in the music room featured favourite old songs in English, French and German, explained by the conductor.

Review Debuts In New Form

Issue Carries Large Selection of Features in Premier Edition of Remodelled Trinity Periodical

By Paul W. Fox

Smartly bound in a sporty ensemble of orange, black and red, the first number of The Trinity University Review since its amalgamation with the St. Hilda's Chronicle made its debut early this week.

Unfortunately, some of The Review's contents are not quite as scintillating as the cover. However, in the realm of fiction Betty Gairdner's "No Need of the Sun", which took the prize for the best contribution to this issue, is cleverly done and its skillful simplicity accentuates the floweriness of several other contributions.

University Marksmen Compete for Awards

Trophies and Medals Awarded to Winners in Frequent Matches; Club Has Fine Record

The University of Toronto Rifle Association, originally an outdoor club, is one of the oldest clubs in Hart House. The association was formed in 1903 and had about 300 members, mostly the faculty, before the last war. Before the war the club received a grant from the government, which consisted of rifles, ammunition and other necessities. During the last war the club became the C.O.T.C.

During this war the club again has offered its facilities to the C.O.T.C. The association is able to do this for all the rights of administration, renting to outsiders, etc., were given to them when they entered Hart House.

This year about 65 have signed up and paid their fee. For his fee the potential marksman is allowed to use the range and is given 100 rounds of ammunition; the rest of his ammunition he buys from the club at the price the club paid for it. Each member is eligible for the several contests held each year.

S.C.M. Lecture Delivered By Arnup

Secretary of United Church Board of Foreign Missions Discusses Concept of World Christian Community

IOEA COMMON TO ALL RACES

Speaking yesterday in the S. C. M. noon hour series, "Basic Convictions", Rev. Dr. J. H. Arnup, secretary of the United Church Board of Foreign Missions, discussed the idea of a world Christian community. The philosophy of this idea, he stated, rests on our conception of one God over all, which is found even in the most primitive of polytheistic religions.

Dr. Arnup holds as his thesis that despite all its incompleteness and imperfections, the World Christian Community is a fact today. Jesus Christ always spoke of his field as the whole world. The instinct of worship is worldwide, but Christ alone supplies the deepest spiritual needs.

An excellent illustration of the World Christian Community in action was seen at the World Christian Conference at Madras a few years ago. Here missionaries, theologians and representatives of Christian organizations of all kinds met in Christian fellowship. Dr. Arnup told of a group of theologians representing nearly all the numerous Christian denominations who were found, when they began to discuss what Christ meant to them, that their differences melted away. Their religion, they discovered, was based not on theology but on historic fact and embodied in a definite historical person.

With German missionaries in Africa cut off from home and with the Christian missions of the belligerent countries helping each other in China Dr. Arnup said that the way is being pointed toward the time some day, "when the Church must find the way out of quarrels and inter-racial discussion."

Library Evening To be Held November 27

Dr. J. Markowitz to Discuss "Leisure Reading" at Informal Hart House Gathering; Is Varsity Grad

The first Library Evening of the year will be held in Hart House library on Wednesday, 27th November, at 8.15 p.m. Dr. J. Markowitz will speak on "Leisure Reading."

Library Evenings have become a tradition in Hart House. They have been planned to give members of the House an opportunity to hear and talk to men who are outstanding in the literary world. These gatherings are essentially informal and smoking is permitted.

Dr. Markowitz graduated from this university and afterward studied at the Mayo Clinic. He is at present in practice in Toronto and is a research associate in the Department of Physiology. Dr. Markowitz has published several books. Although these are on medical subjects he will show that a surgeon also has literary interests and finds a great deal of time for reading. Discussion will follow this talk.

U.C. Lit. Meeting To Feature Music

The University College Literary and Athletic Society, official men's undergraduate organization of U.C., is to hold an open meeting in the junior common room next Wednesday, C. L. Dubin, literary director, told The Varsity yesterday.

"The old type of meeting where nothing but business was discussed, is a thing of the past," said Dubin. "The meetings this year, are to feature music and entertainment. They will be worth attending."

"Details of the evening's program will appear in Friday's Varsity," Dubin said. "In the meantime, I ask all U.C. men to remember the date, and to keep in mind our new policy of entertainment, rather than of tedious discussion. I don't want them to miss it."

Victoria College Holds Apple Day To Aid S.C.M. Refugee Committee

Today has been declared "Apple Day" at Victoria College by the S.C.M. Refugee Committee which is planning to make the event an annual institution. The proceeds of the day are to contribute to the support of the refugee students who have been brought to the campus by the committee.

Alumni Hall is the scene of the apple sale which is being held during the morning. The committee hopes that as many students as possible will help make the project a success by buying an apple.

The refugee guest at Varsity this year is a German girl, the daughter of a university professor. She was born and brought up in Germany, but with her family she had to leave the country.

Hon. G. Howard Ferguson to Address 51st Annual School Dinner in Hart House Tonight

TO PRESENT GOLO KEYS

"Get your tickets for the 51st annual School Dinner, 7 o'clock in the Great Hall, Hart House," was the constant cry between the sales talks and the jokes of the annual auction sale held yesterday at lunch-hour outside S.P.S.

Tonight is the dinner itself, carrying on over half a century of engineering tradition. Grads will get their gold keys, scholarship students their awards, Hon. G. Howard Ferguson will be the guest speaker, and of course a "scrumpious" chicken dinner with very, very light entertainment.

"Dirt Cheap" was the chief characteristic of yesterday's sale. Male students from all faculties, plus the usual sprinkling of "naughty-naughty" females, obliterated the front of S.P.S. and soaked in words of wit and wisdom from School's auctioneers. Humorously speaking the sale was a success, financially it wasn't. Auctioneer Aikens started the bidding for the Meads building at $1,000, but bids fell and fell until there was nothing to be done but to pay the street-cleaners 50 cents to take it away. This deficit of half a dollar was in part made up by the sale, for one cheap cigar, of that beautiful, stolen, pink silk U.C. flag; but School's other "Valuable Assets" were turned down by the crowd, which was thereupon blown sky high several times by the renowned S.P.S. "Cannon."

Chekov's Play Presented by T.D.C.

"The Bear" Produced in Hart House by Trinity Players; Is Last of Current Drama Committee Series

The Trinity Dramatic Club presented Chekov's "The Bear" to an appreciative audience in Hart House Theatre in the last of the Drama Committee's Wednesday afternoon five o'clockers. Arthur Gibson played the lead as Gregory Stepanovitch Smirnov, an insolvent Russian landowner, ably supported by Sheila Sharpe as Elena Ivanovna Popova, a wealthy widow, and Peter Boyd-Bowman, the aged footman Luka.

The play, a farce in Russian setting, centres about the woman hater Gregory's inability to collect a payment which he sorely needs on a debt incurred by the widow Elena's husband. The play proceeds to an hilarious climax complete with the usual wedding bells.

More Propaganda

The German propaganda bureau is at work again, this time in an attempt to make the German people forget their present woes by dangling before them the prospect of a beautiful future filled with modern homes and automobiles for everyone.

It is a new and ingenious way to raise funds for the government. First the propaganda department delighted the populace with the picture of the "volks-wagen", a family automobile, which was to be built for the German people at a cost much lower than anywhere else in the world. When the population was sufficiently enthused over the plan, the government proceeded to collect five marks a month from optimistic citizens with which to build the factories that would manufacture these cars. Both the factories and the "volks-wagens" are, as might be expected, still in the process of being planned. What has happened to the contributions is not difficult to imagine. The only wonder is that the German people could have thought anything else would happen to it.

Now Germany has issued information to its citizens on the enormous housing scheme that it will put into effect when it has won the war. It will build six million apartments and houses, complete with shower bath and garden, chiefly for citizens with large families. What is more, these government bounties are to rent for the slight sum of thirty marks per month. Introducing this benevolent scheme Hitler stated that "The successful end of this war will face the German Reich with tasks that it can muster only with an increase of its population. It is necessary, therefore, that a rise in the birth rate shall fill the gaps in population which the war took as its toll." This new housing scheme is calculated to stimulate the population increase by providing healthy, low-priced, modern homes.

Probably the most interesting feature of the new homes is the fact that each will possess an air-raid cellar. They are to be built according to the most recent experiences gained from the air war. They are to be absolutely bomb-proof and large enough to provide every tenant with room to sleep.

The housing scheme is part of the great social program planned for the post-war years, which is already being worked out. This program includes an old-age pension system, a health program, a new wage scale throughout the Reich and a professional training program.

If the people are still sufficiently credulous, no doubt they will again begin contributing to the German war treasury so the government can carry out this benevolent scheme when the war is over.

Tops in Equality

Women may have equal rights with men in almost every respect today, but evidently the people of Michigan think there is some limit to the rule. The trouble all started two days ago when Michigan's 81-year-old Governor Dickinson appointed a woman Lieutenant-Governor; — in case of his death she would become Governor of the state.

The position of Lieutenant-Governor was left vacant over a year ago when Michigan's Governor Fitzgerald died and Dickinson, then Lieutenant-Governor, succeeded him. The woman appointed to the post was Mrs. Matilda R. Wilson, wealthy Rochester stock fancier, social leader and former member of the State Board of Agriculture.

Attorney General Thomas Read was frank in his opinion of the action. He termed the appointment of Mrs. Wilson silly and foolish — although he tact-fully added that she was a fine and unusually capable woman. "If Governor Dickinson should die we would be in a fine mess," he said, contemplating Mrs. Wilson as head of the Michigan government. "If he had let things alone the Secretary of State, who is well qualified, would have become Governor if any such contingency arose, but now what have we? I can't see there was any necessity or excuse for this action."

For his part, Governor Dickinson said the appointment was made solely to precipitate a Supreme Court test of the constitutional provisions relative to the order of succession when a chief executive dies. Immediately the appointment became known, controversy arose as to whether Governor Dickinson had the right to fill the apparent vacancy in the office of Lieutenant Governor. He differed with the Attorney General who claimed that no legal vacancy existed and that Mr. Dickinson was both Governor and Lieutenant Governor. So far, however, the Attorney General hasn't decided just what to do about the situation, although he is determined to do something.

In view of the fuss being made, it scarcely seems likely that Mrs. Wilson will get to be Governor of Michigan. At first glance it seems to be quite an honour that she has had bestowed upon her, but if, as Governor Dickinson more or less suggested, she was merely appointed in order to startle the Supreme Court into bringing about a change in the constitution, then it would appear that Mrs. Wilson is merely the "goat" in the whole procedure. At any rate a woman Governor would really be the last word in female equality.

Christmas in England

Christmas boxes sent overseas containing Christmas cakes and other confections will no doubt be doubly popular this year, in view of the recent warning by the British Government that the people might have to do without their Christmas turkeys, ice cream and chocolates. An official in the Ministry of Food said that the supply of poultry would be reduced at the holiday season, that there would be no increase in the allowance of cooking fats or sugar for Christmas cakes and that the recent reduction in the supply of milk would seriously affect manufacturers of candy and ice cream.

On the whole it does not look like a very cheerful Christmas for Britain, what with this announcement and the fact that at least part of Christmas Eve and Christmas Night are likely to be spent in air-raid shelters, but since the British have proved themselves adept at cheerfully adapting themselves to this sort as merry, if decidedly a unique, Christmas in the of thing, perhaps they will manage to spend almost shelters.

At least they will be cheered by the government's simultaneous announcement that air-raid shelters will be immediately improved in many respects. There will be more intelligent supervision of shelters by trained nurses and doctors, daily inspection and spraying of the shelters by medical officers, provision for all-night first-aid staffs in all large shelters and the use of a simple face mask by people with colds.

Although under ordinary circumstances it would scarcely seem like Christmas without such delicacies as turkey and plum pudding, it is not likely that any possible shortage of them will interest the people half as much as the simultaneous announcement concerning improvement of shelters.

Drama Committee

It is unfortunate for a critic when a play all but falls through. That The Bear did not do so completely must be credited to Arthur Gibson. As Gregory Stepanovitch Smirnov, Gibson made the play. He had a splendid part and proceeded to enjoy himself thoroughly in it. Although his accept was sometimes forgotten, one lost this in the essential Russianness of his characterization. Gibson has that knack, all too uncommon among amateurs, of being able to develop gradually from one mood into another. This ability covered up to a great extent the inconsistency of Sheila Sharpe's Elena Ivanovna Popova. Miss Sharpe had a hard part to play, many of whose difficulties she was unfortunately unable to overcome. Her accept was excellent and well sustained.

As a whole, the play was unconvincing. Both actors and director, always excepting Gibson, forgot or did not realize that the play was a farce and they lacked the devil-may-care spirit which must go with one. The play was patchy, the players were in character only when they spoke, and everyone was inclined more than a little to stiffness. The end was

S.C.M. Apply Day Causes Controversy

"We been robbed," shouted the District Scout Commissioner, viciously clashing and unclashing all fifty-nine blades of his knife. "The S.C.M. is muscling in. We started Apple Day and it's our racket." In a brave attempt to dry his superior's teams a King's Scout volunteered (smiling at all times), "It won't do them no good, we got the territory all covered last month. Everybody in Toronto has already got an apple." Here he attempted an encouraging slap on the back, but unfortunately entangled his arm in his appalling selection of shoulder cords and smashed his collar-bone. At this point he was overwhelmed by a squad of Scout First-Aiders in best Jamboree style. But that's another story.

"No good," answered the man behind-the-counter when queried about the Victoria S.C.M.'s money-raising plans. "Nobody buys apples these days unless you capture their imagination with machinery." He pointed toward his own snappy blue apple machine. "But I tell you, if they want a nice racket they oughta try doughnuts. I got some here that can be used over and over again."

The chairman of the Apple Day committee scoffed when interviewed in Alumni Hall behind a mountain of Macintoshes. "For years apples have been doing their charitable work around this college," he proclaimed. "If anyone stole the idea it was the Scouts." "Who's going to polish all these?" he was asked. "Oh, we're leaving that to the scholarship students," he replied. "They have had lots of experience."

that the Trinity girls also think so, although they have reached no official decision.

Victoria College and Loretto College authorities said that their students had reached no decision on the question of wearing corsages, and offered no comment.

A flat "No" was the word which resounded into the ears of The Varsity reporter. All were of the opinion that students should refrain from adding extra expense to their pocket-books for such an impractical purpose.

John Hirschorn, IV S.P.S., stated, "This business of sending corsages is a nuisance and an expense. I am totally in line with H. J. Cody in believing we do away with extravagant and foolish spending."

Bright-eyed H. Rotenberg, I Meds, quickly ejaculated, when questioned, "I've never sent one yet, so why start now?"

While his companion, S. Robins, I Law, muttered, "I'm against it. It gets in my way when I dance."

"They should positively be banned," uttered B. Somerville, II Law, "although I don't believe they'll ever be curtailed."

One dissentient voice in the anti-corsage chorus was that of Bob Smith, II Trinity. "I like the custom of giving corsages," he said. "The corsage means more than just the amount of money I pay for it. If you are going to give the money you would otherwise spend on flowers to the Red Cross or to some other war charity, then by all means abandon corsages. Otherwise I see no reason to give up something that gives people pleasure, even in war time!"

abrupt and it was a shock to see the curtains fall and the lights go up.

The play itself is, however, amusing, and Mr. Gibson's excellent acting provided some real entertainment this afternoon.

VIC HOLDS CLASS PARTY IN HONOUR OF RUGBYISTS

The class of 473, Victoria College, will salute the passing rugby season this Friday evening with their first class party in Burwash Hall. In a setting reminiscent of football games, the members of the class will dance to the music of Gord Hardy, member of 473.

The hall will be decorated with the emblems of all the colleges on the campus, as well as those of Queen's, McGill and Western Universities. The feature of the evening will be a floor show which will carry out the football theme, as will the many novelty dances planned by the committee. That perennial favourite of rugby fans, the hot dog, will highlight the menu.

"We are hoping for a full turn-out of about two hundred and fifty," the committee told The Varsity. "It is a class party put on entirely by the class itself, and should be the best one yet."

TRINITY, VIC CLASH AT STADIUM TO SETTLE PLAY-OFF SPOT

It's Trinity against Vic today in the Bloor Bowl to decide the holder of second spot in Group I, and more important, who shall meet Senior School in the Mulock Cup semi-final on Monday.

In their last contest, Trinity pulled themselves up by their shoe-strings, to administer a 12-7 lacing to University College, and Vic knocked the Red and White out of the playoff picture on Tuesday when they blanked U.C. 7-0. When Trinity beat U.C. she not only escaped herself firmly in the fight-for-second-place muddle, but also put Vic back in the running. Vic capitalized on the hand-out to beat Oliphant's boys handsily.

It is doubtful whether Doug Crashey, who performed well in the Red and Black's last tussle, or Jack Whittingham will see action. No changes in line-up are reported from the Vic camp.

Elsewhere in this issue the names and numbers of both teams are displayed.

HAMILTON LEADS EMMANUEL TO VOLLEY WIN OVER DENTS

Led by lanky spiker Art Hamilton, Emmanuel A's five-man volleyball outfit pulled out a narrow 15-7, 14-16, 15-10 win over Dents B on the upper gym floor yesterday afternoon.

The Theologs grabbed a big lead in the first game and coasted home. But the second instalment was one of the most hotly contested, ding-dong battles put on this season. With Doug Green and Kitch Kitchen doing the setting up for him Hamilton spiked the Emmanuelites to a well-earned win in the decisive game.

Emmanuel A: Hamilton, Green, Fee, Kitchen, Carder.

Dents B: Sussman, Scott, Cle, Spivat, Shapiro, Wittchell, Lepman.

SPORT
SPLASHES

By Doug Green

Below will be found a discourse as to who's who in the swimming world, as the schedule has reached the one-third mark.

Group 1: It consists of Sr. U.C., Sr. Meds, Sr. S.P.S., and Sr. Vic. Sr. U.C. led by Ged Clawson and George Meen, former intercollegiate stars, look like the class of this section as they've won two meets and lost none. Both meets have been won by respectable margins, and the other three squads seem fairly evenly matched. Sr. Meds have won one and lost one for second place. Sr. School and Vic are tied at the bottom with one win and two losses.

Group 2 composes Jr. U.C., Jr. S.P.S. and Jr. Meds. Jr. S.P.S. lead with three wins and no losses although they've had two mighty close meets with Jr. U.C. Jr. Meds have one win and one loss and U.C. have lost all three meets.

Group 3 winner will be doubtful, possibly until the very last meet, as all four teams are very evenly matched. Trinity and S.P.S. III's are tied with two victories and one loss. St. Mike's have a win and loss to their credit while the United Church Theologs have lost twice. Emmanuel are far from out of the running however as both their defeats have been very close.

Group 4 finds Aerial Navigation splashing through to glory by swamping all opposition presented by weak teams from Dents, Knox and Wycliffe. Aer. Nav. have three straight wins out of three starts. Dents have won two and lost two, Knox have gained victory once and suffered defeat twice, while Wycliffe have lost twice.

A tentative date for the junior intercollegiate swimming meet has been set for Dec. 5th and 6th, with the preliminaries being raced off on the earlier date. The rules covering entries are the same as the junior intercollegiate track and harrier. On Fri. Nov. 22nd the Intramural Sports Committee will meet to arrange the details, all of which will appear in The Varsity at a later date.

School Swamps Dents To Enter Mulock Final

Heavy S.P.S. Plungers Too Strong for Weaker Dents Line; Molarmen Resort to Aerial Attack in Vain

SIMPSON STARS

By Owen Prichard

Junior S.P.S. gridlers moved into the finals for the Mulock Cup yesterday by trouncing Dentistry in a 28-0 rout at Varsity Stadium.

Its front wall too weak to withstand the heavy pounding of the School plungers, the Dentists' only hope of gaining territory lay in the hands of glue-fingered Cosmo Castaldi, who was the reception department for a number of forward passes.

The Schoolmen had a versatile attack, completing two touchdowns on forward passes, and combining effective line-work with the sensational punting and running of "Long John" Simpson.

Murray Hawton, the Dents hooper, held his own nicely in a kicking duel with Simpson in the first quarter. The Molarmen were sent into a tough spot when Simpson's long spiral went into touch on the five-yard line of the Garnet and Blue, but they were able to boot the oval out of danger.

The first score of the tussle came when S.P.S. came into possession deep in Dents' territory. Working the ball over into the centre area, George Biggs tossed a lovely diagonal pass to John Brennan, who made the touch without a Dent tackler in shouting distance. Ralph McIntyre's placement attempt for the convert was wide.

School took the offensive again immediately, as Simpson booted the kick-off 80 yards to the Molarmen's 17-yard line. The Garnet and Blue plungers were nailed in their tracks, and on the fourth down Brennan and Rettie came charging in on Hawton. The kick was effectively blocked, and Brennan gathered in the piskin to romp over for another major. This touch was unconverted, and the score at the quarter's end remained 10-0.

Don Grosskurth hit his stride in the second frame, and sparked the School drive from then on to the final whistle. This stanza saw some nice plunging by George Biggs of School. School concentrated on line plays, after an attempted flea-flicker had gone astray as Dents intercepted a lateral. Dents held briefly, and were able to drive the ball back to the School 20 after an Engineer pass had grounded after hitting Penoyer.

After the half-time interval, Jr. S.P.S. once more jumped into the commanding position when Ralph McIntyre recovered a Dents bobble on the Molarmen's 25. A pass from Grosskurth to Brian White put them in line for a field-goal, which McIntyre attempted from the Dents 30, but it failed.

The game was put on ice by the one and only "Long John" Simpson, who came through with the play of the day. Dents had shoved the Junior School outfit into the shadow of the goal-posts as the S.P.S. plungers were momentarily stopped. With a foot to go for a first down, School lined up in kick formation. "Long John" took the snap and galloped wide around the right end for a jaunt which ended on the Dentistry fifteen yard stripe. From the ten White ball-passed down the centre to Grosskurth for another major which was converted, making the tally 16-0.

In the final quarter, the Dents kicker was brought down on his own one-yard line, giving School the oval. Biggs plunged for the next five points. The convert was good for the 22nd point. Scoring came to an end when a School kick was returned from behind the line and the Engineers once more got into position for a touchdown play from the Dent five. Grosskurth carried the ball over the line, McCarty converted to jump the final score to 28-0.

Jr. S.P.S.: Clarke, Hambley, Hamilton, Rowland, Gow, Quintenon, Kelly, White, Hamlin, MacIntyre, Biggs, Grosskurth, Penoyer, O'Donnell, Rettie, Prentice, Simpson, Brennan, Spence, Bailie.

Dents: Hambley, Woods, Milten, Beattie, Francis, Parrott, Green, Ferguson, Humeck, McKee, Hawton, Castaldi, Hutchison, Coleman, Corcoran, Crouch, Webster.

Speaking OF SPORT

By Dave MacIntosh

Well, crack! my nut and call me Colonel, if yesterday's affair at the Blue Bowl didn't turn out just as we predicted. However, we were not overjoyed by the proceedings, mainly because as an intercollegiate rugby semi-final the game was a dud. Not to cast any aspersions on Dents, and least of all on claw-mittied Cosmo Castaldi, but the Molarmen were plainly and simply outclassed. The Boys from the Little Red Schoolhouse didn't bother to exert themselves to any great extent, and even the few Engineers in the stands couldn't bring themselves to hurl their raucous "Tolke Oike." Dents more or less had to resign themselves to their fate early in the game after Johnny Brennan stood in their end zone without making a move, and stretched out his arms to incorporate a high lob for the Engineers' first major.

Though the game was merely a matter of sitting and viewing how the Engineers would make their next touch, it did have moments of brilliance. Dents held well in the second quarter, but because they had no plays, they could not make a continued advance themselves. In spite of this, they gained seven first downs to nine for S.P.S., and had a higher average of passes completed. They attempted 15, completed eight. The Engineers tried eleven, made five good, but two of these went for a total of ten points. When it came to actual yards gained rushing, the Blue and Gold held a big advantage. What happened to the Dent line is implied in their cognomen. As Rowland, Gow, Hambley and Rettie cleared the way, Biggs, MacIntyre, Grosskurth and Hamlin slashed through for substantial gains, and by half-time had the Dent secondary groggy.

Griming freshman Cosmo Castaldi was the bright light of an otherwise gloomy performance on the part of Dents. He had a habit of coming out of nowhere with a roar and a rush to snag almost impossible tosses. But it was not his great effort that the few fans went home gabbling about. It was the stunt of the lad with the tremendous lower limbs. "Long John" Simpson. What quarter-back Brian White had called for in the huddle we do not know. But it was fourth down, with about a foot to go for yards. "Long John" took the pass-out from centre almost under his own goalposts and just stood, giving Referee Donny Boxer the eye, as if to say "Watch this, boy." And then he took off, wide around the right end, his long white flannels flapping in the breeze. Dents finally caught the gargantuan galloper at their own 20. It was a mere formality to plant the piskin in play dirt.

SO IT LOOKS LIKE . . .

Exactly—an all-School final. One of the School squads, namely the junior edition, has safely reached the finals, and it is extremely doubtful if either Vic or Trinity will be able to stop the Blitz Boys of Senior School. Vic should take Trinity today but with a great deal of difficulty. They hold the edge in line-weight, they have the better kicker and some good husky backfielders. But you never can tell. What Trinity has is hard to say. Probably the most potent weapon they possess is that of experience. They have played together a couple of years now, and they're wide awake to what goeth on round about them. A Vic-School tangle would promise some sound rugby, and we believe that Vic's, and not Trinity's wall could stand up to the pounding that it would receive from the Engineers' hard-driving backs. But School holds a wide, wide margin over Vic when it comes to engineering plays that make for victories. All this leads up to what we have been expecting for some time now—a Junior School versus Senior School Mulock Cup final. It sounds good.

AND TO CONCLUDE

Always alert to catch proofing errors in our own little journal, we are happy indeed to spot glazers in other papers. We culled this choice bit from the home-town daily. It has to do with a football game of some importance in that neck of the woods. To quote: "... and he galloped for forty yards through a broken field." Boy, wait till Ged Clawson catches hold of that lad!

G. GORDON GILCHRIST WINS FOR S. P. S.

Congratulations to Gord Gilchrist for his brilliant effort yesterday morning. Here is an S.P.S. man who will go far. Up before dawn let out a crack, Gord donned his C.O.T.C. uniform and set out to win for good old School. He did. Arriving at 217 Richmond Street West before 8 o'clock (800 hours) he was on hand to watch the cutters, trimmers, basters, hand workers and foremen file in to their work at Sovereign Custom Tailors. The reception committee arrived breathless and a few minutes later to congratulate Gilchrist, and to present him with two (2) passes to the Hollywood Theatre. The extra pass was in recognition of his record—a new low for Varsity visitors to our Factory-Showroom.

Drop in any day. You do not have to buy! (but if you do pick out a suit you'll be well satisfied)—just present yourself and ask for a theatre pass. If you are the first Varsity student to visit us that day you receive a FREE PASS to the Hollywood or the Casino. Drop in today. Often it's 4.30 or 5.00 before we have our first Campus visitor.

experiences as a student minister in Temagami.

"Confidentially—Adam La Zonga" falls rather flat in its humour, but "My First Day at Varsity" by L. G. Henderson balances the scale somewhat, and a few clever sayings by Bridget the Mental Midget (Trinity's Ima Dodo) brightens an otherwise dull humour section.

Every poem in the book is so noteworthy that it is difficult to select the best, but certainly E. S. Bull's "Though I Walk Through the Valley" ranks near the top, with "Last Sunset" by C. L. Wilson and "Viaduct" by Paul Christie close behind.

An unusual and praiseworthy feature of the magazine is a virtual vital statistics bureau at the back which announces the recent deaths and marriages of and births to Trinity graduates.

The greatest defect in The Review is its complete dearth of pictures and parsimony in illustrations; otherwise it is a tip top tale of the news and views over Trinity way.

Modification in collar of battle dress blouse.

"As it has been found that the collar of the battle dress blouse causes irritation in certain cases, authority is granted for the collar to be lined with khaki drill or other similar material when considered by the wearer. ## Canadian One-Act Plays To be Enacted Saturday

Proceeds of Plays to be Devoted to War Work; Three Plays will be Presented in Hart House

BROWNLOW CARD DIRECTS

Public Play productions of the Canadian Authors' Association are presenting three Canadian one-act plays on Saturday, Nov. 23, at 8.30 p.m., at Hart House Theatre. The proceeds of these plays, which are being produced under the auspices of the Toronto Branch of the Canadian Authors' Association, will be devoted entirely to war work.

The three Canadian plays to be given are "The Cross on the Hill" by Leonora McNeilly, "The Better Mouse-Trap" by Nathaniel A. Benson, and "General Wolfe" by Raymond Card. Miss McNeilly's play, "The Cross on the Hill" is an authentic drama taken from life on the picturesque island of Grand Manan, New Brunswick. The play will be directed by Dora McMillan and in the east are a group of well-known local actors, Joanne Fallis, Norman McLean, Charles Sivell, Peter Mews and John Bowen.

The second play "The Better Mouse-Trap" portrays the rollicking riot that overwhelms the Bhagsen, Lugden, Lumsden and Mugsell Advertising Agency in their endeavour to land the "Burpenfold's Better Mouse-Trap" account. In the cast are Ruth Woods, Tom Barry, Helen Skinner, Norma Robb, Betty Lock, Eric Blong, Gordon Budham, Russ Waller, Dick Canney, Lorne McQuaid, Dudley Dumond, Hugh Watson, Gerald Moses and others. The play is directed by Gordon Becham.

To vary the bill, Raymond Card is presenting his well-known Canadian historical drama in two episodes, "General Wolfe". This play outlines in intensely dramatic form the thrilling events which led to the taking of Quebec in 1759. The scene is Wolfe's cabin aboard "H.M.S. Sutherland" lying off the Citadel. In the all-male cast are Richard Spohr as Wolfe, John Houston, Edward Roberts, Raymond Card, W. R. Patterson, Stanley Raven, Byron Westlake and James Morgan.

The special setting for this play has been designed by its director, Brownlow Card, brother of the author. Mr. Card is also responsible for designing and executing the sets for the other two plays as well.

VERY SELDOM does the Students' Directory, that eager compendium of Vital Statistics slip up on a detail... But this year it is a trifle incorrect in the data it offers on one of the cities in Occupational Therapy... YOU TOO CAN BE A WALL-FLOWER seems to be the motto of the newly-organized Wall-Flowers' Club which recently burgeoned forth on the campus of Sir George Williams College, Montreal. Formed as a knitting circle for the solace of feminine Georgians who regard themselves as "frustrated females", i.e. consistently undated, the club has a constitution and everything. A girl may become a member if she did not receive a bid to the last campus dance. To remain a member, she must refuse all subsequent dates, or else pay a five-cent fee for each affair she attends. (The fines are to help defray the cost of the wool.) "Boy friends" in any part of the college render a girl ineligible, but it's not considered infra dig to have one outside, as long as he does not take her to affairs sponsored by the college. Married women are eligible for honorary membership, and the freshest honorary president is tolerated on the grounds that her husband attends McGill, the dirty dog.

But here is the crowning glory of the constitution: should any member contemplate marriage, the prospective bridegroom must be brought before the executive for approval. Should the executive disapprove, the member must refrain from marriage, OR WITHDRAW FROM THE CLUB.

CO-EDS ARE THE OBSTINATE PEOPLE... One of them galloped up to a St. George St. doorway and rang the bell the other evening. ### FORESTERS' STUNT NIGHT TO BE HELD NEXT FRIDAY

Sounds of rustic gaiety will echo in the music room of Hart House when the Foresters have their annual get-together a week this Friday.

The lumber lads, their friends and faculty will doff civilized clothes in favour of the traditional checkered shirts and high boots, Bert Day, III Forestry, disclosed. "The music hall will be decorated with evergreens for the occasion," he said.

It will be a very informal affair with dancing to the music of a Wurliander, and later in the evening the foresters will have supper in the Great Hall. Each year is to provide part of the evening's entertainment by presenting a play, humorous if possible, Bert Day said. And prizes will be awarded, he added.

Great Hall Witnesses School Dinner

Hon. Howard Ferguson, Former Premier of Ontario, Addresses Engineers at Fifty-First Annual Banquet

ENTERTAINMENT APPROVED

Crowded to capacity by 700 enthusiastic Engineers, the Great Hall of Hart House was the scene last night of the 51st annual School Dinner, traditional stag gathering of the Science men.

Highlight of the evening was the presentation to Dean C. H. Mitchell on the occasion of his retirement from the university of an engraved cigarette box and case and a gold Engineering Society key. Presentations were also made of Engineering Society Gold Keys and Athletic Association Gold Keys to graduating students in the Faculty of Applied Science and Engineering, and scholarships to graduates who earned their last year.

Guest speaker of the evening, the Hon. G. Howard Ferguson, former student of the University, Premier of Ontario and Canadian High Commissioner to Great Britain, spoke of the British Empire and the importance of maintaining Empire relations.

"We shall win this war," was his prediction, "because we are fighting for something we all believe in." However, he stated, we shall not triumph over the forces of tyranny without a long struggle.

Schoolmen present voiced unanimous approval of the chicken dinner offered; the entertainment, which consisted of a ventriloquist and a xylophonist, and the large blue-and-yellow banner behind the head table bearing a quotation from Dean Mitchell: "Every engineer is by nature an economist."

Varsity Ski Club Ready for Trails

The University Ski Club held its first open meeting at 5 p.m. yesterday in the Meds building. Featured were two skiing movies and a talk by the president, Jack Fleming, on what the club has done and intends to do. Be it known that every student of this university is a member of the University Ski Club if he cares to avail himself of the opportunity. The club has its usual leased skiing terrain up near Aurora and a hard-working trails committee under the direction of Allister Ritch has been spending all its Sundays up there cutting and marking the trails for the benefit of university skiers.

Until the snow comes the club's public activity will be limited to meetings such as yesterday's, with co-eds, movies, and inspiring talks from the executive, but when the snow arrives Hugh Gallie and others will swing into action giving free instruction to all who want it.

Response to "Vic Apple Day" Exceeds Expectations of S.C.M.

The response of the students to "Vic apple day" on Wednesday far exceeded the expectations of the S.C.M. Refugee Committee when the supply of apples was sold out by noon. Many prospective buyers who came to Alumni Hall in Victoria after twelve o'clock found only a pile of cores.

"I had no idea it would go over quite so well," declared Miss Royal Kee, chairman of the committee. "I expect we could have sold nearly twice as many apples if we had had them."

In view of the results of Wednesday's sale the Refugee Committee is planning to sponsor another "apple day" this coming Thursday, November 28, for which they will be better prepared. The Nation-wide Party, Organized Similar to U.S. President's Ball, to Take Place in Spring Term

TO BE BROADCAST

Vancouver, B.C., Nov. 19 (CUP)—A nation-wide Pan-Hellenic Party, organized similarly to the President's Ball in the United States, is planned to take place some time in the spring, according to information released by UBC's Inter-Fraternity Council today.

Proceeds of this party will be donated to the National Red Cross as the universities' contribution to the National Red Cross campaign.

If present plans materialize the affair will be international and broadcast over a national CBC hook-up. Most of the Canadian fraternities and sororities have not yet replied to the suggestion that they join the party; although the colleges on the Pacific coast expressed their willingness to co-operate earlier during the season.

U.C. Lit. Meets On Wednesday

Featuring entertainment rather than the usual routine of business, the University College Literary and Athletic Society will hold its first open meeting of the year next Wednesday evening in the U.C. junior common room.

One of the main attractions of the evening will be a skit put on by prominent members of the cast of the U.C. Follies, which has been written especially for the occasion. Among those taking part in this skit are Bud Milnes, Frank Winn and Sandy World.

FRIDAY RECITAL

Zara Nelsova, first cello in the Toronto Symphony Orchestra, will be guest artist at the recital today at 5 p.m. in the music room, Hart House. She will be accompanied by Gwendolyn Williams, pianist, and the program will be as follows:

Donny Boxer's Placement and Single Wins 4-1 Verdict for Anglicans, Who Meet School Monday

FLEMING BREAKS LEG

By Bill Quigley

Trinity's football warriors, the boys they had counted down and out two weeks ago, today found themselves in the Mulock Cup semi-finals against Sr. S.P.S. by earning a convincing 4-1 victory over the Scarlet and Gold of Victoria yesterday afternoon at the Stadium. The battle for the right to meet Jr. S.P.S. in the grand finale will take place on Monday afternoon.

The contest, hard fought, yet cleanly played throughout, was marred by an unfortunate accident late in the game to Hal Fleming, fast charging Vic back. Fleming, steaming up from the secondary to stop a Trinity extension play, threw a terrific flying block at Doug Crashey and in so doing sustained a badly fractured right leg.

Except at rare intervals, Victoria stuttered and stammered through four stanzas of jittery football. Trinity, on the other hand, rolled along with ridiculous ease and a definite air of confidence. Never finding themselves behind the proverbial eight-ball, the Red and Black took full advantage of an opponent which apparently had come apart at the seams.

Striking with startling suddenness at the opening kickoff, the Anglicans soon had their bewildered rivals reeling about deep in their own back yard. Don Boxer whipped a short pass to Doug Crashey; the latter combined with Johnny Henderson to put together two first downs; then Boxer dropped back to the twenty and coolly chalked up a beautiful field goal. Though few realized it at the time, that brilliant opening drive was all that Trinity needed for victory.

Very early in the second frame, "Red" Heinbuch, who had been booting well for Vic, stood on Trinity's fifty and boomed a quick-kick to the deadline. His effort, however, failed to lift

Life of London Student Described by Greenwood

By Bill Armstrong

A man who combined his passion for learning and his enthusiasm for travelling and thus became one of the world's great living philosophers, is paying the University of Toronto a visit this week. Sitting in his Hart House suite—the floor, desk and bed littered with envelopes, newspapers and notes—Dr. Thomas Greenwood of the University of London described his attitude towards his chosen field.

"Philosophy," said he, "is a living subject for me. As such, I always felt it intertwined with the stitches of things and of life. To penetrate the mystery of our existence we have to start with personal experience. It is from such experience that we can derive reflectively the essence and meaning of life."

Dr. Greenwood declares that the moment he entered the University of London as a student he graduated in spirit because his one object was to avidly seek out knowledge from books, travel and association with the wise and learned.

After a few years of graduate studies in the Universities of Paris and Vienna, Dr. Greenwood returned to his Alma Mater as a lecturer, and through his further association with students he has at last come to consider himself an undergraduate.

Shortly before the present war, he

Kingston, Nov. 20 (CUP)—His Excellency, the Earl of Athlone has accepted the rectorship of Queen's University according to an announcement by H. J. Hamilton, secretary-treasurer of the Alma Mater Society. The honour given the Governor-General is the highest which it is within the power of the student body to grant.

The appointment is made not by university authorities but by the undergraduates themselves through the Alma Mater Society executive.

The Rector's chief function is the delivery of an address to the student body some time during his term of office. His Excellency succeeds the late Hon. Norman Rogers, former Dominion cabinet minister.

Author Discusses Background Of Epic, "Brebeuf"

Professor Pratt Says Story of Jesuits in Canada Most Heroic and Dramatic in Canadian History

GIVES RECITAL

"The story of the Jesuits in Canada is the most dramatic and heroic episode in Canadian history, without doubt," stated Dr. E. J. Pratt last evening in Victoria College Chapel, preliminary to his recital and discussion of "Brebeuf and His Brethren," his recently published epic. Dr. Pratt was introduced by Sir Ellsworth Flavelle, the chairman, and was assisted in the reading by Dr. Pelham Edgar.

"Brebeuf and His Brethren," which inside of three months has entered its third edition, is the story of the Jesuits in Canada, three hundred years ago. The narrative covers a twenty-five year period ending in the martyrdom.

"Brebeuf," continued Dr. Pratt, "had great difficulties with the Huron language," which had peculiar limitations, and was often forced to alter religious formulas. "In the name of the Father and of the Son and of the Holy Ghost" became respectively "Our Father, His Son and their Holy Ghost."

The Jesuit Fathers constantly endured innumerable discomforts—unpalatable food, rasping voices "that never learn to talk in quiet tones," squalor and vermin. Nevertheless "the Jesuits had one great and promising year when it looked as if there might be peace between Hurons, Iroquois and French."

But the fury of Iroquois invasion descended and on March 16th, 1649, the six priests were forced to march to their death three miles over the snow from St. Louis to St. Ignace.

Previous works of Dr. Pratt include "Roosevelt and the Antioch," "The Titanic," and "The Fable of the Goats," a satire on dictatorships, which won the Governor-General's award in 1937.

Dean Cochrane Concludes Series On Modern American Authors

"Carl Becker differs from other equally competent historians because his works are impregnated throughout with philosophy," stated Dean Cochrane in the last of the series of six weekly lectures on modern authors, sponsored by University College.

In sketching Becker's life, Professor Cochrane related that sixty-seven years ago the author was born of humble parentage in Iowa. He received several degrees from western universities, has been a prominent figure in public life and for the past twenty-three years has been at Cornell.

The speaker remarked that a man may love the dreariest habitation because it is his home. So it was with Becker, in his love for the West. His "Essay on Kansas" reflects the author's personal experience in the country about which he is writing. Dean Cochrane continued. Becker describes it as a promised land which cannot be en-

Dean Mitchell will Retire at Close of Present School Year after More than 20 Years' Service

LAUREL BY COOY

Dean C. H. Mitchell of the Faculty of Applied Science and Engineering will retire at the close of the present school year following more than 20 years of service in the faculty, President H. J. Cody announced last night at the 51st annual School Dinner.

Although the announcement was the first official disclosure of Dean Mitchell's retirement from university life, it came as no surprise to the Engineers, who had known the fact for the past few weeks and presented to their Dean a large engraved cigarette box and a cigarette case, each case bearing the coat-of-arms of the Faculty to Applied Science and Engineering.

"Dean Mitchell has himself been a great engineer in connection with the development of Hydro-Electric power," said President Cody in paying tribute to the retiring faculty member, men-

"TIME AND SPACE" TOPIC OF NEXT R.C.I. LECTURE

Another in the series of Saturday evening lectures presented by the Royal Canadian Institute in Convocation Hall will be given tomorrow evening at 8.15 when Miss A. Vibert Douglas, M.B.E., Ph.D., will speak on "The Immensities of Time and Space."

Miss Douglas is the Dean of Women at Queen's University, and was once lecturer in astrophysics at McGill.

The lecture will be special illustrated, and the general public, as well as the staff and students, is particularly welcome.

W.S.T.D. Awaits New Uniforms

Although the plans for the W.S.T.D. winter schedule are not yet definite, Senior Lieutenant Miss A. E. M. Parkes stated that she expects the lectures will be held twice a week with half an hour of drill preceding them. Yesterday the winter schedule officially commenced with drill at 7.15 on the parking lot behind O.C.E.

The Senior Lieutenant also stated that she hopes to have the uniforms for the troops in less than two weeks' time.

As a pupil of Turner, the young Becker got a new idea of history. He disagreed with his teacher's conception and decided that history was an aspect of life and thus a thing to be probed into, the speaker added.

Dean Cochrane divided Becker's literary development into three stages. In one of his earliest books, he is already in the pursuit of the significance of events. He was definitely against the contemporary tendency toward schematization. He was concerned with what the subject felt about things rather than the things themselves.

The speaker pointed out Becker's concern for the meaning of things in his second stage. The author described democracy as another way of being indifferently governed.

In his final stage, Becker has been interested in the methods by which

Double Congratulations

The annual School Dinner held last night was an event of major significance for the "little old red school-house." First of all the annual function celebrated a big milestone when it started out on the second half-century of its history. For last night was the 51st Annual School Dinner, thereby making it one of the oldest annual events on the campus. The other feature, of more vital importance, was the announcement of the retirement of Dean C. H. Mitchell.

At last night's dinner the first official announcement of Dean Mitchell's retirement was made, and he was honoured by his students with a fine presentation and words of appreciation for his long service and keen interest in the welfare of those under him. Dean Mitchell has served as dean of the Faculty of Applied Science and Engineering for many years, and he has rendered a real service to that particular faculty and to the university as a whole.

So to the men from S.P.S. who are carrying on tradition towards the century mark, now that the half-way point has been passed, and to Dean Mitchell, who is finishing a career of active service in engineering and educational circles, The Varsity and the rest of the student body offer the heartiest of congratulations.

Invasion by Debate

On Sunday evening a two-man debating team will leave the campus to represent the University of Toronto on a two-weeks debating tour of a number of mid-western American universities. Their responsible task will be that of upholding the affirmative of the motion: "Resolved that the U.S.A. should join a federation of the English-speaking nations."

The value of such a debating tour at the present time is great, and those who are responsible for initiating and carrying through the plan are to be praised highly. The invitation came from the United States, and the colleges on the itinerary are paying complete expenses of the Toronto team. The Students' Administrative Council co-operated in arrangements. It is to be commended for seeing the value of such an enterprise in war-time and standing behind it. The gesture from our colleagues south of the line is indicative of the understanding between these two countries, and between the universities in each country. It implies a real desire on the part of American students to improve that understanding, to get to know us better and to understand our common problems in a clearer light. If the youth of each country can develop a common bond of sympathy the future for American-Canadian co-operation seems bright.

The subject itself implies that Americans are seriously thinking out their world role and responsibilities today. Any neutral nation is placed in a difficult position when a general war breaks out in this inter-related world. A review of 1914-17 history reveals that truth. The citizens of such a neutral power have a great task in deciding clearly what their course of action is to be. The forthcoming series of debates on such a vital topic shows a real desire on the part of American students to clarify their position, and for that reason alone the endeavour is well justified.

The responsibility resting upon the Canadian team is large, but Toronto students may rest assured that a wise choice has been made. Each member of the team is the president of the student body in his particular college, and each has had a great deal of debating experience within university circles. To Ted Gray and Ed Crawford the students of the University of Toronto extend their best wishes for a successful trip. They will be performing a real service not only to the university but to the whole of Canada and the Empire.

The Common Front

During war time the work done of one type or another by amateur volunteer groups is of inestimable value. Such groups are not confined to belligerent countries alone, and we have only to look to the south to see how much can be done and is being done by various independent groups to help the war cause. Americans have formed hundreds of working committees, to protect this or that and to provide material aid to the British cause. Just as in Canada, people are sewing, campaigning, collecting clothes and money, and doing any number of things to raise funds for Britain.

The latest committee which has come to our attention is one whose publicity drifted into the office a few days ago. It is named "The American Committee for Defense of British Homes" and from the front of its pamphlet it cries: "Protect America! Help Britain stop Hitler now!" How is this particular committee planning to help? It intends "to seek contributions of rifles, shotguns, revolvers, ammunition and binoculars for the use of British civilians" in defense of their lives and homes in the event of an invasion. At present the committee consists of over fifty members and includes several well-known national figures.

The committee claims that from reliable sources it has learned that the civilian population is in "desperate need of arms for the protection of its homes." Whether this is entirely true or not, we do not know. However it is significant in that it illustrates the powerful feeling in the United States on the part of the average citizen with regard to the British cause. All these citizen committees, all of them doing good work, are in reality releases for the feeling of frustration which an interested onlooker who cannot take part must have, whether it be a rugby game or a world war that he is watching. It is a natural outlet for their energies, aroused by the desire to be in there doing their active part. They want to be doing something to help in a non-belligerent way and they are doing a great deal this way. For the future this particular phenomenon is a good omen.

Thanks, Girls!

Whether or not the opinion expressed by The Varsity had anything to do with it we don't know, but it is gratifying to see that the suggestion that corsages be eliminated is being acted upon in certain quarters. A considerable volume of correspondence has been received supporting the suggestion. It has not been printed largely because the arguments were similar and repeated what has gone before. It revealed, however, that feeling was strong on the subject, and the several residences which have already decided to eliminate them may feel assured that willingness to co-operate meets with hearty approval and gratitude.

Sergei Rachmaninoff

To the enthusiastic audience which almost filled Eaton Auditorium last night, Sergei Rachmaninoff presented an unforgettable program. Rachmaninoff is blessed with perhaps the finest piano technique of our age, and his interpretations are those of an artist of the highest rank. The choice which he had made in his program was interesting and skilfully contrasted. There were times when his interpretative idea was a strong contrast to what most of us have been brought up on — for instance the tremendous rubatos in the opening section of Beethoven's Sonata Appassionata — but Rachmaninoff is a scholar, not a show-off, and his originality was at all times remarkably stimulating.

I do not believe that I have ever heard the Schubert Impromptu in A flat minor or the Liszt arrangement of Schubert's The Trout, given a more brilliant performance. When I listen to Rachmaninoff playing, it is the terrifying ease with which he negotiates the pitfalls which lurk to trap the unwary pianist that leaves me spellbound. That and the dazzling clarity of every note, even in the innermost part, combines to make me doubt my auditory senses. Even in the loudest passages there was not an obscured note; every run rippled out as perfection. Rachmaninoff's pedalling is of the right kind—it is so subtle that

The Last Of The Samovars

Kratkoye, Desperate Cheka Agent, Mutters "Etaoin Shrdlu" and Gets Cheka Slapped by Moudpak

Russian and Ludmilla are amorously entwined in one of Paris' hotter cabarets. On the table before them stand two Molotov cocktails (fuses set) and buckets of a certain well known French province. The reader, who does not yet know Ludmilla, would undoubtedly do his best to wangle an introduction. She is one of those exotic Russian gentlewomen who managed to escape disguised as a peasant woman with the major part of the Czar's jewels pursued by hordes of Cossacks, Kulaks, Trepaks, Hopaks, Kolpaks, Moudpaks, and three ubiquitous travelling salesmen from Dubuque.

The amorosities have of course been continuing unabated through the introduction. (Rude people!)

Kratkoye slouches in, disgustingly malting. He settles into a seat behind a palm tree, glances furtively around him — spots the lovers and mutters "ETAOIN SHRDLU" in Russian, beneath his breath. He orders a decanter of Stubby (adv.) and settles down to some heavy drinking. He never takes his green eyes off the pair. After some time he weaves over and asks, "Paardoon mee but I see you arre Rrrussians." They are too preoccupied to pay any attention. He tries again, "I have no more Stubby, and I have just thought of the loveliest thing to be said about. May I join you?" There is still no answer, but he sits down anyway.

Russian is slowly capitulating to the wiles of his beautiful companion. His head is reeling. His iron restraint is about to crack. Ludmilla speaks!

"Darling, I don't know your name, but howdja like to make a little easy sugar?"

"I thought I was doing all right with you."

"No no, you are, but what I meant was how about copping some classy ice?"

"Oh!"

"The jools of the Samovars, darling, I know where they are HIDDEN."

Kratkoye opens one eye and the opposite ear, intently watchful. (The reader will have by this time gathered that Kratkoye is a Cheka agent, and will no doubt have supplied the slouch hat, and full length beard.)

Russian becomes aware of Kratkoye's ear too close to the confidences and snatches at his beard. IT DOES NOT COME OFF! "Then you are a Cheka agent," he cries, as Kratkoye pulls his gun. Russian draws his iron and they shoot it out. Both fall mortally wounded.

But what happened to Ludmilla? Ask the THREE UBIQUITOUS TRAVELLING SALESMEN FROM DUBUQUE.

The ghosts of Kanga and Roo.

it passes unnoticed unless really watched for.

Four Chopin Etudes were followed by three by Liszt. Although Chopin was probably as interesting to the pianist, the extremely difficult, almost tour de force, Etude in D minor (Liszt) carried me with it more completely. Rachmaninoff's own Etude-Tableau is an excellent modern composition, but it is not as good as some of his other more excellent attempts.

Probably any ordinary Bach in its original form would have seemed too easy to such an artist as Rachmaninoff, and certainly the Organ Prelude and Fugue in A minor, another Liszt arrangement, received as fine a performance as it ever will have, but even with a master playing I would have preferred an organ. Rachmaninoff's skill in bringing out the counter subjects in the Fugue was consummate, but by his very skill he slightly obscured the main subject. That is a very petty, perhaps unnecessary, quibble on one of the finest recitals Torontonians will ever be privileged to hear.

Trinity Meets Meds and Vic
Tangles with Knox in Twin Bill on Back Campus Today at Four O'clock

Both semi-final brackets are featured in the soccer playoffs today when Trinity meets Meds and Vic tangles with Knox, both tussles being carded to take place on the back campus.

Trinity recently edged Emmanuel to take second slot in their group. The Anglicans are counting heavily on the educated toe of Art Jackson, their starry right-winger. The Delaney brothers, Bob and Lloyd are also expected to add punch to the Red and Black.

Meds are undefeated to date and are determined to knock off Trinity to keep their record unblemished.

Knox were easily the class of Group I as they rode roughshod over Wyckiffe, Trinity and Emmanuel. They entered the finals last year against Vic, and now the two squads clash in the play-offs again.

Vic are a highly-touted crew of booters, having a better team than their last year's championship outfit.

Speaking OF SPORT

By Owen Prichard

Back in the days when news-reels and syndicated press photos included lots of views from the totalitarian states, the usual release from any t.s. included a few shots of thousands of bronzed and husky guys and gals marching with earnest laces past reviewing stands occupied by You Know Whom.

Generally you would hear movie-goers proffering (with the peanut brittle) an aside such as, "Sturdy looking bunch, eh?" and then they would lean back and wait for Clark Gable or Betty Grable (we'll settle for Betty, in technicolor).

But there are many to whom the sight of these marching youth brought home the question, "What will North America do in answer to the mass movements by which the youth of dictator-controlled countries are led, inspired, and trained?" One of the most promising answers has come from a bill which is now before the Congress of the United States for consideration. The bill defines the Act it seeks as the "National Preparedness Act of 1940 for Health Education, Physical Education, and Recreation in Schools and Camps." The desired appropriations increase regularly annually until they reach in 1946 the sum of $100,000,000 a year.

The American Association for Health, Physical Education and Recreation, meeting at Syracuse this summer, went thoroughly into the problem of developing "physical and social fitness in our youth," and presented a comprehensive plan of action under the four heads of Health Service, Physical Education, and Organization.

In the organization section they propose the appointment of a National Director for this scheme, with a staff of research, clerical, and secretarial assistants.

This Dominion has not yet put into operation any such scheme for the training of our youth, but there is one clause in the above-mentioned association's plan which vitally concerns university students. We quote: "The social life of people reflects their morale and conditions their morale. Recreation of socially desirable kinds is needed by young and old and both sexes. This cannot be left to chance or choice but must be educated for, with adequate facilities provided, and competent leadership available." The phrase we have italicized reminds us of the opportunities provided in this connection by the U. of T. Athletic Association, and especially by the now well-established women's Physical Ed course, and the new course in Physical Education and Health directed by Warren Stevens.

When Canada embarks, as she doubtless will, on a vast program of physical education, we are confident of this, that Varsity, through its courses and athletics proper, will supply both leaders and impetus for the great undertaking.

THIS THING CALLED SPIRIT

Yesterday the Scarlet and Gold of Victoria laded out of the football scene for the season, as they bowed out to Trinity in their encounter at Varsity Stadium. There are two pictures which will remain in our mind as a result of this game, neither of which are connected with the play itself. The first is that of a fighting group of Vic gridders, enthused by the half-time pep-talk of Coach Bernie Taylor, giving a "Rah-rah-Victoria!" as they tore out of the dressing room to renew the feud with Trinity. The second scene is a poignant one which was enacted after the close of the game. That same Vic team was clustered around the dressing room entrance anxiously watching the injured "Hal" Fleming being carried into an ambulance. The game was lost, their hopes of the title and the Mulock Cup were dead, but in that little group of players there was no mention of the hard-fought contest which had just finished. There was only a determination to give "Hal" a big hand as he came out. This did a fine team end its season, with no word of regret, only praise for a great team-mate deserving of a big hand.

VOLLEYBALL PLUS

Literally reams of volleyball score-sheets make their way in and out of the Athletic Office daily, as the league this semester is the largest in intramural history. There are no less than 32 teams, participating in a total of 96 games.

What we are getting at is this. Next week the schedule calls for 21 (count 'em, twenty-one) games, the largest number ever attempted in the same span of time. This may be tough on some teams, but everyone is asked to co-operate, as the heavy portion of the sked must be completed by Xmas. Managers and referees especially, note.

SCHOOL BOXLA TEAMS SPLIT TWIN BILL

Bill Fennell Scores Seven of His Team's Eight Goals as Emmanuel Downs S.P.S. III
in Big Gym

SPORT SPLASHES

By Doug Green

Bill Fennell led Emmanuel to an 8-4 victory over S.P.S. III in a big gym boxla game played at Hart House yesterday afternoon. Fennell was head and shoulders over anyone else on the floor as he threw in seven goals for the theologs.

Emmanuel took an early lead just after the whistle and held it all the way without ever being seriously threatened by the Schoolmen. The Toike-Oikers fought hard but lacked the punch of their opponents around the nets.

Kelly got two goals for the Engineers with Forestell and Lambe contributing the other tallies. Jackson played his usual fine game for the theologs and got their other goal.

Emmanuel: Patterson, Fennell, Jackson, Frid, Ray, McKennitt.

S.P.S. III: Moeser, Forbes, Baggs, Kelly, Forestell, Brennan, Lennen, Lambe, Morice, Lewis.

VOLLEY WIN OVER SCHOOL GIVES VIC GROUP LEAD

Sr. S.P.S. volleyballers went down before Sr. Vic yesterday in the upper gym of Hart House 15-3, 10-15, 15-0. The spiking of Hoffman, Ferguson and Rice was too much for the Engineers. The Schoolmen rallied in the second game after being snowed under in the first, but went to pieces in the third and final game. White and Reynolds were tops for School. The win puts Vic in the top berth of Group I.

Sr. S.P.S.: White, Keller, Reynolds, Jaffe, Fraser, Paucer.

Sr. Vic: Hoffman, Rutledge, Ferguson, Fallis, Rice, MacKay, Goring.

In the first meet last night at the pool, Knox swamped Wyckiffe 28-5, amidst a whirlwind of flailing arms and fluttering feet. Wyckiffe got two thirds and Hunt finished second for them in the 50 breast stroke, which event completed the scoring achievements of the Anglicans. Everything else went Knox's way, and in the final relay they finished more than two lengths in front. For Knox Crawford won lane when he took the 50 back and 50 free style. Hunt was best for the Anglicans and was close behind the leading men in the races in which he participated.

The second meet between Trinity and St. Mike's was much closer with the former finishing on top 19-14, through a win in the final relay. Trinity started strongly by winning the medley, but St. Mike's took a big lead when Crane and Bennet collected eight points through a first and second place. Lundberg won the breast stroke for Trinity with Remmer of St. Mike's finishing second. With only the free style and final relay left the score was 11-10 in favour of St. Mike's. Teller won the 50 free for Trinity in the fairly last time of 27.9 with Flaherty of St. Mike's finishing second to keep his college in the running. In the final relay, with the meet at stake, the Trinity foursome proved better conditioned, and when Flaherty, the final anchor man of the St. Mike's squad took off, the position was hopeless and Trinity could never have been caught unless their anchor man Bob Teller had died in the pool.

Scantland Stars as Senior School Quintet Ekes Out
Narrow 7-6 Victory Over Teachers

Sr. S.P.S. eked out a narrow 7-6 win over O.C.E. in a grueling, close-checking lacrosse game in Hart House big gym yesterday afternoon. A last minute drive by the teachers just failed to click as the whistle went in the midst of a scoring spurge.

Scantland, playing in goal for the first time in his life, was the star of the game. He made some stops that were almost sensational and was helped along by some bad shooting by the Engineers. The teachers made use of the few shots they had and fought the Schoolmen every inch of the way.

Radmore and Quist led the Engineers, scoring three and two goals respectively with Reeves and Moorehead each getting a single tally. Jack Aymer was the mainspring of the pedagogues, netting three goals. Siberry got two more and Wendoff got the other one. Sr. S.P.S.: Newman, Bryce, Reeves, Radmore, Moorehead, Gillurt, Starr, Quist.

O.C.E.: Siberry, Wynne, Aymer, Wendoff, Eccles, Scantland.

JR. U.C. SUBDUES GAELS IN VOLLEYBALL FIXTURE

Jr. U.C. had little difficulty in setting back St. Mike's A 15-5, 15-8 in a volleyball fixture in the upper gym yesterday afternoon. The Irish tried hard but were no match for the deadly spikes of Dewar and Stohale. Roberts was the pick of the Double Blue.

For years he had longed to be an ORTHODONTIST. As a boy he had wanted to be a social worker. As a youth he had wanted to be a minister, so he could marry hundreds of girls, without having to live with them and support them. Then he heard a rumor. "An age of specialization, that's what it is," said Pearnobell-o La Guardia, in an improper address from the television aerial atop the Empire State Bldg. There is a separate occupation in America for every one of the two million electric light bulbs on Broadway. Count them.

Now you understand why A. A. Ailch wanted to be an orthodontist. "Why try and straighten people out 'In Totem? I shall specialize," he said. "Just like ye ancient and venerable tailoring firm of Sovereign Custom Tailors specialize in drape suits for young men, made from 'Britain delivers the goods' tweeds and serges, so shall I, I. I. THE TIME HAS NOW COME... Now that this column has been opened to the off-key obbligato of the music critics, the peculiar erudition of the sports-writer, the uneducated balderdash of other Varsity staff-members, the time-to-repeat-has come... When O'Mara finds out that there are four women on the editorial staff—ye gods, Mike, not that! Why, when we edited this column, a guest columnist had to be a cross between Ring Lardner and the Encyclopedia Britannica... Now he is nearer Damon Runyon and Noah Webster's Nightmare... (Don't mind me: I'm studying to be Oscar Levant...)

THEY ARE STILL TALKING OF the kid named Kemp who was bequeathed five thousand dollars a year for every year he attended college... He was a freshman or something at Columbia at the time, and needless to say, never left the place... He took every course three times, and flunked every subject in the curriculum... It is even rumored that he got a degree on credit, although that is not proven... After several decades of this $5,000-a-year academic bliss, during which time he had not left Columbia, Kemp died... BORED BUT HAPPY...

Everybody turned out for final practice, including the coach... And everything revolved on a boy whom we shall call Joe X (since his name cannot be pronounced, but X is the predominant letter)... This husky moron from the Georgia coal mines can run a ball through the U.S. Army manoeuvres and score a touchdown...

He would be All-America if he could talk coherently... What a boy... The coach tells somebody, "Go tell Joe I want to talk to him"... The lad returns with sad news... "Joe is gone"... Whaddayaincan, gone?... He's gone back to Georgia to mine coal... and I don't mean Georgia Brown... He just upped and left and Joe ain't here no more, no more, and LIU's first football team worth talking about ain't here no more, no more, nuther, and there is creeping and flailing and smashing of teeth... The coach, with tears in his eyes, says, "And did he leave no last message for me?"... "Yeah, he said to hell with this college stuff"... FADEOUT...

"We wish to pay him our sincere thanks for his splendid past service," the president said, "and we wish him godspeed as he retires from university life."

Cheers from the assembled Schoolmen greeted the presentation to Dean Mitchell by Bruce Davis, president of the Engineering Society, following which the entire hall burst out into "For He's a Jolly Good Fellow!"

historians have sought to carry out investigations, the professor added. He was convinced that people differed not in language, but in their ways of thought, and that historians must help to generate the spirit of self-examination if they are to overcome the forces which are working against democracy.

Well, the unthinkable happened! For the first time in three years—that's no echo, we did say three—the U.C. Senior team has won a game. If you don't think that's sumpin', you should have heard what U.C. thought about it last night at the gym when Physical Ed, no many team, mind you, was forced to defeat by the score of 26-21. Of that team that started out so hopelessly just three years ago, three members have been plugging along, through defeat upon defeat, just gnashing their teeth for this day. They are Ed. Caster, Eric Armstrong and Agnes Cameron. They figured the longer they had to wait, the more wonderful it was going to be, and it is wonderful alright—in other words, some wait! As a matter of fact, U.C. could do no wrong, and Physical Ed just didn't seem to be able to do anything with that ball when they did get it. For U.C., Marg. James, Mary Emmett and Betty Kettles played well on the attack while Joyce Laing held up her post on the defence. The other three were beyond mention—superb! Alice Wysozlad sank 12 for the Physical Edettes. Congratulations to you faithful ones and may you live to see another one chalked up for you in the win column.

Here we go again! Tonight finds Vic Freshies meeting St. Hilda's Seniors at 6—this is correct, and at 7, Meds battling it out with Physios. Believe it or not.

affected by the war, and especially by the daily bombings of the capital. Some of the colleges in London have been closed; others enjoy the hospitality of provincial universities.

Large numbers of students are in the army. Those who belong to auxiliary organizations find time to come to college to prepare for their degrees. "It is pathetic," Dr. Greenwood declared, "to see young fellows joking in the common rooms between lectures, and knowing full well that they will undertake that same evening some dangerous and responsible work in connection with the war."

Some of the staff are doing specialized work for the government, and routine classes are continued with skeleton staffs. The women, staff and students, are carrying on their duties and assignments with inspirational co-operation.

However, Dr. Greenwood was emphatic in stating, "All sacrifices and discomforts are not in vain. They are

TRINITY ENTERS PLAY-OFFS
WITH 4-1 WIN OVER VIC

Victoria out of the doldrums for Bill McCormick raced 30 yards around right end to bring the ball out to centre. Here the advance was halted as Johnny Hogg broke through to smash two embryonic extensions and Boxer was forced to punt.

Heinbuch lined a pass to Johnny Whallon, who tackled on ten yards more. But it proved of no avail. Henderson staggered the Victorians again when he intercepted a long pass and dashed to centre. McCormick ploughed through a listless front-wall for another 12 yards.

Whallon, who appeared to be one of the few Vic men not suffering mental lapses, reached high to snatch Boxer's pass as the half closed.

Boxer and Heinbuch seemed content to wage a kicking duel throughout the third canto with the result that play slowed down considerably. Time and again Vic smashes at centre disintegrated on the bulky form of "Beefy" McMillan.

With the game moving into its final stages Donnie Boxer, standing on the Vic fifty, landed a high punt in the end zone where McMillan crashed Lewis to the turf for a single.

The conflict ended with Vic frantically tossing passes in all but the right direction much to the chagrin of their ardent supporters who formed part of the largest interfaculty rugby crowd of the season.

CINDERELLA SQUAD IN GRID SEMI-FINAL

Trinity to Meet Senior School This Afternoon in Tussle for Chance at Historic Mulock Cup

GAME AT 2:30 P.M.

Trinity, this year's Cinderella team, trots out on the green sward of the Bloor Bowl this afternoon at 2:30 to engage St. School, the squad most of the Monday morning quarterbacks have made favourites to cop the coveted Mulock Cup at present resting within the precincts of St. Michael's College.

The task facing the Anglicans is however, a much more arduous one than that which they experienced in gaining the semi-finals by conquering Victoria on Thursday by a 4-1 margin.

The Blue and Gold from the front campus will present a line-up studied with stars. Their front-wall is the acme of solidarity; the backfield contains more power and potency than any other seen in the intercollegiate loop this year. In Jack "Special Delivery" Plaxton they possess Varsity's best passer, while Stu Munroe, plunging half de luxe, has experienced little difficulty thus far in piercing the enemy's wing-line. Ron Fugler, Doug Marshall, Jim Hurst, and Van Smith round out a dynamic half-line. All in all, Annis Stukus's proteges

OR. BEST IN TORONTO WAITING TO ASSUME OUBLIN LECTURESHIP

Dr. Charles H. Best, last year awarded the Purser Lectureship in the Faculty of Medicine in Trinity College, Dublin, has been notified that his appointment continues valid until he is able to give the lectures. President H. J. Cody announced yesterday. Wartime conditions have made it impossible for him to keep the Dublin appointment at present.

It was also announced that Dr. Best will give the Harvey lecture on Hepatitis and Thrombosis before the Harvey Society in New York Nov. 21.

LITERARY ISSUE

Tradition dictates that the last issue of The Varsity before Christmas should appear in vivid green ink and that that issue should be the annual Literary Issue.

Friday, December 13, is set aside for the Green Issue, and in that paper will appear contributions from the embryonic poets, artists and authors of the campus. Prizes will be given for the best efforts in each field: poetry, light and serious; prose, fiction and essay; and art.

The deadline has been set for December 7.

The judges have as yet not been named, but if present plans are carried out they will include two members of the staff and one outside author.

Theatre Night Is Annual Treat Of U.C. Players

Will Present Three Modern Plays on Friday, November 29 at the Women's Union Theatre

SHAW REPRESENTED

Would you back a co-ed in a battle with a husky gangster? Can you imagine some of the more or less demure feminine students of University College transformed into tough factory girls, "somewhat resembling the Dead End kids"? These events, and others even more startling, will take place on the stage of the Women's Union this week, the executive of the University College Players' Guild announces. The date of the performance is Friday, November 29, and the occasion the annual Theatre Night of the Guild.

"For example," they went on, "have you ever seen anyone literally turn to stone and be erected as a statue in memory of himself? You will at the Theatre Night, for one of the plays to be performed is George Bernard Shaw's 'The Fatal Gas', or 'Passion, Poison, and Petrification'. The author describes it as 'a brief tragedy'; it includes four deaths in less than half an hour, amid screams and loud crashes of thunder. Much credit in this production must be given to the backstage workers, who are called on to create, among other things, a flash of lightning and an edible ceiling."

"Plant in the Sun" by Ben Bengal, is a comedy dealing with a strike in a candy factory, and it is in this play that the co-ed versus gangster encounter takes place. Between the two comedies will be a serious play, "Bury the Dead" (Continued on Page 4)

VISITING LECTURER IS NOTED WRITER

A noted writer from the British Isles visits the University of Toronto this week-end when he comes as guest of the Department of History to lecture to the students, staff and the general public. Professor R. B. Mowat of the University of Bristol will speak on the topics "The French Tradition" and "England in the Eighteenth Century."

In the last thirty years Professor Mowat has tutored at Oxford and Eton, worked with the Naval Intelligence Department and with the Secretariat of the War Cabinet, as well as lecturing as a university professor he has occupied chairs in the Universities of Wisconsin and of Bristol.

As a writer, Professor Mowat has produced over thirty volumes of history and biography.

Pipers and Drummers to Play When Full Battalion Marches

Claiming the skirl of the pipes is the best possible music for marching, a group of pipers from all corners of the campus and from both training units, met Friday in the orderly room to organize and become acquainted with their leader-to-be, genial Sgt. Jack Reid, recently appointed Pipe Major for the Training Centre Battalion.

Sgt. Reid, who hails originally from Scotland, is a piper of long experience, and has been connected with the Toronto Police Force pipe band for some twenty years.

Explaining that the members of the band would be fulfilling the requirements for training by their attendance at practice. Sgt. Reid stated that at present there are more applicants than available instruments, but that an effort will be made to accommodate them all. The original size of the band, for which the university is supplying all equipment, was to have been eight pipes and four drums. The band will wear battle dress.

Three only of the recruits are experienced players, but the remainder are to receive instruction in the playing of their chosen instruments. The band will be connected with the auxiliary or training centre battalion.

Is The Varsity Worth While? Co-Eds' Debate Will Decide

The Varsity will go on trial during Wednesday afternoon. Teams from St. Michael's and University Colleges will discuss the topic, "Resolved that The Varsity Fulfills its Purpose" when they clash at the Women's Union. St. Michael's will uphold the affirmative, while the U.C. co-eds will launch the attack on the Undergraduate Newspaper.

Sponsored by the Women's Intercollegiate Debating Union, which also has charge of the intercollegiate team competing against McGill, Queen's and McMaster Universities, intercollegiate debates have been organized primarily for the purpose of fostering public speaking on the campus, according to Miss Marion Ferguson, Dean of Women at University College.

Unusual solemnity reigned at the press last night as frantic masthead members sought convincing reasons for their existence. News columns, editorials and features all came under their scrutiny as they analysed the factors that make students refer to The Varsity's columns.

Is the Champus Cat funny? Is the news interesting? Are the music reviews honest? Should the paper be more serious or more amusing? For answers to all these questions and many others, sit in on the women's intercollegiate debate Wednesday afternoon.

The discussion from the floor which follows the debate should be particularly lively as earnest reporters and disgruntled readers parry each other's thrusts. However, whatever the result of the debate may be, a full account will be given in Thursday's Varsity.

Dr. Dhumi Speaks In Y.M.C.A. Series

Former Extension Lecturer at University of Toronto Relates why Ancient Despotism Governments Perished.

FIRST OF LECTURES

Dr. Sadhu Singh Dhumi, well known Sikh scholar, introduced a series of lectures on "Democracy, the Political Ideal of Christianity" at Central Y.M.C.A. last week. Dr. Dhumi, for several years an extension lecturer of the University of Toronto, is a native of Punjab, India. He has travelled widely in the Orient and on the American continent. He has studied at several universities in India, Canada and the United States, and was awarded his Ph.D. degree by the University of Toronto. He is well known as a lecturer on contemporary affairs.

The subject of the opening lecture of this series was "The Pre-Democratic World—A Graveyard of Despotism". In the course of this talk Dr. Dhumi outlined the reasons why despotic governments of old perished.

The second lecture in the series will be held Nov. 28 on "The Birth of Democracy". Subsequent lectures will be Dec. 5, "The Great Achievements of Democracy"; Dec. 12, "Democracy in the World"; Jan. 9, "John Dewey" (Continued on Page 4)

Dental Corps of Militia Organized, Led by Lott

Dr. F. M. Lott, D.D.S., B.Sc., M.Sc., Ph.D., professor of prosthodontia of the Faculty of Dentistry of this university, was responsible for the organization of the Canadian Dental Corps, which administers to Army, Navy and Air Force. Dr. Lott was called upon to do this work by the Minister of Defence at the outbreak of the war a year ago last September. He was given the rank of lieutenant-colonel and since then has been raised to the rank of colonel.

Dr. Lott was granted leave of absence by the university for the duration of the war. While here he made several contributions to dentistry, especially with his work on glass as a denture base. He is the author of many bulletins and articles on dentistry published in Canadian and American dental journals.

A few years ago Col. Lott was appointed chairman of a committee to study the needs and organization of a permanent Dental Corps. Their findings were unanimously adopted by the association. Dr. Lott wrote his thesis for his Ph.D. degree on "A Proposed Dental Service for the Defence Forces of Canada" and he has spent a great deal of time and thought in evolving the necessary principles for organizing a Dental Corps, stated Miss F. Ward, acting secretary of the Faculty of Dentistry.

Col. Lott has had a varied career; in his youth he was a bank clerk, a soldier and a dentist. During the last war he served about three years as lieutenant in the signal company of the first division. In 1923 he graduated from the Dental School at Toronto with his D.D.S. degree. He then specialized in prosthetics and was appointed associate professor in dentistry in 1929.

Mr. Colin Rous, also of the Faculty of Dentistry, of which he was the secretary, was made quartermaster in charge of the business of the corps. Mr. Rous now holds the rank of major.

There is a dental office for the corps in charge of the dental needs of each military district. There are dental officers at each training centre such as Newmarket and Long Branch and also with the active forces both in training and overseas.

Although there are established clinics in numerous cities of Canada and in England, dental needs overseas are administered where necessary by highly mobile units. All an officer of a Dental Corps has to do "to set up shop" is to open a couple of kits measuring only 31" by 18" by 18 1/2". In these he has a table, dental engine, chair, lamp, sterilizer, casting machine, and stool.

Society Hears Educational Talk By Dr. Greenwood

Survey of Classic Schools of Educational Philosophers Given by Visitor from University of London

DEMOCRACY IN CANADA

Dr. Thomas Greenwood, of Frederick College, University of London, England, spoke to the Philosophical Society in Croft Chapter House Friday night on "The Philosophy of Education." In introducing the speaker, the president of the club announced that Dr. Greenwood was about to publish a book on "Greek Mathematics." He was in California when the war began and since then has been lecturing in United States and Canada.

The speaker traced educational principles from the basic elements to the consequences. It is difficult to find the exact relationship between matter and mind. Materialism holds that the mind is subservient to matter while Pragmatism thinks that one changes the other, he claimed.

Everyone is a potential philosopher. It is inherent in most of us. Any question that we ask ourselves leads to other questions and the ultimate answer is in terms of matter and mind, Dr. Greenwood continued.

Most schools are idealistically minded. This philosophy allows for a good moral life. The Brahmins who climb high mountains to commune with the abstract are examples of the extreme of this.

The teaching of history should stress the personal elements and bring out judgment on the characters. In geography (Continued on Page 4)

STUDENTS CONTACT OUTSIDE GROUPS

A bowling alley was visited by a group of seven members of University College S.C.M. on Saturday night. The students bowled and attempted to make contacts with the other people there, according to John Gray, president of the society.

This was a part of University College S.C.M.'s new "Work and Play" project the aim of which is to have students look into the life of the big industrial world around them. This coming Saturday morning there will be further observation in connection with this program when students visit two factories, the Carhart Clothing factory and Canada Packers. One group will go to each of these, and then the two will meet for discussion. The tour is open to all U.C. students.

Vic Class of 4T3 Celebrates At Burwash Hall Football Party

Friday evening in Burwash Hall, the second year class of Victoria College held a "Football Party" to mark the close of the rugby season for the year. The hall was decorated with the pennants of colleges throughout the continent, and little football favours were distributed at the door to be worn by the dancers.

Special dances were held along the rugby theme, and music was provided by the orchestra of Gordon Hardy, a member of the year. George Umehara sang two solos.

A feature of the evening was a skit staged after supper by eight of the

Two Students to Speak on Federation of English-Speaking Nations at Invitation of American Universities

CHOSEN BY S.A.C.

Two unofficial good-will ambassadors in the persons of Ted Gray and Ed Crawford left this campus yesterday for a tour of American universities where they will engage debaters of the institutions visited.

The argument to be supported by the Toronto men is "Resolved that the United States should join a federation of the English-speaking nations."

The debaters were chosen by the S.A.C. at a recent meeting in response to a number of invitations from various universities in the United States.

Neither speaker has been on debating tours before, but both of them have had considerable local experience as debaters and as public speakers. Ted Gray is president of the Victoria College Union, and Ed Crawford is president of the Students' Administrative Council of St. Michael's College.

Points to be visited by Varsity's team include Northwestern University, the University of Kansas, the University of Missouri, and Washington University. Originally the team was to return December 1, but since first arrangements were made the time has been extended to include other universities in the east.

Arrangements for the trip were completed by E. A. Macdonald, secretary-treasurer of the S.A.C., who says that the representatives left understanding the great importance of their undertaking and fully conscious of their responsibilities.

That Report Again!

In an editorial last week the general background and broad purposes of the Royal Commission Report on Dominion-Provincial Relations were outlined. The Report, it was stated, proposes a general re-examination and reconstruction of the financial basis of Confederation to bring it into line with present day conditions. The specific methods by which such a reconstruction is to be achieved are many and intricate.

Reorganization of Finances

Going on the assumption that the present division of public finance power between provinces and Dominion is illogical, the Commission suggests a sweeping reorganization. The main points in such a reorganization are that the Dominion assume complete responsibility for unemployment relief, except aid to unemployables which still remains a provincial jurisdiction; that the Dominion take over all provincial debts; that in return the provinces withdraw from succession duty, income tax and corporation tax fields and give up existing subsidies; that the Dominion be given authority to establish a national unemployment insurance scheme, all other social services remaining with the provinces; and that the provinces be given annual adjustment grants in place of present subsidies in order to maintain a national standard of services and to meet abnormal needs created by local or regional emergencies.

Many Complementary Proposals

Those points comprise the crux of the scheme, and will affect Canadians most. There are, however, many other proposals all designed to improve Canada's economic and financial structure. The Commission urges a measure of uniformity of legislation throughout Canada regarding minimum wages, maximum hours of work and age of employment. The creation of a permanent dominion-provincial conference with a permanent secretariat has been proposed. The Dominion and the provinces should, says the Report, share jurisdiction, enact concurrent legislation and co-operate on marketing and grading of agricultural products and certain manufactured articles. They should also co-operate on insurance, fisheries and labor. There is suggested the removal of interprovincial barriers to permit freedom of trade, commerce and investment through Canada, and freedom from discriminatory taxation. An important proposal is that for control and co-ordination of transportation policies to prevent overlapping and ruinous competition.

Specific Fiscal Readjustments

Under the scheme the provinces would be relieved of relief expenditures which in 1937 cost approximately sixty millions to maintain. The Dominion would assume a total provincial debt of over two billions with annual interest charges of sixty million. On the other side of the ledger, the provinces would relinquish under the new scheme taxing powers which netted them about eighty millions annually in the past few years and subsidies which in 1937 totalled twenty-one million. These latter would be replaced by National Adjustment Grants set at a minimum of $14,900,000, and capable of revision upwards according to fiscal needs. The rough estimate of annual cost to the Dominion government of the new scheme is $40,000,000. The price is considered worth paying because of the improved position of the Dominion if it wished to carry out a "comprehensive fiscal and monetary policy." Likewise, it is held that business will gain considerably, largely through a single national taxation system to replace the present system by which certain corporations can be taxed by three jurisdictions at the same time. The aim will be to eliminate the abuses of the present tax system which seems to increase the costs of doing business, taxing costs rather than surpluses, and which tends to force marginal industries out of business. Savings will also be effected by refunding debts by the Dominion.

Annual Grants to Provinces

The National Adjustments Grant system is a point which bears investigation and which has been made the target of some criticism already. In place of the old subsidies, each province is to receive a fixed annual grant to enable it to perform the functions assigned to it and to maintain a national standard of services without resorting to oppressive taxation or heavy borrowing. The Report provides for a permanent Finance Commission to review the grants every five years. No grant has been recommended for Ontario, British Columbia and Alberta. The main objection to the new system is that it is neither a change from nor an improvement upon the old system, and that it is open to just as much abuse. It might well grow into a grand opportunity for sections and provinces to apply pressure on the federal government for increased funds, just as the proposed system of planned public works on a national scale will lead to sectional pressure, log-rolling and squabbling unless some safeguard is introduced. Over against the criticism stands the fact that dominion-provincial fiscal relations have been unsatisfactory, and that a new relationship is needed. Whether the new proposals will make a satisfactory relationship is the question to be decided.

An Aid to War Finance

Thus stands the general scheme for re-Confederation. The question of its implementation is to be decided in the future, but it should not be too long delayed. The objection raised by many that such a plan should not be put into operation in war-time is dissolved, the moment it is broached. For surely if Canada's financial structure is unsound in time of peace, then the stress of heavy war finance must indeed render it more insecure. If we have a plan to reorganize and strengthen the structure (and that must be decided), then the time to inaugurate it is in the time of stress so that the burdens may be lightened, rather than waiting until the nation is economically and financially exhausted in a long war.

Sunday Evening Concert

George Lambert, baritone, presented a program of English song last night in the Great Hall of Hart House. Mr. Lambert has a pleasing voice, if not a great one, and immediately showed it to advantage. Many visiting artists could look to his admirable diction as an example. Every word throughout the evening was clearly enunciated and distinctly heard.

The group of Handel arias were sung with the requisite florid style. Particularly fine was the recitative and aria from Judas Maccabaeus. In the second group a parody on the Handel by Saunders entitled There was a Snail, was a delightful bit of comedy.

A great deal of thanks is due to the contemporary composer Roger Quilter for the beautiful accompaniment arranged for the all-too-familiar Drink to Me Only with Thine Eyes. Exquisite in melodic outline was the Eriskany Love Lilt arranged by Kennedy Fraser. Butterworth's settings of two of Laurence Housman's poems from The Shropshire Lad were highlights of the program. Is My Team Ploughing is among the finest of modern English songs and

UNIVERSITY LIBRARY

The University Library is a dirty stone building situated midway between S.P.S. and the Hart House pool room. It is considered to be one of the most important buildings on the campus and every year is visited by dozens of students.

Within the library, it was learned by The Varsity, there are two reading rooms, intended for the use of males and females respectively. It is understood that this Victorian differentiation was long ago broken down and now free intermingling is encouraged as part of a liberal education.

Novels, detective stories and comic books may be taken into the reading rooms by male students after a form giving name, address and telephone number is filled out; in the case of female habits, the librarians are not insistent on addresses or telephone numbers. Books may be taken out overnight by waiting 15 to 20 minutes in line (unless you know a librarian).

The books are given out by an efficient staff of diminutive librarians; at all—well nearly all—times there is at least one of these on duty at the main desk. With one exception, all are carefully selected for their beauty, brains and brawn; the exception is remarkable for the last named quality.

There are two main sources of revenue for running this great institution. The first is, of course, the box on the information desk labelled "Deposit a cent and fill your pen". Scarcely less important is the money to be derived from fines imposed on humble freshmen who are awed into paying 25 cents every time they return a night book at 10.02.

Other features of the library are the co-educational seminars, the co-educational stacks, the statue of Mr. Young, the man who posts letters, the squeaky elevator and the co-educational stacks. Quiet, secluded and co-educational, the stacks are designed by the Board of Governors to be an ideal haunt for the discussion of social problems. Indeed the library emphasizes the importance of convivial meetings between eds and co-eds or between co-eds and profs by means of signs at frequent intervals: "Continuous Studying Prohibited."

Weldon Kilburn, the accompanist, should come in for special mention. His accompanying was not just a matter of providing something as a background for the soloist: it was played with sensitive feeling and understanding, and added considerably to a most enjoyable evening.

Three Canadian Plays

A series of three one-act plays was presented by the Canadian Authors' Association in Hart House Theatre Saturday night. They were well selected for contrast of subject and pace, and, as an evening's entertainment, their performance was successful.

Most provocative of the three presentations, Nathaniel Benson's The Better Mouse-Trap, is not strictly a play. Mr. Benson has employed radio technique on the stage, and possibly this combination of media is not an altogether happy one. But The Better Mouse-Trap is an extremely interesting experiment in theatre, and at the same time contrives to be an extremely amusing comedy.

The piece was not well directed, however. The type of comedy vacillates painfully between burlesque and satire, not so much in the lines as in the stage business. This disconcerting lack of comic unity serves no purpose, and should have been prevented by more decisive direction.

VIC LACROSSE TEAM DEFEATS JR. SCHOOL FOR THREE-WAY TIE

SCORE OF 6-4

A three-way tie for first place in Group I resulted when a determined Victoria lacrosse team trounced Junior School by a 6-4 score in the big gym on Friday.

The Engineers entered the fray as the favourites, by virtue of a beating they had administered to the Scarlet and Gold on the previous meeting of the two teams. Victoria were full of fight throughout the game, and executed some pretty scoring plays to beat the school goalie. A number of times the Vic players were able to shake loose from their checks to leave a man open for a pass in front of the S.P.S. nets.

Cornish stopped more than a few shots which were sent his way by the Engineers, taking one of them full on the throat. Casserly and Munro shared three tallies apiece for the winners. Farmer and Kimber adding two and one respectively. Kellam of School, although he was being more closely checked than he has been in previous games, managed to score all four of the Jr. S.P.S. goals.

Vic: Cornish, Casserly, Lee, Farmer, Kimber, Munro, Patrick, Landell and Johnston.

Jr. S.P.S.: Capper, Rankin, Lewarne, Crosby, Kent, Gorman, Pentic, Kellam, Wynn, Currie.

Meds In Soccer Final

Defeat Trinity Team 2-1 For Hard-Fought Victory

U.C. LACROSSE SQUAD DEFEATS MEDS 7-4 FOR FOURTH VICTORY

Artsmen Assure Themselves of Playoff Berth by Win in Game Featured by Interruptions and Injuries

LEECH STARS FOR MEDS

That indomitable lacrosse squad from U.C. chalked up another victory at the expense of Meds Friday night to make it four straight for the season and to clinch a playoff berth. The game was fraught with interruptions, bloody noses and twisted knees, but when the final whistle blew, the Artsmen were found to be on the top end of a 7-4 count.

Francis and Ballagh turned in their usual good performances for the winners, scoring 5 of the 7 goals between them. Hignell and Gibson came through with one tally each to give the red and white a substantial margin.

Leech, once more proved to be the Doctors' strong point and in this instance prevented their loss from becoming a rout. He not only got three-quarters of the Meds goals but also paved the way for the fourth one scored by Barootes.

U.C.: Francis, Ballagh, Gibson, Hignell, McCulloch, Ledingham, Bouce, McDiarmid, Shipard.

Meds: Quinlan, Barootes, Mewbort, Leech, Gold, Dieter, Mighton, Wagnan, Gulle.

VIC AND KNOX TEAMS TIE IN SOCCER GAME IN DOUBLE OVERTIME

Semi-Final Match Must Be Replayed Tuesday to Decide which Meets Faculty of Medicine in Final

0-0 SCORE

Battling through two ten minute overtime periods, Victoria's last year's soccer champions and Knox's star-studded eleven were unable to decide which team should proceed into the finals on Friday afternoon as both goalkeepers registered shut-outs. A replay will be held next Tuesday to decide who will meet Meds in the finals.

On the whole Victoria had an edge on the play because of their team-spirit and well-organized attacks. Knox relied more on individual playing rather than passing plays and in this manner held the Scarlet and Gold champions to even terms.

The closest play of the game occurred in the second half as Victoria put on concentrated gangling attacks. A powerful shot by Frank Powell was stopped by McSween in the Presbyterian nets but the ball rebounded back into play. A charging Vic forward swung a hard kick at the ball but somehow slipped and only tapped it. The ball trickled forward and stopped on the goal line and the Vic player sprawled alongside the sphere. A pile-up ensued as seven men from either team tried to send the ball in the direction they would have liked to see it go. However, both teams were fooled for when the pile-up was unscrambled, the ball was still sitting calmly on the goal line.

Ian MacLeod was the best man on the field as he led rush after rush down the field. Gerry Stone and Frank Powell were also outstanding for Vic on the attack, while Frank Hoffman, Ron McKenzie and Tom Paton were bulwarks on defense.

For Knox, intercollegiate Forbes Thompson and Jack, who last year suffered a broken collar-bone in an interfaculty match were good going both

Meds Eleven Breaks Tie in Last Half and Then Holds Lead in Semi-Final Match Friday Afternoon

MUD SLOWS DOWN PLAY

Playing on a field of mud, the Meds eleven soccerists slipped and slithered their way into the finals for possession of the Arts Faculty Cup, emblematic of interfaculty soccer supremacy with a 2-1 win over Trinity on Friday afternoon.

The game commenced with both teams leading alternate rushes goalwards until the field became churned up so that it slowed down the play. Then Meds were awarded a corner kick and on a beautiful lift by Seymour sturdy Art Boyd headed the ball into the Trinity nets. Soon after this goal the Trinity forwards combined on a lovely executed passing play to fool the Meds goal keeper. Taking a pass from a Trinity forward, Fred Stinson swung up past the Meds fullbacks and passed over to Dawson who completed the play by banging the ball into the mesh. The half ended with the score tied one-all.

For a while the closeness of the game seemed to forecast a draw until Trinity was awarded a corner kick. However, the Trinity outside placed the ball too far out from the nets and two Meds forwards dashed down the field with just three men to beat. Tapping the ball through the defense, running around the backs and then blazing a shot home, Davey provided the winning counter which sent the Doctors into the finals. Trinity tried desperately to tie the score in the closing seconds of the game but the ever-alert Meds defense foiled every such move.

Outstanding for the victorious Doctors were Art Boyd, the winning-goal-supplying Davey, and full back Murray Townsend. For Trinity Stinson and Dawson with their clever passing plays and halfback Delaney, all tried hard to prevent the Anglicans from being shoved into the discard.

Meds: Boyd, Ford, Davey, Wilford, Lambert, Robertson, Rantley, Seymour, Band, Townsend, Clark, Best, Robinson.

Trinity: Jackson, Phillips, Delaney, Stinson, Dawson, Clarkson, Wagland, Blaker, Grover, Baillie, Riley, Delaey, R. Kerr.

BROWNS AID O.C.E. TO TRIUMPH OVER MEDS

Playing a three-man team until Brown twins Harry and Wally came to the rescue at the end of the first set, O.C.E. A volleymen slapped out a 4-15, 15-5, 15-3 triumph over Meds III team Friday. With a full quintet, they polished off their opponents easily in the next two.

O.C.E. A: Belchamber, Setterington, Goulding, Harold Brown, Wally Brown.

Meds III: Culiner, Harnick, Hartman, White, Myers, Kaplan, Rotenberg.

appear perfectly balanced from stem to stern.

Speaking OF SPORT

By Owen Prichard

WE'RE PREDICTING NOTHING

Last week a cocky Victoria team underrated a fast-moving and experienced Trinity squad, and disaster was the result as the Anglicans pulled out a 4-1 win. It is not beyond the scope of the possible that the same thing could happen again as Trinity tangles with Sr. S.P.S. in the semi-finals of the Mulock Cup series.

From where we sit the situation appears to be in brief: The Engineers play a powerful, faultless, brand of football. Their plunders are the best in the interfaculty league, and Jack "Special Delivery" Plaxton has not yet begun to show what he is capable of in the passing department. Trinity is the question-mark of the whole loop. Their main strength is the wisdom they have gained by the experience of playing together over a number of seasons. The Red and Black are a smart aggregation, and let no loose balls lie around the gridiron. Their recent victories over Victoria are proofs of their ability to grasp every opportunity to gain territory.

The Anglicans' main drawback in this game is the fact that the rest they had since their last tussle has not been as long as that enjoyed by the Engineers. Although the Schoolmen went into their last game (with St. Mike's) with very few subs on the bench, the drubbing administered to the Irish was made at no expense in the matter of additions to the injury list.

Beefy MacMillan is a valuable man to have at the centre spot on Trinity's line, and is a great help in rallying the front wall. His experience in intercollegiate football last year is being used to advantage. Johnny Henderson and Don Boxer are likewise two of the Anglicans who are blessed with a greater supply of football lore than the average interfaculty player.

Senior School receives the nod from us on the strength of their performance to date. Errorless football, a plunging attack which has been so consistently good that their passing plays have been used mostly as threats—there is the team which Trinity must defeat to enter the finals.

Among its individual stars the Senior S.P.S. outfit numbers "Stu" Munro, a natural plunger who ran wild against St. Mike's. Also, don't overlook Doug Marshall. His name didn't appear in the line-ups before the clash with the Irish, but he turned out to complete the backfield roster when Finlayson and Hawkins were laid up with injuries. The former intercollegiate hockey player repeatedly tore through the St. Mike's line on that afternoon to advance the sticks for Senior School.

The game is likely to open with a duel between the School plunging and Trinity's speedy end runs. From there you may see the play develop into a battle of forwards between Plaxton and Boxer. Here we are predicting the play of the game and yet we can't call the winner. We've been fooled by Argos so many times we're about to give up, so let's go completely out on the proverbial limb and call Senior School to take today's tussle and the Mulock Cup. So there.

halt!

by h. d. h.

If you are interested in how a trench is built in these days of modern warfare, go over to the trenches at the corner of Hoskin and Devonshire Place and have a look at the job the C.O.T.C. has been doing. Sandbagged supports within and formidable barbed wire entanglements without, it is becoming a fairly complete picture of just what a trench should look like nowadays — correct depth, width, and everything.
Should you happen to be an alert military observer, however, you will note, just behind the impassable-looking barbed wire clusters, a sign bearing the words, "Prohibited Area — Keep Out."
Here we have an entirely new and advanced principle in warfare. Soldiers produced from this bustling civilization which makes its way through the most impossible elements with scientific ease and precision are not going to be stopped by a little thing like a pile of wire with hooks in it. But just put up a "no left turn," a stop sign or a red light, and you'll root whole armies of city-bred warriors.

Opinions on battle dress differ with the individual, but the new togs are a source of embarrassment to one professor who apprehensively entered a lecture-room clad in khaki not so long ago. He glanced around nervously: "I hope there aren't any officers in this class."

The C.O.T.C. companies that go out to High Park are not really the hardened, men-of-the-world type that their travels would lead one to believe. When they break off for a rest period in mid-afternoon, they are supplied with goodies, in the form of hot dogs and coffee.

Up to last Saturday, this made for a healthy, competitive spirit among the men, who jostled about so that some of them achieved a number of the goodies, and others were left to nibble grass stems. The O.C., however, took note of the unsocialistic situation and passed out a decree: "Next week, hot dogs will be given out by platoons."
So now the officers get their dogs served up to them by platoons, which is carrying this regimentation thing a little too far. . . .

Best bet for a girl who wants to be noticed these days is to stand around Soldiers' Tower from about four to six in the afternoon. Without disillu-sioning any of the more noticeable secrets by saying just why, we can assure them a fond and appreciative gaze from every man in every platoon that passes
by. . . .

The meeting was then declared open

U.B.C. SPORTS BOOM IN GAMES OF CITY LEAGUE

Vancouver, B.C., Nov. 21 (CUP)—
The Sword of Compulsory Military Training layed intercollegiate sport and the annual Hardy Cup series this fall; but somehow or other it did not get to first base in the inter-city leagues of this western metropolis.

The UBC Thunderbirds, potential basketball champs of the Dominion of Canada, are the "dark horse" of the Vancouver City Basketball League.
Considered originally as sparring partners for the superior Maple Leafs and the rest of the local league members, the Birds have upset the apple cart and the wise guys by winning all their games with a comfortable margin.

S.C.M. — VIC
Jean Hunter's group on "Current Events" will meet from 1-2 p.m. today in Wynmwood.

DO YOU REMEMBER our little item about the professor at University of Washington who refused to conduct a class when nobody had anything to say? This intelligent attitude on the part of profs is spreading most creditably to this campus. A scout reports that a French professor called a class off right on the spot recently when nobody admitted to reading the prescribed text for the hour. A parallel case in an English class followed hot on its heels. We can't very well condone laxity on the part of the students, much as we'd like to, but we heartily approve the professorial action taken.

chain of logic is beyond us.

Friday Recital

The recital given by Zara Nelsova, first solo in the Toronto Symphony Orchestra, was truly enjoyable. Her selections showed not only intelligence and diversity of interpretation throughout, but a remarkable technique as well.
Perhaps the finest of her renditions was Chopin's Nocturne in C sharp minor as arranged by Gregor Piatigorsky.
Slavic music in its melancholy aspect is particularly adapted for cello because even the finest performer on the piano cannot produce the "legato" so characteristic of string instruments. A delicious Mozart sonata in its sparkling gaiety presented a sharp contrast to the sombre nocturne. The opening work of the afternoon was the Sonata in E minor by Brahms, while Sgambatti's
Sonata Neapolitana and the intricate Scherzo by Feltzer rounded off the program. Gwendolyn Williams accompanied Miss Nelsova with great discretion, and though cello and piano blended perfectly, we were never allowed to forget that the former instrument was dominant.

"Arise, My Love", the latest film dealing with the present war, has arrived in town and should enjoy a very pleasant stay at the Imperial theatre this week. It is a pleasure to see a picture such as
ARISE as this one makes its way
MY LOVE out of Hollywood. It has everything including solid acting by its stars, Claudette Colbert and Ray Milland, excellent swift-paced direction by Mitchell Leisen and continuity and dialogue which most undoubtedly will be in line for an Academy Award.

The story deals with a woman columnist who saves an American avi-ator's life in Spain for a story. They proceed to chase through a series of thrill-packed incidents. There is much of dramatic interest here. The action carries the sinking of the Athena right down to the downfall of France and the signing of the armistice at the forest of Compiègne.

Colbert and Milland both turn in the best work of their careers. Walter Abel, and Cliff Nazarro, in his customary double talk specialty, also turn in good performances. But once again, we repeat that most credit belongs to the script men. The dialogue is clipped, breezy and punch-packed. It sweeps through a year of history with terrifice, and in spite of the sordidness of the events, manages to keep its head on the right side with good solid comedy.
This is one of the best pictures of the year.—F.S.

MUS. BACH. COURSE FEATURES COMPOSING BY ITS STUDENTS

Weinzweig and Dr. Healey Willan, U. of T. Organist, Are Among Graduates of Course

RIPOUT YOUNGEST

The Bachelor of Music course at the Toronto Conservatory provides a general training for musicians and its graduates are free to specialize in any branch of music, composing, teaching, music criticism or conducting.

It is a strictly theoretical course and does not involve the practical performing side of music except in the last year. The atmosphere of the lectures is an informal one and musical discussion is encouraged.

"The standard in the third year is very high and most students take four years," said Francon Campbell. All students in third year are required to compose a musical work or write a thesis although an alternative for the third year exercise is the L.T.C.M. diploma.

One of the well known graduates, John Weinzweig, is a composer whose works have been performed by Toronto and American orchestras. The university organist, Dr. Healey Willan, composer and world renowned scholar of liturgical music, is a member of the faculty. Godfrey Ridout is the youngest member of the Conservatory faculty.

INITIAL LIBRARY MEETING TO FEATURE ADDRESS BY MARKOWITZ TOMORROW

The first Library Evening of the season is to be held tomorrow evening in the library of Hart House at 8:15 p.m. Dr. J. Markowitz will speak on "Leisure Reading".

Dr. Markowitz is by profession a surgeon and is a research associate in the Department of Physiology. He has also read a great deal of non-technical literature and can usually give an appropriate quotation from "Alice in Wonderland".

Library Evenings in Hart House are informal occasions when the members of the House have an opportunity to meet men who are outstanding in the literary world and to gather interesting and amusing information about books new and old.

VOGT FUNCTIONS AS MEDIUM FOR EMBRYO COMPOSERS

Embryo composers, the younger devotees of the classics and just plain music lovers have developed a medium of expression all their own in the Junior Vogt Society.

An outgrowth of the Senior Vogt, and affiliated with it, it parallels the parent society in its encouragement of good music. Young Canadian composers have the opportunity of hearing their own work and the work of their fellows played on piano or violin while non-composing members enjoy a foretaste of music by the masters of the future. The group looks forward to the day when it will have a small orchestra for its productions which, by that time, will have graduated into the class of symphonies.

The Junior Vogt came into being three years ago when Francon Campbell, now in III Mus. Bac., decided that the younger members of the society could make more progress in a

F.C.S. Reveals University's Aid

No Organized Campaign on Campus; Staff and Students Contribute to Form One One-Hundredth of Total

SETTLEMENT FEATURES

Despite the fact that there was no organized campaign among the members of the University of Toronto, the staff and students united to contribute a total of $5,400 to The Federation for Community Service. This amount represents one one-hundredth of the total raised by the federation in its city-wide campaign this fall.

Among the staff and in the University College women's residences the contributions to the federation were collected by specially organized committees within those groups. However, throughout the rest of the university donations were given as individual responses to the campaign.

Another rather unpublicized manifestation of the university's social conscience and public spirit is the University Settlement on Grange Road behind the Art Gallery. The Settlement is intended to provide a recreational and educational centre for a large part of Toronto's slums. Under the direction of Professor Wasteneys of the Biochemistry Department volunteers from among the students spend a certain amount of time helping run the place and acting as leaders for the children's clubs and games.

Along with its regular work the Settlement will soon be putting up great quantities of Christmas baskets for poor families, and there once again the staff and students of the university will subscribe their share in service to the community.

STAFF, GRADUATES ATTEND JUNIOR DRUGGISTS' DANCE

The junior pharmacy class and their partners filled the Alexander Room of the King Edward Hotel last Friday night at their annual dance. Frank Bogart and his orchestra provided the music for the affair.

Dean O. R. Hurst and members of the staff were present with their wives. There were also many graduates from out of town in attendance at this most successful dance.

group of their own. From an attendance of sixty the first year, the membership has been steadily increasing and now includes a great many university students.

Meetings are held every three or four weeks at the homes of various members. The first one of this season was held last Sunday night and will be followed by a second early in December. Plans are being made to avoid another clash with the date of the Hart House Musical. Some time in May, according to Mary Willan, member of the executive, there will be a special afternoon meeting at which the Senior Vogt will be entertained.

A yearly fee of fifty cents is charged and this includes refreshments at each meeting. A new ruling which has just come into effect encourages prospective members to attend one meeting and, if they like it, they are invited to join.

First Official Breath Drawn by Society in Meeting Where 75 Members Registered and Elected Officers

LORETTO, ST. JOSEPH'S

For the first time in history St. Michael's College has combined forces with the co-eds in an organized dramatic society whose membership includes students of Loretto and St. Joseph's Colleges. The society drew its first official breath last night in Teffy Hall with the registration of more than 75 members and the election of officers for the coming year.

The executive will include a representative from each college in addition to the three officers: Larry O'Brien, III St. Michael's, president; Gerry Wilson, I Loretto, secretary; Bee Dobie, I St. Joseph's, treasurer. The club's adviser is Father Joseph O'Donnell, C.S.B., who has directed all dramatics in St. Michael's in recent years.

After the elections the meeting took the form of open discussion of a suitable play for the society's next production. The members were encouraged to display their talent both by acting in and directing small private performances.

The germ of this new idea was sown last spring when two co-eds, Helen McKenna, III St. Joseph's, and Sheila Ryan, II St. Joseph's, assisted the St. Michael's College Players in a small scale production of "Romeo and Juliet". The plan hung in the balance until their recent success, "The Marriage of St. Francis", which starred a co-ed, Maureen Murphy, I Loretto, and included many others in the cast.

Netherlands Princess Views Paintings from Hart House

Princess Appearing at Red Cross Benefit Showing, Evidenced Enthusiasm Over Canadian Works

TORONTO'S ELITE PRESENT

Last night Princess Juliana, heir-apparent to the throne of the Netherlands, viewed, among others, a number of paintings from the walls of Hart House at a special Red Cross benefit showing.

Her Royal Highness viewed the Great Masters Show at the Toronto Art Gallery which was opened a week ago by His Excellency, the Governor-General. Conducted about the exhibition by John M. Lytle, vice-president of the Gallery, the Princess viewed the works of old masters and of modern Canadian painters.

To the by-standers, formally attired guests and near-guests of Toronto, it seemed that Princess Juliana was more interested in the works of the Canadians than in those of the others. The painting over which she evidenced most enthusiasm was Tom Tomson's "The West Wind", sighting it from across the room, she hurried over, pointing at it and eagerly playing her guide with questions concerning it.

Prior to reviewing the works, Her Royal Highness was presented with a bouquet by one of the 12 Red Cross nurses present. On hand too were 60 members of the Canadian Women's Training Service. During the evening a section of strings from the Toronto Symphony Orchestra played.

DENTS BOW TO O.C.E. IN LACROSSE MATCH

O.C.E. defeated Dents 12-10 in a bitterly fought lacrosse game in the lower gym at Hart House yesterday. The maulmen put on a desperate drive in the last quarter but just failed to whitte down the teachers' lead.

The pedagogues took the lead at half-time and held on to the end although pressed closely all the way by the donists. Wyman scored six goals to lead the teachers' attack backed up by Aymer with four. Spruells got four tallies for the donists with McCartney and Shand getting two apiece.

THERAPISTS TO DANCE AT ROYAL YORK

Occupational Therapists of the classes of 4T1 and 4T2 will hold their first dance of the season at the Royal York tonight. Horace Lapp will provide the music.

The convenors, Barbara Gibson and Aileen McDonald, stated that there had been a large sale of tickets in the second year and all were looking forward to the occasion. It is hoped that the first year will show as much enthusiasm and turn out in large numbers.

With such a large increase in the enrolment this year the Occupational Therapists are planning for bigger and better social events and more of them.

VIC SOCCERITES TO MEET WITH KNOX 11 TODAY

Victoria's last year's soccer champions and Knox's eleven will clash on the back campus today in the replay of their last Friday's tie game. The winner will meet Mads in the finals for the Arts Faculty Cup later in the week. Last Friday the two squads battled through two ten minute overtime periods of brilliant soccer and were still unable to decide a winner, the game ending in a scoreless draw.

Because of their enthusiasm and team spirit, Vic are slightly favoured to push Knox into the discard.

U.C. French Club To Hear Mayberry

Play to be Performed by Members of the Club; Meeting is Second in Series Inaugurated by Assie's Address

TALK GIVEN IN FRENCH

Mr. F. Mayberry will show slides of Paris, France, to the University French Club at their second meeting tomorrow night and he will make comments throughout. The meeting will take place at the Women's Union theatre.

Second of the club's meetings this season, tonight's talk follows last month's address by G. A. Assie, lecturer at U.C., on "Some Reflections on Honour." Like its predecessor, Prof. Clerc's talk will be given in French.

A short play, "Un Bureau de Telegraphie," will be performed by members of the club and refreshments will be served. Dancing will follow the meeting. As in the past, the U.C. French Club extends a cordial welcome to all students interested in the French language, including those not enrolled in French courses. The meeting is called for 8:15 p.m.

MOSS ADDRESSES MEETING OF MUSIC SOCIETY DEFINING AIMS OF GROUP

The Junior Vogt Society held its second meeting of the year Sunday night at the home of Mrs. F. A. N. Powell, 59 Russell Hill Road. Mr. Earle Moss, president of the society, defined its aims as the furthering of Canadian music and the encouraging of young Canadian composers and performers.

SOCIAL SERVICE GROUP MAKES MERRIER XMASSES

The Neighbourhood Workers' Association operates a Christmas Exchange to make possible merrier Christmas in and around Toronto.

Sending out Christmas baskets involves a good deal of card-writing and the N.W.A. depends on volunteer assistance. The heavy work commences December 2nd and continues until after Christmas.

"We feel that this is a fine service that every student can render," said Miss M. Colver, supervisor of the Christmas Exchange. "Even an hour or two would be a help to us."

BUSINESS TAKES BACK SEAT AS LIT TO FEATURE FOLLIES

Featuring music, skits and other forms of entertainment, the University College Literary and Athletic Society will hold an open meeting tomorrow night. A prominent guest speaker will address the meeting. The Society was informed last night by C. L. Dublin, literary director of the society.

Entertainment will be provided by an orchestra of U.C. men which will perform song hits from the recent U.C. Follies as well as Varsity and college songs. Members of the Lit executive do not want the songs from this year's Follies to be forgotten, Dublin explained, "because they are worth remembering."

Don Rowat, versatile U.C. comedian, will entertain the meeting with imitations, and a sketch by Bud Milnes and

Trinity's Beefy MacMillan the Outstanding Man on the Field as He Disorganized Opponents' Attack

50-YARD TOUCHDOWN

By Dave MacIntosh

Trinity's gallant band of football warriors, twice conquerors of favoured rivals, fell before an Engineer first-quarter onslaught yesterday afternoon at the Bloor Bowl to go down to a 5-1 defeat. But as they faded magnificently from the play-off scene, they threw a bad scare into the mighty Senior School powerhouse, undefeated and united in interfaculty play.

Once in the second quarter and twice in the last stanza, after the Blue and Gold had staged a smashing 50-yard touchdown drive which even Trinity's great snip, Beefy MacMillan could not stem, the Anglicans were rapping at School's door, but twice they fumbled, and the other time Boxer batted to Fugler for a single. Late in the fourth canto Trinity worked the ball deep into Engineer territory, but when Johnny Mees recovered Bill McCormick's error, Trinity's last hope of reaching the Mulock Cup finals went down the drain.

MacMillan Plays Great Game

The play developed in spots into a fumble-festa, but for the most part both squads settled down to serious business. Beefy MacMillan was easily the outstanding man on the field, bolstering a thin Red line that threatened to give way before the battering of the Engineer backs. He disorganized the opponents' attack with his vicious tackling, and time and again broke through to make Fugler, Plaxton and Munro drop the pigskin.

Trinity played a great defensive game, cashed in on every false move of their opponents. They could not go through School's line so they went over and around it. Fumbles played havoc with the Engineers' attempts to get within scoring range. Only once after their pay-off touch did they come close, and then they fumbled.

Smith Scores Touch

Soon after the kick-off Jim Coughlin recovered a loose ball on the Artsmen's 18 yard line, and four thrusts at the Trinity wall piled up on the broad back of Beefy MacMillan. The play went right from one end of the field to the other as Fugler dropped a Boxer punt at mid-field and then Trinity quick-kicked to the School 25. Plaxton caught Boxer flat-footed with a mighty spiral that trickled all the way down to (Continued on Page 3)

The meeting is to take place in the junior common room of University College at 8 o'clock, Wednesday evening.

Dublin urged all male undergraduates of the college to attend, pointing out that "This will be the best entertainment that the Lit has ever offered its members. It is a new and different policy we are following this year. The dull routine-business meetings are a thing of the past, and from now on it'd be a big mistake to miss a meeting of the Lit."

There is no admittance charge, and the meeting is open to all U.C. men. Refreshments will be served.

Rules of the Game

Propaganda being what it is during wartime, no doubt it amazes more than a few people when they realize how many of the little "rules of the game" are observed by both sides, even in the midst of what appears to be merciless and inhuman warfare.

If you believe one-half of what you read and hear about the Germans — and there is no doubt that, in the face of past events, you must believe a great deal of it — you are scarcely likely to conceive of them as being trustworthy in any respect. Nevertheless, during the last war it is said that both sides were consistent in carefully observing the rules for treatment of war prisoners. It is said that even at the time when the German people were badly in need of food, the thousands of parcels of supplies mailed regularly by relatives and the Red Cross to British prisoners in German camps were always faithfully handed over to their proper owner by German authorities. In English prison camps, one of the "rules of the game" always strictly enforced was the saluting of captured German officers by British soldiers of lower rank.

However, another war brings different problems and how closely the rules will be followed this time is difficult to tell. In the face of what has gone before, probably no one would be greatly surprised to find that the Germans intended to follow none of them. Indications have already been given that, in regard to the shipment of food to British prisoners now in German camps, German authorities are going to make it as difficult as possible for such food to reach its destination.

It was revealed at Ottawa over the week-end that not a single food parcel has yet reached any of the 44,000 British prisoners of war in Germany, despite the fact that the Canadian War Prisoners' Parcels Committee is prepared to send 10,000 parcels a week. This, it was explained, is due to the failure of German authorities to communicate the names of prisoners, which would permit the sending of parcels under the Geneva Convention. German authorities give the excuse that prisoners are being constantly changed from one camp to another, and that it has not been possible to supply lists of names and addresses.

Under the Geneva Convention, the cost of shipment of food parcels to prisoners through the mails would be relatively small if, as is stipulated, each parcel is addressed to an individual. If, on the other hand, shipments must be made in bulk through the International Red Cross at Geneva without being individually addressed, the cost works out at about $4 a parcel. As a result, if some modification of this rule is not obtained from the United States, Portugal, Spain, French and Swiss postal authorities, who are all involved, cost of the postage will reduce the number of parcels sent each week from ten to five thousand.

Thus it would seem that, while German authorities will not come right out and refuse to follow this rule laid down at the Geneva Convention, they intend to make matters as difficult as they can in respect to it. If there is going to be difficulty in getting such food parcels to British prisoners in Germany, and if German authorities continue to refuse to co-operate, it should mean the end of Herbert Hoover's plan to send food supplies from the United States to prevent famine in Nazi-dominated European countries this winter. If German authorities will not co-operate with the International Red Cross, it is not likely that Mr. Hoover can depend upon them to co-operate with him to see that such food supplies reach those countries, as he is certain they will. His plan to date has received little support, because the American people feared that the food might go to feed Germany instead of the conquered nations, and thus only prolong the war. Probably it will receive even less support after this disclosure from Ottawa.

Plea for Peace

Pope Pius XII made a plea to the world for peace on Sunday, and anyone who read it must have wondered what impression it would make upon the millions of Catholics in Italy and Germany—if they were permitted to hear or read it.

This time his plea was directed to the masses of the people and not to their leaders. He prayed for a "most just and harmonious peace" that would bring tranquillity, liberty and security, but his words made it clear that he expected no peace.

Praying for the dead and the sufferers from this war, the Pontiff asked that "the peace of eternal rest be granted to the souls of all the faithful who have been swept to their death in this whirlwind of war and have been known and unknown, wept and unwept, buried beneath the ruins of villages and destroyed cities or have met their death on gory plains, war-torn hillsides, in gorges and valleys or in the depths of the sea."

The Pope gave his idea of how the war, it must be fought at all, should be fought. "Give to the combatants, together with heroism in full token of their duty, even to the supreme sacrifice in defence of their native land, that noble sense of humanity by which they will not, no matter in what circumstances, do to others that which they would not have done to themselves or to their country."

"Grant peace and consolation, resignation and health to those poor people who are overcome by sorrows and tribulations of war's calamities, to exiles, to refugees, to unknown wanderers, to prisoners and to the wounded. Dry the abundant tears of wives, mothers, orphans, of whole families, of so many left destitute; heavy tears falling on the bread of sorrow, eaten after long fast in cold hovels."

The Pope followed this implied condemnation of aggression with another of aerial bombardment. "May the whirlwinds that in the light of day or the dark of night scatter terror, fire, destruction and well-ordered peace that will permanently unite slaughter on helpless folk cease."

The Pontiff's last words were a prayer for "a true as brothers, through the ages, in the harmonious search of the higher good, all peoples of the human race."

The Pontiff's plea was one that must have had great influence with all his subjects. It is to be hoped that it reached those of his followers who are citizens of Germany and Italy.

INDEPENDENT CRITICISM

Those who criticize those who criticize in this department have often pointed out that our review of an event often does not coincide with that of our professional contemporaries. We might be truthful and say that the professionals have to make their living by it. Seriously, if nothing is ever called bad, how can any praise ever be considered as sincere? There is a happy medium somewhere between damning everything and praising everything — that we try to follow.

Often after a performance the critic knows that the majority of the audience liked what has passed; perhaps were bluffed into liking it by the reputation of the performer. The critic who, if he is a real critic, knows more than the majority of the audience catches the bluff and proceeds to expose it. Iconoclasts are never popular except with those who have already passed through the stage of needing idols. A great pianist plays: the criticism is nearly all as high praise as the writer can give, but the last few words contain a little constructive fault finding. Readers immediately become incensed because the review is not one complete eulogy. How, in sincerity, can the critic let something go by which displeases him, even if it be only in the faintest degree?

In the last analysis, the problem is that of striking the happy medium, and no two person's mediums correspond. It is the keynote of sincerity which must be always present. If it is, the reviewer has done his part; the reader thinks and fulfills his. The whole purpose of criticism is to advance the musical Intelligence Quotient of those who were present but who failed to grasp either how fine or how unsatisfactory the performer was. That can be done only by making those concerned conscious of the real worth (as one person sees it) of the Art, Music, or Drama under discussion.—N.M.

It Shouldn't Happen To a Dog

I was walking along King Street on a Sunday afternoon when I happened to notice what I believed to be a very strange thing. There before my very eyes was a horse standing at the curb wearing a top hat.

I was taken aback to say the least, but upon recovering, I approached the animal and examined him very closely. "What the hell are you looking at?" said the horse examining me very closely.

Once again I was taken aback, but quickly countered, "Oh, nothing, I was just surprised to see you wearing a top hat."

"What the hell's so funny about me wearing a top hat?" queried the horse. "Well . . . I mean . . . you being a horse . . . and that top hat . . . well . . . frankly I've just never seen a horse wearing a top hat," I answered lamely.

The horse looked at me loftily as a smile seemed to play around his lips. "Well Mr. Know-Nothing, let me inform you that thousands of horses wear top hats including some of my most intimate friends."

I had nothing to say. I had never seen a horse in a top hat before but not wishing to show my ignorance, I resolved to make friends with this unusual beast. I said: "I've seen lots of horses wear straw hats."

"I wouldn't be seen dead in a straw hat," the horse replied.

"I was just telling you what I've seen," I answered quickly. "No offence meant."

"O.K.," answered the horse. "Now run along and play with your marbles." I turned to leave but after taking a few steps I turned and called to the horse, "Haven't I seen you some place before?"

"Perhaps," said the horse, "I get around."

His answer was curt and seemed final so I turned and continued on my way. However, I felt some sort of apology was due and once again I called to him "I'm sorry about the top hat."

"Forget about it," the horse snapped. Obviously, I had wounded the horse's pride. I made my way homewards a thoroughly chastened individual. After all, why shouldn't a horse wear a top hat? Why shouldn't a horse wear a homburg or a stetson. Isn't this a democracy? I cursed myself silently for being a toady and a sneak. I shall have to watch myself in the future.

In summary, due to the war with higher operating costs and rougher times for the club's "Catholic Year Book" revenue, much effort and ingenuity will need to be shown to keep financially.

The organization in a healthy state Mr. John Weir of the Alumni Association outlined war work plans in co-operation with similar university bodies, and stressed the whole devotion that the club's graduate body would give to these undertakings.

Speaking OF SPORT

By Stan Westcott

That blue-sweated construction gang from la petite schoolhouse erected a wall in front of the battling boys from Trinity which was too big to clamber over, thusly the Red and Black are croaking a hoarse "Move over Pal", as they join Dents, Vic, U.C., etc. etc. in the football gutter. (Not to be confused with the rabbit burrows the college infantry men are cutting out on St. George St. across from the rugged diggings.)

Both teams were superlative sportsmen, handing the ball to the opposition at every opportunity, and then sitting back smilingly waiting for the courtesy to be repaid. Which it was, invariably. In fact Trinity's best ground-gaining play was to kick, allow the School backfield time to fumble, and then to hop on the hobbling oval. Then it was the Engineers' turn as the Anglicans would boot the ball to them on an end run, or some such similar method of retreat, and everything would be all square again. This, we suggest, may not be good football, but it is undeniably interesting and thrilling, especially when sitting right in front of you is concerted Trinity beauty ranging from gorgeous blonde to ravishing brunette with all the intermediate stages. Too bad Trinity didn't stick for the finals.

Well, anyhow, School have a very potent group of plunging backs, and that is the reason, folks, that they nudged the Red and Black into the discard by the 5-1 score. Munro, Hurst, Plaxton and Marshall all whacked through the line with elan, and also for many valuable yards. Doug Marshall in particular has a peculiar and very effective style of plunging. He seems to go up and down like a horse on a merry-go-round, as well as forward and sort of saws his way through the opposing front wall. Probably the word "buck" had its origin in the extraordinary antics of an untrained equine anyway, and Mr. Marshall apparently draws his interpretation from that root. And very effectively too. Barry, Coughlin, and Van Smith played fine backfield games to bolster the aforementioned.

The Schoolmen scored their lone touchdown solely through the crashing power of their plunges with one pay-off razzle-dazzle end run thrown in. For seven successive plays Stu Munro bucked. In that time the ball moved from centre field to Trinity's twenty yard line. Then Munro took the ball again, shifted to the right pulling in the Anglican line, tossed a long lateral to Plaxton, who relayed it to fleet-footed Van Smith. This gent romped around the left end and across the fatal goal-line without a single Trinity tackler hanging from his sweater. And there was the ball game.

Aside from those few moments when the S.P.S. seniors exerted all their power, play was even. The boys of the Toke-Oike, who have yet to be defeated, either couldn't or wouldn't apply the ferocious unrelenting pressure with which they crumbled St. Mike's in the closing game of the schedule. Probably the main reason they couldn't untrack themselves was the bulky, battle-scarred figure of Beefy MacMillan lurking in the shadows of the Red and Black secondary. One observer watched Beefy make eight successive tackles, and after every one stroll back to his centre position, place his hands on his hips, and wait calmly for the next onslaught. He was the most valuable man on the field. Johnny Henderson, Bill McCormick and Don Boxer played hard and courageous football throughout. Bobo Baxter, Stumpy Edwards, Pyper, Frewer and Partridge did some great defensive work. And Bill Livingstone recovered almost numberless fumbles.

On the S.P.S. side of the ledger Herb Barrett, Chuck Reuben, Coughlin, Hodgson and Plaxton led the tackling, with Paul, Mees, and DePaul assisting greatly.

If Trinity needs an alibi, it should be mentioned that Captain Joe Harris played with a broken thumb. Doug Crashley, valuable back, was out with a leg haemorrhage. Johnny Jarvis and Tony Wittingham both had to be kept on the sidelines because of previous injuries. But the Red and Black need no alibi. They held the highly-rated School outfit to a much lower score than most of the "experts" thought possible, and stuck with them all the way. They bowed out of competition nobly, with a clean, enviable sportsmanlike record behind them.

And so we look ahead to an unprecedented Mulock Cup final Thursday p.m., as two teams from the same faculty meet for the battered old mug. The Engineers will sheath their slide-rules for the afternoon, as they go after each other hammer and tongs. Will the senior boys remain, with Balmies, the only unbeaten and untied team in the east? Or will they finally fold before the attack of their baby brothers? (Someone's going to be awfully sore about that baby stuff. We only hope it isn't us. Schoolmen are so sensitive and so temperamental.) Anyway the answer will go up on the boards as the twilight stretches its oppressive hand across Varsity Stadium in obituary on Nov. 28.

THE SOCCER SITUATION

Two soccer teams, namely those of Victoria and Knox, scurried up and down the back campus last Friday afternoon for sixty full minutes and didn't score any goals. So they played two extra overtime periods of ten minutes each, and still didn't score any goals. This afternoon the boys will do it all over again and it is to be hoped, with more prolific results. Neither of these two squads have yet been beaten, and they both are trying hard to maintain their clean slate. The winner of today's conflict goes against Meds' powerful team in the finals on Friday.

U.C. VOLLEYBALL III—

Vital game today at 4:00. Following turn out: Durst, White, Rubin, Rankin, Phillips, Green, Brown, Gray, Kelter, Berris.

RED AND BLACK DEFEATED BY S.P.S.

Trinity's 16. School took the return kick at centre-field and from there launched a crushing offensive that stopped only when the ball had been planted behind the Trinity uprights. Stu Munro, great plunging back of the Engineers, carried the ball five successive times for 30 yards. Munro and Fugler lugged to the Red and Black 20, and after an attempted forward, Van Smith swept wide around left end on an extension play with Jack Plaxton and Stu Munro to score standing up. Plaxton missed the attempted convert.

Trinity Fumbles on S.P.S. 10
Bill Livingstone pounced on an S.P.S. miscue late in the second chapter, and then Bill McCormick nabbed a perfect toss from Donny Boxer to carry the Artsmen down to their opponents' 20 after almost breaking into the clear. Stopped cold all along the line, an on-side kick lodged them on the 10. Clare Baker plunked himself on a Trinity fumble on the following play. Plaxton

SPORT SPLASHES

By Doug Green

Senior U.C. swamped Vic 27-6 in the only meet of the evening yesterday in Hart House pool. The winners took every first and two of the three second places.

Biggs, Wadds and Meen between them won the medley. Ged Clawson won the 50 back stroke with Nixon of Vic placing second and Landell of Vic finishing third.

Clawson placed first in the 50 breast with Wadds also of U.C. finishing a fraction behind, in second place. George Meen won the 50 free for the winners in the very fast time of 25.5 seconds.

U.C. kept up her record of winning all first places when their relay team of Clawson, Meen, Patchet and Biggs finished out in front, although this race was closely contested. Vic missed the services of their ace swimmer Morrison, who was out for this meet due to some slight injury.

Senior U.C. seem to have the best all-round team. Clawson and Meen both were on senior intercollegiate teams of the past. Wadds, Biggs, McIntyre, Brett and Patchet, the other five, are also swimmers with more than average ability.

lifted a short kick which Boxer returned to Ron Fugler, who was pulled down in his own end zone by a horde of tacklers, for Trinity's lone tally.

S.P.S. Fumbles on Trinity 10

A fumble early in the third chapter gave the ball to the Science Men on Trinity's 35. Plaxton completed a forward to Ab Barry that went for 10. Two plunges later Munro muffed the ball on the 10 yard stripe and when S.P.S. dropped another punt on their own 50, Trinity was safely out of danger.

Trinity was foiled twice in the last quarter. Bill McCormick toted the pigskin for 25 yards on an off-centre slash at the Engineer line that put Trinity within striking distance once more. Boxer attempted two passes in vain, but Joe Harris gathered in an inside boot to give his team one final chance. A fumble recovered by Johnny Mees threw a monkey wrench into the works, and the game ended a few minutes later at centre field.

Don Boxer, limping badly throughout the last period, engineered his charges well. Joe Harris, who played with his thumb in a cast, Bill McCormick, and Johnny Henderson gave a good account of themselves. The S.P.S. backfield, rusty after a two-week lay-off, failed to measure up to the performance of their advance guard, although Doug Marshall and Stu Munro contributed a great deal with their heavy barrage. But head and shoulders above both aggregations there loomed the form of the one and only Beefy MacMillan, stopping everything that came his way and a lot more things that didn't.

Well, we hate to think our column has any effect on a reader—that is out loud we do—but certainly something happened last night, by way of that teenie weenie bit more enthusiasm we spoke of on the part of various colleges, and we have never seen or heard such enthusiasm as rent the rafters for both the games played off. Thank you, Trinity men. Vic men. St. Mike's men. S.P.S. men and U.C. men (no misprint) — without those S.P.S. cheers what would we have done?

At seven o'clock St. Hilda's trounced a really remarkably good Vic Freshie team by a pretty decisive but not too one-sided score. With Joan Griffith back on the scene, the Saints had no trouble in eliminating the inexperienced Freshie squad, and thus set themselves up for a berth in the semi-finals, scheduled to start on Wednesday. We believe these games will take place in Hart House at lanky hours, but will announce full details tomorrow morning — watch us! But more of the game. For a Freshie team, Vic showed unusual agility in ball handling and should advance well in next year's series. The Saints, to date being rather in a slump, seemed to hit their stride a bit better, and were well worth that win.

At 8 o'clock, St. Mike's and U.C. Juniors renewed their tussle and all that we have said about previous encounters between these two teams can be poured on again this time, and then some! Last game found a riotous affair simply packed with the best in basketball and raucous enthusiasm, but with U.C. slightly on the off-side around the all-important basket. Last night produced an identical brand of basketball and wild enjoyment from the bench, but with St. Mike's definitely on the off list. The score, seemingly one-sided, was in no way indicative of the play,

EMMANUEL, AER. NAV. WIN IN VOLLEYBALL CLASHES

Emmanuel A volleyballers defeated Jr. Meds 15-11, 15-7 in the upper gym at Hart House, yesterday afternoon. The doctors found the hard driving spikes of Hamilton too hard to handle and went under in two straight games.

Emmanuel A: Hamilton, Pritchard, Green, McKennitt, Fee, Kitchen.
Jr. Meds: Rosenberg, Gold, Davies, Clodman, Giardine, Goldstein, Eila.

Aerial Navigation came from behind to nose out Wycliffe 10-15, 15-4, 15-12, in a volleyball fixture in the upper gym gym at Hart House last night. The fliers were slow in starting but when the spikes of Ronnie Lake began to click the theologs were unable to stop them.

Aerial Navigation: Vanbuysse, Lake, Fraser, Tuckett, Price, Haber.

Wycliffe: Hunt, Barnett, Latimer, Donlan, Knight, Smith.

VIC LACROSSE—

Important practice from four to five. All out.

and should be ignored. Not that U.C. didn't deserve—they certainly, all prejudices aside and believe it or not, but St. Mike's missed umpteen and one golden opportunities, and U.C. cashed in on every last one of theirs. Joan Carter was the sensation of the U.C. squad, picking off approximately one-half of their total. Marg. Stock, Zoe Christie and Kay Cunningham constantly broke up the St. Mike's offensive. These three are unbeatable as guard-line. Annabelle MacMillan scored high for St. Mike's, with Mary Clare Seitz again figuring in their defense work.

No games tonight, so make way for Wednesday. It's O.T. & P., Vic Seniors, St. Hilda's Seniors and U.C. Juniors.

The Canadian Campus

By Jack Park

Staff Writer, The Gateway

A Canadian University Press Feature

Campus of the University of Alberta rests on a high plateau above the Saskatchewan River valley. It commands a magnificent view of spruce-covered banks, and beyond, the spires and towers of Edmonton. The university buildings are of red brick, built in a hackneyed style of architecture.

Its steadily increasing student population has far outgrown its quarters. Lecture rooms are huddled into two main buildings. Labs are overcrowded. One bright spot in campus development however is the prospect of a new transmitter for the university radio station. Since its beginning some fourteen years ago CKUA has been an anemic bay-wire transmitter carrying classical music, educational talks, and no advertising.

All that is to be changed. A provincial grant of $30,000 is being employed to replace the old cobwebby apparatus with modern, powerful equipment, equal to any in the West. The new transmitter will blare away for sixteen hours a day with commercial programs ranging from the better radio shows to kidney pill transcriptions. Classical music and educational programs will be continued as well.

"Step right up folks and buy a ticket on this remarkable little Philco portable. It's supplied with batteries, can use A.C. current too. In fact, Hitler uses one of these to listen to the news from London. It's all for a good cause." A drive for the Christmas Fund has been launched, and the proceeds from the radio raffle help purchase food, clothing, toys and other necessities that make Christmas a merry Christmas for hard-up Alberta farmers. Carnivals, dances, and tie auctions will be on the agenda for the next month.

Perhaps you don't know what a tie auction is. Some residence or fraternity wants to help the Christmas Fund. So everyone donates ties that they received last yuletide, a date is fixed, the public is invited to attend, and the throat drapery is sold to the highest bidder. Last season a hideous masterpiece in startling yellow and mauve went for $3.15.

Over eight dozen Christmas cakes have been attractively wrapped and sent to students, graduates, and faculty members of the university serving with His Majesty's forces overseas. Banded together as the Wauvita War Workers our women students meet three afternoons a week in the House. Ec. lab. to undertake different phases of war work. Besides cake baking, the WWV's are busy knitting for the navy and air force, sewing for refugee children, while a considerable number are attending first aid and motor mechanic classes.

The Co-ed War Club, a subdivision concerned with raising funds, sponsored a mammoth dance, the Dogpatch Dig, during Sadie Hawkins week. Admission charge was calculated according to the boys' waist-lines at the rate of two cents per girth inch. They raised $55.

Sadie Hawkins Week saw co-eds take over the reins of our Gateway. Male staff members were warned to avoid their usual haunts, and for days bedraggled women could be seen rushing from the office, their arms black with printer's ink. They produced a beautiful edition printed on baby-pink paper. The headlines were startling: "We Froze Stiff as We Watched Them Win"; "Blood Flowed in Streams and Us Without Spoons"; "Will Mamma Get Her Beer Money?"

Can a crow fly 900 miles overnight? Yes, says an Iowan. No, says Dr. Rowan of the Zoological Department.

Dr. Rowan has bottle-raised seventy young crows, if crows drink from bottles. These dusky doves have never kept company with adult birds, so they have no experience to tell them how an ordinary crow should act. All they have is their God-given instinct.

Dr. Rowan waited till all the crows, except his seventy, had gone south for their annual winter vacation. Then he banded his flock, painted their black tails yellow like miniature Nazi bombers, and released them 20 miles east of Edmonton. He wants to see if they can migrate without the guidance of older birds.

Next morning after their release Dr. Rowan received a telegram from a farmer in Iowa saying that he just saw two crows with yellow tails flying overhead. It's 900 miles to Iowa, and Dr. Rowan scoffed. Next came a report that one of the crows had been shot 120 miles from the point of release. Well, maybe a crow could fly 900 miles overnight.

For the last fortnight prairie universities have been busy with dramatic rehearsals and productions. Manitoba saw their year play "Stage Door" last week-end. Mercer McLeod, noted for his CBC radio dramas, was the director. Ambitious Saskatchewan Thespians produced eight plays for their interfaculty competition, among them being the well known one act play "Still Stands the House", by Gwen Pharis of Edmonton. Her play will also be featured as the senior class entry in this Friday's interclass competition at the University of Alberta. Tickets have been sold out, actors and actresses are well trained, rivalry is keen, so all told Alberta's first dramatic event this season promises to be highly successful.

HISTORY DEPARTMENT PRESENTS LECTURES ON THUR. AND FRI.

Professor Mowat of University of Bristol will speak on the French Tradition and Eighteenth Century England

AT UNIVERSITY COLLEGE

"The French Tradition" and "England in the Eighteenth Century" will be the topics discussed by Professor R. B. Mowat of the University of Bristol when he visits the campus this week-end. The lectures will be presented through the courtesy of the Department of History in Room 8 of University College on the afternoons of Thursday and Friday at five o'clock.

During his undergraduate and post-graduate days at Edinburgh and Oxford, Professor Mowat was a scholarship student. One of his first positions was that of assistant master at Eton in 1906-07, and that was followed by a tutorship at Oxford.

In 1925 Professor Mowat accepted a chair in the History Department of the University of Wisconsin, and three years later he went to the University of Bristol.

To Professor Mowat goes the credit for the authorship of over thirty volumes of biography and history.

Neil Morrison Addresses S.C.M.

Neil Morrison of the C.B.C. is to speak in Hart House music room at 1.30 today on "The Meaning of Democracy". This is the first of the more worldly talks of the "Basic Convictions" series that the S.C.M. has been putting on this term; the one last week was the last concerned with the church and Christianity directly.

Mr. Morrison's talk will be followed next week by another viewpoint on democracy, "Democracy in Action" by Andrew Brewin, a prominent Toronto lawyer. Though not necessarily connected with Christianity democracy is a "basic conviction" and so is receiving considerable consideration from the S.C.M.

Mr. Morrison directs several of the C.B.C.'s educational programs including "Citizens All", "Challenge to Youth" and others. He is especially interested in programs for listening groups which he has helped to organize in outlying regions.

Sports Staff Surpass Newsmen In Annual Spelling Competition

The sports staff earned a victory the hard way as Varsity reporters held their annual spelling bee last night. Owen Pritchard, Sports Editor, gained the victory nod after a long, hard stretch battle with Managing Editor Edgar Simon, last survivor of the newsmen. Specially picked for their erudition, endurance and general capability, six contestants, three from each of the two staffs, started down the track. Chief disappointment of the race was Newswriter Dent Hodgson, who fell for "naphtha", his first word.

At this point the contestants dug themselves in, words like "chrysanthemum", "jui jiten", and "gipsy" glancing harmlessly off their solid armor-plated. Finally Bill Quigley, demon footballer, found the red-blooded word, "lasso" too much for him and retired to polish off a soccer advance.

The only cold in the debate, Dorothy Northwood, electrified the stands by tossing off "illicious" without any apparent sign of strain. Pritchard drew another gasp as he calmly spelled out "Khedive."

Songster will be Held Sunday at Hart House

"Theatre Projects" Topic of Address

Amateur Experience is Essential to an Actor to Teach Him the Rudiments, is Opinion of Mrs. Chamberlain

AT NOON HOUR SERIES

That amateur training and experience are essential to the would-be actor is the view held by Mrs. Janet Chamberlain, formerly known professionally as Janet Bacon. Mrs. Chamberlain will address the women's noon hour series Wednesday in the Women's Union on the subject "Theatre Projects".

"Just as an artist and a musician must begin their work by learning technique and the rudiments of their arts, so an actor should benefit by extensive training and amateur experience before attempting the professional theatre," she told The Varsity.

In addition to her acting experience, Mrs. Chamberlain was assistant director of the Martin Erwin School of the Theatre in Winnipeg. She also directed the Beaches Drama League and the Downtown Children's Theatre in Toronto.

No Vocal Ability or Knowledge of Music Are Required to Take Part; All that is Necessary is a Desire to Sing

LIGHT REFRESHMENTS

In response to popular demand there will be a Songster at 8.45 p.m. in the music room of Hart House on Sunday next, 1st December under the direction of Mr. J. Campbell-McInnes.

The Songsters arose seventeen years ago from a group of men coming together and singing songs for no other reason than that they liked it. In those days Mr. C. E. Higginbottom, now Bursar, and Mr. W. H. M. Laughlin, an undergraduate in the Faculty of Engineering, were the moving spirits. As time went on, there was a desire to put these musical evenings on a more permanent basis, and to find a suitable title for them. An invitation was extended to Mr. J. Campbell-McInnes to conduct the whole series during the year, and the name Songster was decided upon. Much credit is due to Mr. Higginbottom and others for the pioneer (Continued on Page 4)

LIBRARY EVENING WILL FEATURE DR. J. MARKOWITZ

"My Leisure Reading" is the Topic Chosen by the Speaker who is An Authority on Experimental Surgery

ON UNIVERSITY STAFF

The first Hart House Library Evening of the year will feature as guest Dr. Jacob Markowitz. Dr. Markowitz, a noted authority on experimental surgery and a member of the university staff, will speak on "My Leisure Reading".

Dr. Markowitz is well qualified to speak on this subject since in his spare time he is an enthusiastic reader of the English classics and will therefore emphasize that type of literature.

Dr. Markowitz is a graduate of the University of Toronto, where he obtained his degree of Doctor of Philosophy in 1926. He was for a time connected with Glasgow University, and then entered the Mayo Foundation, of Rochester, N.Y., where he became an (Continued on Page 4)

CAMPUS SKETCHES

A Canadian University Press Feature

(With the object of bringing Canadian universities closer to each other, the Canadian University Press has inaugurated this series wherein staff writers from the various campus dailies tell about their home university.)

Kingston, Ont., Nov. 18. — Queen's University is located in Kingston, Ontario, commonly called the "Limestone City", which contains approximately 23,000 people. The city contains some notable institutions. In addition to Queen's there are R.M.C. and the Kingston Penitentiary. Following in the tradition of the city, practically all of Queen's buildings are built of limestone. There are almost thirty buildings, closely grouped around the campus.

This year Queen's is celebrating its centennial year. It was founded 99 years ago by the Presbyterian Church in Canada, affiliated with the Church of Scotland, which, following the Scotch tradition, desired an educated Canadian ministry. The college grew slowly but surely, meeting and overcoming great difficulties. In 1854 the medical faculty was established, which, after surmounting serious financial difficulties, has become one of the best in Canada.

In 1877, Dr. G. M. Grant became principal, and under his direction the university increased in size and prestige. He knew Canada from coast to coast and had a vision of what she might be. He determined to implement this vision by making Queen's the national university she has since become. Today every province of Canada is substantially represented in the student body, not to mention those from the United States and foreign countries.

In 1893 the Ontario government founded the Ontario School of Mining. The school grew so rapidly that additional buildings had to be built. In 1916 it amalgamated with the university to form the Department of Applied Science. Queen's is especially strong in its Mining Department. There is a very large number of students from the mining districts of northern Ontario, and Queen's graduates are to be found wherever mining is carried on.

Queen's was founded by a church but was dedicated to the nation. As its constituency widened its constitution was widened, until in 1912, as a result of an amicable agreement between the church and the trustees, an art was passed by the Dominion Parliament removing the last vestige of denominational control. The registration has grown from 665 in 1900 to 1800 in 1940. In addition Queen's has the largest extra-curricular department of any university in Canada. Including the extra-curricular department, there is a total registration of over 4,000. The last reminder of the old days is the Theological School, associated with the university and the Presbyterian Church.

"Queen's college colours are wearing once again" — that's the way the college song begins. There's red for Arts, Gold for Science and Blue for Medicine, and hence Queen's teams are just as frequently referred to as tri-colour teams. The colours are strong ones and violent. They stand out and fight with each other, just as the faculties do, in friendly rivalry, but they also blend into the strong and enduring fabric that is Queen's. By the ruling of the Alma Mater Society, each freshman must wear all year a ribbon of his faculty colour and a tam with a tassel of the same colour.

For the past eighty years the Alma Mater Society has been synonymous with "Government of the students, by the students, for the students." It is probably the most democratic government of its kind on the continent. There is faculty spirit in the elections, but after election it is Queen's spirit. Through its executive it has control of all student activities, and through its Court it can impose discipline up to expulsion on any student. Because it is desired to keep the Queen's spirit, fraternities are forbidden at Queen's. Several years ago, Queen's had a rugby team of championship calibre, of which several members belonged to a fraternity. The players were tried before the Court, found guilty, and at the expense of victory, were removed from the team.

Queen's is a national institution; it is doing its part in the national emergency. It has cancelled all intercollegiate sports, it has greatly enlarged the C.O. T.C., it is giving military training to all men over 18, it has founded a War Aid Commission, to which profits from many campus activities go. It is providing training for girls in the spheres in which they may be needed. Many undergraduates did not return to college, having joined the armed forces. In the words of its Chancellor at the recent convocation, "Queen's will carry on."

Wilson Woodside is Guest At U.C. Meeting To-Night

Women to Debate 'Varsity's' Purpose

Members of the Paper will Endeavour to Stand Up for Their Rights at the Open Discussion Following the Debate

AT WOMEN'S UNION

"Our college is supporting the negative merely for debating purposes and not through any personal dislike for The Varsity," said Shirley Hill, U.C. representative for the Interfaculty Women's Debating Union, regarding today's debate on the subject "Resolved that The Varsity Fulfills its Purpose."

Shirley is convinced that the consensus of opinion is that The Varsity is a fairly representative paper, but she thinks that such a subject should result in creating a keener interest in the society.

Jeanie Ross and "Taffy" Lewis, both freshmen in U.C., will oppose a team of experienced debaters from St. Mike's in an endeavour to point out the weak points of the undergraduate paper.

Following the formal debate, there will be a period of open discussion, when those in the audience will be able to express their opinions and the members of the paper may endeavour to stand up for their rights.

So, any who feel in a particularly argumentative mood will have an opportunity to give vent to their feelings on turning up at the Women's Union this afternoon at 4.30.

THERAPISTS' DANCE HELD LAST NIGHT

Occupational Therapists of the classes of 4T1 and 4T2 cracked their social season wide open last night with the first dance of the year; Horace Lapp and his orchestra beat out the rhythm for the Therapists and their boy friends in the Imperial Room of the Royal York.

Neither blizzard nor bashfulness could combine to keep the revellers at home. The second year turned out en masse and the first year did almost as well. Success of the evening was due to the efforts of convenors Barbara Gibson and Aileen McDonald.

Due to the increased enrolment in the Occupational Therapy course this year, the student executive is planning for more and bigger and better social events than ever.

Seminars and Lectures Viewed As Complements of One Another

A survey among honour students on the campus yesterday showed them to vary in their opinions on the respective values of seminars and of lectures.

Gretta Riddell, who graduates in sociology this year, says, "Lectures and seminars complement one another. I never feel justified in missing either."

That open discussion is a necessary supplement to lectures, is Tom Maxwell's expression of the same idea. "They lose their effectiveness, however," he says, "when the class becomes too large, as it almost undoubtedly would in the pass course. We never had more than fourteen members in our sociology course."

John Ross, St. Mike's 4T1, thinks seminars great if you have theories of your own. He says, "Often if you do not agree with the lecturer, you become bored with the lot of ideas that you find to be untrue, and refuse to study the subject." John says pass course students have only a smatter-

An Informal Discussion of Current Events will be Held and Skits Given by Members of the U.C. Families

FREE TO U.C. MEN

Wilson Woodside, distinguished news analyst and commentator of the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation, is to be the guest star at tonight's open meeting of the University College Literary and Athletic Society, C. L. Dublin, literary director, told The Varsity yesterday.

Mr. Woodside will arrive at the U.C. junior common room immediately after his nightly broadcast over a nationwide hook-up. His discussion of current events will be an informal one. Members of the Lit will have an opportunity to ask him questions regarding his interpretation of war news.

The C.B.C. commentator, a recent graduate of the Faculty of Applied Science and Engineering, has travelled widely in Europe and written numerous magazine articles on European conditions.

Viewing with Mr. Woodside's informal discussion, as highlight of the evening's entertainment, will be skits put on by members of the U.C. Follies' east. A sketch written by Bud Milnes and Frank Winn will be performed by the comedy stars of the Follies, and (Continued on Page 4)

Hospital Aid Sponsors Lectures

"As the Scene Changes" will be the title of an address to be given by Vincent Sheean, war correspondent and author, at Eaton Auditorium this coming Friday evening according to information released by the Auditorium.

Sheean returned recently from London where during the summer months he was foreign correspondent for a group of the big American papers. He was in London during the intensive bombing of the city in early September. The lecture will be an eye-witness account of the momentous events in both France and England. Mr. Sheean was in France when Holland was invaded and remained there until just before the French collapse.

This lecture will be the first of the Town Hall Series which is being sponsored by the Hospital Aid of the Women's College Hospital. Other speakers in the series will be Eve Currie, Andre Maurois, Sigrid Undset, famous Norwegian author, and another speaker to be announced. All three mentioned are refugees from their native homes.

ing of knowledge on any one subject and seminars would be of little use to them.

Jean Christie, O.T. 4T1, says "Seminars are apt to skirt the subject and lapse into a discussion of irrelevances."

Sydney Key, fine art, prefers lectures to seminars, "Because," he said, "when you see someone open his mouth you know you will be getting something worthwhile." Jokingly he mentioned that lectures are better for sleeping in. Sydney thinks pass students should have the same treatment as honour students.

A third year language student who does not wish her name disclosed, says, "Nobody ever has their work prepared so there's never any discussion and it just turns out to be a lecture anyway."

A soc. and phil. freshe says discussions are better than lectures because you have to pay attention, at least some.

The Literary Issue

Sometimes a criticism is aimed at The Varsity to the effect that it is not literary enough, that it doesn't cater to the creative literary efforts of people on the campus. That criticism, of course, is based purely on a misunderstanding of the purpose of The Varsity. This is a newspaper, not a literary magazine, and accordingly our policy is guided along journalistic lines. In the days of old The Varsity was a literary endeavour, but that character has changed, the change being recognized and explained in our very name: "The Varsity, the undergraduate newspaper."

In our small way, however, we do encourage literary efforts outside the media provided for those efforts, namely the various college and faculty magazines. Our annual Literary Issue, published just before the Christmas holidays, provides a medium for real literary expression, with small material rewards added. The field is divided into several sections, there being prizes offered for the best contributions in the respective realms of poetry, light and serious; prose, fiction and essay; and art.

We are certain that there is considerable literary talent on the campus, much of it remaining hidden, however. College magazine editors have often in the past complained that difficulty is experienced in securing material. At times The Varsity has had trouble getting sufficient contributions for its Literary Issue. On a campus of this numerical size, such a state of things is deplorable, and we feel it can be easily remedied. Here is the opportunity for hidden talent to undig itself; here is the opportunity for uncovered talent to develop itself. The Literary Issue is published in an effort to encourage creative literary endeavours, and with the would-be poets, writers and artists on the campus rests the responsibility of producing a creditable issue. We hope for rousing support for the Literary Issue. Remember the deadline — and get your contributions in early.

Air Milestone

Last Saturday a significant milestone in world aviation history was reached when five years of trans-Pacific air mail service were completed after the 442nd crossing of the North Pacific by air. There could be no better illustration of the rapid growth in air transportation throughout the world, a growth which has gone on swiftly and silently, almost taken for granted by many.

The first cargo of the famous China Clipper consisted almost entirely of mail, much of it philatelic. 58 bags of mail, holding 110,865 letters, were carried on that pioneer flight in 1935, and since then the mail service has expanded constantly. But surpassing the mail service has been the development of a passenger service. No passengers were carried for revenue until eleven months after the trans-Pacific service started. Since the first days Pan American Airways' Clipper planes have carried 13,480,000 letters, 6,481 passengers, and they have flown 3,715,553 miles. The figures are fairly staggering, and they illustrate the proportions to which the trans-Pacific air service has grown.

The North Pacific route has been the long-established one, connecting the two continents in 6½ days, but this year saw the inauguration of the Southern Pacific air route with round trips every two weeks to New Zealand. The China service consists of a round-trip weekly. Three more giant planes are to be added to the service this coming year and scheduled flights will be speeded up to knit the world even more closely together. The growth of this service, along with the many similar services in other parts of the globe, is just an example to prove that man has not developed the airplane into an instrument of death and destruction alone, as one might pessimistically feel looking at the war today. The airplane has made, and is making, real contributions to the world in the paths of peace, and its constructive work should not be forgotten in the midst of a destructive air war.

We're The Target

We hope that today's women's interfaculty debate proves one-sided. After sixty years of publication, there can be no doubt that The Varsity's role in university life is firmly established. Setting aside the customary facetious remarks of staff and students, there are very few basic points that can refute the fact.

We welcome the debate, as it should provide sound, serious and constructive criticism of The Varsity from outsiders, a necessary factor which recently has been all too rare. We do not feel that our fate hangs in the balance, but it is quite possible that we can learn a great deal from the arguments brought to bear against us.

The topic is a live one, and should contribute to the revival of debating on the campus, where it has been almost non-existent since the start of the war. The good-will tour taken by two Varsity debaters through American universities and the impending women's intercollegiate debates are other welcome signs of life which should be supported by every undergraduate.

As long as an argument exists and there are two people who find it worth while to discuss it, there is freedom. Let us not voluntarily stifle democracy by unwillingness to put its principles into practical use.

AR MUSIC Drama

Toronto Symphony Orchestra

The Toronto Symphony Orchestra presented a concert last night which to date is the highlight of this season. Sir Thomas Beecham whipped up his musicians to a surpassing pitch in a rehearsal which lasted, by the way, well over four and a half hours. Every member responded as I have never before heard. The result was terrific. The string choir came through with a performance which equalled the best I have ever heard from any orchestra. Their pianissimos were the merest whispers and their tone was perfect; they made Massey Hall ring and yet their tone never became harsh. Special mention of the other sections will come appropriately with numbers in which they excelled. The audience, which jammed the auditorium, was more enthusiastic than any other group of Torontonians I have seen together — and they certainly had reason.

Sir Thomas Beecham opened the evening with a superb arrangement of his own, a Suite from Handel's opera, The Faithful Shepherd. The flutes were especially beautiful in the long solos of the second movement, an Adagio. They retained all their beauty through the rest of the evening. Their co-ordination with the bassoon, in fact that of the whole woodwind section, was always splendid. Delius' On Hearing the First Cuckoo in Spring gave them another workout to which they responded flawlessly.

The super-highlight of the evening was Mozart. The whole orchestra (no cuts in the string section) achieved a delicacy of which they must have hardly believed themselves capable. Beecham is world-renowned as a conductor of Mozart and he showed Toronto why. Toronto Symphony fans will probably go on talking about the second movement as long as they live. The orchestra has developed the habit of starting after the intermission with another light number. This gives those who listen over the radio a feeling of a complete program. Last night the Overture to The Marriage of Figaro followed the pre-intermission Mozart Symphony in D Major. The 'cello section handled its runs and rumblings with an easy grace in the former.

The very light Symphonic Poem, Le Rouet d'Omphale of Saint-Saens filled out the hour before the second symphony on the program. Here, perhaps more than anywhere else during the evening, Beecham's mastery over dynamics was evident. The final pianissimo faded away into the sheerest nothingness. When Brahms did roll around he was well worth the wait. I know it's not original, but my favourite Brahms Symphony is still the one I am listening to.

Last night it was the second. In the slow movement there is a long solo for French Horn, which was done as one can seldom hope to hear it duplicated. The

School, U.C. To Battle in Sea of Slush

Beginning at 1:30 p.m. today and lasting until the first spring thaw, lectures will be cancelled at University College and the School of Applied Science and Engineering so that the long-awaited traditional snowball fight between the two faculties may continue uninterrupted, it was announced late last night by official sources.

Ranking in popularity with the Santa Claus parade and the U.C. first year party, the snowball fight differs in that it is not an annual affair but takes place only every 25 years. A popular custom with students and staff alike, its rules provide that members of the winning college may take their choice of either an aegrotat, two passes to the Casino, or to the Sunday recital at Wymlwood, or an introduction to Yehudi.

Early rumours of the battle came two days ago, when reports from the weather bureau presaged the blizzard which hit the campus last night. Since then, underground but well-organized groups in both faculties participating have been carefully brushing up on their snowball strategy.

Late last night the U.C. quadrangle was buzzing with freshmen, egged on by throaty cries of "Nasty School" and "Pepsi-Cola forever!" from Ned Dawson and the athletic directorate who threatened them with expulsion from the library if they failed to be on hand for the contest.

Drawn up in battle dress formation, the Artsmen were practicing their aim on passing professors and replicas of the 1940 examination papers chalked on the walls of University College. Over in a shadowy corner of the quad, the chill winds and blasting snow wreathing their nefarious figures, another group was carefully preparing a huge pile of well-made ammunition.

Not to be outdone by the Artsmen, the Engineers were busy organizing an armoured ski patrol on library hill, constructing elaborate forts at the south side of the campus, and filling their snowballs with H2SO4. Having measured the front campus annually from every angle since the blizzard of '83 when they were completely routed by the Artsmen, wary Engineers, confident of victory, were checking up on their calculations and drawing up elaborate blue-prints of today's attack.

Whitney Hall and Hutton House girls were gathered at the Women's Union over bolts of material for white uniforms for the boys from U.C. Lured on by assurances of 2.30 leaves every night until the battle ends, the co-eds are also knitting special anti-aircraft screens for the Artsmen.

"I do hope our boys win," Principal Wallace anxiously said in an interview last night. He then voiced a fear that many of the students would be lost in the deep drifts surrounding the college.

Last-minute reports said the Artsmen were drafting a company of Vic students to act as bystanders to run the Schoolmen out of ammunition, but the news could not be confirmed in official circles. AITCH and THE DRUID...

rest of the Brahms' was scholarly and dignified — and breath-takingly beautiful.

Beecham's conducting has been described as eccentric in the extreme. I found him rather remarkably restrained. Any of his movements on the podium were calculated to lift the orchestra over some peak in delicate expression, and his precise beat must be a pleasure to follow.

LEACH LEADS MEDS TO LACROSSE WIN OVER S.P.S. THIRDS

Doctors Now Entrenched in Second Place Behind Underfed U.C. Players

Fleet-footed, shifty, hard-shooting Wilfred Leach single-handed downed a rugged band of School lacrosse players yesterday afternoon in the big gym, as he scored nine of his team's goals in Meds' triumphant 14-5 victory over S.P.S. Thirds.

Leach led a scoring barrage that gave the Doctors an easy win, entrenching themselves in second place behind the undefeated U.C. squad. Lampert counted three times, which added to Leach's nine, and singles by Barootes and Mewhort, completed the winners' score. Kelley plunked the mesh on three occasions to lead the Engineers' offense.

Meds started off fast and had a 4-1 lead at the end of the opening quarter, a margin which they never relinquished. School's best session was in the third quarter when they held the opposition to three corners and scored an equal number themselves.

In the closing period Meds' crushing power was prominently displayed as they held their rivals scoreless and bulged the time four times on their own behalf.

Meds: Mewhort, Lampert, Barootes, Leach, Gullick, Miller, Quinlan, Mighon and Baker.
S.P.S. III: Forestell, Lambie, Willmot, Morice, Lewis, and Kelley.

KNOX DEFEATS VIC SOCCERITES

The Purple and White of Knox rode to a convincing 2-0 victory over the strong Victoria soccer eleven yesterday afternoon on the wind-swept back campus. They thus proved to all and sundry their right to oppose Meds in the playoff battle on Friday afternoon for the Arts Faculty Trophy.

Knox garnered both their counters in a torrid first half attack. Fergie Barr was right on the spot to use his noggin to deflect the first score past the Vic goal. With but three minutes remaining before the interval Jim Jack took a pass from Archibald to further sink last year's champions into the mire.

The last half was featured by many close calls at both ends. Knox, however, had the correct idea when they forced the play throughout the half thus proving once again that the best defense is a good offense.

Knox: MacSween, Currie, Stewart, Jack, Sell, Graham, McKenzie, Thomson, Archibald, F. Barr, McKay, Weir, N. Barr.

Vic: Haffinan, Stone, Powell, Paton, McKenzie, MacLeod, Burbridge, Cummings, Kirkland, Bryce, Taylor, Hurst.

Here they are at last, folks — those games you have all been awaiting with bated breath — the semi-finals! The winners, well tried in the playoffs, are all anxious for the starting signal this evening: O.C.E.'s gymnasium has proven a kind host to enthusiastic spectators who just wouldn't use the benches even if there was room for more; and last, but not least, the kind old weatherman has put us in the mood to appreciate a nice warm gymnasium, cheery players, and camera-fast action. So, come on gals and fellows, brush the snow off your coats, bring along your cheers, and remember to direct your steps to the dear old Bloor Street diggings round about 7 o'clock.

Just in case you've forgotten, these semi-finals are being played in a round, total points to count, four games in all, and all at O.C.E. this week. With Thursday to rest up and the games early on Friday, great things are expected both from the players and from the supporters. You'll enjoy your week-end much more if you first enliven your spirits at a good basketball game.

So that no one interested will have any excuse for not showing up — and for the benefit of the players — here are the times, teams, and contestants all for nothing.

Wed., 7 Vic Seniors vs St. Hilda's Seniors; 8 U.C. Juniors vs O.T. & P.

Fri., 6 U.C. Juniors vs O.T. & P. We'll let you know about the fourth game later.

Speaking OF SPORT

By Bill Quigley

Any hopes we may have entertained for an East-West football spectacle this fall (or should we say, winter) have evidently gone up with the smoke generated by the big black cigars of the honourable gentlemen who are the powers that be behind that distinguished body known as the Canadian Rugby Union.

Last week, by a telegraphic vote, these beloved members of the "Eastern" Canadian Rugby Union frowned most disapprovingly on the suggestion that this traditional event should take place in any shape or form. Yes, even though the proceeds would go toward supplying athletic equipment for our Canadian Active Service Forces. But then, doesn't the responsibility for this state of affairs lie with the Western C.R.U. for their refusal to return to the C.R.U. fold? And a one downtown sportswriter so cautiously stated when referring to Winnipeg's Blue Bombers, "They dug their own grave so let them lie in it." Yes, they did, but why?

THE CASE FOR THE WEST

Some years ago, western football teams decided that the annual trouncings they were receiving as victims of eastern powerhouses simply had to stop. Also, they were getting just a trifle annoyed performing year after year before a handful of fans, half of whom never knew why they attended the weird contests anyway. Certainly they had no particular fascination except perhaps for the most ardent supporter, and even he had his weaker moments.

Thus it was that a group of blue-blooded sportsmen, with successful business careers behind and before them, tackled the great problem of placing their football teams on an even footing with the powerful aggregations turned out by Sarisa, Toronto, Ottawa and Montreal.

Few really believed that this could ever be accomplished. Where were the players to come from? Was not the population of Toronto alone as great as that of the whole province of Alberta? How could a city the size of Calgary or Regina, drawing on its few thousand high-school students, many of whom never played football, hope to field an outfit which could stand against one that drew its personnel from southern Ontario, a hot-bed of gridiron stars? What seemed to be the only logical solution to the difficult situation was the plan they ultimately devised whereby the importation of American football stars was effected.

But what about public support? Were not Westerners cool towards the football code in force at the time? Didn't they prefer to chase a golf ball on Saturday afternoons when they could be teckling over to the stadium? To satisfy the true gridiron interest felt by all Westerners, sections of the C.R.U. code were revised, particularly the rule regarding interference ahead of the line of scrimmage. Interference was extended to five yards for any player on the offensive team and later the limit was set at ten yards.

Both innovations proved highly satisfactory. The majority of the importations lived up to all advance notices; many willingly and eagerly accepted invitations to coach high-school teams; most of them remained in Canada to become outstanding business-men and active citizens. Attendance hit a new all time mark due mainly to the fact that fans liked the spectacular game the Western Union had given them. High-school football flourished with the result that today Winnipeg, Calgary and Regina can look forward to days when importations are merely a memory. In fact, the rookie crop was of such calibre this fall that not one new import appeared from across the international boundary line.

Thus we cannot see why the West should revert to a football code which proved entirely unsatisfactory to them from every angle. Winnipeg is perfectly willing to participate in a Dominion Final under the C.R.U. code, but the C.R.U. dictates otherwise. Do you really think that Winnipeg would have won two national titles if this new era of western football which we have so sketched outlined, had not been born? We don't think so.

OUR HUMBLE OPINION

We have had the opportunity of seeing both eastern and western systems of play in operation over the last three years and have been impressed with many features of both codes. However, perhaps because we are a son of the wild and woolly west we prefer the spectacular displays put on by the Bombers, Bronks and Roughriders. There is a tremendous difference in offensive formations with the result that the western ball carrier following his interference breaks into the open field much more often than he would without the perfect co-operation of his blocking team-mates. Here it is ball carrier ahead of his fellow backs; out in the wilds he follows his mates. Quite simple, or is it?

Oh well, we have military training every Saturday anyway...

ONE-THIRD OF TICKETS FOR VIC ORAMA SOLO

Since the box office at Victoria College opened on Monday at 10 a.m. a third of the tickets for the three-night showing of "Family Portrait" have been sold, the dramatic society's executive informed The Varsity Tuesday afternoon.

Opening night will feature the usual theatre party given by the freshies for the seniors who guided them through their early days at Victoria. It has become a custom at Vic for each freshie to take her senior "big sister" to the dramatic society's production.

Friday evening's tickets are going rapidly and the sales for the other two nights do not lag far behind.

The box office at Victoria is open from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. daily.

BAYONET PRACTICE OUMIE MAY BE HAD BY SOLOIERS

If the harassed workman with the imposing coil of iron wire ever gives out how to put them together the soldier tyros of this campus will soon have 9 solid new bayonet practice dummies. Then they will learn to use the knives which up to now have served only to add a pound and a half to the already ample weight of the training rifles. The frames for this equipment, sturdy products of the university carpenter shop, stood behind the U.C. quad yesterday. A man with a pair of pliers and a large coil of iron wire was trying to secure a stuffed burp bag to each frame in the official and acceptable manner.

He explained to The Varsity that the shavings-filled sacks must be attached in a certain manner so that, in cold weather, the steel will not meet with an obstruction and snap off.

FRIDAY, NOVEMBER 29

School Thirds and Senior Meds Swamp U.C.; S.P.S. in Volleyball

U.C. Thirds Lose Their Third Straight Match in Scores of 15-8, 3-15, 15-12

U.C. Thirds' spiking outfit managed to keep the credit side of their ledger blank yesterday by dropping their third straight match, this time to School Thirds. The score was 15-8, 3-15, 15-12. Minus one man, the Red and White came back with a rush after dropping the first installment, but the spiking of lanky track star Lionel Peckover meant the difference in the final game.

S.P.S. III: Peckover, Lewis, Wilmon, Webb, Penfold, Wilson.

U.C. III: Gray, Phillips, Waiglass, White, Rubin.

Senior Meds Bag First Win in Group I Volleyball When Senior School Concedes Match

Senior School's volleyball sextet descended another stair into the Group I volleyball cellar yesterday afternoon and at the same time Senior Meds bagged their first win. Short on time, the game was called with Meds far in the lead and the match was conceded by School.

Sr. Meds: Floren, Freedman, Lax, Levitt, Winter, Peckes, Levy, Steiner, Finberg.

Sr. S.P.S.: Keller, Jaffe, Allen, Pauco, Waite, Starr, Zuerren, Stark.

FIRST OF SEMI-FINALS IN CO-ED BASKETBALL

University College Juniors meet Occupational Therapy and Physiotherapy in O.C.E. gym at 8:30 in the first group semi-final fixture of the co-ed basketball loop.

The O.T.'s and Physios boast an undefeated record in their games so far this season, and Coach Jean Keefe and Captain Wilma Perry are confident that they will give the Red and White a stiff battle. The forward line is clicking beautifully in its passing attack, and the addition of a number of players from the prairie provinces has added a lot of fire to the O.T. & P. squad.

The Juniors from old U.C. have a hot pair of forwards in Betty Mortimer and Betty Allen, high scoring duo for the Artswomen. Marg Stoke and Zoe Christie are expected to shine on the defence.

MEDICAL EXAMINATIONS FINISHED LAST MONDAY

Monday evening between the hours of four and six the last of over 1500 men of the Training Centre Battalion passed down the line of examining army doctors in Hart House Art Gallery. Statistics on the examinations are not yet available. Lieut. E. A. MacDonald, adjutant of the battalion, told The Varsity. The orderly room staff are now engaged in preparing figures on the 1500 odd reports which are to be sent to Ottawa.

Lieut. MacDonald was unable to state just where the line of exemption will be drawn, but it is reasonable to expect that all class E men will be eliminated from the battalion.

Full facts and figures on the medical examinations are expected for tomorrow's issue.

JUNIOR SCHOOL DEFEATS DENTS B IN VOLLEYBALL

Jr. S.P.S.: Lucas, Parchello, Gibson, Ishbiter, Wilson, Jones, Christlaw, Bell, Smith, Darling.

let's go places

Not particularly different from any other musical comedy, but good entertainment nevertheless, "Too Many Girls" is the drawing hall of Shear's current double bill. A good deal better than the run-of-the-mill collich picture, the entire film is kept going from start to finish by a sound run of punchy gags and cracks, and the music and dancing is entertaining enough. In general, there is so much of this sort of thing floating about, supplemented so lavishly by Lucille Ball, Frankie Langford and reasonable and agreeable facsimiles, that it made us feel all very useful about college life. Richard Carlson was very fine indeed, and Eddie Bracken's inanities superlative.

Other side of the double is a routine airplane picture with Richard Dix, Edmund Lowe and Wendy Barrie, entitled "Men Against the Sky". It is sit-throughable—H.D.H.

"Beyond Tomorrow" is a picture which follows in the trail of the "Topper" series and has to do with the supernatural—with spirits after death.

It opens with three old hard-working misers with only a house-keeper and a servant as friends deciding to give out some Christmas cheer. So each throw a wallet out of the window with their address in it. Only two are returned, one by a young ex-rodéo from Texas and the other by a pretty kindergarten teacher. Follows one of extreme gaiety for the men, the housekeeper and the young couple which is interrupted by a business deal. The three old men have to fly to New York. A crash ensues and all three die.

Then each of the old men is allowed to spend a certain time on earth as a spirit, depending on the amount of soul they had. Two of them are soon called by the Voice. The third stays longer and when he is called, says he has to stay because Jimmy, the Texan, has become a great singer and is being vamped by a siren. However, all this old Irishman can do is to no avail for the divorced husband of the vamp catches him and Texan and shoots them both. Jimmy lies so near death on the operating table that his soul leaves him and talks to old Irish Michael. Then the Voice again calls Michael and Jimmy. But Michael asks another chance for Jimmy, is granted it, and Michael proceeds upwards while Jimmy pulls through the operation and everyone is happy.

If you liked pictures like "Strange Cargo" or the "Topper" pictures in their more serious moments, you will like "Beyond Tomorrow". Frank Wingender sparkles as Michael with his Irish wit and Maria Ouspenskaya plays the housekeeper with customary brilliance. Both Richard Carlson as the Texan and Jean Parker give a creditable performance.

On the same bill is "The Earl of Puddleston" which stars the Gleason family. Its hilarity really makes this double bill something worth seeing.

WIDE-EYED IN GOTHAM

By Reuven Frank

New York: "Wuxtree! Wuxtree! . . . Getcha paper here . . . Molder in de Bronx . . . Wuxtree! . . ." And so all day and all night the newshawks hawk their wares—nine metropolitan dailies, at least a dozen suburban dailies. The presses hum, and reporters scramble around town with photographic inebriates in tow. At any time you may be stopped by a sallow gentleman with a red nose. "Whaddaya think of the return of the bustle?" And tomorrow's paper has a very inaccurate picture of you stuck in the column known as the inquiring photographer. Yes, photographer! In this city of seven and a half million souls there must be at least eight million newspapers sold every day. If anyone stopped to figure the number of tons of newsprint consumed in New York City and environs each month, that would be a lot of tons. The situation revolves on two facts: first, Gothamites spend a goodly portion of their lives living like moles in the subway, and a goil's gotta read, and secondly, there are seven and one half million suckers for the printed word.

Whaddayadread, mister? Well, very cursory surveys point out that every intelligent looking person seems to favour the tabloids, while those who look like the pot-roast is burning in Hell's Kitchen almost invariably sport the New York Times. The latter is a compendium of all the news, purportedly, that is fit to print, and you are doubtless aware of its voluminousness, its knowledgeability and its pompous attitude of social responsibility which scarcely tallies with the facts. The Herald-Tribune, its bitterest rival, is similar in every detail, only not as much so in some respects, more so in others, and it boasts one comic strip, Arthur Krock and Anne O'Hare McCormick pontificate in the columns of the Times, where the Trib boasts Dorothy Thompson (a remarkable woman, but a woman) and Walter Lippman (zero in white tie and mortar-board). By inference, all the news that is unfit to print to find its way into the other two morning papers, namely, the tabloids. The casual stranger seems to agree with this viewpoint, and, insofar as the Daily Mirror is concerned, he is right. But the Daily News is the most under-rated publication in town. Not really, for it has the world's second largest circulation, almost two million a day, and three and a half on Sundays, but the intellectuals, so-called, look down their long blue noses at the News, an attitude which might be dubbed no nose for News.

Of course, the editorial policy of the News is inspired. Onetime playboy-socialist Capt. Joe Patterson is a very unstable guy and he has two million readers and almost as many advertisers to cater to, so that Roosevelt is a war-monger on Tuesdays and an appeaser on Thursdays and Willie is a good guy but we endorse Roosevelt who tomorrow will be a lowdown heel but somehow we . . . This is of little import as no one reads the editorials in the News.

Viewed absolutely, this little paper is an engineering achievement, the ultimate in mass production. It has three printing plants, in Manhattan, Brooklyn, they set up twenty or so pages is set up in the main building in Manhattan, and then the editorial impressions are taken of this (Yes, Moritz, matrices) and sent under police escort to the other two plants. In Brooklyn, they set up twenty or so pages of their own copy of Brooklyn and sundry Long Island News, and run off the whole thing. The Bronx is a single job.

The staff is quite a thing. There are few well-known names, so that we must indulge in some personal opinions. McDonald and Fleason from Washington are as good as Pearson and Allen, if not better. Danton Walker has Walter Winchell beat eight ways, and he accepts the English language as it stands. And the man who writes the captions for their pictures is a genius. A few examples: Boris Karloff is father of a girl (It's a Gail at the Gargyle's), Bundfuehrer Fritz Kuhn goes to Sing Sing (Drang nach Ossining), the Austrians vote on Anschluss under watchful Gestapo eyes (With a Heil Nazi, Nazi, and a Hot Ja-Ja).

A young fellow named J. David Stern drifted into Philadelphia a few years back, and married an heiress. He loved his wife, and sunk her money into an almost defunct local paper known formally as The Philadelphia Record. By spending wildly, he put the Record back on its feet, almost gave the Inquirer palpitations, and drew money out faster than it had gone in. He repeated the process in a few more towns, and then, as all men do, came to New York.

Here he found the New York Evening Post, founded by Alexander Hamilton, and under very desperate circumstances. He bought it for a song—just two verses and a chorus, as a matter of fact, and here we go again. He hired the best talent in town. Everybody who was anybody worked for the Post. He offered crime reporter Meyer Berger seven times his salary (and his salary is far from alfalfa) but Berger stuck to the Times. With the rest it was come one, come all.

Somewhat it didn't work, so Dave sold out at a loss to real estate operator George Barker, whose first act was to lure the late Heywood Brown from the World-Telegram (He wrote one column and died.) and his next to give America's pennant Leonardo, Norman Bel Geddes, carte blanche and a cheque of the same colour. What Geddes did to that paper should be recorded for ever on stone, or something. The nearest, clearest, most original make-up graces the pages—not of PM—but of the New York Post. Add to this competent news coverage, intelligent editorial policy, the only sane gossip columnist (Leonard Lyons), Franklin P. Adams, military expert Fletcher Pratt, a full page of comics, and what more do you want?

What if the Post is losing thousands of dollars a day? It's worth it, I say.

PM, (vide supra) was the journalist's dream until the first edition hit the streets. With every good idea in the world, with Kenneth Crawford, Margaret Bourke-White, Nunnally Johnson, and other luminaries on its payroll, PM is still a bust. Everybody has been trying to figure it out. Eugene Lyons, editor of the American Mercury, says that despite its four-column format, people have suspicions that there is a fifth column lurking somewhere. Ferdinand Lundberg, writing in Harper's, fears that it is a Popular Front organ two years after the Popular Front died.

I won't argue with these gentlemen: all this may be very true, but there is still no explanation for the fact that nobody buys PM. Its circulation is far below that of the Brooklyn Eagle and below the News' two million it looks like a high school paper. I have a few explanations. (For those of you who find this boring, read no further; there is no change of subject.) In the first place, the pre-publication build up was too much, and the facts did not live up to it. Second, it costs five cents. This I feel is the main reason. And third, the editorial policy and the news policy are woefully inconsistent. There is no doubt that the newspaper of tomorrow will more nearly approximate PM than the Trib, but the people who threw five million luscious bucks down Ralph Ingersoll's private drain-pipe should have worried about the newspaper of today.

The Sun is the afternoon counterpart of the Times, but is vicious, unprin-

OUR LONG-SIMMERING PATRICIAN BLOOD finally boiled over with a resounding sizzle last night when we were told that the December issue of Esquire has disappeared from the U.C. junior common room. This piece of news is the more affecting in view of the sad fact that we hadn't read it ourselves. . . . Mr. O'Mara would have a characteristic comment to make on the situation, but in view of the depths of our emotions, WE PREFER TO REMAIN SPEECHLESS.

We remained speechless for a full five seconds.

THE CO-EDS at the U. of Idaho have been instructed in the use of their new game room by the following rules from the social director: " . . . after 4 p.m. men shall come to the game room only when accompanied by women friends. Before 4 p.m. it is permissible for men to play ping-pong in the women's game room. However, for study, playing cards or listening to records, men should use their own lounge and game room." After the lecture the professor commented on the incident, remarking that it proved the inadvisability of mixing classes of pass and honour students. . . . work they did and the House has a great debt to Mr. Campbell-McInnes, who has been director of the Songsters for the last twelve years.

There will be no part singing at the Songster and no vocal attainments or knowledge of music are required in order to participate; all that is necessary is a desire to sing. Songs of all kinds will go to make up the program. The atmosphere will be informal; smoking will be permitted as usual. Those attending will be guests of the Acting Warden for light refreshments afterwards. The Music Committee urge all members of Hart House to be present.

'THEATRE PROJECTS' IS TOPIC OF ADDRESS

Democracy a Way of Life Declares S.C.M. Speaker In Basic Convictions Talk

SURGEON-WRITER AIRS HIS VIEWS ON LEISURE READING

Dr. Jacob Markowitz Gives Informal Talk at First Library Evening of the Season in Hart House

ADVISES READING BACON

"Once you get lost in a good book you emerge a different person," was the opinion expressed by Dr. Jacob Markowitz in an informal talk on "My Leisure Reading" last night at the first Hart House Library Evening. Dr. Markowitz is a member of the university staff and a noted authority on experimental surgery.

"You are here to listen to my own prejudiced point of view," began the speaker, "and that is what you are going to get. I don't read widely, but I read all the time. I simply must read when I go to sleep or when I eat alone."

"There are some people who read the same books all the time, some who

LADIES NOW ALLOWED AT WYCLIFFE TEAS

Students at Wycliffe College are rejoicing because they are now able to invite their ladies fair to have Sunday tea with them at the college.

As an innovation this year, whenever a Hart House evening concert takes place, a buffet tea is held in the dining room where the theologians and their friends can mingle and chat with each other. After tea, instead of going to their respective churches, the students attend a service which is conducted by the boys themselves in the Founder's Chapel.

One student preaches a short sermon and another takes charge of the proceedings so that the faculty is not responsible for the service. Owen Pritchard, B.A., senior student of Wycliffe, delivered the sermon at the first tea, and last week the speaker was V. D. Wigmore, one of this year's graduating class.

After the chapel service, the students congregate in the college reading room until it is time to go to the concert at Hart House.

Museum is not Merely a Gallery But a Place of Education, Research

"The museum is for organic material that the library is for books," declared Dr. L. L. Snyder of the Royal Ontario Museum when he set out to describe its functions. They are, namely, the collecting and preserving of materials and facts, the studying of these facts, and the dissemination of knowledge.

To Mr. and Mrs. Average Citizen the museum is merely a gallery because they are aware only of the material they see in cases, but its three-fold purpose also includes the aspects of research and education.

Dr. Snyder is the curator in charge of the Division of Birds and assistant director in the Royal Ontario Museum of Zoology. The Bird Room which has nothing to do with the public display, has 66,000 specimens; this is the seventh largest collection in the world. Last June the collection was practically

Neil Morrison of the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation Speaks During Noon-Hour in Hart House Library

"FAITH NEEDED"

"We should not regard democracy as merely an abstract theory but as a way of life," declared Mr. Neil Morrison at the S.C.M. noon hour lecture yesterday. Mr. Morrison, who directs educational programs of the C.B.C., spoke in Hart House library on "The Meaning of Democracy."

Using the tale of "The Good Samaritan" as an illustration, the speaker said that the person who believes in democracy without acting on it might be compared with the priest or Levite who passed by on the other side, whereas the true attribute of democracy is exemplified by the Samaritan who stopped to help his fellow man.

In referring to the present situation Mr. Morrison said that everything that was settled and established in Europe was now being upset. "There is a tremendous amount of that society which is not worth saving but there are other things which are," added the speaker.

According to Mr. Morrison what we are fighting to preserve is not just our economic system but deeper and more vital things like the inherent dignity of the individual man, the equal worth of all men in the sight of God and the brotherhood of man.

Mr. Morrison emphasized the fact that to face and overcome a threat like the present one, democratic men must have faith.

The address was one in the series on "Basic Convictions" which the S.C.M. has been sponsoring this term.

SUNDAY SONGSTER

All members of Hart House are invited to come to a Songster at 8.45 p.m. in the Music Room on Sunday next, 1st December. Mr. J. Campbell-McInnes will conduct the program, which will be as follows:

Hymn: The Lord's My Shepherd, I'll not Want Adeste Fideles
The Carter's Health
Go Down Moses
Rio Grande
The Flight of the Earls
Good Christian Men Rejoice

The Varsity Fulfills Its Purpose Students and Judges Decide

Affirmative from St. Mike's Downs U.C. Debaters; Topic, "Resolved that The Varsity Fulfills Its Purpose"

Adjudicators and students alike upheld the affirmative side of the debate "Resolved that The Varsity Fulfills its Purpose" at the Women's Union yesterday. Mildred Ogle and Mary Storz, debaters from St. Mike's, who spoke for the affirmative, defeated Jean Ross and "Taffie" Lewis, U.C. freshettes.

Mary Storz, first speaker for the affirmative, gave a general outline of the primary purposes of The Varsity. The leader of the government maintained that The Varsity was a unifying factor because it presented news from all the faculties. She pointed out that The Varsity presented the news fairly and gave complete coverage to campus events.

The second speaker for the government, Mildred Ogle, delved into what she considered the secondary purposes of The Varsity. She said that working on the The Varsity brought people together by bonds of common interest and these friendships were established between students of the various faculties. "The Varsity is a training ground for future journalists," she continued, "and many of its former members now have good positions on downtown newspapers." Miss Ogle felt that foreign matters were adequately and fairly discussed in the editorial columns.

SATURDAY LECTURE TO BE PHOTOGRAPHY

Dr. Walter Clark to Discuss "The Application of Photography on Various Problems of Current Interest"

IN CONVOCAION HALL

The next lecture by the Royal Canadian Institute in Convocation Hall will be given by Dr. Walter Clark, Ph.D., on Saturday, November 30, at 8.15 p.m. "The Application of Photography on Various Problems of Current Interest," will be the topic discussed. Dr. Clark is a chemist, and assistant vice-president in charge of research in the Eastman Kodak Company, Rochester, N.Y. Recently he published the book "Photography by Infra-Red."

Last year photography reached its hundredth birthday. Although it was invented to serve a definite technical purpose it has been brought within the reach of all as a hobby. Its special applications have increased beyond measure in many fields of human interest. Some of these will be discussed and illustrated in this lecture.

Many interesting views of photography in the fields of war, surgery and science will be reviewed. The lecture will close with a number of examples of colour photographs which represent the highest achievements of photographic research.

ATHLETIC ADVISORY BOARD HOLDS ITS FIRST MEETING IN HART HOUSE MUSIC ROOM

The advisory board of the University of Toronto Athletic Association met last night in Hart House, dining first in the grad dining room and then adjourning to the music room for one of its two annual meetings.

Dr. John A. McCollum of Toronto, chairman of the Directorate, presided at the meeting of the board, which also includes T. A. Reed and Warren Stephens, and is chiefly composed of members of past directorates. Also present were President Cody, Dean Beatty, Dr. Gallie, Conny Smythe and many former athletic stars.

Members of this year's directorate cancelled their scheduled meeting in order to attend as guests of the Board.

The opposition were of the opinion that The Varsity, in many instances, covered unimportant incidents at great length and overlooked worthwhile events. The negative found the Campus Cat funny on only rare occasions and suggested that The Varsity institute a gossip column.

In canvassing student opinion at Whitney Hall, the upholders of the negative side found that only two girls out of ten read the editorial page. After the formal debate the speaker had the discussion thrown open to the students present at the debate. Co-ed complaints about the Varsity were heard from all corners of the room and they ranged from the girl in Honour Law who didn't see why a Mr. Fowler's speech wasn't reported in The Varsity to the girl who wanted to know why women's sport wasn't given more publicity.

Edgar Simon, managing editor of The Varsity, was the first newshound to get up courage to answer the co-ed complaints and he explained that the Campus Cat had to cater to varied student senses of humour and what was funny to one person was not funny to another. (Continued on Page 4)

COMMUNION BREAKFAST PLANNED FOR SUNDAY IN NEWMAN HALL OAK ROOM

Donald Morand, president of the undergraduate club at Newman Hall, reports that the monthly Communion breakfast of that body will be held this Sunday morning.

Following 10 o'clock Mass in St. Thomas Aquinas Chapel, the students will adjourn to the Oak Room of the club-house. Breakfast arrangements are being made for about 70 students and friends.

Mr. Morand will be chairman and Father Joseph McHenry, the club chaplain, will introduce the guest speaker.

"For some years now these frequent get-togethers of the Catholic students have brought much good fun and fellowship and it is the plan of this year's executive to uphold thoroughly this practice," said the president.

AUTHOR-TRAVELLER AS GUEST AT U.C. LIT SPEAKS ON THE WAR

Willson Woodside Divides the Subject of the War into Three Phases — Sea, Air, and Mediterranean War

BUSINESS DISCUSSED

Mr. Willson Woodside, well known traveller, author and news commentator, spoke on the war at the U.C. Literary and Athletic Society meeting in the junior common room last night.

He divided the subject into three parts — sea warfare, air war and the Mediterranean war in Greece and Africa. He also discussed the diplomatic background of the various phases of the struggle.

"The sea war, while serious, has not become calamitous because of the tremendous reserve of the U.S. merchant marine," said Mr. Woodside. It was true that the number of sinkings had gone up but only certain times in the month.

The Greek war, in his opinion, revealed the internal weakness of Italy, and if the war continues to drain her finances, she should break down in a few months.

Turkey's firmness had so strengthened Russia's position that she could easily afford to restrain Bulgaria from joining in Hitler's group of nations, stated the speaker.

He spoke of the possibility of the Allied use of the U.S. navy for convoy and possibilities of further U.S. participation in the war.

The Literary and Athletic Society received reports on its finances and possibilities in its social program.

Harold B. Takeman, chairman of the Students' War Services, who was also a guest speaker, made an eloquent plea for the society's support. A motion was passed which gave unanimous support to the Committee of the Students' War Services and their aims.

The program was rounded out by imitations and a clever satire on the Board of Governors of the university, and His Excellency the Governor-General.

Corsages Gradually Sink Lower In Opinion of Those who Buy 'Em

Eds waxed lyrical yesterday according to a survey of their opinions on co-ed remuneration of corsages. "The price he pays to buy le fleur keeps him everlastingly poor," said Jack Leech, Vic 3rd year Pass.

"The thrill it gives a little heart is worth the sum with which you part," remarked poetic Sam MacLeod of Vic. "The girls of the University of Toronto don't need corsages to enhance their beauty so why not contribute this money to the Red Cross?" offered Jack Gully, 1st year Med student.

In the same vein N. W. Leach, also I Meds, said, "Some people have expressed the opinion that if corsages weren't worn by girls, the boys would neglect to hand the money over to the Red Cross and to make certain of that the Red Cross ought to issue some symbol of it to each girl."

Bryce Wilson, 2nd year Commerce

Nearly Two-Thirds of the Eds Found in Perfect Physical Condition by the Examining Medical Officers

1500 EXAMINED

Of the 1500 male students enrolled in the Training Centre Battalion only 142 or less than ten per cent. have been rejected by the medical examiners, it was reported today. Of these 142 were in category E and 31 in C2. Those in categories C1 and higher will be required to take the training as specified by an agreement between the Canadian Universities and the Department of National Defence.

Nearly two thirds of the male students between the ages of 20 and 25 were found to be in perfect physical condition. In the other categories there were 365 men including a small number of class D cases. This category is for those temporarily disabled. This class is exempt from training for the time being, but will be re-examined on recovery and assigned to new categories.

The rejected will be informed of their exemption by letter within a few days. Lieut. E. A. Macdonald, Adjutant of the battalion, informed The Varsity that letters were being prepared as fast as the orderly room staff could work.

ARCHITECT STUDENTS DISPLAY THEIR WORK

There are but two more days left in which to view the School of Architecture's exhibit of students' work in the Hart House Art Gallery. Here the school has on display tangible evidence of its work. Displays range from blueprints to scale models of buildings.

Coloured drawings and isometric views show all types of structures from railway stations to day nurseries, hotels to low cost housing units. In the Art Library nook there stands a glass case in which a number of "dolls house" models are on display. These are mostly of ultra-modern type featuring flat roofs and expansive lots.

The purely aesthetic section of the exhibit consists of a number of Gull Lake and Vacation Sketches and some life studies.

Friday evening will mark the closing of this annual exhibit. Saturday it will be changed for one by another University Department. This will be the annual show of work by the students in Fine Art.

and Finance, said, "It was a very noble gesture on the girls' part but I'll bet most of them don't like the idea."

"Personally I think corsages improve a girl's appearance and make her feel better and even if money is saved it would probably not go to war work," said Tom Peart, Honour Fine Art.

Ron Waite and John Girvan of S. P.S., think it is a practical idea and that although it must be a disappointment to the girls men would like it on general principles. "Being engineers we are always broke and that helps a lot," explained E. V. Polley and J. G. Love, engineers.

"If a man sends a corsage it should be in the form of a red cross to show his heart is in the right place," remarked Mac Taylor, 2nd year Modern History student. "A magnificent gesture but useless," exclaimed John Pallett, 3rd Pass.

Vain Attempt

The plea for assistance that the Marquess of Lothian, British Ambassador to the United States, is at present making in Washington, is the subject of a good deal of comment in Berlin these days.

In an attempt to convince the United States that Britain is merely trying to "entice American money into a trap and thus save British funds," German authorities got a bit mixed up and must have greatly confused the people they were trying to convince. Both the press and official quarters comment on Lord Lothian's pessimistic attitude, but they are obviously suspicious of his motives in being so frank.

It is the opinion of these people that Lord Lothian is depicting the financial situation in far worse terms than the situation merits — but they also add that of course Britain's situation is hopeless. German authorities seem to be faced with a peculiar situation. They don't know whether to claim that Britain needs no help from the United States, and thus attempt to keep the States from lending assistance, or to claim that Britain is so badly off that such help will not be sufficient. Evidently they are attempting to strike a medium; but it is neither very convincing nor very logical.

Says one German newspaper, "Lord Lothian is obviously planning an impudent fraud with the idea of enticing American money into a trap in order to save British funds. America, according to Lord Lothian's plans, will have to foot the bill."

Says another German paper, "Lord Lothian intended to launch a well-aimed blow at rich American resources, which apparently exist only to help the power that waged the first world war at American expense. It is not a general practice for belligerent nations that are fighting with desperation to further damage their already badly scarred reputation by emphasizing their weakness."

"On the one hand," continues the same paper, "he has to preach the unshakable faith of his nation in an ultimate victory. His second job is to spread the word that England cannot win with her own resources alone." The paper concludes with the optimistic suggestion that "Today American dollars would be wasted from the beginning on a lost cause."

In other words, the Germans seem hopeful of being able to convince the United States that it is only a question of money that is at stake, an attempt doomed to defeat before it was begun.

Student Uprisings

The news that comes out of Nazi-dominated European countries these days usually contains little of the uprisings that are going on among patriotic citizens, but every now and then a story comes through about the difficulties of universities and their students — sometimes even about trouble in the high school.

Last year stories were frequent about university students in Czechoslovakia and such countries escaping in groups to join the allied armies. Stories were also numerous concerning the wholesale imprisonment of students in those countries, who were ringleaders of the mobs that revolted against Nazi rule. Actually their efforts did little good. What results could be achieved by a few thousand students in the face of armed Nazi soldiers? How much, if any, they succeeded in bolstering the morale of their people is a different matter.

man system of sending minor "Quislings", complete with uniform, into their classes among them. According to the report, the fledgling traitors were being severely beaten by the young patriots in the schools. If even the children refuse to take it, it should be a fair indication of what is going on amongst the mature populations of the conquered northern countries.

This week another report of student uprisings came from Holland — via Berlin. The Technical University of Delft has been closed for an indefinite period by German authorities, according to the report, as a sequel to a student strike which took place when a Jewish professor was dismissed. Student demonstrations have occurred at the universities of Leyden and Utrecht, but thus far only investigative action has been taken at these institutions. It must be remembered that these accounts of the student trouble came from Germany, and probably tell only half the story. There is no doubt more to it than the Germans care to print.

Meanwhile, in France, students are faced with a different problem. From December 1, pupils crossing the line of demarcation between occupied and unoccupied France to go to school must have identity cards and special permits. And in the unoccupied zone students are having difficulty finding text books. Even in the case of such seemingly inoffensive works as digests of Roman law, booksellers explain that orders sent to Paris months ago still await shipment.

There are, in all probability, a great many more student uprisings in European countries these days than ever get into print. So far they have gained no material success and they probably never will, but in addition to adding to the troubles of the Nazis in their conquered but not subdued countries, these student revolts should be giving encouragement to the spirits of people who are badly in need of a little encouragement.

More Dates for All

A few days ago a University of California professor hopped out on a limb and left himself open for nation-wide comment when he advised students to have more dates—"for the sake of your mental health", was the way he put it. Stags or exclusively co-ed affairs won't do either — they won't help your mental health a bit. They must be regular, honest to goodness dates.

Said professor told students at the University of California that "they were not having enough dates to maintain mental health." Well, could be, we suppose, but that wasn't what we had heard about California.

We can't imagine anyone at Varsity mentally declining over a lack of constant entertainment, but we can't help wondering what the result would be if students told the professor seriously, started to worry about their health, tossed their studies out the window and proceeded to pass their evenings at the Royal York. Students wouldn't mind, but it could hardly be expected to please the faculty, mental health or no mental health. We doubt if even the psychology department would be pleased.

It should be added that the professor who handed out such intriguing advice was a professor of education and family relations.

ART MUSIC Drama

Architects' Exhibit

The boys in the School of Architecture have been having just oodles of fun spending billions of dollars — on paper. The results, currently exhibited in the Hart House Art Gallery, are predominantly impractical. I suppose that with certain grandiose projects assigned it was inevitable that the results would be uneven, but whoever thought up the ideas should have been more practical. "An engineer is by nature an economist." The only residence which would come within the means of any but millionaires was one, quite well hidden, called A House for John Jones. It looked like every other American mass production home.

There are two very clever designs in the exhibit: an apartment house and a country club. A third, a design for an antique shop, is very subtle in its combination of modernity with an atmosphere of the old. Designs for a consulate seemed to be hopelessly inadequate in their admittance of the structural necessities of such a building.

As a whole the exhibit was too expensive, too cubic without real originality, and too little concerned in the most basic problem today—the removal of regimentation. Too many miles of homes exactly alike, planned for the average family with an average

Realizing that many freshmen on the local campus aspire to a career in the fourth estate, The Varsity has decided to give them a glimpse into the lives of those fabulous creatures, the Masthead, under whose by-lines appear the flashing repartee, the timeless wisdom and the searching artistic criticism that have made their names by-words wherever the Varsity is read.

Time: considerably after midnight.
Place: a barren room, knee-deep in copy paper.

The only sound is the doleful clicking of a linotype machine in the next room. Three motionless human figures are draped in various ungraceful poses about the room. One of these is in a semi-recumbent posture upon a table. A cigarette droops from his lips. He runs fleshless fingers through his lank hair. His expression is one of complete, despairing resignation. He is Mylo O'Malley, famous in colleges throughout Canada and the United States for his brilliant daily column, Snivel and Fawn. He addresses the others.

"Have either of you chaps got a light? Someone be a darling for old Mylo who's simply dying for nicotine."

An emaciated figure sprawled in a chair extends a trembling hand in which is a lighted cigarette toward O'Malley. O'Malley inhales the soothing fumes. H. Dont Hedgson (for such it is), master mind of the Varsity's news department, credited by his throngs of admirers with virtually the powers of omniscience, overwhelmed by the exertion of giving his colleague a light, collapses with a low "Hoot" and disappears amid the piles of copy paper on the floor.

"Gad," moans O'Malley. Therewith, a youthful figure, whose heavy head has been resting on the keyboard of his Underwood, jerks upright, yawns briefly, and his fingers find their way almost automatically to the keys which spell out his by-line, "by Simon Egbert". What bon mots, what epigrams, what precieuses are not recalled by the very mention of the name.

"Where's Hedgson?" he whispers apologetically.

"The chap just went out," mutters O'Malley grimly.

Several moments pass during which the two great names gaze blankly into space. Suddenly O'Malley appeals to his colleague.

"Help me with my Snivel and Fawn will you Egbert like a good chap?"

"I will if I ever get this Cat pounded out, old boy."

"What is it, another of those ghastly serials?"

"Yes. It's called 'the sign of the double-malted.'"

(Together). "Gad."

They subside into a fit of morbid speculation as Teal MacDowell, A.M. and D. editor, and aesthete par excellence, wanders in. He means softly to himself.

"How can I get agonized about Rachmaninoff? I gotta be agonized to do a criticism properly. Anyone suggest how I can get some agony?"

O'Malley and Egbert regard this as rhetorical and continue to gaze into space. MacDowell remains in the middle of the room mouthing the word "agony" to himself.

Suddenly all three wail in unison: "Gad, how this daily grind does get a chap."

Then the lights began to dim and two wraithlike figures began to hover about the room.

"Gad," says O'Malley, "the ghosts of Hank Rooster and Umlauf Q. Wiregarters."

"Gad," echoes Egbert.

"Hoot" sounds from somewhere near the floor.

The two wraiths look down upon the sordid scene and in unison exclaim "Better we should be dead." They slowly disappear with sounds of hollow mocking laughter.

Learn from One who Really Knows

By Bill Owigley

Fifteen years ago a young wisp of a lad climbed through the ropes of a Toronto ring, nervously drew on a pair of tan-coloured boxing gloves, and at the bell sprang from his stool to toss leather at one Tom McMahon. Thus did Mel Glionna, trainer of Varsity's mittmen, set out on a most colourful and extensive pugilistic career.

Since that night Mel has blazed a trail which has led through five hundred odd scraps, amateur and professional. Often he slipped from the cup of glorious victory, on odd occasions he had to take the bitter with the sweet. But despite all his triumphs and few defeats, Mel Glionna has stood ardently by a fundamental principle he has always deemed necessary in the true athlete, that is perfect mental and physical condition.

This elementary rule became the theme of all Varsity pugilists when Mel was appointed boxing trainer at Hart House over four years ago. The results he achieved were not only gratifying but amazing! Four Intercollegiate Boxing Championships in four attempts! Few athletic coaches in Varsity's history can boast of such an enviable record. Yet Glionna never speaks of the past, it is always the future.

Close to fifty rookies have flocked to the Glionna banner over in the athletic wing and as a whole Mel thinks they are the most promising group of youngsters he has ever handled. He is bemoaning the fact that there are no intercollegiate meets this winter for he feels sure that with such old stand-bys as Frank Patterson, Bill Ramore, Ralph Stanley, Tiny Hurst and George Meen back he could cop all the ribbons with ease.

To maintain interest in boxing Mel is anxious that the Athletic Directorate follow up its suggestion that regular tournaments be held between the various faculties. If this arrangement does materialize, points will be awarded in the T. A. Reed Trophy race to the competing teams.

Asked as to whom he thought were the outstanding boxers he has trained since coming to Varsity, Mel replied, "That is a difficult selection to make, but I can say that Jack Pigott and Frank Patterson were as good as any. Pigott, of course, was undefeated when he graduated and Patterson is still with us."

After seeing Glionna breeze through an hour of sustained action, we noted the effortless manner in which he conducted himself and were prompted to ask him if he had any intentions of continuing in the ring wars. Wiping the hot perspiration from his wrinkled brow with a gloved hand, he said, "I'm in as good condition now as I ever was and even though I've been in the game for fifteen years I may participate in a few bouts in Buffalo, the scene of my first professional encounter."

By Marg. Foulds

The semi-finals started off with a BANG last night at O.C.E. with two really fast basketball features. But this is only the beginning.

At 7 o'clock Varsity's lived up to pre-game expectations and came through with a decisive victory over the fighting St. Hilda's Seniors. The first quarter produced a fairly tight brand of the old ball game, but from then on Vic had it in the bag. Beryl Pollock and Jean Crawford will never cease to astound us with their amazing pass formation which they have developed over a period of three years. They are good!

The Saints just didn't seem to have the stuff either in size or goal-getting. We hope that when these two meet again next Monday night at 6:30, the game will be as good but a bit more even. Could be.

At 8 o'clock O.T. & P. and U.C. Juniors thrashed it out in another rousing game of ball with the U.C. girls proving the tops. But, my friends, this game was no pinch as the score might tell you. It was fight, fight, fight and hit 'em again, hit 'em again, harder, harder, from start to finish. No rough stuff, mind you, but boy, we didn't relax for one half second.

U.C. used their usual wondrous team-plays and stuck to that ball like a sextet of postage stamps. Honest, they are alright. But O.T. & P. are alright too! They fought right to the finish, and next time, well—Friday night at six. See you there?

DENTS, IN MINORITY,
OUT-VOLLEY O.C.E.

A four-man squad of gallant Dent spikers accomplished the almost impossible last night when they jolted the mighty O.C.E. crew with a 16-14, 13-15, 15-13 defeat in by far the season's best volleyball set-to.

Paced by the Brown Twins, Hal and Wally, the Teachers turned on a blistering attack, but the Dentists, led by intercollegiate tennis Jack Mullett and trackman Ollie Brett, shoved everything back across the net and came back for more. The lead changed hands more than a score of times during the proceedings, but it was Dents who had the polishing touch at their fingertips.

Dents A: Smyth, Sneider, Brett and Mallett.

O.C.E. A: Eccles, H. Brown, W. Brown, Belchamper, Wynne, Goulding.

VIC DEFEATED BY U.C.
IN UPPER GYM CLASH

Junior U.C. came from behind to hand Junior Vic another volleyball set-back on the upper gym floor yesterday afternoon. The score was 4-15, 18-16, 15-7. "Tiger" Duncan, as lanky a fellow as one might spot on the campus, accomplished a neat bit of spiking for the Red and White, and he received most of his assistance from footballer Mac McKinley. Munro Johnson and Harv Rutledge showed up to advantage on the Vic side of the net.

Jr. U.C.: Stokalo, Vesa, Duncan, Mieczka, Cameron, Kerr, Brannen, McKinley.

Jr. Vic: Johnson, Nixon, Paton, Rutledge, Stamos, Gray.

Rugby Final on Tuesday

Speaking OF SPORT

By Dave Macintosh

On account of You Know What the curtain that was to ring down on the interfaculty rugby scene this afternoon remains aloft until next week. It intrigues us to think of what might have happened today in the "Snow Bowl" if the all-School final had actually been run off amid its wintry setting. It reminds one of the good old days way back in the heyday of intramural winter rugby. That day being in the gray '90s, memory does not serve us any too well as to whom was angling for the Muloek Cup. At that time the interfaculty play-offs were tucked away in the background until the intercollegiate finals had been completed, and more than once the boys frolicked about on the field in an after-Xmas final. On one occasion Such-and-Such beat So-and-So on an extremely fine point. A punt sailed over the head of the safety and disappeared in the soft, white cushion of snow. Referees dashed up in a flurry and excavated frantically for the lost pill. After a somewhat lengthy search the hiding-place was uncovered—yep, behind the goal-line. Such-and-Such (or was it So-and-So?) won the game 1-0.

So why not have the game today and afford the coaches a real opportunity to put strategy into operation? For instance, Grosskurth and his boys go into a huddle. While their backs are turned, Fugler and his boys creep silently up on the unsuspecting piskin, while "Special Delivery" hurls snowballs at the referees to keep them out of the know. Immediately the whole team starts tunnelling like mad, and when Grosskurth whirls about to continue play—lo Munro, who had tunneled harder and faster than all the rest, appears in the Juniors' end zone, raising aloft the ball in triumph.

But Frank Stulus is not one to let a big brother pull the wool over his eyes, and out of the bag he extricates as neat a trick as any coach since Rock has ever devised. Ken Goug, being the wee-est lad on the younger squad, is secreted in a snow-drift in the coffin corner. On the last play of the game, of course, they throw a pass to him, but Ken, busy sucking an icicle, lazily watches the ball drift by as he laces on his snowshoes with one hand, and completes the back wall to his igloo with the other.

Of course, a game played in such elements of froideur would have its disadvantages too. Lads like Herb and Doug would always be running the risk of running amok and getting themselves lost. Passing too would be out, for after a brief sojourn in such atmosphere, the old apple, ice-coated on descent, would be impossible to handle. Of course, this would be just dandy for kicking.

Anyway, we think it would have been interesting.

FOUR YEARS OF SERVICE

Whichever way the decision goes on Tuesday (tentative date) there will be one guy on the field that will be putting just a little more into the fray than usual for he will be playing his last game in an Engineer uniform. His record in interfaculty rugby stands as probably one of the greatest solo efforts in intramural activity. Ron Fugler, a scholarship winner in Chemical Engineering in his first year, and an honour student since then, has given his best for four successive years to School football outfits. That he has been elected captain of his team, twice Junior and twice Senior School, four times, speaks for itself. Ron is one of the headiest players in the fall pastime. Between halves he sits cool as a cucumber, taking in every instruction of his coach. On Tuesday he trots out onto the field at the head of his squad for the last time to engineer his final game from his quarterback post. A great record, hung up by a great guy. School will well remember him as a Schoolman.

SKI TRACKS

A sport a wee-bit more appropriate to the weather is on the way down the assembly line. This afternoon the Varsity ski club meets, oddly enough, in the Anatomy Building.

It was welcome news indeed that greeted these old cars when the Athletic Office announced that it intends to subsidize interfaculty ski competition. The sport is gaining in popularity every year, especially in Toronto and our home of knowledge, evinced last year by the successful expeditions into what Toronto so quaintly calls "the north country." Oh yes, and before we forget it Varsity won the intermediate intercollegiate title last winter.

This year skiing should be in for its biggest season yet, and the interfaculty meet should go a long way in promoting even more interest among undergrads. Adequate instruction is to be provided, and a goodly amount of superlative skiing terrain has been leased.

The Youth Hostel Association, in conjunction with the Varsity Ski Club, has plans under way for a holiday trip to the Craig Leath Hostel near Collingwood in the Blue Mountains, to come off about the day after Christmas. Today at the meeting coloured movies will be shown on the trip last year, to Lac Mercier, that members may get some idea of what the trip involves.

Date for All-School Interfaculty Rugby Tilt Set Tentatively, because Weatherman May Interfere Again

LIKE YEARS AGO

The all-School interfaculty rugby final, scheduled to take place today in Varsity Stadium, has been postponed due to weather conditions. The date for the play-off has been set tentatively for Tuesday.

The incident reminded old-timers of by-gone intramural finals, when it was the usual thing to stage the final in deep winter, after Christmas to be specific. Interfaculty play-offs were delayed until the intercollegiate business had been taken care of, when Varsity rugbyists were allowed to play for their various faculties. It was a chance that the interfaculty boys, not quite in the class to make the senior team grade, awaited all year, for it presented them with opportunities galore to take their elders for a couple of hard and well-placed knocks.

It is physically impossible to clear the Stadium of snow in a short time, and the Engineers will be forced to wait till they get the nod from nature.

SKI CLUB MEETING
PROMPTED BY SNOW

Winter seems to be here and so the University Ski Club is holding its second open meeting of the year at five o'clock today in room 111 of the Anatomy Building. Movies will be shown of the Canadian Youth Hostel Association's skiing activities.

This year the University Athletic Association is going to subsidize interfaculty ski competition. Faculty and College representatives will be appointed at today's meeting to help get teams together for practices and meets. There is to be free skiing instruction for everyone under Hugh Gallie's direction. It will probably be held up at Rosedale Golf Course, not on the practice slopes beside the University Library as in previous years.

Every student in the whole University is a free member of the Ski Club, privileged to use the Club's leased skiing terrain up at Aurora at any time, and since winter has descended unexpectedly the Club's executive wants a large turnout at the meeting this afternoon to organize as quickly as possible.

We notice by the latest Red Cross Bulletin that if you want to send a "Kriegsgefangenenkunde" it is necessary to mark the lower left hand corner of the label "Gebührenfrei".

But did you know that if you want to get a "Darngoodcustomtailoredsuit-actualwholesalerprice" you can get it "Rightthereintoronto" at the Factory-Showrooms of Sovereign Custom Tailors.

We have had a good many Varsity students in to see our range of English and Domestic Tweeds and Worsteds, and almost all have remarked on the wide range of patterns. There is little difficulty finding a piece of cloth you like at Sovereign, because of the big selection.

Already a number of students are wearing Sovereign suits purchased at a real saving, direct from our Factory.

Investigate the real values Sovereign offers FOR YOURSELF . . . and do it no later than TODAY.

WOMEN ADDRESSED ON THEATRE GROUPS

"Amateur theatre groups should act for fun instead of always for money," said Mrs. Janet Chamberlain, speaking at the S.C.M. noon-hour series at the U.C. Women's Union yesterday. She went on to say that the theatre is a failure as an industry.

Mrs. Chamberlain criticized the New York professional theatre for its commercialization and said that this was the reason that it was not making any actual progress. The amateur groups in Toronto should learn their lesson from the New York example and not produce plays for money alone, Mrs. Chamberlain said. Such great actors as Maurice Evans and John Gielgud began their careers with amateur work in which they acted for the fun of it, instead of for the money, she added.

The speaker continued by saying that the theatre is one art that gives us a basis for our own lives in any direction it teaches us to act and think quickly, it gives us poise and self-confidence.

Above all, amateur groups should try to read more plays and read more about them so as to acquire a knowledge of what is going on in New York, the centre of the theatrical world in North America, it was stated.

Mrs. Chamberlain, who was formerly Janet Bacon, is presenting a group of character sketches in Hart House Theatre next week. This type of thing is something quite new for Toronto.

SURGEON-WRITER TALKS READING

just read new books," Dr. Markowitz stated that he belonged to the former class, and proceeded for the remainder of the evening to recommend, with a mixture of wisdom and witicism, his favourite books to his listeners.

"Bacon's essays are part of a liberal education," he asserted, giving his preference to those on Milton and Francis Bacon, and added that Canadians should not forget the witty essays of Professor Maurice Hutton. The greatest novel in the world to the speaker was Anatole France's "Thais", which he claims to have read twenty times, while the greatest living novelist is Aldous Huxley as shown by his "Point Counter Point". The only books which came close to Voltaire's "Candide" were Ben Hecht's "Count Bruga" and A. France's "Penguin Island".

"We have two brains," went on the scientist. "There is an old one which we have had for millions of years and a new one which has evolved in the last thousand years as a result of economic life. Poetry appeals to the old brain." To Dr. Markowitz's mind A. E. Housman was the most perfect English poet, but he warned that the distinct literary movement in Canada was not to be overlooked. "We have Marjorie Pickthall, Nathaniel Benson, and Professor Pratt's verse is as sound as Milton's."

Dr. Markowitz advised the use of a good anthology such as the Oxford Book of English Verse, and concluded by saying that John Stuart Mill's "Essay on Liberty", "though written one hundred years ago, is what should be read today."

This meeting is being sponsored by the two weekly study groups on Co-operatives held by the students of Emmanuel College. Although these groups are studying more particularly farm problems and Co-operatives, this open meeting is to deal with the problems of industrial workers and their attitude to the Church.

"We want to give an opportunity to all those interested in the Church to learn at first hand more about the problems which face the workers of this country," said Norman MacKenzie, I Emmanuel, of the meeting. "We also want to hear from a representative of the working people what might be done by the Church to help solve those problems," he added.

EXPLANATORY NOTE... Temporarily hors de combat Wednesday night, wrestling to a finish with a voluminous essay, we learned telephonically that the boys at the Press, despite two gargantuan C.U.P. features, had run short of back-page copy. The ubiquitous Mr. Simon was called from the back room to write an emergency guest Hither; thus the usual build-up in the previous day's column was omitted. We hope that explains the situation, in case anyone was worrying, which is unlikely.

SAINTS NO LONGER IN LACROSSE TOURNEY

St. Mike's hopes of retaining the interfaculty lacrosse championship completely disintegrated as they fell before a furious Pharmacy attack in the lower gym yesterday.

Wait Lee led the Oruggists to a 10-8 victory as he barged through the Irish defence to throw in five goals, ably backed up by Jack Boyes with four. Bill Cassidy starred for the Double Blue, getting four tallies.

Trinity Firsts, undefeated to date in interfaculty volleyball competition, chalked up one more victory last night as they brushed aside St. Mike's A by the lopsided score of 15-1, 15-3.

The combination of Cowan and Tseng was in a clicking state once more, and the Irish were unable to handle their smashing spikes.

Holiday Trip to Northland Planned by Local Skiers

Varsity Ski Club Joins with Youth Hostel Association to Offer Inexpensive Trip at Christmas

COLLINGWOOD LOCALE

An inexpensive skiing trip to Collingwood is being planned by the University Ski Club in conjunction with the Canadian Youth Hostel Association to take place during the Christmas holidays. Last year's trip, a similar one to the Youth Hostel at Lac Mercier in the Laurentians, was a great success and was in some of the best skiing country in Canada, but since that particular holiday has closed down this winter Collingwood has been chosen instead.

Jack Fulton, regional secretary of the C.Y.H.A., came to the meeting of the club in the Mads Building yesterday afternoon and told university skiers all about the Youth Hostel movement. The accommodation at Collingwood will provide skiers with a place to sleep and good food for a nominal fee, the individual supplying his own blankets. Members of last year's trip were to have been shown at the meeting but the projector was the wrong size so those present had to be content with Jack Fulton's description.

Apart from that the main subject of discussion was the intercollegiate skiing that is being planned for this winter. Faculty representatives were appointed and the executive urged everyone at all interested in competition good or bad to give their names to the following so that organization may get under way as quickly as possible.

U.C.: God Clawson, Roly Brett, or Vera Lang.
Vic: Gord Black, Bill Taylor, Roly Ellison.
Trinity: Alex Cruickshank, Eric Hutch, Bev Robinson.
S.P.S.: Jack Fleming, Al Rich.
Med: Hugh Galie.
Women interested in participating should contact "Punch" Galie of St. Hilda's.

All who can get cars this Sunday are urged to make their presence known as soon as possible since several are needed to take up those who are going to help the Toronto Ski Club build its new jump up there and of course get a little skiing at the same time.
Next week's meeting is to feature some movies from the Ontario Ski Zone.

CHURCH AND DICTATORSHIP TO BE ADDRESS TOPIC AT S.C.M. NOON TALK

At 12.0 today in the Women's Union the Rev. Thomas Harris will give an address on "The Church and Totalitarianism" under the auspices of the S.C.M. Mr. Harris has also been asked to speak in the Town Forum Series in the Foresters' Hall, the subject tonight being "America in the World Today."

Graduating from Cambridge in 1922 Mr. Harris studied theology at Union College Seminary in New York and has since been in various rectorships in both England and the States. In the field of foreign affairs he has kept closely in touch with England, frequently revisiting the country until the outbreak of war. His father is president of the Board of Shipping and he has a number of friends in Parliament. Mr. Harris receives weekly letters from his mother and his three brothers, all occupied in various phases of Britain's defense, keeping him informed as to what is happening over there.

Personal Religion Is Discussed As V.C.F. Series Comes To End

Bob Greenhow, III, S.P.S., and Buchanan MacMillan, IV Vic, were the speakers yesterday at the last in a V.C.F. noon-hour series of meetings for men in Hart House Music Room.

Contending that most people today are in a state of spiritual confusion, Mr. Greenhow stated that the Bible revealed a righteous God, whose righteousness is vindicated by Christ, through whom we can have fellowship with God.

Human nature has changed very little, said Buchanan MacMillan. "The moral issues of our relationship to God and to our fellows, are still the same, as is the solution. If read with an unprejudiced mind and a willing heart, the Bible can show us the way of life."

AFTERNOON CONCERT

Wilma Stevenson Dohler, pianist, will give an all-Russian program at 5 p.m. today in the Music Room, Hart House, as follows:

Nicolaï Medtner ..... Improvisation (Fairy Tale)
Sergei Rachmaninoff ..... Prelude in B minor Melodie

Prelude in G minor
Serge Prokofieff, March in F minor

BRUSSELS PROFESSOR TO DELIVER LECTURES

Professor Gregoire of Belgium, Byzantine History, will Speak Next Week

Professor Henri Gregoire of the University of Brussels, Belgium, will visit the university next week and will deliver three lectures in Room 8, University College, at 5 p.m. on December 2, 3 and 4, it was announced yesterday. The first lecture will deal with "The Living Interest of the Classics". The second, "Greece and the Balkans in Relation to Byzantine History", and the third "Belgian Problems in the Light of History".

Professor Gregoire is now on the staff of the School for Social Research in New York. He is considered one of the greatest living authorities on Byzantine history and classical studies. During the War of 1914-18 he was editor and publisher of La Libre Belgique, the underground newspaper which upheld Belgian freedom and which the enemy were unable to locate.

Players' Guild Presents Three-Play Theatre Night

Survey of School War Work Appears in Latest Issue Of "Canadian High News"

The fourth issue of The Canadian High News appeared today and will be distributed to its 35,000 readers early this afternoon, it was announced by a staff member of the publication.

Featured in this week's issue are a resume of an address by Prof. Watson Kirkconnell of McMillan University, a feature on the coming all-star high school game to be played next Monday and a survey of war work in Toronto high schools.

The role which The News plays in the life of high school students is comparable to that which The Varsity plays for university students, said Associate Editor Mary Mothersill yesterday. "As The Varsity is the mouthpiece for students' common interests in campus activities and world affairs, so we hope to be the organ of expression for students of Toronto collegiates, technical and commercial schools."

At the last of the V.C.F. noon-hour series for women yesterday in the Women's Union, several students told of their personal experiences of Christ. Ida Tipp, IV Vic, stated that a picture of her life at Varsity and Christ was unbearably black compared with one with Him. Christianity is not a panacea for all ills, but having Christ as a near and personal friend gives one the fortitude to face whatever difficulties may arise.

Marjorie McLaren went on to say that each one of us sins, and that it is only through the sacrifice of Christ that one can ever obtain a reprieve from the sentence of death through sin. Only in this salvation may a young person today hope to find a complete life.

WALLACE DECLARES SPORT CANCELLATION 'A WISE DECISION'

Queen's Principal Willing to Review Question Should Circumstances Change Before Next Year

NO GOVERNMENT RULING

Kingston, Ont., Nov. 28 (CUP) — "In view of all the circumstances, I feel that the decision to abolish intercollegiate sports this year was a wise one," Robert C. Wallace, Principal of Queen's University, stated in a recent interview.

"Should these circumstances change," he continued, "I am perfectly willing to review the matter. We cannot say what the future will bring. We do not know yet what effect the new four-months' training rule will have upon us. As far as this year is concerned, I think it is very unlikely that we will see any resumption of intercollegiate sport."

"Next year, the whole affair will have to be considered afresh. There has not been any time a Department of National Defence ruling on the matter, and so far as I know, they have not even expressed an opinion."

Outlining the background of the University Conference decree of this summer which had suspended intercollegiate sport, Principal Wallace explained that the resolution had come before the Conference through the recommendation of a board of reference, of which Toronto, McGill, Western and Queen's were members.

"What the other universities privately felt, I do not know," he said. "At the conference itself there was no discussion in the matter."

Commenting on the fact that some western universities have been participating in intercollegiate sport, he pointed out that while all of them had been represented at the conference, they had no membership on the board of recommendation from which the original recommendation came.

Three One-Act Plays will be Presented on Women's Union Stage in Annual Theatre Night This Evening

Thirty members of the University College Players' Guild will appear tonight in the Guild's annual Theatre Night, which will begin at eight o'clock in the theatre of the Women's Union. Three one-act plays will make up the program: "Plant in the Sun", a comedy by Ben Goggin, whose characters are the toughest of factory girls; "Bury the Dead" by Irwin Shaw, in which six dead German soldiers refuse to be buried; and "A brief tragedy" by George Bernard Shaw, entitled "The Fatal Gasogen" or "Passion, Poison and Petrification."

"Interest in the Theatre Night will not be limited to University College," the executive stated. "Workers for the performance include students from S.P.S., Meds., Wyldcliffe and Occupational Therapy. All members of the Guild will be admitted without charge only on presentation of their membership cards. Others may buy tickets at the door."

The stage crew has been under the supervision of stage managers Sidney Soanes and Rod Jones, and property mistress Betty Davidson. Sets and costumes are arranged by Roy Graham, June Ardell, Harriet Leigh-Mallory, and Dorothy Northwood, while make-up is the work of Elizabeth Stone's make-up group.

KNOX A TROUNCE MEDS III IN VOLLEYBALL TUSSLE

With very little at stake, except the bottom position in the group, Knox A volleyballers tussled with Meds III in the upper gym yesterday, the Freshies finally emerging as victors in two straight games at 15-8 and 15-9.

The Meds were in the fight throughout, but had to bow to the classier serving and spiking of the Purple and White.

Knox A: Mackenzie, Wood, Mackay, Morrison, Weir, Ferguson.
Meds III: Harnick, Culmer, Goldenberg, Milford, Rother, White, Myers.

Historian from Bomb-Battered Bristol Discusses France; Sees Navy Vital Link

Declares Fall of France to be Most Momentous Event in History Since the Fall of Roman Empire

CREATOR OF CULTURE

"The fall of France is the most momentous event in history since the fall of the Roman Empire," said Prof. R. B. Mowat of Bristol University, addressing a capacity audience at University College yesterday.

Prof. Mowat finds it almost impossible to conceive of humanity existing without France. He quoted Pres. Jefferson of the United States, who once said that most people, on being asked what country they liked best, would say, firstly their own and then, France.

The professor stated that during the Middle Ages, France helped to create a genuine European culture by preserving the classical tradition. He added that pockets of Roman civilization appeared in Gaul throughout the Dark Ages.

France was among the first to begin producing works in the vernacular, which were read and revered. French was spoken, the speaker continued.

Prof. Mowat considers that for centuries, the standards of taste and artistry were maintained in France, that she had the best sense of what was genuine, and that she was the only French nation, he added.

The speaker expressed his belief that one of the greatest contributions by France was that of the "salon" which made itself manifest in the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries. It was during these evenings spent in the drawing room, which was a rather slow game, and women met on equal terms to indulge in pleasant conversation. It was as a result of these that the great people of the day, such as Voltaire and even Frederick the Great of Prussia, began the practice of regular and lengthy correspondence.

Trinity C were sent deeper into the cellar position in their group yesterday as Dents C rallied to take the last two of a three game set 10-15, 15-8, 15-10, which was a rather slow game devoid of good set-ups and spiking. Downy and Dave Coyle were starred in the losing cause, while Wills, the outstanding player on the floor, led the Tool-tuggers to a win.

Dents C: Goldberg, Samuels, Channell, Crouch, Bretz, Carroll, Wills.
Trinity C: Croatty, Williams, Coyle, Downy, Lowe, Calhoun, Goodman, Mendel.

HIGH BOOTS, CHECK SHIRTS INVADGE HART HOUSE AS FORESTERS FROLIC

Hart House will be the scene of the annual get-together of Forestry students tonight. The program will include skits by the various years, for which prizes will be awarded.

Informally it will be the key-note, achieved by the wearing of high boots and checkered shirts as the Foresters and their ladies tread a courtly measure to the stately strains of a specially imported waltz.

The Music Room will be decorated with evergreens, providing the dance with Christmas atmosphere. Supper in the Great Hall will be served to the dancers.

Avonde's Music will Supply Tempo For Midweek Dancers at Arts Ball

The music of Richard Avonde, repeats of Follies song successes, introduction of a new college song, and a special floorshow will combine to feature the 1940 edition of the Arts Ball, an annual formal dance of University College. The Ball will be held this year in Simpson's Arcadian Court on Wednesday, December 11.

The executive stated that the decision to carry on with the Arts Ball had not been reached until several days ago, and final arrangements were completed only last night. The date originally set, December 13, was found to conflict with C.O.T.C. exams on the following days, so it was decided by the Lit. to hold the dance on a weeknight, climaxing the fall social season.

WYMLWOOD MUSICALE

The artist at the Wymilwood Musicale Sunday evening, December 1, will be Enid Gray, Toronto soprano, with Marton Kilburn at the piano. Students of all faculties are invited.

PAN-AMERICAN UNION TO BE DEBATE TOPIC

Varsity Women Debaters will Support Resolution Against Queen's and Oppose at Western

Next week the Women's Intercollegiate Debating Union will begin its season, when Varsity plays host to the Queen's team. The resolution "that Canada should be a member of the Pan-American Union" will be supported by Mabel Van Camp, Vic 4T1 and Mary Shortt, U.C. 4T2.

A Varsity team goes to Western University and Margot Booth, Vic 4T2, and Kay MacLean, St. Mike's 4T2, will attempt to disprove the same statement.

For the past four or five years, will be used to settle the debate. Three judges, people not connected with the universities, will be chosen by each team.

Genevieve Taylor, Honorary President of the Intercollegiate Union, said, "Varsity has a first class team this year and we're all set for a keen series of debates."

Dale Discusses Christian Intellect

"Is Christianity Intellectually Respectable?" is to be the subject of Professor E. A. Dale's S.C.M. talk today at 10 (4.30) in the Women's Union.

Professor Dale is on the Classics Department of University College and has been a very prominent Anglican, interested especially in the Council for Social Service of the Church of England in Canada. His son also has been prominent in religious circles, being chairman of University College S.C.M. at the time he graduated two or three years ago.

This is the last talk of S.C.M.'s "Meet the Prof's" series, previous speakers being Dr. Wallace, Professor Jarvis McCurdy, Dean Brett, Dr. Wilkinson and Dr. Blatz.

Visiting Professor Sees Navy as Vital Link in Chain of Forces which will Bring Ultimate Victory

BRISTOL BOMBEO RECENTLY

The vital link in the chain of forces which will combine to shackle the enemy is the navy, according to Professor R. B. Mowat, head of the department of history in the University of Bristol, who is visiting Varsity. Dr. Mowat was sent to this continent on a Carnegie endowment to lecture in a number of American universities.

Since the news was released that Bristol has been the victim of large-scale Nazi bombing raids, Dr. Mowat has not heard from his colleagues and does not yet know whether the university has been damaged or not. The university is located in the heart of the city.

Shoes and coat discarded, Dr. Mowat was resting in his Hart House suite just before his five o'clock lecture as he told The Varsity of his tour through the United States.

Arriving in New York on October 3, Professor Mowat soon set out on his ten months' lecture tour which is to take him to universities from coast to coast. "Everywhere I go," he said, "I find the warmest sympathy for the British Empire, and a desire to help in every way short of sending men overseas."

Since disembarking, the visiting historian has spent most of his time at the Universities of Delaware and West Virginia; before returning to Bristol he will have lectured to students in the four corners of the States, finally concluding his tour at the University of California.

In the meantime Professor Mowat's colleagues are continuing his work in Bristol. The man left in charge of the history department during his absence is Dr. C. M. MacLennan, a Canadian from Dalhousie University and a friend of President Coyle.

The moment war was declared, all the last year's honour students in Professor Mowat's classes joined His Majesty's fighting forces without waiting for the draft. The women remained, and the usual number of freshmen enrolled at the beginning of the new term; during the year they train for future service in first aid work, ARP duties, or in the officers' training corps.

Deadline Extended For Green Issue

Deadline for submissions to the "Green Issue," literary edition of The Varsity, is extended to December 12.

Advance of the deadline date has been made owing to the fact that it has been decided to publish The Varsity an additional three days. Final issue of the fall term will be distributed to students Dec. 18 instead of the previously announced date.

Cash prizes will be awarded for the best poetry, serious and humorous, the best short story, serious essay and art work. Judges for the contest, consisting of two members of the staff and a literary authority outside the university, will be announced at a later date.

All students may make contributions for the literary issue, submitting them either to the men's office in Hart House, or the women's office, Room 8, University College, before the date specified. Contributors are urged to submit their work early in order that the judges may have ample time to handle it properly.

Richard Avonde's orchestra is well-known to Varsity students after last year's engagements at School Night and the St. Michael's At-Home. Two years ago he led the orchestra in a performance at the Sky Club, and last summer he toured western Ontario, drawing large crowds at various summer resorts.

The Arcadian Court, with its distinctive decorations to set a Christmas atmosphere, has been found to be the perfect setting for the Arts Ball, the executive feels. Guests will be seated at specially arranged tables fringing the dance floor, and a supper will be served.

The Canadian Student And The Military Scene

Several actual or probable changes in the Canadian military scene have taken place, or have been proposed, which will affect the position of undergraduates quite considerably. These new developments are the newly-announced policy of appointing officers in the Canadian Army from the ranks only, and the seriously-considered proposal of lengthening the present 30-day military training period to one of at least four months' duration.

About ten days ago Minister of National Defence Ralston announced that from now on all officers must serve first in the ranks and then be promoted to receive commissions. The country was pretty unanimous in agreeing upon the desirability of a democratic army, but several points in the new scheme remained clouded in mystery. One of these was the exact status of the Canadian Officers' Training Corps in the new order of things. The question which was uppermost in undergraduate minds was: Are our efforts in the C.O.T.C., in many cases extending over several years, going to be tossed into the discard and rendered useless? Officers of the local contingent of the C.O.T.C., questioned by The Varsity, were non-committal. This was to be expected for they had heard no official information whatsoever as to the position of the C.O.T.C.

C.O.T.C. Will Still Function

Since that time however the situation has been cleared up by official statements from the Defence Department. The C.O.T.C. will continue to function, with altered scope in some cases, but it will still be an integral part of the Canadian Army training system. For all practical purposes, the officers-in-training are considered as being in the ranks. They have to take training similar to that of a recruit in a reserve unit. Actually the C.O.T.C. is an N.P.A.M. reserve unit, and its cadets must qualify before receiving commissions. The standard of qualification will probably be raised and a period of training with an officers' wing of an active training centre will be required. The main change will be a shift of emphasis from the theoretical to the more practical sides of military training.

Extended Training Period

The other development in the Canadian military system is one which is far more serious in its implications for the Canadian undergraduate over twenty-one. This is the proposal to increase the 30-day training period to one of four months. The extension of the time period is a sound plan and few will deny it. One of the chief criticisms of the whole compulsory military training plan has been that the period is far too short to accomplish much in the way of military training. Military experts have boldly stated that a 30-day period was entirely inadequate. When the United States adopted a military training system, the period of time chosen was a year.

Exemptions Will Be Necessary

If the period is lengthened to four months, however, it will involve an expanded system of exemptions or postponements for men engaged in war time industries. The government seems well aware of this, and is prepared to make the necessary allowances. But what about the universities? Will the same system of exemptions be applied to them, or will the march of scientific progress and of education be sacrificed on the altar of war?

University students have accepted their military training with a universal good spirit and willingness to co-operate and learn. In some ways their task is harder than that of a recruit sent to Long Branch for thirty days. The undergraduate is in the unhappy position of being neither in nor out of the army; he is leading a double life in which he cannot devote his whole energy to his military training or to his academic courses. A recruit is removed completely from civil life; an undergraduate lives in both civil and military atmosphere. This may sound inconsequential, but it is a disturbing state of affairs, especially demoralizing to the studies. However, the university student has not complained about the enforced training; he is willing to prepare himself for the defence of Canada, and in most cases for actual fighting on foreign soil. The student body is as loyal as any other group of citizens.

Four-Month Period Impractical

However, if the four months scheme goes into effect, some exemption must be made for university students outside the C.O.T.C., who thus come under the National Resources Mobilization Act. At present those in the Auxiliary Battalion, or training centre, in 110 hours get an equivalent of two weeks' camp training, with an additional camp period in the summer, the whole equalling one month's military training. Under a four month plan, either the student would have to spend 770 hours training during the year plus two weeks at camp, which would mean roughly 25 hours a week, or else continue the 110 hours he gets now and spend three and one half months at camp in the summer. The former course would make it useless to come to university; the latter course would leave two weeks or a month to the individual in the summer and make it impossible for many to earn their way back to university. We quote from a letter received from an undergraduate in Dentistry who voices a plea which applies equally to students in engineering, medicine, and for that matter, in any course at Varsity:

"The purpose of the Allied governments is to win an enduring peace and security where our way of life may flourish. Our chief weapons are our armed forces and the industries of supply. No small part of the life blood of these forces is the composite output of highly trained specialists of our Canadian universities. Of the above mentioned students a very high proportion sustain themselves in part at least by summer employment. But how is a student of even unusual ability to earn a significant portion of say the 550 dollars required for just instruments and fees of a dental soph or junior in the fourteen to thirty days provided in the tentative schedule. . . . The public considers us privileged and pampered while overlooking the fact that we pay for the opportunity of bettering ourselves, and thus our country, and mark time from four to six years to do it."

Government Should Be Approached

The values and contributions of the universities during war cannot be overlooked, and indeed by thinking men they are not. But apart from the war, the world after the war is going to need the contributions of specialists and ideas and practical developments by the universities to a far greater degree. Unless some exemptions are made in an extended training plan, much of the good work of the universities is going to be sabotaged and many students are going to be prevented from continuing their college careers. After all, isn't the training of young engineers just as important to the war effort in the long run as a war-industry? It is a war industry, and it has the added value of being far more vital for the post-war nation. Before the plan for a four month or longer training period, now in the formative stage, is actually put on paper, some effort by responsible Canadian university authorities should be made to point out to the government the absolute necessity for making some exemptions or special requirements for university students. The government made concessions in the original training plan, and they were received gratefully. There is no thought here of complaining about them. But the point is that the extension of the period renders those concessions ineffective and means in many cases the practical stifling of university life. Four months training cannot be taken during the academic year; and to take it in the summer will force many students to abandon university through financial pressure. Some exemption certainly must be made for meds, engineering and dental students, for instance, and for certain categories of arts students. One cannot imagine cutting off the supply of future teachers, for example. Something must be done by the government if the new plan is introduced or the universities are going to be seriously impaired as a vital force in the country today and tomorrow.

Whitmore and Lowe

An unusual program was offered last night by the youthful duo-pianists Whitmore and Lowe. Fresh from the Eastman School of Music these two have an excellent command of technique and fine co-ordination. Not one selection on the whole program was written for two pianos: everything was transcribed by the artists from its original form, which varied from pianoforte solo to flute and harpsichord.

The pianists were equally at home in the Bach Chorale Preludes and Begin the Beguine. The highlight of the evening was a delightful Schubert Sonata. Two transcriptions of orchestral scores were not so successful — Ravel's Bolero had to be played too fast to be at all effective and the Enesco Rumanian Rhapsody No. 1, though magnificently played, suffered from a lack of orchestral colouring in which the composition in its original form abounds.

Perhaps the performers were a little too serious about everything they played — even the swing. The sole exception was the comic rendition of Jail du lieber Augustin in their final encore, A Kaleidoscope of Folk Tunes.

'The House of Dombey'

The Dickens Fellowship productions of The House of Dombey, based on the novel Dombey and Son, is true Dickens, naturally, and as presented is a ripe melodrama which gives the excellent cast an opportunity for what is probably the most super-colossal ham acting of their careers. The play has no message and it is improbable that it points any moral, but it has a gallery of characters that warm the heart. These characters make the evening very pleasant.

The play cannot be said really to have a star — each actor takes his role and plays it to the hilt, and all work together to make a unit. The most outstanding of them is Hugh Watson's Mr. Toots, a finished performance of the completely silly ass, who makes every scene he is in and saves two from complete bathos.

The principles are excellent but by the nature of the play the opportunity for outstanding acting in these roles is limited.

ST. THOMAS' CHOIR GIVES CHRISTMAS MUSICALS

Advent Sunday marks the beginning of the Church's New Year. The Rector will give the sermon at 11 o'clock when the service will be sung to a setting by Wm. Lovelock, a contemporary English composer. Sir Percy Buck contributes the motet "Into this world."

At 7 p.m. the Rev. D. R. L. Clarke will give the sermon and the choir will sing Sir Arthur Sullivan's Advent anthem "Hearken unto me" and Mozart's "Ave Verum". On Sunday, Dec. 15th St. Thomas' Choir will give their Annual Christmas Musicals in the Royal York Concert Hall at 9 p.m. Invitations will be available for all university students at the S.A.C. office at the latter part of next week.

WYCLIFFE BOXLA-MEN DEFEAT PHARMACISTS WITH ROUSING FINISH

Theologs Climax Poor Season with First Victory as Losers Defence Falters in Final Frames

An inspired Wycliffe lacrosse team out-ran and out-passed the Pharmacy B outfit in the big gym yesterday as they came from behind in a 4-4 garrison finish to end their season with a first and only victory.

Doggedly increasing the pressure in the last three periods, the Anglicans relentlessly banged away at the Pharmacy goal, tying the score at the end of the third stanza and forging ahead with two winning counters in the final frame.

The Pill Rollers jumped into an early two-goal lead in the opening slipped the ball past Bill Coleman in period as Jeurard and Litchen each the Wycliffe nets. In the second canto Fred Robinson, built like a bungalow and just as solid, started to repel the Pharmacy rushes with his superb play on the defence. The lone goal by the Pestle Pounders in this frame came from the clever stick of Cox. Robinson came up from the defence to pot the initial tally for the Hecate Avenue crew, who hit the Pharmacy net to cut the Drugists' lead to 3-2 at the half.

Cox scored again on a rebound after a scuffle between the Anglican goal in the third period, but the Theologs continued their drive, which was featured by the weaving rushes of Herschel Fry and Joe Carey, who busied themselves with cutting up passes for the waiting Harry Fry. Late in the canto Harry Fry worked clear of his check to beat the Pharmacy twine-minder for a pair of scores.

Going into the home stretch with both teams striving to break a 4-4 deadlock, the play got rather rugged but the pace was still sustained. The Drugists were given two penalties and the Anglicans increased their pressure while having the on-man advantage. Harry "Small" Fry bulged the strings for his third goal of the afternoon to put the Theologs in the lead for the first time. The game was put on ice when with 50 seconds of play remaining Joe Carey added a goal to his four assists as he battled through the Pharmacy defense to make the final count 6-4.

Pharm. B: Casselman, Jeurard (1), Meddingier, Litchen (1), Cox (2), Russell, Newman, Steele, Kitchen. Wycliffe: Coleman, Robinson (1), Herschel Fry (1), Harry Fry (3), Cardy (1), Knight, Wells.

formed a cove co-operative in which they buy the stuff for three and a half cents and sell it to the students for six cents.

Last year's profits went into free crackers and occasional beer parties.

Thank heaven it went for a WORTHY CAUSE!

ONE OF OUR STURDIER members of the C.O.T.C. was rushing out of the side door of a not-very-far-away beverage room and hastily huffed past an air force officer replete with braid and stuff without giving the usual salute; (our hero was in uniform) ... the man in the Alice blue gown called after the not-giving-a-hoot student and asked for an explanation. "Oh," returned the taken-aback and now slightly red future officer, "I thought you were THE DOORMAN!"

Well, so long now. Maybe our regular hither had yawner will let me write another one of these affairs later on in the year. NEXT TIME IT MAY BE FUNNY.

Speaking OF SPORT

By Owen Prichard

DOWN AMONG THE MERMEN

We venture to predict (if anyone should ride up on a pogo stick to enquire) that a new record for entries in the sport will be set in the Junior Interfaculty Swimming Meet which is carded for December 5 and 6 in Hart House Pool.

The Swimming Club's venture this fall with the idea of round-robin tournaments has made the Pool Room almost as popular as the poolroom. Students who never before swam in interfaculty competition turned out to take part in the 50 yd. events and the relays. They thereby gained confidence and a knowledge of how well they swim in comparison with other entrants, and also gave the coaches a chance to scout whatever promising aquatic material is on the way up in the ranks of the interfaculty natators.

As are all junior interfaculty meets, this tourney is made to order for the novice. The following are indigible: (a) Members of any previous Senior or Intermediate Intercollegiate Swimming Meet. (b) Those who have won a first place in any previous Senior Interfaculty Meet. (c) Those who have won a first place in any Junior Interfaculty Meet shall not compete in that event. This shall not include the relays.

To encourage entries, and to discourage any fingers from bogging the events, a further rule states that a faculty or college may enter as many men as it so desires, but a swimmer may participate in not more than three events including the relays.

Preliminary heats will be held in all events having more than five entries. There is a comprehensive breadth to the program of events. The list includes: 300 yds. medley relay; Diving—4 compulsory and 4 voluntary; 50 yds. free style; 300 yds. free style; 100 yds. back stroke; 100 yds. free style; 200 yds. breast stroke; 200 yds. sprint relay (4 men).

Before any points may be scored for a swimmer's faculty, he must finish his event in the following time limits which are given as a maximum in each event: Medley relay—4 min. 30 sec.; 50 yds. free—33 sec.; 300 free—7 min. 40 sec.; 100 back—1 min. 45 sec.; 100 free—1 min. 25 sec.; 200 breast—4 min.; 200 relay—2 min. 16 sec.

If you're still with us, let us conclude by advising all and sundry that the meet is a natural for the swimmer of average ability. As in all other interfaculty events, points in the T. A. Reed Trophy standings will be awarded for entering and winning individual events, as well as to the faculty which captures the meet. Just pick the event or events you like, but get your entries in by Tuesday.

◆ SPORT ◆ SPLASHES

By Dong Green

Jr. S.P.S. kept intact her string of victories yesterday when she defeated Jr. Meds 23-10, making it four victories swimming meets since the start of the season. This clinches first place for School in group two.

Northwood, versatile swimming session for School performed as usual when he won the 50 back and 50 breast and swam as anchor man in the winning 200 yard relay team. Moffat and Gottlieb finished first and second for the winners in the 50 free. Meds won one first place, however, when their medley relay team of Mendelson, Robinson and Wilford finished ahead of the threesome from S.P.S.

Dents ploughed through the pool to take Wycliffe 25-5 in the other meet on the card. The victorious dentists won all five firsts and two second places. Lipman, Crouch and Chapnick won the medley. Brunton of Dents splashed ahead of Hill of Wycliffe to finish first in the 50 back. Wills and Lipman, both of Dents, finished first and second in the 50 breast. Dents gained another first and second in the next event, the 50 free, when Crouch and Brunton repeated the previous feat. Sproule, Lipman, Crouch and Cameron kept the record of every first place intact when they almost lapped Wycliffe's struggling squad of Abbot, Hazell, Paterson and Hill.

The Sportsman

By Beryl Pollock

Little has been said this year about baseball, but despite this lack of recognition, Vic and St. Mike's have organized the league and two games have already been played. Vic has an A team, composed of 1st, 3rd and 4th year players and a B team made up of sophomores. St. Mike's is the only other college to enter a team. The games are being played in Little Vic gym, during the next two weeks, providing that Old Man Winter does not succeed in freezing out these stalwarts.

Both the Vic teams boast excellent pitchers and catchers, and Vic A have found a reliable 1st baseman in Violet Van Luyen. Last Friday A defeated B, 8-5. At the return game played Wednesday, Vic A again trounced the Sophs, 11-3. The personnel of the teams includes, Team A: Audrey Boe, Beth Moore, Violet Van Luyen, Laura McLeod and Gretta Riddell, and Team B: Audrey Grey, Helen Carefoot, Elise Hurst, Isabel Park and Helen Rodd.

The next game will be on Monday between 5 and 6 p.m. St. Mike's vs. Vic A. If you wish to see some of these games, we advise you to bring along your heavy mitts, and ear-muffs. Little Vic gym is cold!

Here is a reminder to all you basketball fans that U.C. Juniors and O. & P.T. resume their struggle tonight at O.C.E. at 6. U.C. have a 6 point lead on the round, but with the fast-breaking O. and P.T. anything may happen to upset this.

BRINGS GREATER EFFICIENCY TO AGRICULTURE

TODAY Empire industry prepares to produce as never before. Unfailing supplies of food are the first essential. Farm production must be geared to its highest efficiency. More farm machinery, trucks and tractors will swing into service. Breakdowns and costly delays must stop. Manufacturers are relying on Nickel Steel and Nickel Cast Iron to give extra strength, toughness and resistance to wear, breakage and corrosion.

All branches of Empire industry are being speeded up. Transportation systems purchase new locomotives and freight cars. Mines and automotive plants install new machinery. The lumbering, textile, meat packing and petroleum industries strip for action. Canadian Nickel is employed in practically every machine and appliance to give long life and to prevent costly breakdowns.

Canadian Nickel, so vital to industry in normal times, becomes more vital than ever in gearing Empire industry to meet today's demands.

Wealthy Industrialist Donates $10,000 Cheque For University Research

Founder of Viking Foundation, Swedish Industrialist Axel
Wenner-Gren, Presents Fund for Research in Geophysics

HANS LUNSBURG OFFICIATES

A sum of $10,000 for research purposes in Geophysics was presented to the University of Toronto Saturday by the Viking Foundation, whose founder and chairman is the Swedish industrialist Axel Wenner-Gren.

Hans Lunsberg of Toronto, an associate of the wealthy Swedish industrialist, presented the $10,000 cheque to President Cody.

Rated one of the world's richest financiers, Wenner-Gren is the owner of the Southern Cross, the yacht in which he rescued survivors from the torpedoed Athenia at the beginning of the war, and is well-known for his philanthropic work.

The Viking Foundation, an institution similar to the Rockefeller Foundation, was established to provide money for scientific purposes.

Prior to the first great war, most of the donations went to European universities. Since then some grants have been made to universities in the United States, but Saturday's donation was the first yet made to a Canadian institution.

War Committee Refused by S.A.C.

The regular meeting of the Students' Administrative Council was held on Friday, November 29th, 1940, with the President, Mr. W. W. Small, in the chair.

Following the report of the special committee set up at the previous meeting to consider the request made by Mr. H. Takefman concerning the feasibility of forming a War Service Committee under his chairmanship on this campus, the Council stated it was of the opinion that the many well-established organizations whose objects are the same were already covering the field adequately, and that any new endeavour would conflict rather than render additional support. Moreover the Council was of the opinion that the methods employed by the self-appointed chairman of the so-called War Services Committee have not been such as to command the confidence of the student body. This declaration on the part of the Students' Administrative Council was made public to clarify the misunderstanding that has been created in the minds of many who have been approached for support. The Students' Administrative Council cannot lend its support to the plan as proposed at present, it was stated.

Conversations Began Tradition Which Grew to U.C. Arts Ball

The University College Arts Ball, longest established formal dance on the campus, will take place as usual this year, members of the U.C. Lit executive stated yesterday.

Set for December 11, this year's dance will carry on a college tradition which has existed for over 60 years.

The Arts Ball has developed from an annual series of Conversazioni which were held in the early years of U.C. The history of these functions is closely interwoven with that of the college itself, for the fire of 1890, which destroyed the east wing of U.C., took place on a winter night for which the Conversazione was scheduled.

Students arriving in sleighs for the dance stayed to fight the fire that had been started by an overturned oil lamp, intended as part of the hall's decoration.

S.C.M. Studies Labour Equity

Do the employees like their work? What wages do they receive? Does the work have a harmful effect on their eyes?

These were some of the questions asked by members of the "Work and Play" group of the University College S.C.M. when they inspected the Carhartt Overall Company's factory Saturday morning in an endeavour to catch a glimpse of Toronto's factory conditions.

The group was organized with a view to learning what young people not at college are doing with their lives. It had previously investigated the types of recreation indulged in by the young people of the city.

In touring the factory the party passed from one machine to another, watching the work being done and noting in particular, the skill and speed of the workers.

"The girls under me are all first rate," said the floor-lady in the factory, "and we do everything in our power to make them feel contented."

On being asked whether the work was hard on the worker's eyes, she said that the constant flashing of a needle caused a severe strain on the eyes, but that the newer machines have as much dull surface as possible in order to counteract this. The floor-lady explained that the employees' type of work is constantly varied, to prevent it from becoming monotonous.

SUNDAY SONGSTER HELD IN HART HOUSE

More than 50 song enthusiasts gathered in Hart House Music Room last night for the first Songster of the Term, which had been recalled by popular demand.

General satisfaction in the program was expressed by those attending, who had previously been informed that the Songsters, a fortnightly attraction at Hart House, were cancelled for the present school year owing to the fallings-off in attendance and the general pressure of time on the members of the music committee.

J. Campbell MacInnes conducted a varied program which included Christmas carols and other old favourites of Songster habitués.

In sharp contrast to these former dances, when guests arrived by sleigh and halls were lit by oil lamps, is the present Arts Ball. Motors have replaced sleighs and indirect lighting has eliminated oil lamps, but the spirit which prompts U.C. students to gather at a function of this sort remains the same.

The Lit executive promises this year's affair will be even more enjoyable than that of last year which, they point out, was generally said to be the best in the Ball's history.

V.C.U. Petition Requests Open Meeting

FIRST TIME IN HISTORY

For the first time in its ten-year history a petition from the student body of Victoria College, signed by six Vice students, is requesting the Victoria College Union to summon all Vice students to an open meeting to discuss the two clauses set forth in the petition. This open meeting is scheduled for Tuesday, Dec. 3 at 4 p.m. in Alumni Hall.

The Victoria College elections will be the first subject discussed. The petitioners hope that the procedure of Vice elections, with regard to campaigning and publicity, both for offices in the student government and for offices in the different years, will be changed at this meeting. It is for the students to decide whether or not Victoria will develop an election system akin to some of her sister organizations and have election speeches, an abundance of brightly-coloured posters bearing the merits of the respective nominees, slogans, etc. The second point under discussion will be the suggestion of the petitioners, "That an all-Victoria Christmas party be held in an effort to (Continued on Page 4)

Success of Probable German Invasion Unlikely, Journalist States in Town Hall Lecture
Friday

LONDONERS CREDITED

That a German invasion of England will not succeed now, although it will probably be attempted, was the opinion expressed by Vincent Sheean, prominent journalist recently returned from Europe, in his address "As the Scene Changes," the first in the Town Hall Series, presented at Eaton's Auditorium Friday night.

The attack, which might have succeeded in June because the army was unwarmed after the evacuation from Dunkirk, will be a simple and obvious one across the Straits of Dover, like those of Caesar and Napoleon, Mr. Sheean believes.

"The Germans have failed in their objective of sweeping the Royal Air Force from the sky," the lecturer declared as a result of his observations in England.

The British blockade may cause the people of Europe to go hungry this winter, but they will not starve, Mr. Sheean said. Any supplies sent to the countries under Hitler's domination would probably be diverted to Germany.

"This war is a war of ideals and ideals know no frontier. There is greater hope in this than in arms or munitions," the speaker said. The conflict, ideologies are political democracy, National Socialist Totalitarianism, and Soviet Communism.

"Political democracy is older than capitalism and will probably survive it," Mr. Sheean explained.

Mr. Sheean expressed great admiration for the showing of the R.A.F. to date. In the "dog fight" which occurred so frequently during August, the British planes and pilots were invariably superior, according to the speaker. The actual exhibition of air battles was one of the most amazing spectacles of the war, to the newspaper correspondent.

Credit was due, too, he said, to the people of London, who have remained unshaken by the terroristic, indiscriminate (Continued on page 3)

Prof. Gregoire, Is Lecturer In U.C. Series

ESCAPED FROM BRUSSELS

Formerly President of the Faculty of Philosophy and Letters in the University of Brussels, Professor Henri Gregoire will give a series of three lectures in Room 8, University College, commencing today. His first lecture will be on the subject "The Living Interest of the Classics."

The university is fortunate in having such a visitor as Professor Gregoire, who is one of the greatest living authorities on Byzantine history. It was with the greatest difficulty that he escaped from Brussels and by devious means made his way to this continent.

Professor Gregoire was the President of the Faculty of Philosophy and Letters in the University of Brussels and was the founder of Byzantine studies, to which he himself contributed numerous articles. Professor Gregoire's chief publications have been studies on, and critical editions of, Greek texts, especially those related to Byzantine history, but he has also written important articles on the Nibelungenlied.

ADVISES JOURNALISTS

By Mary Cleaver

The reconstruction of the post-war world will be largely the work of today's university students, Vincent Sheean, internationally known foreign correspondent and author told The Varsity in an interview Saturday. To study and learn, not just to pass examinations, but with the object of putting education to practical use in solving the problems created by war was Mr. Sheean's advice to the students of this university.

Although Mr. Sheean has been in the newspaper game for twenty years, he will be but 41 on his next birthday. The fact that it is this week he is continually bemoaning for he feels that he is getting into "the dangerous age."

That the Anglo-Saxon races will win the war, Mr. Sheean is very certain. Foreign correspondent for the Chicago Tribune and various news syndicates, he has known Winston Churchill for years and has always been his admirer. Mr. Sheean thinks it probable that the United States will sooner or later become an active participant in the war.

Having only recently returned from England he has great admiration for the way she is carrying the battle for the democratic world, despite the fact that a year and a half ago he was a critic of Britain and things British. "The way Britain came through in response to her pledges in the face of Hitler's threat of total war made me see things in a different light," Mr. Sheean said.

Regarding the position of Spain, he believes that she is solidly behind the Axis. "Already," he told us, "there are a great many strong forces of German troops (although not as troops) in that country, ready for action."

"We should not be too optimistic about eventual Russian aid for Britain," Mr. Sheean continued, "for she and Germany are playing the same game."

U.B.C. CORPS EXAM WILL CATCH SLACKER

Vancouver, B.C., Dec. 1, (CUP) — All male students at the University of British Columbia in the basic military training group of the C.O.T.C. will write exams on their military lectures sometime in January, Colonel G. M. Shrum announced last week. The exams are designed to check up on those men who don't take the lecture seriously and on those who skip the occasional period.

Lecture-skippers, according to Col. Shrum, won't be tolerated. Instead, they will be forced to do double time on drill, parade, or guard duty. Two men are at present employed to check up on the absentee lists and the bona fide absentees.

Year Book Limns Life at S.P.S.

Covering all phases of the school life of every S.P.S. man during the year, the 1941 issue of "Transactions and Year Book" is scheduled to go to press in the month of February according to an announcement received by The Varsity yesterday. "This edition will be something," said the Editor, "and well worth keeping for perusal in the years to come."

F. L. Lambe, Editor-in-Chief, and F. Ayslight, Transactions Editor, are the only members of this year's staff who were masthead members last year. A. J. J. Barry is Advertising Manager, with J. H. Turner acting as his assistant. Business Manager G. D. Thomas joined the R.C.A.F. after acting for about two weeks in that capacity. J. Quint is the Sports Editor, and Keith Jackson, staff photographer of The Varsity, will be in charge of photography. "The Transactions and Year Book" is the official publication of the Engineering Society. Besides reviewing social and sporting events, the publication features a Transactions section devoted to technical papers by students, members of the staff and other men of science.

Watch Your Money!

In peace time demands upon the individual for charitable purposes are numerous enough. In war time these demands continue, but at the same time are almost overshadowed by a multitude of "war effort" financial demands. No one can deny that the purpose and ideas behind most of them are fine; but the individual must exercise a degree of discrimination in the number of demands he contributes to, and he should at all times be certain that the demand is authentic.

During the last month an attempt was made on this campus to bring into being a Students' War Service Committee. Some of the ideas behind it were good; most were impractical. The scheme was the brain-child of one individual and the methods employed were such as to destroy confidence in that individual's ability to carry through such a scheme, even with the full support of every faculty on the campus, a support which was claimed but was never a fact. Using the name of the university and claiming full official student support, the "Committee" canvassed downtown firms for financial and material support. Other incidents on the campus also served to bring the "Committee" into disfavor.

Students, asked to support any such schemes, should make absolutely certain that the demand is authorized, official, and in responsible hands. Using the name of the university for the purpose of soliciting funds outside the campus, when the university has not granted such permission, is a serious offence and one which can only do it harm. The S.A.C. has acted wisely in refusing support to the proposed "Committee" as it stood. In future any charity or war demands on the campus should be thoroughly investigated as this one was.

Will Europe Starve?

The United States, as the richest neutral in the world today, is coming face to face with another serious problem in connection with the war. For as winter draws near millions of people in Nazi-occupied parts of Europe face starvation and death unless huge stocks of food from the outside world can be brought to them.

Humanitarian sentiment naturally favours the sending of food to relieve the starving citizens of the small countries over-run by the Nazi war machine and now lying helpless under German domination. Every pound of food in western Europe is in Nazi control. Stocks of wheat, fats and meats have been carried from Norway, Finland, Poland, Belgium, the Netherlands, and parts of France and used in Germany. The British naval blockade prevents food from getting into Europe. As a result some 37,000,000 people face starvation this winter, according to the estimate of Herbert Hoover.

Over against the humanitarian instinct however is the question of food as a war factor. Americans, wanting Britain to win the war, are afraid that the sending of large quantities of food to Europe will aid Germany and work to the disadvantage of Britain in her struggle against the totalitarian forces of the continent. They agree generally with Prime Minister Churchill's statement that the responsibility for feeding those millions rests with Germany by virtue of her conquest. They fear that the Nazis will snatch any food that is sent for relief of occupied territories, and that those for whom the food was intended will still go hungry.

Thus torn between humanitarian impulses and the desire to help Britain win the war, the United States faces a grave problem. Ex-President Hoover, director of food relief in the last war, has again made a proposal to bring relief to starving Europe. He argues that the food would actually get to the hungry people. He feels that Nazi Germany wants to avoid the spread of disease and suffering in occupied territories because it would hurt her, and for that reason would allow the food to reach its destination. The objection here, however, is that if the Nazis want to avoid such disease, they would probably feed the people themselves, and thus to send food would be to help the Nazis in their task. Hoover states that an airtight check can be set up because native agencies do the actual relief work and could immediately tell whether the Nazis were seizing the supplies or not. If they did so, then Hoover agrees that the whole plan must be dropped immediately, but points out that Germany, knowing this, would not be so apt to interfere. Furthermore, by sending the supplies in small quantities, even if Germany did seize the first consignment she would only obtain enough for three days, a quantity hardly sufficient to win the war. And no more would be sent.

Mr. Hoover's plan might conceivably work, with those safeguards and additional ones included. It is up to American citizens to come to a decision, or to invent a scheme whereby they may satisfy their natural humanitarian feelings and at the same time guard against hurting Britain's war campaign. The choice has been summarized as: "Today's food or tomorrow's freedom?" The answer America seeks is: "Today's food and tomorrow's freedom."

Balkan Pattern

There seems to be action aplenty, both military and diplomatic, down in the region of the Balkans these days. On the battle front the Italians are still advancing—towards Italy. On the diplomatic front there has been in past weeks much signing of documents and shaking of hands as several nations have hopped aboard the Axis bandwagon.

A New Order seems to be in the making as Germany's Drang nach Osten moves toward reality. An Axis bloc has been formed pushing east to within 250 miles of the Dardanelles. First of all Hungary joined the Tripartite Pact made last summer between Germany, Italy and Japan. Then it was Rumania's turn to pledge "partnership" with the Axis. Last of all little Slovakia did some signing. It was thought on all sides that Bulgaria would be next; however, she did not sign, despite a conference between Boris III and Hitler in Berlin. Apparently acting on Bulgaria's seeming disinclination to join the Axis at present, Britain has offered to respect Bulgarian territorial integrity in any post-war peace terms if the Balkan nation will refuse to join Germany in the present war. Yugoslavia, Turkey and Russia are left as the three question marks in the Balkan pattern. Turkey has refused German "offers" and has announced martial law, placed restrictions on travel, and ordered blackouts.

Greek forces are gallantly pushing back the Italians along the Albanian battleground, according to all reports. Crowning triumph came with the capture of Corizza, the Albanian town which was to have been the advance base for the Italian push into Greece. Italian mechanized units bogged down in the narrow muddy passes, and the army was completely demoralized by the Greeks who used geography to advantage. The latest announcement from Berlin is to the general effect that if Greece continues to beat Italy, the Nazis will come to the aid of Signor Mussolini. If and when that event comes to pass, the Balkan pattern will be drastically redrawn.

ART MUSIC Drama

U.C. Players' Guild

An unusually ambitious program of one-act plays was, on the whole, capably presented by the U.C. Players' Guild at their Theatre Night Friday evening. The plays presented were Plant in the Sun, by Ben Bengal, a comedy with a working-class angle; a scene from Irwin Shaw's Bury the Dead; and The Fatal Gazogene, also by a man named Shaw.

The Guild's best work was displayed in the two Shaw plays. The Gazogene is a delightful bit of tomfoolery, completely lacking in G.B.S.'s usual subtle undertones, slightly dated, but so completely and sublimely ridiculous that it appeals to any audience. The play was carried completely by the superb work of Heather Hill in the role of the heroine. Perfectly cast, Miss Hill carried off the part with just the right amount of hauteur and incongruous dignity. The others provided excellent support in less exciting parts, Maurice Walsh deserving special commentation for his work as the Landlord. While this play was perhaps the most successful of the three, it must be remembered that it was by far the easiest to produce. Scenery and light were handled with the correct degree of unconcern as prescribed in the text.

Bury the Dead as originally written is artistically a very fine play, though its impressionism sometimes tends to bewilder the uninitiated play-goer. The scene chosen by the Guild is unquestionably the best in the play, concerning the effort of six women to persuade their men, who have been killed in the war, to allow themselves to be buried.

Despite its artistic excellence, the play in its original form contained features which made it undesirable for performance on a Canadian stage today. In an effort to overcome this, the Guild wrote an introduction, changing the locale to Nazi Germany and introducing a baroque Hitler and a pair of ludicrous goose-steppers. The play gains nothing from the addition, which has no effect on what follows and generally leaves a bad taste in one's mouth. But Shaw's dialogue is enthralling, containing some of the most beautiful prose American drama has yet produced.

The character studies of the different women were all developed with the utmost sincerity. Several of these performances were amazingly good, the young and inexperienced players apparently playing above their heads and carried away by the intensity of their scenes. The soldiers themselves were less satisfying, several contending themselves with the delivery of mere propaganda speeches and making no attempt to work with the women.

Plant in the Sun should never have been chosen by the Guild. The play is a rollicking, tough little comedy about a group of young candy workers who go on strike to win union recognition. The original version of the play made the workers male, and the language used was rarely of the parlor variety. Exigencies of casting forced the Guild to make the workers female, but not enough of the offending lines were stricken out to allow for this change. As a result, the whole play had a raw tinge which the girls found difficult to cope with. Admittedly the play would have lost much of its life through the omission of these lines, but the change in casting made it necessary. Despite their handicaps, the girls succeeded in carrying off a few of the scenes quite acceptably. The telephone conversation of the Jewish girl with her mother was beautifully played, and the difficult scene with the spy was also well handled.

The upper class villains in this play were poor stock characters, who might have been improved with a little more directorial attention. Due to the inability of the girls to enter into the true spirit of the play, the pace frequently lagged. But these faults are inevitable when a play of this kind is performed by an inexperienced and untrained cast.

Friday Recital

Last Friday afternoon a very pleasant hour of piano music was offered by Wilma Stevenson Dohler, former pupil of Ernest Seitz. Miss Stevenson has a well polished and dependable technique; her musical phrasing is good and her sense of dynamics is vivid.

Miss Stevenson's program was unique in that she presented music of only one country—Russia. Russian music seems essentially melancholy and too much may become depressing, but Miss Stevenson offset this problem by introducing naive and capricious pieces such as marches by Prokofiev.

In the Rachmaninoff group, the Melodie especially was appealing with its rich theme weaving in and about a steady and rhythmic harmonic pattern. The Prelude in B Minor was of a quiet serene nature and finally the familiar Prelude in G Minor which I feel was a trifle slow and precise.

The final group contained the very brilliant and exceedingly fascinating Theme and Variations of Glazounov. Beginning with a simple, doleful tune the composer has built up a massive structure of improvisational harmony upon it. Miss Stevenson again proved herself capable of giving a sensitive and understanding interpretation, bringing a most enjoyable recital of salon music to a close. PHIL. WHITEHEAD

We take the keenest of pleasure in announcing the dates, times and places of the basketball finals.

The first game, between U.C. Juniors and the winner of the Vic Seniors vs St. Hilda's Seniors match tonight, will take place on Wednesday night, Dec. 4th at 7.30 in the Hart House gym. The second match, between these same two—total points on the round to count, as in the semi-finals—will be on Friday, Dec. 6th at 8 p.m. in the Hart House gym. Tomorrow we shall print the names of all (approximately 20) the luckies taking part in these long-awaited spectacles.

On Friday night last, the U.C. Juniors once more triumphed over the luckless O.T. & P.'s to bring their total score on the round up to 55, as compared with 40 for O.T. & P. Friday's games, as before, was hot and close, nip and tuck as to the outcome. At one time, the O.T. & P. hoopsteres were within one point of the U.C. gang, but not for long. Betty Mortimer led the Red and White scoring, securing 14 of their 26 points, while O.T. & P. divided their honours between Wilma Perry (8), Elsie Saunders (5), and Marg Atkinson (4). U.C. won, but it was a hard pull from start to finish and, as was the case with St. Mike's, never a dull moment—nor a vacant bench, yes truly! We wait with bated breath for Wednesday night.

Tonight at 6.30 Vic Seniors once more take on St. Hilda's Seniors in their final game to see which will face U.C. in Hart House on Wednesday—(at 7.30 advt.)—we get a nice little bonus for free time we bring that in! Vic go into this game with a 30 point lead, having secured a 35-5 count in their first encounter, but anything can happen, believe you us!—And we do love those cheers, we do!

U.C. TAKES EMMANUEL PLAYOFF BIRTH DECIDED IN NEXT LACROSSE GAME

The Group III boxla schedule wound up on Friday afternoon as U.C. registered a decisive 10-6 victory over Emmanuel. The loss, however, does not shake the Theologues out of the running. On Tuesday they encounter Meds to decide second place and a play-off berth. The Red and White finished way out in front, undefeated and untied.

Billy Fennell of Emmanuel was once more the standout, and the only bright spot in an otherwise ragged game of scramble-ball. He bagged five of his team's tallies; Frid rapped in the other. Cliff Ballagh nabbed a trio for U.C., Alcombrack and Gibson each threw in a brace, while McNulty, Hignell and Campbell picked up one apiece.

U.C.: Francis, Ballagh, Alcombrack, Gibson, Ledingham, MacDiarmid, McNulty, McCulloch, Campbell, Hignell, Emmanuel: Patterson, Fennell, McKennitt, Rutherford, Oliver, Jackson, Frid.

U.C. VOLLEYBALL III—

Senior O.C. clinched top honours in Group I when her swimming squad took the Senior Medical natators 24-9 in the first of the swimming meets, held Friday at Hart House pool. U.C., as is their custom, won every first place. Their medley trio of Brett, Wadds and Meen finished out in front. Ged Clawson won the back stroke with Maurice Clarkson of Meds finishing second. Clawson finished first again in the 50 breast with Wadds, also of U.C., placing second. George Meen of U.C. splashed through to victory in the 50 free in the fast time of 25.9. U.C. finished off the meet as strongly as they started when their final relay quartet of Patchet, Meen, Clawson and McIntyre defeated Culiner, the two Bests and Wesley of Meds.

St. Mike's defeated their close neighbours Emmanuel 19-14, when their free style relay foursome of Crane, Dunn, Flaherty, and Remmer edged out the Emmanuel squad of Eagle, McRae, Kaellgren and Ball in the final event.

The winners started strongly when Flaherty, their ace swimmer, turned on a terrific sprint to win the 150 medley and those first three points. Green of Emmanuel won a close race with Crane of St. Mike's in the 50 back, and Morwood of Emmanuel did the same thing to Kieffer, the chief threat in the 50 breast. Flaherty of St. Mike's kept his college in the running by taking the 50 sprint with Green of Emmanuel in second place. This left the score 16-14 in favour of St. Mike's with only the final relay left. The Irish foursome had won this race and the meet just before Emmanuel's anchor man took off (in other words, by over two lengths).

MONOY'S MUSINGS ON SATURDAY'S STRUGGLE

Alderman Dave Sprague of Ottawa is a sure bet for re-election in Eytown today as the jubilant football fans who are his constituents troop to the polls to cast their votes. We'd lay our last drachma against a piece of used pool chalk that the Alderman's sortie around the left end for a major score and victory on Saturday would win him more X's in the proper place than a dozen orations on the tax-rate or subversive elements. . . . The Balmies Beachers need offer no alibi about losing to the Rough Riders. Both sides put up a whale of a game under the adverse conditions prevailing, and the best team won. Perhaps the story will be reversed next week, but six points is a lot to spot a powerful squad such as Herman, Wadsworth, Sprague, and their playful little friends. . . .

Beaches lost the game quite early in the struggle, simply because they failed to win when they had the chance—if we can be pardoned for muttering so in our beard. But this is what we are confusedly striving to say: Johnny Fitzgerald expressed our thoughts with a devout bit of wishful thinking after seeing Ottawa almost bobble an end run. "Give us just one fumble," quoth the expert who is more hep than anyone on the press gang to what the Balmies needed to start them rolling. "Amen," echoed this corner, and two minutes later the fumble came. Beaches frantically tried to dribble the oval Bloorwards, but the last kick sent it sailing into the snowbank which was the deadline. The Old Gold and Blue chose to forego the optional rouge and took a first down on Ottawa's ten. Seymour went for lost on the first try, but the Rough Riders held, and the opportunity was left. . . .

The Beachers looked like a bunch of elves from Old Santa's workshop or something as they ran out with their gold-helmeted noggins and blue sweaters contrasting against the white-encrusted playing-field. . . . Just before the starting whistle the officials galloped all over the gridiron inspecting the toolties of all the players in case anyone had rung in a set of trick cloths for use on the slippery ground. . . . After one brief march around the field Captain Slater and his Masters of Oomph wisely retired to the shelter of the grandstand to complete their program. . . . Reid of Beaches prevented Tiny Herman from scoring a placement on the last play of the first half by crashing through in Tedder Reeve style to take a face-full of pigskin and avert an Ottawa score. On the play, the Rough Riders lost three potential points and Reid lost two irrevocable teeth. . . .

A jolly little snowball battle took place between two irrevocable teeth of the opposing squads before they settled down to serious business in the second half. Tony Golab entered the fray for the first time during the third canto, and carried the ball only once. . . . Individual stars of the game were Sward (kicking), Porter (still the surest catch we have seen this season), Sprague (good for a six-yard gain almost every time), Wadsworth (ditto), Drinkwater (Beach prize find of the year). . . . The Drinkwater lad turned in a beautiful performance all round, and made a truly sensational tackle of Andy Tommy to rouse him behind the Ottawa line. . . . Cutest deception of the day was pulled by the Rough Riders in converting their touchdown. Tiny Herman was back as usual for the placement; he knelt down and scooped out a little hollow in the snow to hold the ball after it had been snapped to Burke; the snap-out came and Burke straightened up and tossed a pass over the left end of the line to Rick Perley, who stroled across the line without a Beacher in mauling distance. . . .

This series has brought together two former team-mates in Ross Trimble and Alec Ponton, rival coaches. If memory serves, both played for Balmies in their former Dominion title days of 1927 and 1930, when Trimble was a middle wing and Ponton was barking the signals from the quarter-back position. . . . Although the weather was bad for players and spectators alike, we think the 7,000 fans slogged home through the snow-drifts satisfied that they had seen two good teams play a good game.

Notes: The above-mentioned group of 7,000 contented customers does not include the slightly-peevy lady whose translucent umbrella was shot through in six places after a barrage of snowballs had descended from the upper tier of the bleachers.

A Robin Hood who rides a horse like Tom Mix and brandishes a mean sword is the central figure in the current production, "The Mark of Zorro." The title brings back to older movie-goers memories of the swashbuckling antics of Douglas Fairbanks, but for those of our generation who see the picture without preconceived ideas, Tyrone Power does a really grand job in a picture whose chief theme is thrilling adventure.

IMPERIAL THE MARK OF ZORRO

The scene is laid in the old California in the days of Spanish domination. Tyrone Power as a dashing young caballero returns from Madrid to find that his father, the governor, has been ousted and a puppet governor put in his place, serving as a front for the greed and cruelty of Basil Rathbone, an army captain. Rathbone and the governor are doing a good job of squeezing money from the peasants. Power starts to lead a double life, playing a dandified top in front of his friends while turning out a bold, sword-flashing Robin Hood other times in order to redress the wrongs suffered by the peasants. In the end, after thrilling adventures and close escapes, he terrifies the governor into leaving for Madrid, kills the captain and wins the beautiful girl, Linda Darnell. L.N.S.

Formby and his banjo-uke are back again, this time in the British Intelligence Service, by mistake of course, but the toothy comedian comes through in a combination of bungling and rare skill to sink three German submarines, capture another, and save three troops and a liner. The story starts off keeping within the bounds of plausibility, but soon discards restraint as useless and gains in speed and laughs.

The picture is peppered with the usual tickling Formby nonsense songs which give the proprietors as little respect as possible. R.V.

The Ethel Vance best-seller "Escape" has been transferred to the screen with complete success. Thanks largely to the Arch Oboler adaptation, the adventure story retains all the excitement and the suspense that the book contained.

However, what places the film out of the ordinary class is the inspired casting of all the characters. LOEW'S Norma Shearer and ROBERT ESCAPE Taylor perform competently with Shearer giving one of the best performances of her career, but both leads must step into the background when such performers as Nazimova, Albert Basserman and Conrad Veidt appear on the scene. These people are actors of the old school (Continued on Page 4) architecture is necessary, and the students have had one year of drafting.) Then comes the actual construction and finally the painting, landscaping and other finishing touches.

Mr. Coates, the instructor, remarked that this training showed a student the need for his design to be practical and workable. It called for craftsmanship, he said, and "got the students using their hands." He regretted the course's limitation of too little time.

Mr. Coates told the story of two large models, both groups of houses, that are in his workshop. They belong to an undertaking begun by Professor E. R. Arthur of the Faculty of Applied Science and Engineering, to preserve a record of the tradition of Canadian architecture existing in rural districts. At his suggestion, certain students explored the countryside, and finding beautiful examples of the workmanship of Old Country craftsmen, sketched and took measurements of them. From these measurements some Toronto architects produced the models. One is a village community of white frame houses with their town hall and school, the other a group of log dwellings about a Mennonite church.

The dwellings so gathered were published in book form, a new issue being added every year because new finds come to light. Mr. Coates also mentioned in this connection the work of the Architects' Association in restoring an old home near Cobourg, Ontario.

and their technique overshadows everything that the so-called stars of the production can offer.

Miss Shearer plays the part of the Countess who finds herself involved in the escape of Emmy Ritter, an actress, from a concentration camp. Taylor as the actress' son shows more restraint than usual, but that doesn't save him from being the weak link in the production. Nazimova returns to the screen after a 15-year absence with an excellent characterization of the actress under the death penalty. Philip Dorn, a Dutch newcomer, plays sincerely and sympathetically, and Felix Bressart and Bonita Granville round out the excellent cast.

The story is inclined to build rather slowly and at times drags, but the work of the entire cast lifts the film into a "must see" production.—F.S.

Royal Canadian Institute Hears Lecture on Photography

The uses of photography in war and science were treated by Walter Clark, Ph.D., in the Royal Canadian Institute lecture in Convocation Hall Saturday evening.

Dr. Clark listed photography's functions in war as, instruction, propaganda, reconnaissance, the recording of effects of raids and bombings. With regard to aerial photography, the speaker revealed that "a new flash-bomb has been developed in the United States which makes possible the photography of blacked-out areas." This bomb has been made available to Canada and Great Britain, Dr. Clark stated.

In the realm of science photography has been of the utmost value, the lecturer pointed out, in work with x-rays and ultra-violet and infra-red rays.

Police Hold Museum Assistant Under Defence Regulations

Charged of "an offence under the Defence of Canada Regulations," Joseph Classy, Assistant in the Classical Department of the Royal Ontario Museum of Archeology, and his wife, appeared in court Saturday and were remanded until Dec. 6. Bail was set at $1,000 each but was not produced.

The couple were arrested by officers of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police on the charge of aiding Stanley Ryerson, alias Robertson, to avoid apprehension. Classy was a graduate of McGill University, took post-graduate work at Yale, and was assisting Professor H. A. Thompson of the Department of Archeology.

A. J. Glazebrook Passes Away, Former Lecturer in Banking

A former member of the staff of the University of Toronto, Arthur James Glazebrook, passed away at his home last Thursday in his seventy-ninth year after a long illness. Mr. Glazebrook came to the university in 1930 as a special lecturer in Banking and Finance in the Department of Economics until four years ago when his illness forced his retirement.

Mr. Glazebrook received his early education at Haileybury College in England, and came to Canada with the rest of his family in 1876. When the other members of his family returned to the Old Country, he remained and entered the service of the Bank of British North America in 1883.

In 1900 Mr. Glazebrook settled in Toronto where he organized an exchange brokerage firm called Glazebrook and Cronyn which prospered for thirty years, at the end of which time he retired to join the staff of the university.

Mr. Glazebrook was the father of G. P. Glazebrook, at present Associate Professor of History here in the university.

Men's Co-operative Residence Holds Annual Chinese Party

The annual Chinese dinner and dance of the Campus Co-operative Residence Inc. took place Saturday with due rites and ceremonies. Arranged by John Fornataro as both an educational and social function, the party marked one of the first occasions of the year of the presentation of co-operative measures on the campus.

The co-operative residence will continue this work with study groups held at their main house on 186 St. George Street in this and the following term. These are in keeping with the policy of the residence to make its work known among all students attending the university.

ALL-VARSITY PROFITS GO TO PIPERS

House. "This year," explained Professor T. M. C. Taylor, chairman of the House Committee, "it was felt that a compromise should be made towards the war, but in keeping with the tradition." Hence, the idea of promoting a pipe band for the C.O.T.C. and Training Centre met with unanimous approval.

Beyond the contribution for War Savings Stamp, the profits which further help in the university's war effort go to fill a long-felt want, some circles believe.

Speaking on this point, Lt.-Col. Wilson observed, "A pipe band is most desirable in any battalion because so much more can be done with it than with a brass band."

The pipe band is now in the process of formation under Pipe-Major Neil of the Toronto Police Force and was originally planned to include six pipes and four drummers. However, there were over 20 applicants, some with and some without experience, and the final size of the band will depend on how many qualify.

Brant Inn Dance Swings Out And Dentists Desert Druggery

Last Friday night the fourth and fifth year dental classes cast aside their forceps and drills to celebrate in their traditional manner.

The graduating class held themselves out to Brant Inn. The smooth rhythm of Mark Kenney and his band provided the dance music. Rather than risk the bad driving conditions in separate cars, transportation was provided by chartering a bus. The dance committee were very pleased with this new innovation because it gave everyone the chance of getting acquainted before the dance started.

Station CKUA Is Cause Of Agitation

Opposition Members of Alberta Legislature Charge University Radio Station to be Aberhart Instrument

WILL IMPROVE EQUIPMENT

By Marcel Lambert
Staff Writer, The Gateway
Edmonton, Alta., Dec. 2 (CUP) — Much agitation has been caused by the announcement late in October by Dr. W. A. R. Kerr, president of the University of Alberta, that plans had been formulated for the renovation of station CKUA, owned and operated by the University of Alberta.

Charges have been laid by opposition members of the provincial government and by the provincial daily newspapers that the new station is to provide an outlet for propaganda by the Social Credit government of Premier William Aberhart, as a result of a shut down on S.C. broadcasts by commercial stations. These charges have been vigorously denied by both the provincial administration and the university authorities.

Government to Finance Station

The provincial government will finance the rehabilitation of CKUA and in return will share its control. An administration board of six members, three from the university and three appointed by the government, has been selected. University members are Dr. W. A. R. Kerr, president of the university, Dean R. Newton, head of the Faculty of Agriculture, and Donald Cameron, head of the Extension Department.

Station equipment has become obsolete, so that the university was faced with the alternative of rehabilitation or of ceasing to operate. The station will be commercialized with a power step-up to 1000 watts and programs will be released for approximately eighteen hours a day instead of the present seven.

Work has already been started on the installation of a new transmitter unit. This is the first step in renovation work that will cost approximately $30,000. Some difficulty is being experienced in obtaining some of the radio equipment because of war time conditions.

CKUA has been in operation since 1927 under the control of the Extension Department. Programs are essentially of an educational nature, providing the means of extensive courses by correspondence for country students.

In recent years students have taken an active part in broadcasts with regular newscasts, dramatic and musical programs. Most successful show is "Varsity Varieties" combining music, song and action.

Professor Robert Angus To be Honoured Friday By Mechanical Engineers

Work in Faculty of Applied Science Brings Recognition to Varsity Professor, Authority on Pumps and Turbines

GRADUATED IN 1897

One of the greatest honours ever to be awarded to an engineer will come to Professor Robert W. Angus of the Faculty of Applied Science tomorrow night when an honorary membership to the American Society of Mechanical Engineers will be conferred on him at the sixty-first annual meeting of that body.

The ceremony will take place at the Annual Dinner and Honours Night of the society at the Hotel Astor in New York when five engineers of the continent are to receive special recognition. As well as to Professor Angus, other awards will be given an authority on coal combustion and storage, an inventor and authority on high speed engines, a dean emeritus of the College of Engineering at Princeton, and a lubrication expert.

Professor Angus draws this special recognition for his work in the Faculty of Applied Science here as well as being a consultant on machinery and processes in connection with pumps and turbines.

Professor Angus came to the University of Toronto as its first professor of mechanical engineering. He graduated from this university in 1897 and in the years following worked with an engineering firm in London, Ontario, with the Standard Oil Company and with the United States Steel and Wire Company.

Arts Ball Tickets On Sale Tomorrow

Tickets for this year's University College Arts Ball, official formal dance of the college, will go on sale tomorrow in the U.C. junior common room and in the women's common room, dance executive members announced yesterday.

Co-operating to a greater extent than in past years, the U.C. Literary and Athletic Society and the Women's Undergraduate Association are both working to make the dance a success. C. L. Dubin, literary director of the Lit, told The Varsity.

Dance tickets will be on sale in the two common rooms from 11 a.m. to 2 p.m., starting tomorrow and continuing thereafter, he stated.

"In order to help make the dance the most enjoyable of the campus season," Dubin added. "The committee will have tables arranged so that parties of friends coming to the dance may sit together. When you buy your tickets please tell us how many will be in your party, so we can make the proper arrangements."

Victoria Officials to be Elected For Spring Semester Next Friday

Nominations for the executives of the Classes of '42, '43, and '44 in Victoria, close this afternoon at five o'clock, announced Chief Returning Officer Ed Kirkland of the Victoria College Union.

Vote students go to the polls on Friday, Dec. 6, and speaking of the elections, Kirkland stated, "I strongly urge all to exercise their franchise if they have the interests of both themselves and the college at heart."

At present there is a move afoot in Victoria to permit the candidates for undergraduate offices to campaign as do those nominated in other faculties about the university. In order to discuss the possibility of such a move, a special meeting of the Victoria College Union has been called for today at four o'clock in Alumni Hall.

This meeting is the result of a petition signed by six Vic students for the purpose of discussing two classes mentioned therein, one of which deals with campaigning, the other with the possibility of "an All-Victoria Christmas party to be held in an effort to promote college spirit."

MASTHEAD MEETING

There will be a meeting of the Masthead of The Varsity on Wednesday evening. Place to be announced.

Foresters Frolic In Hart House

Foresters displayed their versatility last week-end in Hart House as they performed an operation, gave their version of The Varsity office, and the shooting of Dan McGrew, in the skits of the three years represented at Forestry Stunt Night.

Between performances the lumbermen dragged their high boots and plaid clad partners past the boughs and tent which decorated the music room to the tune of the latest recordings played by gramophone.

Following supper an extensive Travogue by The White Pine Bureau showed, in the Great Hall, lumbering at its latest and most advanced stage.

Among those present were Professors G. G. Cosens, T. W. Dwight and R. C. Hosie, Graham Hadley, president of the Foresters' Club, and Warden J. R. Gilley. Responsible for the skits were representatives from the three years: 3rd year, Bert Day; 2nd year, George Beare; 1st year, T. E. Monaghan.

Refugee Belgian Scholar Seeks New World Shelter

Describes Flight from Belgium via Paris and Toulouse; Tells of German Restriction of Political Discussion

FAMILY STILL IN FRANCE

"On the day of the German invasion of Belgium I was lecturing before a college in Paris on the Political Allusions of Euripides," declared Professor Gregoire, President of the Faculty of Philosophy and Letters in the University of Brussels. "From Paris I went to Toulouse, where my family joined me."

Prof. Gregoire got his visa and sailed for New York from Spain on board the ship, New Greece. His family is still in Toulouse awaiting their visas.

This little firm speaks in a high voice, with short, clipped words. According to his version he speaks "not yet the King's English or the English of the United States." He informed The Varsity that when he was a student in Berlin the German professors and students proudly refrained from discussion of political questions—"academic freedom, yes; political freedom, no."

When asked if the Brussels university was closed, the Belgian thought that "the spirit of the students had forced the authorities to take measures." "All the colleges in Belgium were closed during the four years of the last war, so that in all probability the case will be the same this time," he said.

Upon the German invasion of Norway the students of the Brussels university immediately organized to serve there; and many lost their lives in the cause.

Millionaire Endows Geophysics

Axel L. Wenner-Gren, Swedish Industrialist, Grants $10,000 to University; Institute of Geophysics Proposed

MAY BE SIMILAR GRANTS

Big news of the week for this university has been the grant of $10,000 for use in the field of geophysics, by the Viking Foundation created by Axel L. Wenner-Gren, multi-millionaire. To augment the significance of the news comes the report that this grant may be the first of similar grants to be made every year for the next five years.

The university, which has pioneered in this country in developing the study of geophysics (one of the reasons why the grant is the first of its kind to a Canadian institution), is considering the creation of an Institute of Geophysics should the grant be repeated for the next five years as Wenner-Gren has proposed.

The particular uses to which the donation will be put, have not yet been decided upon by the physics department of the university. Several suggestions, however, are forthcoming.

The Viking Foundation itself suggested its use in the investigation of geophysical problems in relation to Canadian mining, particularly in regard to studying the causes of rock-bursts. Other possibilities are that it will be used to defray the cost of lectures for senior and post-graduate students on special phases, or to purchase new laboratory equipment. Also it might be used for the mathematical treatment and development of formulae for processes now in use where current practices have gone beyond mathematical theory.

MUSIC COMMITTEE

Members of the Hart House Music Committee are requested to call at the Warden's office today for the notices regarding Friday's Recital.

Annual At-Home To be Held Friday

Men of North, East and South Houses of the University of Toronto residences will hold their annual At-Home on Friday, Dec. 6, it was announced last night by the social committee of the residences.

As usual, the supper dance will take place at the Roof Gardens of the Royal York Hotel from nine to two. Fred Evis and his orchestra will supply the background for dancers.

It is expected about 200, including residents and residence alumni, will assist at the function, which is hailed by those who attend as one of the best dances of the year. Patrons will include former housemasters of the residences. Committee members promise an evening of lavish entertainment, including favours and toothsome victuals.

Victoria Players Present Comedy

Vic Drama Club presented the comedy "Boosting Bridge", under the direction of Tom Peart, at the Alumni Club yesterday afternoon. "Boosting Bridge" is a non-royalty play. After the performance it was discussed by the audience.

Those in the cast were Ruth Bentley, Marjorie Smallman, Joan Heath, Grace Jolly, Marion Lyons, Nancy Lamb and Isabel Eastman.

Cambridge Grad Speaks to S.C.M.

Yesterday at noon Rev. Thomas Harris, a graduate of Cambridge and the Union Theological Seminary, spoke to the S.C.M. at the Women's Union on "The Church and Totalitarianism." He has been at Harvard for four or five years and for the last two years, has been writing and lecturing in the United States and Canada.

Mr. Harris stated that Christianity is a matter of private concern and cannot be identified with any form of government. The individual Christian sets his goal in accordance with his religious beliefs. The means for attaining this goal, however, may be determined on a non-religious basis. For example a Brigadier General and an ardent pacifist may have the same end in view yet have a widely different manner of attaining it.

Mrs. Laura Jamieson, C.C.F. Member, Urges Abolition of Campus Societies; Charges Opposition to Democracy

ALLEGATIONS DENIED

By Arvid Backman
Staff Writer, The Ubysses
Vancouver, B.C., Dec. 2 (CUP) — Claiming that U.B.C. Greek letter societies were undemocratic, un-British, and that they stifled student campus democracy by encouraging snobbery and dominating student elections, Mrs. Laura Jamieson (C.C.F., Vancouver Centre) urged their abolition as the Legislative Assembly was discussing the proposed $426,170 grant to the university on Wednesday afternoon.

Other C.C.F. members supported her, including Mrs. Dorothy Steeves, who claimed that the fraternity system has been the curse of European universities. "In Germany," she said, "the fraternity system was one of the strong factors in building up the scourge we know as Hitlerism."

Charges Held Unfair

Meanwhile the denunciation of the fraternities and sororities aroused a storm of controversy on the Point Grey campus today.

Harold Lumsden, president of the A.M.S., student-governing body, criticising the charges as "unfair," said that in his capacity as president of the student body he had found no other organizations as co-operative as the Greeks. Other fraternity men pointed out that the Greeks had rallied behind the Red Cross campaign of the Students' Council; that few non-sorority women were engaged in women's work; and that a "Snob did not remain a snob in a fraternity."

Mary Beale, president of Pan-Hellenic, ridiculed the assertion that the sororities and fraternities were un-British. "All fall we have been working on an international, inter-fraternity and inter-sorority Red Cross Ball. This idea originated at U.B.C. and has spread across the continent," she said. "It will raise thousands of dollars for the Red Cross."

Bud Devlin (fraternity) questioned the logic of the C.C.F. "They reputedly stand for freedom of organization," he said, "yet they wish to abolish the only truly democratic college organization existing."

Strong support of the C.C.F. came from Austin Delany (non-fraternity), candidate in last year's student elections, who charged that the fraternities have gained their power and control through machine politics. They are responsible for the misconceptions "that the university is a rich man's playground," he declared.

(His reference to machine politics refers to allegations that the fraternities ran a slate of candidates in last spring's campus elections in opposition to the Canadian Student Assembly for which he had been a delegate to the conference in Ste. Anne de Bellevue last winter.)

SNOW FORCES POSTPONEMENT OF ALL-S.P.S. MULOCK CUP FINAL

For the second time in a single fortnight the fury of the elements has forced a postponement of the Mulock Cup finals, as a heavy blanket of snow covers both the lawn and stands of Varsity Stadium.

Before hostilities can be commenced between the two S.P.S. contenders the whole stadium must be thoroughly housecleaned once again.

In the meantime both the Toke Oike outfits are afraid of going state from inactivity. The Sr. Schoolmen played last eight days ago when they downed the Red and Black of Trinity to enter the finals. Their Junior confers ran wild against Dents approximately two weeks ago in their last outing.

Jr. School held an hour's signal practice in the big gym last night to loosen up their joints and refresh their memories. Although a bit rusty at first, by the end of the evening their plays were functioning with the usual speed and smoothness.

The soccer final for the Arts Faculty Cup between Knox and Meds, originally scheduled for the Bloor Bowl on Wednesday afternoon has also been temporarily shelved. The game will have to be played under very adverse conditions since soccer is very definitely not a winter sport. However, both teams are anxiously awaiting the conflict.

It is not known definitely yet when the Stadium will be ready for use as the process of snow removal is a long and momentous task. Probably the date for the finals will be set for Thursday or Friday. A sudden change in the weather, however, might enable the game to be played on very short notice or necessitate another postponement.

The War and Enrolment

According to a speech made recently by the Hon. C. D. Howe, the entry of women into certain types of munitions industries is expanding, and more and more women are being hired regularly to replace men in the business world. Evidence of this can be seen in almost any large business today. No doubt it will be even more evident in the future.

Just how, if at all, this increase in positions available for women will affect the female enrolment of universities throughout the country is an interesting question. At present it is difficult to decide what the result might be. It is reasonable to expect that the enrolment in the "career" courses will be affected extremely little, since it is scarcely likely that girls who had intended to train for a specific career would alter their plans and desert university for the sake of a different, and probably inferior, type of job.

It is equally as reasonable to expect that many girls who were planning to take university courses which give no specific training, and then proceed to secretarial or similar positions downtown, might give up their college plans if faced with the prospect of an immediate position.

The latter group, of course, will be those who are not too seriously interested in higher education. Serious students, and those who are intent upon preparing for some particular line of work, will never be lured away by the promise of a ready position. However, there are always sufficient of the former group to make a noticeable difference in university enrolments if they decide to desert, in large numbers, in favour of the business world.

Shortage in Spain

The problem of food in Europe that is occupying so much space in the newspapers these days has now extended itself to include Spain, according to most recent reports from that country as it seeks to obtain supply credits from the United States for gasoline and food products.

According to an American reporter, despite the recent announcement of the free sale of all manner of foods that have been lacking, the diet of the poor is lacking in many necessary foods. Potatoes and other filling vegetables are to be had only in the smallest quantities, and even the greater shortage of olive oil means that fats have almost completely disappeared.

These shortages are augmented by transportation difficulties, and in some provincial towns there has been no bread for the past several weeks. The new bread rationing system was supposed to cut down the supplies of the well-to-do and provide a corresponding increase for the poor, but it is feared that it will end up with a reduction for the poor as well.

Meanwhile, one pro-Fascist Spanish newspaper has been busy denying persistent rumours to the effect that the present food scarcity is to be blamed on the fact that it is being exported to Germany. Formerly the paper had completely denied such rumours, but more recently it has confined itself to asserting that no food supplies of primary necessity had been exported.

The natural result of such a situation is to make the general public of Spain anxious to keep out of the war, since they are badly enough off in this respect as it is. Thus they are mostly in favour of General Franco's policy of remaining neutral. The military authorities are also backing up General Franco, but pro-Fascist papers are naturally advocating strengthening ties with Germany.

If the food situation is as bad in many quarters as it is rumoured to be, it would appear that the problem of food will soon be the most pressing one of the war.

Distinguished Visitor

The University of Toronto is particularly fortunate in its choice of visiting lecturers this year. In past years we have always had distinguished and interesting visitors lecture here from time to time, but it is doubtful if we have ever before had such well known lecturers as we are enjoying now.

Dr. Henri Gregoire, noted Belgian authority on Greek history, former President of the Faculty of Philosophy and Letters in the University of Brussels, and editor of the Belgian underground newspaper "Le Flambeau" during the last war, is probably arousing as much interest as any visiting lecturer we have had. Dr. Gregoire, who is at present on the staff of the School of Social Research in New York City, gave his first lecture yesterday afternoon in Room 8, U.C., for the benefit of the general public as well as the university. He will lecture again this afternoon on "Greece and the Balkans", and will complete his visit with a lecture Wednesday afternoon on "Belgian Problems in the Light of History."

No sooner will Dr. Gregoire have departed than he will be succeeded by a visiting lecturer from England — Dr. G. G. Coulton of Cambridge — who will speak Thursday evening on "School and College Life in the Middle Ages." Dr. Coulton will present a second lecture the following Thursday.

Judging from past audiences, the presence of such speakers is evidently appreciated just as highly by the general public as it is by the student body of the university. The result is generally capacity audiences.

Late for Classes

Early morning classes have been suffering considerably these last few days in the way of attendance, what with slippery streets, traffic jams, and street cars and buses that whizz past without even stopping, due to capacity crowds.

Nine o'clock classes have been bearing the brunt of the attendance decrease, but even ten and eleven o'clock lectures in some colleges appear a great deal scantier than usual. But the situation, if it has done nothing else, has created a new spirit of boldness in many hitherto mild enough students — they now saunter casually into class at twenty or twenty-five minutes past the hour without even holding the usual debate over the advisability of such move first. They are probably quite justified — non-resident students in some sections of the city are fortunate if they get to school in twice their usual time.

However, the future looks brighter for professors with nine o'clock classes, what with the city vowing that it is working frantically to clear off the streets, and the T.T.C. proclaiming vigorously that it has added hundreds of extra cars just to see that we get to work on time.

AR Music Drama

Wymilwood Recital

Enid Gray presented another excellent program in the Wymilwood Musicale Sunday night series. She proved herself an artist in selecting only those works over which she had absolute command. One was impressed by the care with which each number must have been prepared. Her soft passages, and there were many of them, were at all times true and clear; the purity of tone was well sustained; and her diction, both French and English, was almost flawless. Miss Gray is a student of vocal music.

The first group was a triumph. Flow not so fast ye fountains was really thrilling as are only pathos in music can be thrilling. The Handel arias were good. Handel, interesting, neither too dramatic nor too "pretty" melodically. In the modern French songs, Miss Gray realized the supreme importance of mood. I blame Quilter for the aggressiveness of the Cuckoo, but I was won by the serenity of his Now sleeps

ORIENTAL STUDENT, ESPIONAGE AGENT, MALTREATS CARILLON ERE SUICIDE PRANK

World-Weary Schoolman Dies in Leap from Hart House Tower: "Told You So," Says Telegram

WAS LONG FALL

With a slide-rule clutched in its lifeless hand, the body of an Oriental S.P.S. student, Ambrose Q. O'Helle, was found at an early hour this morning by a volunteer search-party drawn from the ranks of the Training Centre Battalion. Formed late Saturday night for the purpose of finding a trainee who had taken a right wheel as the parade left the Front Campus Saturday afternoon, they stumbled across the lifeless form, which was lying in a soiled snow-bank.

The discovery cleared up the mystery of the sinister sounds of the "Horst Wessel" which have been ringing across the snowbound wastes of the campus ever since Arggraeston fell last Thursday, with a resounding but unpronounceable thud. Roused from their beds nightly, Whitney Hall coeds had been under the impression that the music had emanated from the parched throats of students of the Ontario Veterinary College, and had paid no attention, having had Charge Accounts at Eaton's.

The Music Committee has issued a complete report to be known as the Biggersteth-Higginsbottom Teal Blue Paper, purchasable at the University of Toronto Press at a nominal amiable sum. The report reveals that the illicit carillonneur was in real life known as Mazzini Von Papinoff, a spy in the pay of the League for the Annexation of Anticosti. (Early in the week an exclusive story in the Morning Telegram had hinted at subversive elements at St. Hilda's and had urged a complete investigation into the new wing at Trinity College.) The captain of the Trinity football team at once issued a formal declaration blaming the loss to S.P.S. on signal stealing by such subversive groups.)

A note pinned to the minute hand of the Hart House clock revealed that Von Papinoff had been living on a diet of Tuck Shop sandwich spread and Great Hall raisin loaf, and would have died of malnutrition in a few hours anyhow. "I was bored," the note read. "Nobody around here cares anything about Anticosti. The continuous tramp, tramp of marching feet on the front and back campus has driven me mad—hee, hee—"

Inspection of the bell room of the Tower revealed elaborate wireless and photographic equipment had been set up some weeks previously.

University authorities deplored the incident.

"It's a hellowanote," commented the Senior Student at Wydliffe.

Father of Four.

Speaking OF SPORT

By Stan Westcott

THIS SORT OF THING MUST STOP

Alas and alack, the Blue and Gold of Junior School are not going to meet the Blue and Gold of Senior School again at 2.30 this afternoon at Varsity Stadium. The battlefield is strewn with flakes of white fluff (snow) and, as the football field, and as the doughty engineers sadly fear that they would be unable to locate the yard lines with the sole assistance of the naked orb, the fray for the Mulock Mug has been shelved again until the Stadium floor can be swept off. And just when we were about to take you aside, gently detach that tantalising coil of lustrous auburn from your delicately pink lobe, and murmur "Sr. S.P.S."

The soccer lads have a terrific aversion for wading bare-legged through fluff flakes (see above) and have postponed their final tilt also.

INTERCOLLEGIATE SPORT RETURNS—IN THE WEST

Western Canada has intercollegiate sport back. But not without a great deal of trial and effort, especially on the part of the University of Alberta. There the students actively rebelled against the despotic order banning inter-varsity sport, and sent vigorous protestations to the directorate of the Universities' Council outlining reasons for the continuance of this vital part of collegiate life. Finally permission to resume intercollegiate rivalry was granted. "In view of the fact," declares the official document of the Council, "that western university sports programs are not as intensive as those of the east, it would be possible to have western intercollegiate sport." Raising a slight odour apparently has vast effect.

The Alumni Association of Queen's decided at a recent meeting that "the return of intercollegiate games was desirable." The organization agreed that the reason for the abandonment of sports had been the "fear of rousing public resentment against the universities", and not a financial motive, or lack of time on the part of the student-athletes. This execrable edict shapes up more and more as a great, grotesque, and inane publicity stunt. Surely something constructive could have been evolved from athletics rather than absolute and useless destruction. Varsity football, for instance, holds a vast drawing power, and it seems reasonable that profits made from rugby games could be used for some noble cause such as Freddie Hamilton had in mind when he suggested the East-West final. At best nothing whatever is gained through the cessation of intercollegiate activities, and the opportunity to be of some impressive assistance was irretrievably lost.

A LA BOXLA

Pharmacy, by stamping on the bunion of Vic's highly-rated lacrosse team, placed Group One in a snarl—sometimes known as a deadlock. Three squads are tied for first place, namely Jr. School, Victoria, and those nasty dope dunkers, the Druggists. One of these squads must be eliminated, and the other two will continue into the semi-finals for the W. A. Dufco Cup.

Sr. S.P.S. won the honours in Group Two. U.C. heads the third group and are undefeated in six games. Meds and Emmanuel are tied for the place slot in this league and must play off to decide which one will advance further into titular combat. Forestry cinched the fourth group without a loss. The Royal College now look as if they might cop the crown which last year adorned the Irish brow of St. Mike's.

It is of particular importance in Canada to the mining industry, because, following the indications of geological investigation, it can be used in the tracing of ore bodies from the surface.

Notable in this connection has been the work of Dr. Arthur Grant of the Physics Department in defining from the surface of ice the position and extent of a large body of iron ore underneath Lake Superior.

Druggists Create Three-Way Tie By Defeating Victoria Stickmen

Jeffers Sinks Seven Tallies to Pace Pharmacists; Victoria, Minus Two Regulars, Fade in Final Quarter

LANDELL STARS

The Pharmacy boxla boys, inspired by a recent similar occurrence in the rugby realm, created a three-way tie for top-spot in Group I yesterday afternoon as they downed the top-flight Vic squad 10-8 before a handful of enthusiastic onlookers.

The contest recalled the stunt that Trinity pulled by winning her last two games to advance into a football playoff berth. Last week the Druggists had to win their two remaining battles. They started the log rolling by upsetting Junior School. They topped off that performance by trimming Vic last night.

Minus the starry Glen Munro and goalie Al Cornish, Vic fought from behind to knot the count late in the third stanza, only to have Grant Jeffers and Jack Boyes rack up four goals before the torrid session ended. The Druggists had to hang on tight in the final chukker, and some great net-minding by Victorian Hal Landell, playing between the pipes for the first time, kept the score from mounting rapidly.

Vic: Young, Landell, Farmer (1), Kimber (1), Lee (2), Patrick (2), Casserley (2), Johnson.

Pharmacy: Harkness, Boyes (2), Lee (1), Jeffers (7), Jardine, Hall, Quirk, Newman, Tompson.

SPORT SPLASHES

By Bruce Smith

In the only meet run off yesterday, Trinity and S.P.S. III mermen battled for the leadership of Group III and the Engineers ended on top by the close score of 18-15. Going into the last event, the 220 relay, the teams were tied with 15 points each, but the natators from the little red schoolhouse took the race and the meet on some nice flailing by Boa, Hill, Christilaw, and Mack.

Trinity won the first relay in 1:45.1 and the two Hendersons finished one and three in the back stroke to give the Hoskin Streeters a 9-3 advantage. Boa and Payne then took first and third positions in the breast stroke to whittle the Trinity lead to three points. School tied the score by taking the free style race, Christilaw being the number one man.

S.P.S. III: Byrnes, Payne, Charde, Iglesias, Boa, Mack, Christilaw.

Trinity: Lundberg, Whitehead, J. Henderson, L. Henderson, Welsman.

Victoria won the second meet by default over Senior Meds, but the result meant nothing more than a game on the right side of the ledger for the Scarlet and Gold since U.C. has already captured the honours in their group.

Vive l'Université de Montréal!

French-Canadian students went on the warpath the other day to get the Montreal public's interest aroused in completing the deserted, half-finished buildings of the university. Untouched for years, the shells of the proposed buildings are an eyesore on the lovely face of Mount Royal.

In their endeavour to get some action from the province and public, the students paraded through city streets to the new site, where they held a program of prominent speakers before crowds of visitors.

It is to be hoped that their campaign will succeed, for at present the university, second largest in Canada, is scattered all over Montreal in inadequate, poorly-equipped buildings.

Across Canada, C.O.T.C. uniforms for drilling students are making their appearance, with curious results. Although army uniforms are ALWAYS the right size, unfortunately some students don't fit. It's still a uniform though, and because of it, British Columbia males are already assuming a more dominant air with the opposite sex. Failing to notice the change, one luckless co-ed dared to ask a sergeant, "Have you got the time?" "Sure, Baby," cracked back Three Stripes, "If yuh've got the nerve!"

We always imagined Western as a liberal, Joe-College sort of college. Now we know. Last week plaintive reports were issued by its grounds superintendent. We quote, "Vandalism resulting from nifty two-pitchers has reached new peaks of destruction." It seems that persons motoring along University Drive in the evening are occasionally distracted by something, and have gone off the road to knock down several young trees almost impossible of replacement. This year, damage caused by romantic couples reached one thousand dollars, from torn campus lawns, damaged trees. Wailed the super, "The larger trees, which could injure a car have been carefully avoided."

From now on, Western lovers will risk being caught in the act by campus police patrols.

A former editor of the McGill Daily recently publicized his Alma Mater by making it the scene of a novel written for a national news weekly supplement.

of the German invasion of Belgium. He was forced to flee to America where he is now professor of Byzantine history and literature in New York. The ship which brought him to America was a Greek steamer making her last crossing. Speaking of the attitude of Belgium in the war, Prof. Gregoire stated that the official Belgian government is in London, and all the Belgian refugees in France are determined to fight on to what they believe will be ultimate victory.

The speaker added that in order to maintain the fundamentals of culture we must have a knowledge of Greek and Latin literature, for knowledge is an immense field and it is the duty of our countries to return to cultural subjects such as philosophy, religion and the classics.

OVER THE NET

Knox B vs. U.C. III

U.C. III volleyballers went down before a superior Knox B squad in the upper gym yesterday. The Red and White fought hard but were unable to cope with the smashing spikes of the Presbyterians and lost 16-14, 15-9.

Sr. S.P.S. vs. Sr. U.C.

Sr. U.C. lost to Sr. S.P.S. in a bitterly fought volleyball game in the upper gym yesterday. U.C. took the first game 15-6 but were unable to keep up the pace and went down before a barrage of School spikes in the final two games 15-13, 17-15.

Dents A vs. Knox A

A short-handed Dents A team ran

The plot woven about the campus involved secret research, a Latin-American-Italian spy, New York gangsters, and the R.C.M.P. In between, he pictured student life at dances, coke dates, and beer pissing. As the Mounties won the fight, two college couples paired off for life. One of his heroines was a New York red-head we remember very well. . . . Oh Boy!

Doing a good job, the C.S.A.'s National Scholarships campaign brought Quebec province into line not long ago. Meanwhile, Ken Woodsworth, Youth Congress secretary and C.S.A. ally, spoiled it all by announcing from Saskatchewan campus that his organization would continue despite public reaction last year. The Congress leader termed the huge majority of youth organizations which quit the Congress, after last year's conscription fracas, a "dissident minority". Some day it is to be hoped that he will stop this eternal debating and challenge that "minority" to a test of strength. Woodsworth also said bitter things about the new Montreal WORK for Relief plan.

A C.C.F. member of the British Columbia Legislature created a furore by advocating the abolition of college fraternities as "un-British, undemocratic institutions". The luckless politician was obviously poorly informed, will receive a suitable answer in the storm of criticism which has broken. For instance, few know that the entire co-ed war service program at U.B.C. has been carried out by girls' fraternities, through the unwillingness of others to help out. The C.C.F. also cannot have heard of the National Fraternity Ball, proceeds of which will go to the Canadian Red Cross Society. Incidentally, for those who know little about the plans for the Ball, the idea is that inter-fraternity councils should sponsor a huge dance, which would take place simultaneously on every Canadian campus.

Congratulations to:

University of Manitoba Symphony Orchestra, most ambitious of all student musical projects in the Dominion. Giving its first concert of the season over a C.B.C. hook-up, the orchestra displayed widely varied talent, playing works of Beethoven, Mendelssohn, and Walton, together with sprightly selections from the Mikado. This is the musicians' second successful year.

RADIO STATION CKUA

dismissal of Chief Justice Harvey as chairman of the Board of Governors as a possible result of the trouble caused a furore on the campus, resulting in a reprimand of Leslie Wedman, Editor-in-chief.

In a more recent editorial he writes: "Legally, there is no reason on earth why the government should not purchase time on the radio station. For being commercial, it must have an exceptionally good reason for refusing time to any person or organization. This applies to the Independents as well as to the Social Credit government, the Liberals, or the C.C.F. Every one has an equal opportunity, and if one party is to be stopped they must all be, and this is what we suggest:

That steps be taken to see that CKUA, in spite of its commercial nature, be not compelled to carry political broadcasts of any nature.

roughshod over Knox A in a one-sided volleyball clash in the upper gym. Their lack of players failed to hamper the Molarmen as they swamped the Presbyterians 15-3, 15-5.

O.C.E. B vs. Dents C

O.C.E. B defeated Dents C 15-5, 15-12 in a very ragged volleyball game in the upper gym yesterday. Beatty tried hard for the Molarmen but the more consistent playing of the Teachers was too much for their opponents.

Pharmacy B vs. Trinity C

A powerful Pharmacy B volleyball sextet ran wild to swamp Trinity C 15-3, 15-7, in the upper gym yesterday. Lack of organization caused the downfall of the Anglians.

"Family Portrait" Opens At Hart House Tomorrow

Vic Society will Present Dramatization of Life of Holy Family; Phyllis MacKenzie Takes Leading Role as Mary

W. S. MILNE DIRECTOR

"Family Portrait," the presentation of the Victoria College Dramatic Society, which opens a three-day run at Hart House Theatre tomorrow night, sets a precedent in university dramatics. This type of play, a dramatization of the life of the Holy Family, has never yet been presented on the campus.

Lenore Coffey and Bill Cowen, the authors of the play, a Broadway hit of last season, are known to the general public as the authors of several movie scripts, Miss Coffey producing "Four Daughters" and "Four Wives," and Mr. Cowen writing "The Sign of the Cross." It was while he was working on this Biblical picture that Mr. Cowen conceived the idea of "Family Portrait"—a modern treatment of the story of the Holy Family written in present-day English.

The actual writing of the play followed seven years of research into the customs of the time and the early life of Jesus, who, incidentally, does not appear in the play.

The part of Mary, around which the play is written, will be taken by Phyllis MacKenzie, Judith Anderson, prominent actress of stage and screen, originated the role in the Broadway (Continued on Page 4)

Youth Congress Will Sponsor Nielson Address

Mrs. Dorise Nielson, the only woman member of the Canadian House of Commons, will speak on "Democracy must live in Canada Now" at Maple Leaf Gardens on Fri., Dec. 6 at 8 p.m.

Mrs. Nielson, as an independent candidate in the last election, won her seat in North Battleford in spite of the fact that this riding was Liberal by tradition and that there was a general swing of the country towards the government.

Although her constituency is one of the largest in the country and many of its voters could only be reached by aeroplane, Mrs. Nielson's election expenses amounted to only $741.68, small in comparison to the $30,000 paid by another member. The money was raised by the contributions of the farmers.

The address is sponsored by the Toronto Youth Council, the local branch of the Youth Congress. Admission is free.

Fourth Year Dents Student Here Will be First Woman D.D.S. in India

The only girl student in fourth year dentistry is brown-eyed, dark haired, Miss Canteenwalla, a native of Bombay, India. Vivacious and very interested in her new surroundings and companions, Miss Canteenwalla explained in a well modulated Oxford accent that she was born and educated in India and except for one year spent in Montreal, has never been away from her native land.

Sent to Bombay University by her father, the only manufacturer of absorbent cotton in India, Miss Canteenwalla took her first three years of dentistry there, and intends to return to join the staff of the hospital. She will then be the only woman holding a D.D.S. degree in India. She hopes some day to be able to teach dentistry in the University of Bombay where all the professors of dentistry hold a D.D.S. degree taken in America.

Address Planned For C.C.F. Meeting Is Anti-Hepburn

Charles Millard of Oshawa C.I.O. fame, will address the meeting of the university C.C.F. club scheduled for 7.45 p.m. today in the Women's Union. Topic of the address is to be "Hepburn must go."

Mr. Millard, as well as Mr. Hepburn, is from St. Thomas, and gained fame for his successful direction of the Oshawa strike against General Motors, and since then has been elected secretary of the Canadian Committee for Industrial Organization.

Apart from his socialism and unionism, Millard is a veteran of the last war, an active member of the Fellowship for a Christian Social Order and a noted church worker.

Mr. Millard was chosen to address the meeting because last year he was elected Ontario president of the C.C.F. party.

According to Don Ewing, publicity director of the local club, it is expected that Mr. Millard with his wide affiliations and knowledge of provincial politics will draw a large audience. All students are welcome.

friendly and pro-British like the people of Bombay. She is enthusiastic about our winter and would like very much to ski. She was introduced to our Canadian sport, lacrosse, by the students in her year with whom she is very popular, and is now an ardent lacrosse fan.

Miss Canteenwalla states that her brother and her uncle are officers in the Indian army, and that she has recently learned of her brother's appointment to receive special military training at the Military Academy at Rangoon.

Cousin of Miss Canteenwalla is a reserved and modest gentleman, Dr. M. S. Ginnwalla, who is studying now for his Bachelor of Science Degree in dentistry here at Varsity; last year he took his D.D.S. degree at McGill University. He, too, intends to return to his native city, Bombay, to practice his profession, and will also be associated with the hospital there.

Belgian Says Balkan Events Mirror Past

Present Situation Paralleled in Medieval History; Mussolini of the Middle Ages was Robert Guiscard

CHANGE MUST BE SLOW

"Since Constantinople has been a key position on the straits, it has never been possible for any other nation to come to an agreement with the country that holds Constantinople, regarding the joint possession of the straits," said Prof. Henri Gregoire of the University of Brussels, in his second lecture at U.C. yesterday. "Thus, I feel sure that no agreement can be reached between Germany and Russia on the question of the Balkans."

Prof. Gregoire stressed the fact that in Turkey, there has been a continuity of ancient life and it is impossible to point to a definite line of demarcation between the Middle Ages and the centuries which have followed. He referred to one historian who said that the second period in Turkey's history began with the introduction of the automobile. The dictators must obey these unwritten historical laws or they will be punished, the speaker continued.

By means of literary research Prof. Gregoire discovered numerous events in medieval history which are almost identical with those taking place in the present campaign. He expressed his opinion that there is a tendency to keep literature and history separate, rather than to associate the one with the other.

The speaker pointed out that in "La Chanson de Roland," nearly all the places and characters can find their counterparts in the present invasion of Greece. "La Chanson de Roland" is the story of the invasion of Greece by Robert Guiscard, the Italian leader, whose place is taken by Mussolini. Guiscard invaded Greece under the pretext of defeating the infidel Turk, who was fighting with the Greeks.

HUTTON HOUSE DISASTER FORCES MASS EVACUATION

Co-eds Gather Up Blankets and Books for Night Migration to Women's Union while Workmen Make Repairs

NO BREAKFAST IN BED

By an Enquirer

The horrors of mass evacuation were experienced Monday night by the inmates of Hutton House annex to Whitney Hall for 2nd year U.C. co-eds. Owing to a mishap with the furnaces, all the students were required to emigrate for the night, leaving the house free for workmen to occupy in an endeavour to repair the damage.

Yes, the girls literally "took up their beds and walked" Monday night—they rolled up their blankets, clothes and books and began the trek to the Women's Union. More than one catastrophe on the way sent their precious belongings scattering over the icy road.

Several of the girls were located in the theatre, dormitory style, while others, divided into groups of three and fours, occupied various other rooms.

It was hoped by some that they would be billeted in the dining-room, and thus have breakfast served in bed, but this unfortunately did not seem to meet with the approval of the "powers that be."

It was also learned that some Toronto citizens had guessed suddenly thrust upon them as many of the girls hastily contacted friends and relations in the city.

Last night all was normal again, the refugee nightmare being gone but not forgotten.

Vic Union Tries New Plan For Elections

Campaign Meeting before Election Day Gives Candidates Opportunity of Presenting Platforms

APPOINT ROYAL COMMISSION

Campaigning and publicity are henceforth to be a part of Victoria College elections, the student body of Victoria College decided yesterday at an open meeting of the V.C.U. in Alumni Hall.

This is a new venture for Victoria College there are to be certain restrictions. Not more than $2.00 is to be spent by a candidate or his supporters for election purposes. No inducement other than campaign literature is to be given. No soliciting is to take place in the building used for voting during the hours of election. A campaign meeting, conducted by the V.C.U. executive shall take place on the afternoon preceding election day, where the candidates will have the opportunity of addressing the electorate.

As a final precaution, the V.C.U. is to appoint a Royal Commission of 5 members to investigate any problems that may arise in connection with the new system of elections. The report of this commission is to be submitted to the V.C.U. within two months' time from its appointment.

This new plan of campaigning and the restrictions attached apply to elections in the V.C.U. and in all societies affiliated with the V.C.U., not including those with closed membership (e.g. music club and the dramatic club).

This meeting of the V.C.U. was called to discuss two pertinent questions. The first was election procedure but the second, "an all-Alumni Christmas party" was withdrawn by those who had suggested it. The reason given was that the Athletic Union is giving a Christmas dance to raise funds to cover (Continued on Page 2)

STUENTS' FARES

The Railway Companies are issuing to students of the university, and to members of the university staff, round-trip tickets for the Christmas and New Year vacation, at the rate of the current one way fare and one-quarter for the round trip.

Students wishing to take advantage of this reduction should leave their names with the Registrar of the college, or the secretary of the faculty or department concerned, on or before Monday, December 16th.

The certificates will be issued to the students at the college, faculty or department office, at 5 p.m. on Friday, December 20th.

Members of the staff may obtain certificates at the Registrar's office, Simcoe Hall.

College Life In Middle Ages To be Discussed

Dr. G. G. Coulton, formerly of Cambridge University, will lecture this Thursday on "School and College Life in the Middle Ages."

The professor, acclaimed one of the ranking medievalists of the world, joined the staff early in October, and will remain at the University of Toronto for the rest of the academic year.

Dr. Coulton, for many years a fellow of St. John's College, Cambridge, and lecturer in medieval history at both Oxford and Cambridge Universities, has written a large number of books, mostly ecclesiastical histories.

Dr. Coulton will present a second lecture the following Thursday.

NOTED TORONTO LAWYER TO ADDRESS S.C.M. ON DEMOCRACY IN ACTION

Mr. Andrew Brewin, a prominent young Toronto lawyer, will speak to the S.C.M. at 1.30 in the music room today on "Democracy in Action." Mr. Brewin is a very active citizen, having taken a prominent part in the Civil Liberties Union, in the Committee on Rehousing, and also in the work of the Anglican Young Peoples' Associations, in addition to keeping up his practice as a lawyer.

Next week Mr. Robert Mackie will speak at the last S.C.M. noon-hour talk of this term's series on "Basic Convictions"; his subject will be "The Responsibility of the Individual."

Tour of Whitney Kitchen Shows Ample Care for Co-ed Appetite

Some 250 loaves of bread, 150 dozen rolls, 200 pounds of butter, and 175 gallons of milk a week pass through the Whitney Hall kitchen beneath Falconer House.

Three times every day it provides the meals for Mulock, Cody and Falconer Houses, the cafeteria at the Women's Union, and its own staff dining room; thus it feeds 285 people.

The kitchen itself has a staff of nine, including two cooks and a pastry cook, whose sole concern is the desserts, cakes, and pastries. It is in the charge of Miss Violet Murphy and her assistant, Miss Phyllis West, dietitians. They plan the menus, order the supplies, and oversee the preparation and serving of the food.

The store room shelves have as much variety as a grocer's. Quantities of canned fruit, cartons of biscuits, every imaginable eatable down to the salt and pepper are stocked here. It is the work

"Resolved that Canada Should be a Member of the Pan-American Union" is Topic for Women's Debates

FIRST OF SERIES TONIGHT

Tonight Varsity will fight it out with Queen's for the Intercollegiate Debating Cup. The subject under discussion will be, "Resolved that Canada should be a member of the Pan-American Union." Each year McMaster, McGill, Queen's, Western and Varsity contend for the intercollegiate debating cup. Last year McMaster won the honours. This year McGill finds it necessary to drop out of the Union temporarily.

The home university in each case will take the affirmative. Mary Shortt, IV U.C., and Mabel Van Camp, IV Vic, are to represent Varsity here tonight against Queen's, while Margot Booth, III Vic and Kay McLean, III St. Mike's, will travel to McMaster.

Last night the four debaters chosen to represent Varsity in today's intercollegiate debates staged a preliminary bout in Loretto College. In giving a preliminary performance the girls hoped to anticipate their opponents' arguments. Betty Hunter, last year's president of the Interfaculty Debating Society acted as clerk.

Both Varsity teams have done some excellent research on the topic and should give their opponents an exciting battle. The debate on this campus will take place in Cartwright Hall, at St. Hilda's, at 8.15 tonight.

W.S.T.D. Leader Says Schedule To be Changed

Sr. Lieut. A. E. M. Parkes, of the Women's Service Training Detachment, stated yesterday in an interview with The Varsity that the whole set-up of the winter schedule has been altered with the announcement from Ottawa that the A.R.P. and St. John's First Aid Courses may be compulsory.

For this reason, Miss Parkes said, the pre-Christmas military lectures are intended to give the requisite background, so that the way will be clear for the courses necessary after Christmas.

Miss Parkes went on to say that as far as she knows a W.S.T.D. unit is now being organized at Queen's University, while definite interest is being shown at McMaster University, and the Macdonald Colleges at Guelph and St. Anne's.

The uniforms for the Varsity unit are still in the process of manufacture.

of one person to keep track of them. Most of the canned goods are in large sized tins. The many "empties" end up in the garbage refrigerator, a device to room lighted by big windows. It is prevent refuse from decaying.

The kitchen is a long L-shaped equipped with both electric and gas ranges. Besides these, there is a bake-oven, consisting of four separate smaller ovens, for cakes and pastry—all of which are "home-made."

Soup is heated and vegetables cooked in big round-bottomed steam kettles that can be easily tipped to pour out the contents when it is done. The centre of the room is occupied by two wide steam tables which keep hot foods at the correct temperature.

The electric mixer, on a much larger scale than those in private kitchens, not only beats eggs and mixes batter, but slices potatoes and grinds meat. (Continued on Page 4)

Spitfires for Britain

In a myriad of ways students at the University of Toronto and at all other Canadian universities are being called upon to finance the war effort, or efforts indirectly connected with the war. We realize that if the things we cherish are to survive, Britain must win the war and she must win it as quickly as possible with our help. We are helping in individual ways, and various campus groups are doing their share. But is there not some method by which a concrete contribution to the war effort could be made by Canadian university students as a whole?

Our contemporary, the McGill Daily, has come forward with an excellent suggestion along these lines. The suggestion is: Why shouldn't Canadian university students get together and raise the money to buy one or two or three or more planes for Britain? Editorially the Daily writes: "Britain needs planes and more planes. She also needs money with which to pay for those planes. We, students at one of the foremost universities in Canada, can help the war effort in a tangible manner by providing some of the money with which to buy those bombers and fighters."

The original idea had been to provide one Spitfire fighting plane, or a considerable portion of the sum needed to buy it, from the McGill campus. When the matter was investigated it was found that the financial burden would be staggering. One Spitfire costs about $23,500. There are only three thousand students at McGill University. But there are about twenty-five thousand university students throughout Canada and if their effort could be harnessed into a nation-wide campaign it would be no hard task to raise money enough to provide one or several Spitfires to the British Government in the name of all Canadian university students.

At the present time, with both the N.F.C.U.S. and the C.S.A. temporarily inactive, there is no national body which can claim to represent those twenty-five thousand students. But there is an efficient medium through which those students can be brought into contact with each other and organized into a cohesive national group with a concrete ambition: the raising of a Spitfire Fund. That body is the Canadian University Press. From its central offices, and using the channels of its member newspapers, the C.U.P. is able to reach every university student in the country and through its numerous exchanges it could carry the campaign sentiment into the universities in the United States where it might find much sympathy.

No doubt the student councils on each campus would have to give their approval to the conducting of such a campaign on the individual campus. They would not have to take over the responsibility of running the campaign or collecting the money. Those details will have to be worked out, but the local campus newspapers operating under the C.U.P. could quite easily organize the local contributions. Details of the campaign organization are being drawn up now and will be announced shortly.

The opportunity has been presented for the fortunate students in Canada to do something really constructive for the cause to which our Empire is now devoting her whole strength. Campus groups who might be thinking of contributing to the war effort are urged to consider this new scheme and to direct their energies toward the growth of the Spitfire Fund. As the McGill Daily said in a recent issue: "The war which is being waged over Britain today is a war for honour, truth and justice. It is a war which is being waged with planes — fighters and bombers. Surely it is fitting that at least one of those Spitfire fighters bear the name of the university students of North America." It is indeed fitting and it is entirely within the realm of practicability. We have twenty-five thousand Canadian university students scattered across the country; we have the Canadian University Press, a medium to organize them into a cohesive group; with those two factors operating success can be made certain.

The Art of Camouflage

The art of camouflage, while playing a big part in the war on the sea in the 1914-18 struggle, has grown to a place of major importance in the present conflict due to its chief characteristic as a war in the air. So important has it become that since the start of the war four distinct organizations have been engaged in this noble art of creating optical illusions.

Evidently the camouflage artists are having difficulties. So one would gather, at least, from a report of the Select Committee on National Expenditure. The Committee, after an extensive survey of the East Coast of England, has recommended that the four existing camouflage agencies be incorporated into one body under government control. The reasons were that the four groups didn't always agree on what were the best disguises, with ludicrous results in some cases. Furthermore, some of the camouflage squads had been so carried away by their work that the disguises they created were far more attractive targets than the original object. The aim appears to be the achievement of a degree of uniformity in camouflage creations throughout the country and it is a sound ambition.

Although we talk glibly about the great extent of camouflage in England, it is almost impossible to go into details. There are a few obvious methods, of course, but the majority must be kept in secret or the whole purpose of camouflaging industries and other objectives would be destroyed. It is one of the activities of this war about which we know little, but the report quoted above is sufficient evidence that there is plenty going on along the camouflage front as a nation tries to hide itself from the hostile eyes in the sky.

AR MUSIC Drama

Rex Battle

Last night in Eaton Auditorium, Rex Battle presented a scholarly program in an excellent manner. Mr. Battle, appearing without the Royal York Concert Orchestra, is one of Toronto's outstanding musicians; his technique seldom fails him and his interpretations are those of one who has studied carefully the works he is performing. He never attains the heights, but he never becomes dull or mediocre.

Two numbers were outstanding. The Beethoven Sonata in A, Op. 101 was played the way I like to hear Beethoven played, with the performer completely subservient to the composer's will. The Liszt arrangement of Saint-Saens' Danse Macabre is very brilliant. I liked especially Mr. Battle's playing in the Fughetta occurring near the middle. The Albeniz Triana avoided the appearance of being hackneyed, but some of the Balakirev Fantasy was obscure.

I still don't like Busoni arrangements of Bach. The Praeludium and Fugue in D were not Bach as only Busoni can keep anything from being Bach. Bach is cluttered up with extras and his beautiful simplicity is destroyed. Bach can be arranged only by those who revere him.

Jan Chamberlain

How much more difficult it must be to become eight persons in one night, than to be a varied Laughton, picture by picture. And that is what Jan Chamberlain did. She was a gum-chewing salesgirl, a flustered school-teacher, an English char-woman, and many others, and each so entirely, that one forgot the perfection of the preceding in the perfection of the present. Without stage properties, and only outward costume, the atmosphere she could create of numbers and noise, needed not a little imagination on her part to stimulate ours. One could almost smell that air-raider shelter. Miss Chamberlain had good diction, and moreover, command of her voice which allowed not the least slip in dialect or misplaced accent. I admire most of all, though, the restraint with which each part was played.

There is a sense of anticipation, not always

MULOCK CUP FINAL POSTPONED UNTIL EASTER

Heavy Snows and Frost Force Postponement of Interfaculty Classic until Spring Thaw Sets In

AWAITS FIRST ROBIN

It was announced early this morning that the Mulock Cup finals have been postponed until spring. As a result, assorted bird seeds and caviar have been strewn all over the university campus in hope of luring the robins back north as early as possible.

Officials blamed the bitter frost as well as the snow.

"The day was much too cold to play," stated an official of the Athletic Board. "For instance, when the Balm Beach athletes noticed that the icicles on the goal-posts were wearing ear muffs, they should have suspected that something was wrong. Also the mere fact that a snow man who was built on the campus by some children was forced to take shelter in the university library, should have halted the game."

Both squads are put out by the delay as they had already prepared their strategy in advance. The Junior S.P.S. team had engaged six Finnish soldiers accustomed to hard winter fighting. Also, the entire team had given up the drinking of Stubby Orange and have been drinking anti-freeze to prepare themselves for the game.

"The postponement of the classic is a great blow to the team," said the junior coach. "This would have been the first opportunity for our bench warmers to be of real service to the squad."

let's go places

Jon Hall and Lynn Bari, two Hollywood youngsters, get a chance to do some real acting in a picture and manage to do pretty well for themselves in their important assignments. Hall takes the character of SHEA'S Kit Carson, the frontier scout who helps Captain John C. Fremont of the U.S. cavalry lead a transcontinental trek to California. Lynn Bari is the love interest, while Dana Andrews has the double task of mapping the route and acting as a friendly rival for Miss Bari's affections. Hall gets the girl. Although the picture has several shots of Indians attacking the company, these are not in the grand C. B. deMille style. The story, however, never lags, and the direction is well handled.

In the second feature, "Father is a Prince," we have the story of a cantankerous carpet sweeper manufacturer who suffers from indigestion, income tax trouble and the fact that his daughter is about to marry the son of an electric sweeper tycoon. However, the authors straighten everything out with a fortuitous nervous breakdown on the part of the wife, which makes the old man repent.

Meds Defeat Emmanuel By Lone Fluke Goal

Leech's Shot Brings 6-6 Tie in Spite of Spectators' Doubts — Fennell, with 4 Goals, Leads Floor Show

MEDS IN SEMI-FINALS

By Stan Westcott

Emmanuel's battling lacrosse team bowed nobly into oblivion on the varnished boards of Hart House's big gym yesterday afternoon in a close, hard fought struggle for survival, as they were defeated by Meds 7-6 on two questionable last minute goals.

The Theologs had come from behind to go into a slim one goal lead in the closing period. As the time faded rapidly, Leech of Meds drove a low shot at the bottom corner of the Emmanuel net. The ball appeared to carom off goalie Frank Patterson's toe and bound into play again.

All the occupants of the winding staircase agreed that the net had been kept inviolate. Nevertheless the shot was counted and the game was tied in the records.

Moments later Meds made a substitution. Before anyone knew who was in and who was out, the Doctors hurled the ball into play, and presto it cuddled in the Emmanuel net behind Patterson. Any of at least seven Med players were in a position to participate in the play, and no defender knew which were the five eligibles.

This tally was also allowed, and in a few seconds the game was over, and Emmanuel were on the outside looking in.

Emmanuel came from behind a 2-1 quarter time count to tie the score at three-all at the half. Each team tallied once in the third period. As the vital closing quarter started both teams scored early goals. Then Emmanuel forged slightly ahead. And Meds were given their tying and winning markers. With this victory, Meds gain second place in their group, and advance into the semi-finals for the W. A. Dafeo Cup against Sr. School on Monday afternoon.

Bill Fennell was the best player on the floor, scoring his four goals and lending impetus to the Emmanuel attack. Hugh Pritchard accounted for the losers' two scores. Tom Jackson and Ott McKennitt played great and valiant lacrosse, especially on defense. Patterson proved a tower of strength in goal.

Leech led the Medicos' assault, and notched two goals, as did Lampert. Carter, Gold, and Barootes scored the other three goals for the winners. Emmanuel: Patterson, McKennitt, Fennell, Fred, Rutherford, Pritchard, Ray, Jackson.

Meds: Carter (1), Lampert (2), Leech (2), Tulley, Gold (1), Barootes (1), Quinlan, Mighton, Mewhort, and Warman.

INTERFACULTY AQUACADE

For some unknown reason, the entrants are staying away in droves from the Junior Interfaculty Swimming Meet which is carded for this Thursday and Friday. Up to last night only about 25 swimmers had signed the lists in the Athletic Office. This would be a fair number if we were not tempted to compare it with last year's entry list of 125. We know that the lads have a tough time cramming studies, sports, military training and what have you into a crowded schedule, but these considerations hardly account for the slow response to the Swimming Club's efforts.

In fact, we think that this year the Swimming Club has made a grand contribution to the aquatic side of the athletic program by the inauguration and execution of its round-robin meets between the faculties. The club executive would like to stress again the fact that this is essentially a NOVICE meet — no experts need apply. Any swimmer who has won first place in a junior inter-faculty tourney or has placed in any higher meet is barred from entering.

The entry lists were due to close Tuesday at one, but the paucity of performers stymieing their intention of getting into the swim has resulted in the lists being kept open until one o'clock today. Now is the time for the swimming managers of the faculties to smarten up and get a number of men entered at once.

On Thursday the prelims will be swum in heats. The events in which heats will occur on Thursday will be listed in The Varsity of that day. We also suggest that those in doubt as to their eligibility for competition should consult this column of last Friday, which dealt with the rules more fully.

ROLL OUT THE BARREL STAVES

One of the most enthusiastic outfits operating in this university's athletic realm is the Ski Club. During the past few years the telemark and slalom gang have been whooping up the delights of the fast little hills and woodland trails, as well as making no mean showing in various meets throughout the countryside and at St. Saviour and Lake Placid.

Last weekend a pre-season get-together was held at Collingwood, a spot which will soon be playing host to hundreds (and we don't exaggerate) of skiers from this campus.

A number of faculty reps have already been appointed to work together with the executive in building up interest in the club's activities. The present aim is to sponsor a series of interfaculty races such as those run by the Swimming Club, with the emphasis once more being placed on helping the amateur gain confidence and skill in skiing. Those interested in learning more of who, what, when, and where should get in touch with Presidents Jock Fleming and/or Marion Gallie.

LET'S RALLY ROUND THE GALS

A liberal Thank You from this corner to Phyllis Griffiths of the Evening Telegram for the generous build-up she has given to the Women's Interfaculty Basketball Finals. The recent cuts of the lovelies who take over the Hart House Big Gym on this and Friday evening were pleasing indeed, and should bring out a goodly quota of the male populace to watch the slick basketball which these girls have been demonstrating in their play so far. We'll see you there tonight at seven-thirty.

By Marg. Foulds

Tonight's the night — at 7.30 — in Hart House gym! How could you forget?

In this home-and-home series for the interfaculty basketball championship — home being Hart House? — which starts tonight, Vic Seniors, triumphant over St. Hilda's Seniors in two straight games in the semi-finals, 35-5 and 35-7, will meet U.C. Juniors, vanquishers of an up-and-coming O.T. & P. team, also in straight games, 29-23 and 26-17. Although Vic ran up a more convincing score in their semi-final series than the U.C.-ites, we are inclined to place the odds pretty well at 50-50. Reason for this flimsy trick being that, should O.T. & P. face St. Hilda's in a similar series, there would be scarce a doubt as to the outcome. In past years, O.T. & P. have played rather the part of the underdog than a threat to the championship, but this year things are different. They certainly have had the makings of the best in competition. They were only beaten in a hotly-contested fight by the team with which Vic will find it tough to repeat their "vs. St. Hilda's" success.

Vic boast a forward line hard to match in interfaculty competition. Beryl Pollock and Jean Crawford have both starred with the intercollegiate team in the past two years, and Jean Stirling, Ruth Thomson and Billy Steele have kept pace with them in the regular schedule. On the defence, Ruth Danard, also of last year's intercollegiate team, has worked well with Molly Moore, of intercollegiate intermediate repute, Betty Jackson, Phyl Hulse and Win Hardy. Thus Vic offers three intercollegiate stars and seven very capable basketball carriers to represent them in this all-important annual fixture. To date, Vic have been undefeated in their group, and, as a matter of fact, carry a clean record into the finals tonight.

In the other corner we have the U.C. Juniors just rarin' to go. They are displaying two intercollegiate stars to Vic's three. On the defence, Marg. Stock played a consistently good game as a regular defence, though merely a freshee, while Zoe Christie, in the same social category, showed up well in the same position. As well as these two, U.C. will be represented by Betty Allen, Joan Carter and Betty Mortimer, a hard-to-beat line of forwards, assisted by Marg. Ham and Jeannie Haydon. These seven, and Madeleine Mollard, playing on the defensive this year, met U.C. Seniors in last year's intramural finals, and lost out by a single basket. The solitary new member on this year's team is Kay Cunningham, who, for her size, has been keeping up a steadily corking game all fall. We wonder where she was last year. We do. The only defeat suffered by this team came at the hands of St. Mike's, who, in our opinion, deserve special mention for their crack team which all but earned them a play-off berth. They defeated U.C. in their second scheduled game, thus forcing a play-off for group honours, and it took every ounce of U.C.-ism to turn the scale winwards.

Thus we hope we have produced a pretty clear picture for you of just what you'll be up against tonight — at 7.30 — in Hart House gym!

Vic, U.C. Girl Basketeers Clash in Finals To-Night

Ladies will Take Over Hart House in Interfaculty Play-offs; Intercollegiate Stars on Both Teams

SECOND GAME FRIDAY

The male retreat of this university, Hart House, is going to be invaded by a bevy of charming females tonight at 7.30, as Vic's Sr. basketballetes meet U.C. Juniors in the first of a two game series to decide the ladies' interfaculty basketball championship.

Each of the competing squads have members of last year's intercollegiate team on their roster. Jean Crawford and Beryl Pollock were high scoring forwards in the big time for the past two seasons, and are now doing their basket-potting for dear old Vic. Mile. Crawford scored fifteen points in Vic's last game against St. Hilda's on Monday night. Jean Sterling tickled the net for ten on that very same occasion.

Ruth Danard played guard on the intercollegiate squad a year ago, and now teams with Molly Moore, Betty Jackson, Phyl Hulse, and Win Hardy to create a formidable defense on behalf of the Scarlet and Gold.

For the Royal College Betty Allen,

Lacrosse Play-offs

Pharmacy goes against Junior School today in the first game of the lacrosse play-downs, the dates of which were released by the Athletic Office yesterday morning. The champion will be determined on a two-out-of-three-game basis, but all other play-offs will be sudden death affairs.

The complete schedule follows:
Today at 5:00: Pharmacy A vs Jr. S.P.S., Putlock.

Thurs. at 5:00: Jr. S.P.S. vs Vic, Aymer.

Friday at 5:00: Pharmacy A vs Vic, Buckley.

Saturday at 12:00: U.C. vs Second in Group I.

Monday, Dec. 9 at 4:10: Sr. S.P.S. vs Meds.

Tuesday, Dec. 10 at 4:10: Forestry vs winner of Group I.

Wednesday, Dec. 11 at 4:10: Winner of Saturday's game vs winner of Tuesday's game. The winner gets a bye.

Friday, Dec. 13 and Monday, Dec. 16, and, if necessary, Tuesday, Dec. 17: Finals.

Joan Carter and Betty Mortimer form a fast-moving, shifty front line. On the defence Zoe Christie, Marg. Stock and petite Kay Cunningham have been playing great basketball all fall.

SPORT SPLASHES

By Edgar Simon

Lacking the services of their two star performers, Ged Clawson and George Meen, Senior U.C. ended their regular schedule by taking a one-point defeat from Senior S.P.S. in Hart House yesterday by a 17-16 score.

Despite the absence of these two aces, the Artsmen took firsts in two events and crowded School winners with seconds and thirds. Bill Staples was the individual star of the meet, winning the backstroke and free style events and sparking the Schoolmen to victory in the medley relay. Bill Wadd of U.C. defeated two opponents in the breaststroke contest. The Royal Collegers made it close by coming out in front in the 220 yard relay.

The defeat made no difference in the group standings, as Sr. U.C. had already built up a commanding lead thanks to their previous undefeated record.

Aerial Navigation's natators completed an undefeated schedule by swamping Knox 30-3 in the other meet field yesterday. The Airmen picked up every possible point, finishing one-two in all three individual events, and breezing home in the van of both relays.

Sloan, Whately and Greenslade accounted for the back, breast and free style events respectively, while Van Hyse added to the rout by figuring in both relays.

Christian Science Theme of Talk In Hart House

"Christian Science: Its Assurance of True Guidance to Men" is to be the theme of George Channing's lecture in Hart House Theatre on Thursday at 5:10 p.m.

Mr. Channing's approach to the subject will be vitally interesting in view of his university background and contact with public opinion. After graduating from Brown University he studied law at Boston University and at Yale. For some twelve years he was engaged in newspaper work, serving on the editorial department. His work was interrupted by his service overseas in the World War in 1917-1918. During the war he became interested in Christian Science and when he returned to America served as advertising representative of The Christian Science Monitor and later as a member of the Christian Science Committee on Publication for Northern California.

Mr. Channing is a member of The Board of Lectureship of The Mother Church, The First Church of Christ, Scientist, in Boston, Mass. The lecture is under the auspices of Christian Science Organization at the University of Toronto.

ROUND THE TRACK

By Dave MacIntosh

Trackmen now have an admirable opportunity to pick up more than a few tricks of the trade, for not only is Hec Phillips, Varsity's able mentor, passing out valuable instruction during the Tuesday and Friday night sessions, but Toronto's own Larry O'Connor, Canada's greatest hurdler and now in his third year at Osgoode, has started training for his winter season and has offered to demonstrate for the newcomers. Larry has had invitations for four meets in the States this winter and is hard at work now under the watchful eye of Hec Phillips.

To date there has not been a large turnout, but those who are spinning around the indoor bowl are for the most part freshmen, and Hec does not expect to see much of the second, third and fourth year men till after Christmas. In many ways this is all to the good, for the newcomers will have the undivided attention of Hec. About two dozen novices are coming out regularly, including Ged Clawson, who surprised everybody but Hec in the outdoor intercollegiate meet by upsetting Wyckoff's great Tom Barnett, among others, in the 440. The quota should well exceed five dozen after the holidays when the boys begin whipping themselves into shape for the intercollegiate indoor meet, which gets under way around about the last week in January.

This indoor meet is spread over some five weeks, with two or three events being run off every track night. Friday evening at five bells there will be a Track Club meeting in Mr. Martin's office to formulate the events for the winter tournament.

By way of delayed report: Tom Barnett was elected president of the Varsity Track and Field Club and Gerry Frederick of Vic, vice-president, at a meeting held some time ago.

8.15 p.m.—"Family Portrait" will be presented in Hart House Theatre by the Victoria College Dramatic Society. Additional performances will be given Friday and Saturday.

4.30 p.m.—Discussion group for Work and Play Project of the S.C.M. of U.C. will meet at the home of Mrs. Freeman, 677 Spadina Ave.

FRIDAY, DECEMBER 6

8 p.m.—Mrs. Doris Neilson will speak at Maple Leaf Gardens. Admission free.

It is located on East Twenty-Seventh Street under the shadow of the Third Avenue El, where you have never been, and the seats are soft and a good-sized telephone booth would crowd the actors off the stage, and such ham couldn't get by the United States Bureau of Standards in a fog. Do I make myself perfectly obscure?

Director, producer, star and guiding light of the free theatre is Butler Davenport and, by a strange coincidence, the troupe is known as the Davenport Free Theatre. Mr. Davenport is a middle-sized, middle-aged man, with medium-gay hair which he grows to his shoulders, and a medium-sized punch which he grows to his belt. At one time he was with Otis Skinner, and knew Modjeska and Bernhardt, and was himself widely known as an actor of Shakespearean drama. Then he gave a free lecture — this was a long time ago — before two thousand people, and was surprised to learn only five of them had ever been to the theatre.

Thus was born the Free Theatre, where everyone works for the joy of working and expenses are met by windfalls. One day a man and his wife attended, and the play they saw solved their domestic difficulties so that they did not seek a divorce. The man promptly gave Davenport a check for ten thousand dollars. Another time, a lady came to see Mr. D. and volunteered to pay for redecoration and new carpets. And again, a party in white tie and evening gown came slumming and stayed to gaze, contributing handsomely when it was all over. They say that Gene Raymond once trod the boards there — and I think Kate Smith must have at one time, for they creak horribly.

All these pertinent facts and vital statistics are divulged by the head man himself just before the last act of the night's performance. At the end of the second-last act, the habitués make for the exit, but the newcomers stay, and it is well worth it. Any free theatre is worth twenty-five cents to see Butler Davenport come out dressed in a grey flannel toga held in place by the right hand on the left shoulder, even though ten minutes ago he was playing the juvenile lead in a modern English farce. The toga is cruel to the wearer for it reveals that he is comfortably upholstered fore and aft, as naval men are wont to say, and you can almost see that.

When he acts and when he speaks, Mr. Davenport puts a synthetic Oxford accent and a remarkable capacity to speak sentences and whole paragraphs without any inflection or division between his words. He always sits with his profile to the audience, and there is an impression current that Perehance, the Bald Old Eagle, has escaped from his lonely eyrie. The method of acting is time-honoured and time-worn: emotion is expressed by elapsed hands, a grief-laden underdone and interminable gazing through non-existent windows. The cast also dabble in nostril-dwindling, and it is here that the big boss shines. When Davenport distends his nostrils, and fine aristocratic nostrils they be, they reach to his ears, while he bids fair to become a yawning cavern.

The audience is interesting. There are, of course, the aforementioned local derelicts seeking shelter from the elements. Too, there are a handful of aspiring bohemiens in leather jackets and slacks and cultured profanity. The ladies in the case are big-boned and awe-inspiring, while their male congeners are small, sleek and sallow. Between acts they discuss the philosophy of drama or the essential unity of the arts and mispronounce French terms with a complete sang-froid and an air of savoir-faire. Oh, don't be so bourgeois.

Then there are those who come to scoff and stay to scoff, office-workers and salesmen who bring their wives to see something different. During the play they squirm and try not to look as bored as they feel or unintelligent as they are: during Mr. Davenport's lengthy entr'acte they positively snuggle. When the plate comes around, they put ten cents in, and when the young man with the long artistic fingers approaches to sell post-cards, they blush and grunt and say to their chairs, "Don't think so."

The repertory includes Shakespeare, Moliere, Somerset, Maugham, Ibsen, Wilde, Davenport (as playwright) and many others, but the list is not as imposing as it looks, for Somerset and Maugham are inseparable, as are Eekmann and Chatrian. For all his culture, Mr. Davenport splits infinitives. The troupe has never played East Lynne — or so they say. And they have been in existence all of twenty-five years.

Picture a spine-tingling scene in The Bells; Mathias the Burgomaster cannot rid himself of the obsession that he hears sleigh-bells incessantly. (Sleigh bells offstage.) The lights are low, and those of the audience still listening are doing so from the edge of their seats. Mathias (Butler Davenport) picks up his ears — he distends his nostrils. He is listening for the bells. He steps forward to the apron (if apron it may be called, since it is more like a bib) and in his most commanding accents shouts, "Hey, you in the gallery: shut up!"

They are an ambitious bunch — he is. He plays Hamlet and Richard III and Ibsen's Master Builder and juvenile leads and Shylock, and no matter how thin you slice it, it always turns out to be Butler Davenport. The cast arrange themselves in the spare parts, and hope he will not decide that for a flexible personality he must play the fair Ophelia. Every day the seamstresses come to the theatre, after work, and contribute hours of patient toil to costumes that don't look it. Every day, the theatre rehearses for next week, and they are currently working on a five-play cycle by a young English surrealist.

Now, no misunderstandings, please. These are not amateurs. They are professionals who do not get paid. They are carrying on the old tradition of the stock companies, and fighting the modern business theatre of Sam Harris, George Abbott and the Shuberts. They carry the torch of the pure theatre in the face of an unconcerned public, and declaim mightily the classics and the moderns. There is something decidedly pathetic about a little group standing in the face of the onrushing tide.

Especially if they can't swim. . .

production. Other members of the cast are Bob Miller and Betty McRae, who play the roles of Judah and Mary Magdalene respectively. The play is under the direction of W. S. Milne.

The scenery has been designed by Mrs. Milne, wife of the director, and executed by a stage crew composed of students under the direction of Peter Quentin. Mrs. Milne is also responsible for designing the costumes for the play. Make-up classes have been held to instruct co-eds in making up the characters of the production. The men in the cast are being forced to suffer for their art, as their hair-cuts have been banned until after the performance in order to avoid incongruous close-cropped heads.

AIR FORCE REQUESTS QUALIFIED ENGINEERS FOR OFFICIAL POSTS

National Defence Department Announces Urgent Need for Engineers to Serve in Technical Capacities

QUALIFICATIONS LISTED

An urgent request for men with engineering experience to serve the government in technical capacities in connection with the British Commonwealth Air Training Plan, has been received by President Cody from the National Defence Department, it was learned yesterday.

Owing to the rapid absorption of technical personnel in war industries, the Royal Canadian Air Force is in urgent need of personnel for training as Aeronautical Engineer Officers, and technical engineers with practical experience in aircraft production or maintenance, the letter, signed by Air Vice-Marshal L. S. Breadner, Chief of Air Staff, said.

Qualifications required of candidates for appointment under these two classifications are as follows:

1. Technical Engineer Officers: These must have a thorough knowledge in Engineering, applicable to Aeronautical requirements; adequate experience in aircraft repair work or extensive aircraft factory experience; age limit — up to 50 years (highly qualified candidates will be considered up to age 55). While graduate engineers are preferred, it may be necessary to accept candidates with lesser academic standing provided they have extensive practical experience.

2. Potential Aeronautical Engineer

Horse and Plow Clear Campus

Now that all the sidewalks are cleared of their tons of snow you may be wondering how it was all cleared off. No sooner is the campus blanketed with snow than the phone in Alf Rigler's domain is set a-jingling and Alf and his faithful chestnut-brown horse on their way.

During this last descent of the little white flakes 20 extra men were hired to do the fancy trimmings after Alf and his rig had finished the heavy work. These men with their picks and shovels clean off the ice and widen the paths so that the co-ed tripping lightly to lectures may not get her galoshes all wet with "that nasty old snow".

It is estimated that Alf, horse and plow, which was made at the U. of T. workshop and can stretch from two to twelve feet, cover about ten miles of sidewalk before lectures start in the morning. To do this Alf must start out about four a.m. when the stars are still shining and good little students are asleep in their little beds.

Student Income and Outgo To be Probed by Campus Survey

"What are your sources of financial support while attending college? After graduation will you have to reimburse your family? What summer jobs did you have?" These and other questions regarding students' financial situation will appear in the S.C.M. questionnaire to be distributed next week.

The questionnaire was formulated by a special committee of the S.C.M. with the help of members from the sociology and social science departments. The committee was founded to discover to what extent students in the University of Toronto are being severely handicapped by financial difficulties and to investigate whether all ways of meeting such problems are being fully utilized.

NORMAN M'KENZIE TELLS EXPERIENCES

Experience of a field worker in co-operative developments were outlined to members of the Campus Co-operative Residence Inc. and friends during an address on Wednesday evening. The speaker was Norman MacKenzie, who has done work in co-operative education at Antigonish in Nova Scotia and among the fishermen of British Columbia.

Mr. MacKenzie told of the effort made by the Canadian-Scottish groups in the Maritimes to further better living conditions among themselves. He recalled how as a member of the St. Francis Xavier University extension department, he had seen co-operatives started among the fishermen, and the movement grow to immense proportions.

"It is now out of the hands of the university and being run by the folk themselves. They draw on the university only as they need assistance," he stated.

At the conclusion of his talk Mr. MacKenzie outlined plans and offered suggestions for the growth and educational expansion of the Campus Co-operative Residence Inc. at the University of Toronto.

"Resolved that Canada should be a Member of the Pan-American Union" Argued at Cartwright Hall

FLOOR DECIDED 17-12

The Toronto women's debating team composed of Mary Shortt and Mable Van Camp, successfully upheld the motion, "Resolved that Canada should be a member of the Pan-American Union" at the intercollegiate debate held in Cartwright Hall last night.

The opposition was supported by a Queen's team composed of Dorothy Wardle and Joan McKinley.

The opposition entered the debate by stating the purpose of the Union. It was described as a conference of all nations in the western hemisphere to discuss problems in economic, military, political and cultural fields, and to preserve peace and promote good will.

The government stated that Canada should recognize the responsibility which devolved on her when she became an autonomous nation. They went on to say that the western hemisphere is the only sphere of influence left open to Great Britain and that Canada is her only access to it.

The opposition attacked their problem from three standpoints. Is the Union practical for Canada, advantageous to Canada and does Canada want it?

The decision of the judges upheld the government and the decision of the floor did likewise by a majority of 17-12.

Miss Mary Winspear criticized the debate and Greta Riddell acted as clerk of court.

"Union Now" Plan Backed by Streit Gains Support

A Canadian organization to support the idea of "Union Now" is in process of organization here. It has the backing of Clarence Streit, author of "Union Now".

A provisional committee is now contacting important people in Canada with a view to calling a Canadian-wide convention and electing a properly authorized committee.

Mr. Goldwin Gregory is acting secretary and Dr. Harold Couch is honorary treasurer.

A group of interested men met about a month ago at the Writer's Club, just after Mr. Streit's visit to Toronto and Oakville. They formed the present organizing committee. Archdeacon S. G. Scott of Quebec has agreed to be one of the advisory council.

Already many have joined the local organization and are subscribing to assist the idea.

TENOR WILLIAM MORTON GIVES HART HOUSE RECITAL

The artist at the next Friday Afternoon Recital in the Hart House Music Room will be William Morton, young Canadian tenor. Mr. Morton is well known as a soloist on the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation's networks and with the Toronto Symphony Orchestra and the Mendelssohn Choir.

Toronto audiences acclaimed him last year for his work in Bach's St. Matthew Passion and Beethoven's Ninth Symphony, both with the Toronto Symphony and the Conservatory Choir.

NIELSEN DISCUSSES ECONOMIC TYRANNY FROM MONTREAL

Women to Play Large Part in Checking Fascism and Maintaining Democracy on Home Front

CHAMPIONS FREE SPEECH

Mrs. Dorise Nielsen, Canada's only woman M.P., stated yesterday in a long distance interview from Montreal with The Varsity, prior to her Toronto appearance Friday, that university students must consider now what the essentials of democracy are before any post-war plans may be thought of.

"In every phase of the country's life, particularly in the field of economics, we must win back the rights that have slipped from us through the economic tyranny which has been set up, if we are to maintain democracy on the home front," she said.

Speaking of women's part in politics she expressed the opinion that "women have fallen down on the job and help mainly behind the scenes." She attributed this partly to the lack of encouragement on the part of the men. "Women will just have to dig their way in," she advised, "as they have plenty of ability for public work."

Described as a champion of free speech, Mrs. Nielsen upheld her views on the subject, saying "in war time fascist tendencies must be checked by regulation but the term 'subversive' must not be applied to those working for the interests of the common people."

She advised against using the term "subversive" too loosely and stressed the danger of losing freedom. "If democracy is kept, without being allowed to live and exercise itself, it will

POLICY OF C.B.C. TOPIC OF VIC DEBATE

The Canadian Broadcasting Corporation will be the subject of much discussion, pro and con, at the next meeting of the Victoria College Debating Parliament. The session has been called for Monday, December 9 at 8 o'clock in Alumni Hall.

The motion before the house reads: "This house has confidence in the policy of the C.B.C." The government argument will be led by Claire Pratt and Alec Filshie. Margaret Eagleson and Charles Scott will uphold the opposition.

At first the cabinet wished to discuss the "present policy" of the corporation but it was felt that the entertainment side of the program might be neglected by too great stress on the information and propaganda work. The adopted resolution will allow both phases equal representation.

The premier and his cabinet feel that there are many people who are dissatisfied with the condition of Canadian radio and everyone who attends the session may freely present his opinions.

The cabinet has been immensely pleased with the response to its two previous sessions.

"Hepburn Must Go," Subject Originally Scheduled for Address by Millard, Ontario President of C.C.F.

POLICE PREVENT MEETING

On the grounds that the proposed subject of discussion at last night's meeting of the University C.C.F. Club was "indiscreet," President Cody yesterday ordered that "under no circumstances" should the meeting be held.

Charles Millard, Ontario president of the C.C.F. party, was to have addressed the campus group which is affiliated with the national C.C.F. party, on the subject: "Hepburn Must Go." The meeting was to have taken place in the U.C. Women's Union.

Surprise at the action and objection to the short notice given the club was voiced last night by Ken McNaught, president, who had secured consent to the use of the Women's Union theatre a week ago.

"The fact that this is a provincial university dependent upon provincial grants for funds should not be used as an instrument to prevent students here from discussing domestic political problems," McNaught said. "Our club is a purely political organization and the address planned was purely political. It seems perfectly legitimate for students to discuss political problems and hear official opinion."

The president of the campus C.C.F. said he had been unofficially informed last night of a ruling that permission to bring outside speakers to the campus must be granted by the Capt. In his four years in the club, however, he had never been informed of such a regulation, McNaught said, and had never seen it publicly announced.

"I feel that if such a ruling exists," he said, "all organizations in the university should know about it."

A university policeman was posted in the Women's Union at 7.45 p.m. to see that the meeting was not held, it was reported. Notice of cancellation (Continued on Page 4)

Records Ready By First of Year

Nothing new has been learned about the donation of records being made to the university by the Carnegie Corporation of New York, it was announced by the President's office yesterday.

The records are to be shipped on Dec. 15 and should be available for student use about the first of the year. They will be kept in the U.C. women's common room and will consist of the greatest works of the greatest masters.

The records will be available to both men and women students — probably between four and six in the afternoon.

No Corsages, Men's Blind Dates Features This Year's Arts Ball

University College girls are determined that Leap Year will have a notable final fling according to news reaching The Varsity yesterday. Lists have been posted in various fraternity houses and residences for men who want to be taken to the Arts Ball by blind dates. The lists will close Friday.

The Arts Ball will be the first of the big formal dances on the campus to observe this year's unofficial ban on corsages. "We love to get corsages," Sheila Scott, fourth year president of the Women's Undergraduate Association said. "But we are voluntarily giving up this pleasure in order that the dance may not be so expensive for the men."

As ticket sale for the Arts Ball continued, C. L. Dubin, Literary Director of the U.C. Literary and Athletic Society, warned men that signing the lists for blind dates would not necessarily mean a free evening at the party. "The girls who have not already been dated by then will be available to 'escort' some of the men to the dance," he said. "Obviously there will not be many U.C. girls undated for the big U.C. dance of the year. I advise the men to arrange their own dates for the evening."

As co-ed enthusiasm mounts to what Lit officials term unprecedented heights, the girls will be working over the weekend, decorating Simpson's Arcadian Court, scene of the Arts Ball, Christmas colours of red, white and green will be seen in the hall, and holly branches and mistletoe twigs will be placed judiciously.

Leaders of the co-ed decoration committee are Mary Emmet, Jean Ross, and Joyce Laing.

Campus Survey

Next week many students on the campus will be approached and requested to fill out an S.C.M. questionnaire regarding their financial condition. It is hoped that all these students will co-operate and answer the questions to the best of their ability.

The questionnaire is the work of a special committee of the S.C.M. set up to investigate the economic condition of students on the campus. The purpose of the questionnaire is to find out if there is any great need among the students. Individual cases have come to the attention of the committee and it would like to discover how widespread this condition might be. Especially, it is interested to find out if students are finding the cost of living any higher. They would also like to determine whether students have found it any more difficult to support themselves because of the difficulty in taking jobs, and if this is so, what adjustments they have had to make.

The questionnaire was carefully planned with the aid of members from various departments in the university. The survey will be conducted by the sampling method and the results will be tabulated and published as soon as possible.

The first probable objection which will be raised by the student is that the questions are too personal, and that he does not wish to make public his private affairs. The committee, in view of this probable attitude, have decided that names will not be requested and each questionnaire, after it is filled out, will be sealed in an envelope. The volunteers who distribute them will have nothing to do with tabulating the results, and those who do compile the statistics will not know the identity of the person who answered the questions.

Such a survey has never been conducted before on a Canadian campus. The committee deserves credit for the undertaking of such a task and should be rewarded with the co-operation of all whom they approach. A factual survey of the campus is needed. The facts and figures will stand by themselves to show whether or not there is any real need among our students.

Educational Poll

Another questionnaire in connection with education was conducted recently in the United States, and the results have just been released. The poll was conducted by the National Education Association and the American Youth Commission, and supplies an answer to a question over which there has always been a great deal of speculation — exactly how the general public feels about education.

The poll was undertaken with the cooperation of the American Institute of Public Opinion, of which Dr. George Gallup is director, and can thus be considered fairly reliable. It reports that about one-half of the American people believe that the amount of tax money being spent for schools is "about right". One-fifth said that not enough money was being expended, one-fifth had no opinion on the subject, and only one-seventh thought that the schools receive too large a share of the public income.

The responses indicated that those who had attended college were the most emphatic in declaring that more money should be spent for educational purposes. Among those who had attended high school only was found the highest percentage of those who criticized school funds as too high. In general, older people were more inclined to feel that too much was being spent on schools; the younger people tended to call the grants too small.

Seventy-two percent of those questioned approved government aid to families so poor that they could not send their children to high school without such help. Twelve percent opposed this procedure. Those who qualified their answers stated as one of their reasons that high school was only for children who were ambitious, capable and willing to study.

An outstanding feature of the answers to this question concerning financial assistance to the poor was the relative unwillingness of wealthy young persons to aid poor families to give their children a high school education. Only fifty-seven percent of the young people in the upper income group approved such a plan, while eighty-one percent of the youth in the lowest income group were favourable.

Students for War Industries

The increasing demand for technically trained workers in munitions and airplane factories will have an effect on the high school spring term this year, as far as older pupils are concerned. It was revealed by a member of the Board of Education a few days ago that the Ontario Department of Education has offered to graduate matriculation students in good standing at Easter, so they may attend a special technical course in schools.

Any high school student who wishes to take this course will be graduated at Easter, providing he has an academic standing of better than fifty percent. After attending a special, forty hour a week technical training course for three months, he will be prepared to enter a munition plant.

The trustee stated that hundreds of students are expected to take advantage of the offer and that the technical schools will probably be overflowed by applicants, but "all will be taken care of, for if a student can't get in the first three months course he will get in the second or third."

This is an intelligent move for the Department of Education to make, since, if there is such an increasing demand for trained workers in wartime industries, matriculation students should be good material for prospective employees. A few months deducted from their education need not lessen the studies taken, but it will prepare workers for those industries just that much sooner.

For Women Only

The new budget has been released and by this time thoroughly perused, and the female population can breathe easily again for awhile — silk stockings have escaped this time, but there was a warning note in the report. They may be banned later, if necessary, as they have been in England. Probably nothing could cause greater consternation in the feminine world than such a decree, since silk stockings have long since ceased to be regarded as a luxury and are now considered almost a necessity. It is very fortunate that so many co-eds are addicted to ankle socks. In warmer weather they might have to rely upon them entirely.

However if the time does come, there will probably be sufficient ingenious manufacturers ready to replace silk hosiery with a reasonably good substitute. At present there are seven firms in Canada manufacturing Nylon hosiery, the substitute which looks like silk but it supposed to wear twice as well, but it is reported by such companies that it will be at least two years before there will be sufficient Nylon to satisfy the demand. All we have to say on the subject is—"They had better hurry!"

Marion Grudeff

The fact that Marion Grudeff is 14 years old is one reason why her recital in the Musical Manifesto series last night was an event of more than usual interest. The way she dealt with a professional concert program was even more striking. Unlike the usual type of child prodigy who overwhelms his audience with flawless technique and interprets every bar the way Teacher told him to, Miss Grudeff showed evident enjoyment of her program and a degree of originality in its interpretation.

The program started slowly with a rather mechanically played Bach Choral Prelude. The Beethoven Waldstein Sonata, which followed, gave Miss Grudeff a chance to exhibit her technique to the full. Particularly effective was the spirited Rondo, which was performed with real brilliance.

Many people would shudder at the thought of a 14-year-old playing a Chopin group. But instead of trotting these pieces off as routine displays of technique, as do so many amateurs, Marion Grudeff committed the heresy of playing them as if she liked them. Each separate number was an adventure, the climax being a superb rendition of a Scherzo, which showed beautiful tonal quality as well as the performer's ability to cope with its more exacting passages.

The second half of the program opened with variations by Saint Saens on a Gluck Caprice. The mature treatment of this tricky little piece gave promise of future development in interpretation of more important works.

The final number, Liszt's transcription of Paganini's La Campanella is one of those bravura pieces which accomplished and experienced pianists usually dash off with boring effortlessness. Last night it took on new interest as it was played by a performer from whom it required terrific effort. Miss Grudeff's performance may have lacked the finesse of a Horowitz or Rubinstein, but it gave a little zest to a sadly overworked piece.

McMASTER TEAM WINS

Hamilton, Ont., Dec. 4 (CUP)—A women's debating team from the University of Toronto was defeated here tonight by the McMaster co-ed debaters who successfully maintained the Government motion: "Resolved that Canada should be a member of the Pan-American Union."

Junior Swimmers Meet Speaking OF SPORT

By Dave MacIntosh

THE PICK OF THE CROP

The time has come, the walrus said, to select an interfaculty all-star rugby team, and so last night, in due accordance with the wishes of the walrus, the boys who provide the page three material set themselves to this arduous task. After heated discussions, altered choices and a general free-for-all, we undertake to set forth the Report of the Sports Staff Commission on All-Star Selections.

Now, we know what we are running into. There will be a few, perhaps, who will agree with a number of the choices, but absolutely nobody is going to approach us with a lusty back-slap and yell "Couldn't have picked 'em better." But we believe we are being as fair as it is possible for a Sports Staff to be fair. This year interfaculty rugby doings have been given more attention than possibly any other sport will receive all year. In previous years it has been attempted to have the selections on managers' and coaches' choices. Naturally the system did not hold water, for said bosses merely presented a slate of their own teams. All reporters who viewed the ten squads in action were asked to poll their votes to performances throughout the season, not on the basis of what they can do and didn't, or what they would have done if—, or what they were expected to do. From a bumper crop we have chosen the following twelve men. The selection does not, of course, contain the names of ball players who joined the ranks of outside senior teams. They include those of Ed Shuba, Jim Fowell, George Meen and Glen Munro.

Quarterback	Don Boxer, Trinity
Halfback (secondary defense)	Alcie Alcombrack, U.C.
Halfback	Stu Munro, Senior School
Halfback	Jack Plaxton, Senior School
Flying Wing	Don Grosskurth, Senior School
Snaphack	Beefy MacMillan, Trinity
Inside Wing	Vic DePaul, Senior School
Inside Wing	Jim Carson, Vic
Middle Wing	Wilkie Davey, U.C.
Middle Wing	Herb Barrett, Senior School
Outside Wing	Bill Roberts, St. Mike's
Outside Wing	Chuck Reuben, Senior School

99 44/100% of the positions were hotly contested. It was a tough choice between Boxer and Ron Fugler. For sentimental reasons Ron would have been the choice, for this year he completes an outstanding interfaculty rugby career. He has been a captain of four School outfits during his four-year sojourn at S.P.S.

There was not much doubt about the secondary defense half spot. Alcombrack was the unanimous choice. For plunging half it was pile-driving Stu Munro by a long margin, and Junior School's great Don Grosskurth nabbed the flying wing position without a murmur of dissent. The remaining backfield position proved a rough spot for the Committee to traverse. Heading the list were Plaxton and Axon, but reads of other players were mentioned. To name a few: Red Heilbuch, Johnny Whallon, and Hal Fleming of Vic, Ralph MacIntyre, Whizzer Meds, Bill Arup of Junior Meds, Bill McCormick and Johnny Henderson of Trinity, Murray Haxton and Wilt Ferguson of Dents, Grant Puttock and Ron Lake of Forestry, and Doug Marshall and Van Smith of Sr. S.P.S.

Beefy MacMillan was the inevitable choice for the upside-down position, but Doug Clarke of Junior School had to be reckoned with. A really tough proposition was presented in filling the line spots. Bill Roberts, a great outside, but a greater fighter, took one of the ends by six furlongs, but it was only after long and strenuous deliberation that Chuck Reuben was picked over Tommy Jarvis of U.C. Also mentioned were Stumpy Edmunds of Trinity and George Smallwood of Vic. Wilkie Davey and Herb Barrett, running mates on Varsity's intermediate squad last year, were naturals for the middle positions. Ken Gow, Bob Irwin and Jack Ronayne were considered seriously, as were Don McRae, Walt Huxtable and Bill Eccles for the inside.

Only two who occupied chosen spots last year re-appear in the line-up this year. They are Don Grosskurth and Don Boxer. Three players who placed last year, Don McRae, Jack Ronayne and Tommy Jarvis missed by a hair in securing their old seats.

Our apologies to Dents, Meds and Forestry, who failed to place a single man. Our apologies too to Junior School, who, although advancing to the finals, has but a solitary representative; for being unable to obtain space for no more than a single man, our apologies to Vic and St. Mike's.

Our vote for the man most valuable to his team goes unhesitatingly to Beefy MacMillan. Little more can be said of Trinity's great snaphack than has already been said. Around him centred not only the Anglicans' stubborn defence, but the will of an underrated team to win.

NICE WORK, GIRLS

Congratulations are in order to the feminine basketballers for their display (the game, we mean) on the Hart House boards last night. From our viewpoint the happiest note in the whole affair was that once again the roar of an interfaculty crowd was ringing down the cloistered passageways of the Male Mansion. Except for a few interfaculty rugby tilts, no interfaculty game has drawn as well. Femininity is more than merely an added attraction.

AERIAL NAVIGATION SOARS TO VOLLEYBALL VICTORY, AND TOP PLACE IN GROUP

With diminutive Mike Tuckack setting them up for him, Ianley Ron Lake flew the Aerial Navigation volleyball crew into the victory hangar last night with a rousing 7-15, 15-13, 15-5 triumph over St. Mike's. The win lodges the Flyers in first place in Group V. Meds III, out of the running in Group III, defaulted to Knox A, also out of the running.

Aer. Nav.: Van Hyse, Tuckack, Lake, Reilly, Buchan, Schofield.
St. Mike's B.: Sullivan, Kelly, Barrett, Cloonan, Killea, Casey, Foley, Coughlin, Buerger.

KELLAM STARS FOR S.P.S.

Jr. School stickmen eked out an 11-10 victory over Pharmacy A in the first game of a round robin playoff for the Group I championship.

The Druggists swept into an early lead and were ahead at half-time 7-6. The Schoolmen spurred in the third stanza to hold the Pestle-Pounders scoreless while they rammed in two goals. The Druggists put on a desperate drive in the final chucker but were unable to overcome the Engineers' lead.

Lewarne and Kellam sparked the School snipers, scoring four and three goals respectively. Walt Lee got three for the Druggists while Jardine and Jeffers each got two.

Jr. School: Winn, Currie, Capper, Lewarne, Gorman, Prentice, Kelly, Rankin, Kent, Kellam.
Pharmacy A: Harkness, Boyes, Lee, Jeffers, Jardine, Tompion, Casselman, Newman, Quirk, Hall.

VOLLEYBALL ROUNDUP

With the volleyball schedule ending next week the eventual group winners are slowly beginning to appear.

Sr. Vic is the favourite to cop Group I honours with four straight wins to their credit. Sr. U.C. still has a mathematical chance of tying the Scarlet and Gold.

Group II has Trinity A, commonly known as Dewar and Tseng Co., on top with Jr. U.C. hanging on grimly, an outside chance of knocking it up.

Dents A look good to take Group III but O.C.E. A can still make things difficult for the Molarmen if they win all their remaining games.

Emmanuel A is the cream of the Group IV crop, but Jr. School has a slim chance of tying them for the championship.

In Group V Aerial Navigation is out in front but can still be tied by St. Mike's B.

Group VI has three teams fighting it out for the group championship. At present S.P.S. III are leading the pack but both Pharmacy A and Knox B still have a good chance to hit home plate first.

Trinity B and U.C. IV are tied for the leadership in Group VII with a very close race for the championship in the offing.

Pharmacy B is way ahead in the Group VIII race but Dents C still have an outside chance of tying them for group honours.

All things considered, there are some very close fights for the championships in the different groups coming up in the next two weeks, before the playoffs for the Victoria Staff Cup, now held by Sr. U.C., commence.

NEXT GAME FRIDAY

By Betsy Gowan

Last night before a large, wildly-cheering Hart House audience, Victoria's Scarlet and Gold co-eds romped to a close victory over Jr. U.C. in the first of a two-game series to decide the ladies' interfaculty basketball championship. Although Vic were the winners by the stirring score of 20-16, that's not the whole story.

Jean Crawford's smooth playing and accurate shooting led the winners to their victory as she scored ten points, while the guards were extremely effective, snaring that elusive little ball every chance they got.

U.C.'s Betty Allen and Joan Carter vied for basket honours, scoring three apiece, and they never slackened their speed once they had gained it. Zoe Christie stopped many a basket in her own watchful way, particularly in the last quarter which sparkled with action.

Vic started off very fast, potting baskets almost at random, and led at one time by a score of 10-0. Then U.C.'s defensive system got organized and they began to do some scoring themselves, especially in the torrid closing period.

U.C.'s sprint at the end of the game left the spectators gaspingly peering over the rails, and showed us and U.C. alike that all is far from over in "them thar halls". Perhaps if the U.C. men had known their own yell at least the scoreboard might have read differently. Oh, for a handbook, or a band, or a cheerleader.

If the next game, scheduled for Friday at 8 doesn't produce spectators who will stun the rafters with cheers, we'll go back to our knitting and calmly watch the best team win.

VIC VOLLEYBALLERS WIN OVER U.C. IN CLASH IN JUNIOR SERIES

Junior Vic chalked up their second volleyball win in six starts yesterday afternoon in a game that meant little in the Group II standing. Junior U.C. were their victims in the three-set affair, 4-15, 15-4, 15-12.

Munro Johnson led his five-man squad to the right end of the score in a garrison finish after spikers McKinley and Dewar had seemed to quiet the guns of Vic in a lopsided first instalment.

Jr. Vic: Rutledge, Johnson, Nixon, Gay, Campbell.
Jr. U.C.: McKinley, Dewar, Brannan, Vesa, Skokalo, Duncan, Cameron, Kerr, Mieczko.

TIRONIS

This inscription on a stone in the U.C. quadrangle does not mark hallowed ground. It is a relic of residence life in the old Cloisters during the early '80's—the ultimate in refined initiation.

For weeks Varsity scouts have been tracking down countless misleading rumours of the whereabouts of and the circumstances surrounding this stone. Principal Wallace of U.C. finally located it.

In the early days of University College it was the custom to initiate certain hapless individuals of the first year by throwing them into the "Taddle", a pond and creek which now flows under Hart House and is pumped out by the pump at the end of the shooting gallery. This was evidently curtailed by the authorities because of its thoroughness.

In desperation, the gentlemen of the second year, as the sophomores were then called, devised a much more intellectual torture, centering about the "Tic jact" stone which they had carved. The unfortunate victim was taken to within reading distance of the stone which is in the quadrangle at the base of the arch opposite the west entrance to University College. To read the inscription it is necessary to kneel—with inevitable initiation results. The meaning was carefully translated to him as "Here Lies the Body of a Freshman", who had of course disobeyed the regulations of his seniors.

He was then taken to an unfinished room in the basement of U.C. where, according to the first verse of Litoria (written by F. C. Wade, '82)

"He's brought before ye Mufti's throne
'Mid sulphurous smoke and muffled throne
Mid red-hot dangers and boiling tar
He seenthly danger from afar.
Here in what he was told was the tomb
Of the departed tyro he was put through
An elaborate ritual of which not a vestige remains except this song.

The historical interest of this stone is such that Principal Wallace initiated that he was considering having it marked in some way and possibly recut.

TAKING YOU BEHIND THE SCENES of the workings of a great campus daily, we reveal that The Varsity has run short of that essential for news coverage, copy paper. The boys have to borrow it from the most unlikely places in order to knock off their stories. Highlight to date in the current campaign occurred Sunday night, when the women's news editor, bless her heart, wandered into the offices of the Daily Star and fished a whole pile of the precious stuff from a susceptible office boy. . . . Personally we thought the theft was a Good Thing, but from Mr. Atkinson's point of view, we suppose, THIS SORT OF THING MUST STOP.

CULLED FROM THE MCGILL DAILY is an announcement to the effect that "The McGill Band will rehearse tonight at 7:15 in the Union Ballroom. A good turnout is desired since this will be the bandmaster's last appearance until after the Christmas holidays." . . . Boyoboyoboy, What a hodge he's going on!

CHIVALRY IS ON THE UP-BEAT among certain of the itinerant urchins who infest the campus. . . . Perfect snowball weather lay wetly over the lawns of learning the other day, and the little devils were having a wheeze of a time pelting pellets at passing pedestrians. Along came one of our vast army of eo-ed spies, and perceiving the havoc being wrought by the under-age group, feared for the safety of her nice new hat. . . . But, as she entered the line of fire, the leader of the band stepped forward and raised an arresting hand. . . . "Hold it, you guys," he commanded. "Wait for the lady to go by." As she passed out of range, the gentlemanly little demons resumed their accurate plunking at School and Meds alike. . . .

AN ADVERTISEMENT in the Western Gazette sings the praises of a caravanserai named "Wong's." Making valiant attempts to lure the students into the eatery, the advertisement announces: "Cover charge: Friday 15 cents; Saturday 25 cents." . . . What we want to know is: WHAT'S

COULTON TO MIRROR MEDIEVAL LIFE

Termed as one of the world's ranging medievalists, Professor G. C. Coulton will lecture today on "University life in the Medieval Ages" in Room 8 of University College.

Professor Coulton came to Canada during the summer and intends to remain at this university for the remainder of the academic year. In the Old Country he lectured in history at Oxford, Cambridge and Edinburgh; prior to that he had been assistant master at a number of smaller colleges. He received his university education at Cambridge and Heidelberg.

WRONG WITH FRIDAY?

INOSITOL IS HIGH EXPLOSIVE. . . . Thus there was no little consternation in a chemical engineering lab in The Little Red Schoolhouse yesterday when a flask containing 500 cubic centimetres of inositol-bearing solution fell off a window-ledge, where it had been left to cool, and plummeted earthwards. . . . The boys held their ears and awaited the crash. . . . But a fortuitous snow-bank intervened, and no campus-shattering detonation resulted. Casual comment of a bystanding Pass Arts student was: "Do it again. I didn't see it the first time."

ACCURACY IS A FINE THING, but seems to mean little to a student at the University of Washington, who turned in, so the fable runs, an essay on the works of those noted poets, Byron, Sheats and Kelly. . . .

A NOTED CHILD PSYCHOLOGIST became firmly entangled in a snow-drift the other day. . . . He was miles from anywhere, and thoroughly stuck, so he phoned the secretary of his department to have her inform his class that he couldn't conduct his II o'clock lecture. . . . This imperturbable damsel pinned a note on the lecture-room door which read: "Dr. ——— will not meet his class this morning. He is tight in a snow-drift."

*There once was a student named Breeze,
Who captured M.A.'s and D.D.'s;
But, so great was the strain,
Said the doctor: "Tis plain
That you're killing yourself by de-grees."*
Florida Fishface.

COMING TOMORROW. . . . A Hither and Yon dreamed up by our official Whitney Hall scout, Assistant Women's News Editor Heather Bruce Hill. We know Friend Frank won't like the idea of allowing a mere chit of a girl to invade the column over which he toiled, but let's just try it this once anyway. . . . We avoid the obvious pun, and merely tell you to be prepared for tomorrow's Varsity, because WE ARE BREAKING PRECEDENT.

SPORT SPLASHES

By Doug Green

Dents ploughed through to victory over a struggling squad of sailors from Wyckiffe, defeating them 25-8 in the first meet yesterday in the pool. This is Wyckiffe's fifth straight loss and the fourth win for the Dentists. Brunton, Wills and Clark won the 150 medal for the victors. Brunton came right back and took the 50 back, defeating teammate Beatty. Wills nosed out Hunt of Wyckiffe to gain a first in the 50 breast. Beatty kept intact this record of all first places when he won the 50 free. Dents finished off in glorious style when their relay squad of Brunton, Wills, Beatty and Clark captured the medal.

St. Mike's defeated Emmanuel again in the second meet more badly than before. This time the score was 21-12; the last time 19-14. St. Mike's won the medal and the first three points. Crane of the Gaels defeated Green of Emmanuel in the 50 back. Ben Morwood easily won the 50 breast for the Theologs' only first place. Flaherty of St. Mike's took the 50 free and O'Brien, Kieffer, Remmer and Flaherty of the same college teamed together to out-swim Morwood, Eagle, McRae and Kaellgren in the final 200 yds. sprint relay.

Recently Returned from Formosa, General Secretary Hugh MacMillan will Conduct Convocation Service Sunday

IS U.C. GRAD

S.C.M.'s "National Week" begins at 11 o'clock this Sunday with a service in Convocation Hall and an address on "Christmas in the Orient—1940" by the Rev. Hugh MacMillan, recently returned from Formosa.

During the whole of next week, Mr. MacMillan, who is General Secretary of the National S.C.M., and his Associate Secretary, Miss Margaret Kinney, will be visiting S.C.M. groups around the campus, talking at teas and open meetings, attending executive meetings in the different colleges and holding discussions, in an attempt to show Toronto students that the S.C.M. is a nation-wide and in fact a world-wide movement.

After Sunday their next busy day will be Tuesday, when both the visiting secretaries will speak at dinners. Margaret Kinney speaks at Whitney Hall on worship services as a sequel to the way Whitney Hall girls have been going to a different kind of church each Sunday, and Mr. MacMillan will speak to S.P.S. and any other men who come to supper in the Great Hall, on the subject of the place of Christian Youth Movement. One or other of them will also be at the Trinity men's study group meeting and at the open meeting to be held in Vic at eight o'clock.

On Wednesday, Robert Mackie, General Secretary of the World Student Christian Federation, will talk at the usual noon-hour meeting in the Music Room, and probably also at a Refugee Committee tea at Wymwood in the afternoon.

Then on Thursday afternoon from 5 to 6 Margaret Kinney will lead a Carol Service in Knox College Chapel in which the S.C.M. choir will make its first public appearance. And Mr. MacMillan will conduct a forum in Wymwood at eight o'clock in the evening on the world outlook of Christian students.

10,000 Tons of Coal Supply Light and Heat For University Buildings

Emanating from the building that is set in the valley behind the library, long fingers of steel reach to every major building on the campus. This includes Knox College, Victoria and Wyndolfe Colleges and the Museum. All in all the power plant heats and supplies electricity to over 35 buildings.

The plant was erected in 1911 and has been in operation ever since. It burns coal, and the existing buildings had their own heating systems, but most of the buildings that now exist were erected since then. The plant uses about 10,000 tons of coal each season.

Steam is heated at high pressure and sent through turbine generators to generate the electricity used by the buildings. It is then distributed at low pressure through ten miles of pipeline to heat the various buildings.

And thus out of this one small building, scarcely noticed by the average student, originates the light and heat of most of the major buildings on this campus.

SKI CLUB DISCUSSES LAURENTIAN PLANS

Plans for trips to the Laurentians were discussed at the third weekly meeting of the Ski Club held yesterday afternoon in the Meds Building, the members' appetites for snow being duly whetted by the Ontario Ski Zone's pictures of skiing in the mountains of Switzerland. The Laurentians are the closest thing to real mountains that can be found in eastern Canada, so all those who are interested in going on a trip, which will be arranged as cheaply as possible through the Youth Hostels Association and reduced rail fare, should get in touch with Jack Fleming, S.P.S., and Marion Gallic for the girls.

Discussed also were plans for a ski insurance policy to cover breakfast members' skis, and the plans for intramural competition. The faculty representatives are to attend the University Athletic Directorate meeting this afternoon to decide on an efficient scheme of organization for the interfaculty meets. Those who do the actual running of the meets, timing, starting, etc., will receive some remuneration for the time and work involved and volunteers wishing to help in that sort of job are asked to tell their faculty representatives as soon as possible.

VARSITY DEBATERS ACCEPT INVITATION TO EXTEND TOUR

VIC ELECTIONS TODAY

The last of Victoria College class elections under the old regime are to be held today from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. in Alumni Hall. This is the election of the executive for the classes 4T2, 4T3, and 4T4.

Welcomed by U.S. University Hosts, Ted Gray and Ed Crawford Now in San Antonio, Texas

WELL-RECEIVED

According to word received from Ted Gray and Ed Crawford, the Toronto debating team which left two weeks ago for an S.C.A. sponsored tour of American universities, they are now in Texas. Scheduled to return to the campus last Wednesday, the pair prolonged their trip at the request of West Moreland College, in San Antonio, where they are now debating.

The U. of T. representatives are upholding against the arguments of their American opponents the motion "Resolved that the United States should join a federation of English-speaking nations."

Describing in a letter home the attitude towards the war of the Americans he has met Ted Gray writes, "The general feeling here is for us."

Many of the people who spoke to them after the debates were anxious that the Canadian students should not take away the impression that all the Americans share the view put forward by their opponents.

Gray assured that they had been very well received. He was especially impressed with the friendliness of the American students.

The Varsity debaters have visited Northwestern University, the University of Missouri, Washington University, and the University of Kansas, where they took part in a discussion with members of the teaching staff.

Ted Gray, President of the Victoria College Union, and Edward Crawford, President of the Students' Administrative Council of St. Michael's College, left Toronto Nov. 25.

Vic Play Draws Crowd At Opener

The Victoria College Dramatic Society presented the Toronto premiere of the Broadway success, Family Portrait, to a capacity audience in Hart House Theatre last night. Tonight and tomorrow night will complete the showing.

Under the direction of W. S. Milne, head of dramatics at Northern Vocational, the cast portrayed the life of Jesus' family in a peasant setting "to emphasize that this story is timeless and could take place in any age and anywhere." At times the audience sat in rapt attention, and at others, waves of laughter swept over the crowd.

At no time in the action of the play, does Jesus appear; the principal character in the production is Mary, the mother of Jesus, portrayed by Phyllis MacKenzie. The lead parts are practically all taken by the women: Mary Cleophas, Mary's sister-in-law, is played by Dorothy Ferguson; Naomi, Jesus' sister-in-law, by Mary Campbell; Mary of Magdala, by Betty McKee. One part in the play was portrayed by other than a Victoria student; Daniel, a 10-year-old boy, was played by Gordon Lyons Sutton. In all the cast included thirty-six actors as well as the technical staff of 31.

The play closes with the family explaining to a prospective relative-by-marriage all about their "scapegoat" brother whom he'd never heard about, finally becoming actually proud of him, and Mary, His mother, asking her son to name his son after Jesus; "I do hope He won't be forgotten," she explained.

Student Needle Welders Draw Varied Professorial Quips

Professors responded with various keynotes of interest to the question of knitting during classes — even if the interest was only sounded by the bang of a ditty. On the whole, they first seemed surprised, but all rallied either with some sparkling quip or with sonorous indifference, after they had studied the question.

Prof. E. W. McDonald of Maths came back with "Through it's not quite so picturesque it's better than going to sleep with snore."

Prof. F. H. Anderson of Philosophy forbids it, except for those girls of three score and ten to whom it comes automatically.

One jolly prof. who wishes to be unannounced, hopes the knitters aren't as distracted by it as the profs are, but he still claims, for economy and comfort, it's better to buy the socks . . . at least you can recognize what you buy.

"Since there are demands for extra knitting, there is no serious objection to the pastime, if it does proceed automatically, and does not hinder mental attendance," was the thoughtful reply of Prof. Brett, who added with a twinkle, "Besides there are other pastimes more distracting, but we won't refer to them."

Prof. R. M. Saunders agreed it to be fine and dandy so long as they can still join in the discussion, and not disturb the rest of the group.

It took a while for Prof. Birney of English to remember the one who had knit in his class, but he couldn't raise any serious objection either, since it caused no noise. But he did wonder where all the socks — such as they are — finally end up. And is the idea to test the endurance of the soldier or of the knitter? . . .

Mediaeval College Life Lecture Topic

"School and College Life in the Middle Ages" was the topic of a lecture given by Dr. G. G. Coulton, world-famous authority on mediaeval history, at University College, last night.

Dr. Coulton, author of many books on mediaeval subjects and formerly lecturer at Oxford and Cambridge, is filling the post of Special Lecturer in History at the university for the present academic year.

Dr. Coulton began by stating that the lecture might have been entitled "Toiletarian Education." Elementary schooling, the grammar schools — "the backbone of education," the episcopal schools which trained the clergy, and the universities themselves were all a monopoly of the church.

In spite of certain inherent defects in their structure, the universities kept alive the torch of knowledge through the ages, he continued. If they had no other immortality, this, theirs was a great contribution to human endeavor.

In the universities, professors were the hired servants of the students, Dr. Coulton revealed. Teachers were fined if they were late to lectures, if they did not finish the course in time or if they hurried and skipped, and if they went away from the university for any length of time, they had to leave money that was forfeited should they not return. Records show that stamping, whistling and stone throwing often interrupted classes.

All teaching was in Latin, "the key to mediaeval education." The practice was for students to learn everything by heart whether they understood it or not. "Flogging was a thread running through all mediaeval education of the young," remarked Dr. Coulton in telling how on graduation, instead of receiving a cap with his degree, a prospective teacher was given a birch and a boy on which he proceeded to perform.

Dr. Coulton will deliver a second lecture, "Symbolism in Mediaeval Art," Thursday, Dec. 12.

REO CRDSS TO LAUNCH COURSE ON FOOD PROBLEMS

Plans for the formation of a course in Food Administration are being completed as rapidly as possible by the Red Cross, The Varsity learned yesterday. The instruction will be in the hands of experienced Household Science graduates, it was stated.

Arrangements are going forward with all speed, but things will not be definitely settled until after Christmas.

Fair Sex, Undaunted, Looks to Science Should Silk Stockings be Rationed

By Melba Lent

University co-eds are willing to give up their silk stockings if it will help win the war, but most of them hope that such drastic measures won't be taken "just yet" a Varsity survey revealed yesterday.

Nylon, the new substitute for silk, which is made out of glass, coal, and water, the girls find more than satisfactory. "Oh, so expensive!" A survey among those girls who either have a treasured pair themselves, or know someone who knows someone who once had a pair revealed that Nylon comes in the same colors as silk, looks just like silk, if not a little better, is very sheer, keeps its shape, not becoming baggy, which the girls will appreciate, and, greatest boon of all to the feminine population, it lasts.

The only drawback is that because stockings made of Nylon are so sheer, the warmth provided is almost negligible to run, they run just as fast as silk and mean just that much more money thrown down the drain. However, the girls are unanimous that, if Santa really wants to present them with a pair, or even two, they would not raise insurmountable objections, in fact, if the price would only come down they would buy them themselves.

As to what they will do if silk is banned before there is enough Nylon to supply the demand, the girls haven't yet decided. The majority are of the opinion that if everyone were to wear life stockings it wouldn't be "too bad." "Silk stockings aren't a luxury," the young ladies declare, "why we've been wearing them since Louis XIV started the style and now they're an institution. Besides, silk is so much more flattering than cotton, wool, or lisle. They just haven't got the same 'oomph'."

Happy Birthday!

Today President Cody celebrates his seventy-second birthday. It is with respect and pleasure that we extend to him, through the columns of The Varsity, the congratulations of the entire staff and student body.

The task of administering the largest university in Canada and especially a provincial government university, is one which requires a high degree of knowledge, vision, understanding and effort. President Cody possesses these qualifications and many more. The number of matters and details which must come before the head of a university of this size is staggering. Yet President Cody performs his varied duties with thoroughness and with a genuine desire to maintain and improve the welfare of the general undergraduate body. When any action is taken by President Cody, we may rest assured that he has legitimate grounds and that he is working for the ultimate good of the university. In our brief association with him on The Varsity we have had full co-operation from him.

The coming of war has placed new and heavier burdens on the President's shoulder. In strained times like these it is no easy task to guide the destinies of over seven thousand students. We are fortunate to have a man like President Cody at our head, and we join in extending to him a vociferous and sincere: "Happy Birthday!"

The Sound and the Fury: ---Femine Style

Several female members of the British Columbia Legislative Assembly aroused a stormy controversy on the University of British Columbia campus last week when they urged the abolition of campus fraternities. It is a pity that the elected representatives of the people can find nothing more constructive to do during the greatest war in history than to hurl charges at Greek letter social societies.

The specific charges laid by the two provincial "stateswomen" were that fraternities were "undemocratic, un-British, and that they stifled student campus democracy by encouraging snobbery and dominating student elections." They went even further, sinking to the low level of appealing to war emotions by stating that "the fraternity system was one of the strongest factors in building up the scourge we know as Hitlerism." Dismissing the fact that campus democracy, or at least an interest taken by the majority in democratic processes in the university, is pretty well dead, through no cause of the fraternities, we still feel that some answer to these several charges should be forthcoming.

That fraternities dominate campus elections, at Toronto at any rate, is the height of absurdity. There have been no instances of "fraternity machines", and fraternity men and women by no means come close to dominating the various executives. Nor can it be fairly said that fraternities encourage snobbery, apart from the fact that the possession of sufficient money is a factor determining the individual's ability to join a fraternity. The thousands of clubs which exist throughout the country could also be accused of snobbery on those grounds. But on this campus the line between fraternity and non-fraternity is not sharply drawn and in the activities of the university there is not the slightest distinction between fraternity and non-fraternity. Students from each grouping mingle and work together with no thought in their minds as to whether one or the other does or does not belong to a Greek letter society.

The charge that fraternities are "un-British," seems equally stupid. If, of course, the M.L.A. meant that social fraternities do not exist in British universities, then she is perhaps right, but it is pretty difficult to compare universities of different countries in such a way. If she meant that fraternities were disloyal or opposed to Britain, then she is certainly in error. Fraternities on this campus do as much as any other type of organization to help the financial war effort and to further charitable works. Just because a student belongs to a fraternity, he does not have a completely different outlook on life and a new attitude to the world in which he moves.

Now we are to believe that Hitler and the present world conflict are the result of the fraternity system in German universities. Here the M.L.A. is historically wrong. In the first place our social fraternity system has no counterpart in German universities. There were youth groups and gymnasium clubs, but nothing comparable to our social societies. Hitler rose to and was sustained in power to quite an extent by the youth of Germany, inside and outside the universities. But it was youth as a whole, not university youth and not social fraternity youth, that helped Hitler to rise.

Fraternities, rather than being snobbish and detrimental to the university, are a contributing factor to a united university spirit. They cut across sectional faculty lines by bringing together men from all faculties, and help to create understanding between diverse sections. They help people to form closer friendships in a huge university. They give people an anchorage in this large community. They provide a home for men in faculties which cannot provide residences. Their other merits are numerous, and there are demerits too, but these few illustrations should have served to answer the accusations. As long as there is no line drawn in university life between fraternity members and non-fraternity students, the charges of snobbery and anti-democracy are unfounded. The line is not drawn at Varsity, and we do not feel that there is any sharp line at other Canadian universities.

ART MUSIC Drama

"The Family Portrait"

The Victoria Dramatic Society's production of Family Portrait firmly establishes the precedent set last year by Our Town. The policy of concentrating on recent Broadway productions of true worth has again proved itself.

In Family Portrait Lenore Coffee and William J. Cowen have drawn from Biblical inference, imagination and a deep knowledge of human nature to write a drama which brings religion from the pulpit and puts it into the everyday life of all times. There is no preaching as such in the play, but merely the mirrored image of the life of Christ in the somewhat cloudy mirror of his family.

The "timeless" settings and costumes were adapted from the Broadway production to suit the stage and the players of the Vic production. The sets, solidly designed by Mrs. Milne, wife of the director, gave some difficulties to the stage crew but it is probable that the next two nights of production will find swifter and more silent changes. Mr. Milne is largely responsible for the faithful reproduction on Hart House stage of the brilliant and symbolic colour of the costumes.

The cast seemed unaffected by first-night gaucheries except early in the first scene of the first act. They soon found their places and carried through smoothly to a difficult emotional climax. Their assurance spoke well of a hard but thorough taskmaster in the person of director W. S. Milne.

Phyllis MacKenzie deserves special mention for her portrayal of Mary, the gentle matriarch. She came to the part from the position of understudy and last night proved herself a star in the ascendant. She brings to a difficult part a restrained and human sweetness. Top supporting role was played by Dorothy Ferguson as Mary Cleophas. Her delivery of humorous and cutting comment made hers a truly persuasive chorus character. Mary Campbell and Yvonne Finlay also deserve mention for their portrayal of Jesus' sisters-in-law. Of the brothers of Jesus, Jack Single did well in the part of vacillating Simon.

Later appearances in the play brought unusual talent, John Mantley as Judas Iscariot actually chilled with his ironic lines. The climax of the play centred around Betty McRae as Mary of Magdala, a part easily spoiled by lack of restraint. Miss McRae notably did not spoil it.

With the stage crew well broken in and the sound man in better command of his cues tonight's and tomorrow night's audiences will undoubtedly find in Family Portrait sincerity, deep emotion and brilliance of production, in short, good theatre.

VIC PLAY HAS AUDIENCE

Late last night a bearded glaucifer named Inas Ucker purchased a ticket to the Victoria play. The sudden introduction of the audience element into Vic dramas caused great excitement.

A Varsity reporter contacted Mr. Douglas Harris, the publicity manager who had been standing for three days outside the college in a snowdrift as a publicity stunt. Somewhat cold at the reporter's first approach, he thawed perceptibly when told of Inas Ucker's ticket purchase and even tried to let the scribe a ticket.

However, Harris said as a special consideration he was prepared to accept the tops of two chipso boxes as the fee for a German Messerschmidt as payment. The reporter had by some chance left his fuselage at home and a deal could not be arranged.

The Bearded Glauclifer himself was approached and sorrowfully admitted buying the ticket. "I did it on a bet," he admitted. "It was hell for three hours but just think, now on the money I made I can buy Christmas presents. It was hell but it was worth it."

Local Organizations Play B.C. Member's Attitude Toward Fraternities

Violent exception is being taken by fraternity leaders on the campus to a charge that their organizations are undemocratic. The question arose out of an article appearing in Tuesday's Varsity which reported a speech made by a member of the British Columbia legislature, recommending that fraternities at U.B.C. be abolished and claiming that they are "undemocratic and un-British."

A statement issued last night by Sigma Chi fraternity reads as follows: "Regarding the opinion of parliamentary ladies, we recall one other who in years not far past inveighed against the sheer waste of educating men in a military tradition. Today Canada is learning to value the training that college gives. Who can dare question the value of organizations which seek to give young men ideals and intense loyalties in these days when such virtues are so important to all of us?" Sheila Scott, U.C. IV, president of the Pan-Hellenic Association, said, "As far as the women's fraternities of this charge that fraternities are un-campuses are concerned I do not believe democratic is true. We try to be friendly to all, members of fraternities or not."

Miss Scott added that the girls' organizations do a great deal of charitable work.

Helen Traubel

One of the outstanding sopranos of our time, Helen Traubel, sang at Eaton Auditorium last night. She has a truly great voice; her range is tremendous and her soft passages particularly are excellent. Because she had sung Die Walkure the evening before in New York, her voice was not as delicate as it will doubtless be Saturday. Unfortunately her loud notes in her lower ranges had a tendency to harshness and vibration and her full voice is just a little too big for Eaton Auditorium.

Three Beethoven numbers suffered because they opened the program; Miss Traubel's voice was at its best after the intermission. In both this and the succeeding Wagner, her German was beautiful. Her French was almost unintelligible. Her first number in English, Japanese Death Song by Sharp, was impressive, excellently performed with clear enunciation.

Unexpectedly lovely were the two Negro spirituals. Miss Traubel has an unusually wide range and Deep River and Swing Low Sweet Chariot gave her more opportunity than did any other numbers on the program to display this ability. Her encores were of course chosen to please her audience. The too-familiar Morning by Oley Speaks was sung better than it was by Margaret Speaks this fall.

Mr. Boy, Miss Traubel's accompanist, displayed an astounding lack of technique and musicianship in the performance and choice of his two solos, prettily inconsequential pieces by Rachmaninoff and Mendelssohn. He was, however, capable and sympathetic accompanist, the greater part of the evening.

School Aquamen Look Strong In Junior Interfaculty Swimming Meet

Engineers Favoured with Stars in Every Event but 200 yd. Breast Stroke. Morwood, is Only Theolog

MEET STARTS AT 8 P.M.

By Doug Green

From about 3.30 until 5.00 yesterday afternoon the waters of Hart House stars eliminated one another in the pre-pool were churned into a white foam, as seventy-five would-be swimming linemen of the Junior interfaculty swimming meet.

Tonight, beginning sharply at eight o'clock, the finals will take place with the 300 medley the first event on the card. Then will follow the diving which has three entries, Rogers and McIndoo of School and Van Hise of Aer. Navigation. Then the 50 free, 300 free, 100 back, 100 free, 200 breast and the final 200 yd. relay.

It seems that S.P.S. will take everything as they have two or three aces in every event on the card, except the 200 breast. Here it looks as though Rolly Brett of U.C. might win glory as he did the fastest time in the heats, but only by a second or two. Ben Morwood of Emmanuel, only theolog in the whole meet, qualified in this event as well as in the 100 back. Ten years ago Morwood used to be one of the fastest breast-stroke swimmers in Canada, doing around two minutes and fifty seconds for the 200 breast, which in those days was sensational.

In the 50 free Johnny Northwood of S.P.S. qualified as was expected. The winner of this race might be any one of the other four, however, as all times are within a second or so of each other. The other finalists are Moffat of S.P.S., Balmor and McKinley of U.C., and Beville of Vic.

The 300 yds. free style finds three Schoolmen, Rogers, Boa and Spence, all of whom finished first in their respective heats. Other qualifiers are Clark of Deuts and Sloan of Aer. Nav.

In the 100 yds. back stroke tonight will be Northwood, Brace and Brynes of S.P.S., Sloan of Aer. Nav. and Morwood of Emmanuel.

S.P.S. will also have three men fighting to win the 100 yd. free style. They are Gottlieb, Rogers and Rimmer. Byron Boville of Vic qualified, as did Whitehead, Trinity's lone swimmer.

Those phenomenal natators from S.P.S. will probably finish off this one-sided meet in a blaze of glory by coming home first and second in the final relay. Their two squads won their respective heats in a very decisive manner.

U.C. RUGBY—All members of rugby team turn in equipment today at 12.30 in junior common room.

SPEAKING OF SPORT

By Owen Prichard

OUR TWO BITS' WORTH

We have just about reached the stage where any mention of intercollegiate sport's cancellation gets us feeling as if a dozen Swiss bell-ringers were holding rehearsals in our noggin.

The much-noted topic has been bandied back and forth by nearly every sports commentator in the country, and after all the tumult and the shouting of the intercollegiate sports (in the east at least) stay cancelled. By this time it should be quite evident that little more can be done at present by continuing to first editorially about the matter.

Consequently we were pleased to read Ralph Allen's column of yesterday in the Globe and Mail, in which he interviewed Warren Stevens and presented a full and cogent treatment of the Varsity men's opinions.

Our justification for dragging the subject along into another column is that we should like to present, once and for all, our absolutely personal viewpoint on the matter. Our outlook on the question may or may not be the general student opinion, but we can at least say with Steve that no complaints about the cancellation have come into this department. Most of the mutterings have seeped into the column as quotes from other campus journals.

Concerning the authenticity of our information on the subject, let us say that we have been present at meetings of the Athletic Directorate, the Advisory Board of the U. of T. Athletic Association, and the Student's Administrative Council—in all of which bodies the matter has been freely discussed and statements made by President Cody who was at the Canadian Universities' Conference when the ruling was first made.

And having heard all the talk pro and con we unhesitatingly assure the student body that we personally are in complete accord with the way things stand at present. The ruling was a necessity, and will receive modification as soon as it is possible and feasible for such modification to be made.

Our thanks are due to Ralph Allen for presenting the picture so clearly as outlined by Warren Stevens, and we as a student want to go on record as saying that the student body is almost unanimously in agreement with the stand taken by those who were called upon to make the ruling and those whose task it now is to adapt our athletic program to the new circumstances.

IRISH LOSE TO TRINITY FIVE MAN VOLLEY TEAM TAKES TWO OF THREE

Playing with a five-man team, Trinity A volleyball squad took the last two out of three games from St. Mike's A squad in the upper gym last night, winning the nod by 13-15, 15-10 and 15-9. The Irish edged the Anglicans in the first game of the set, and were able to withstand the fighting Trinity outfit until Bill Roberts put the last point away to take the game 15-13. In the second set-to the Red and Black took eight straight points when trailing at 7-10 and tied up the match with a 15-10 count. In the final tussle the sustained drive of the Anglicans proved effective as they took advantage of any spotty play by the Double Blue, and they pulled out a win on the game and match at 15-9.

Trinity A: Cowan, Riley, Rooke, Thorpe, Delancy. St. Mike's A: Gardiner, Butler, Lavarsway, Knight, Gaddy, Roberts, Waldron, Brady, Barrett, Springer, Natoli.

VIC DOWNS S.P.S. JUNIORS IN CLOSE LACROSSE GAME FARMER AND LEWARNE STAR

Victoria lacrosse team came from behind in a whirlwind finish yesterday to overtake and defeat Junior S.P.S. 14-10, in a hard-fought game with lots of stiff checks given and taken.

Farmer of Victoria was the Frank Merriwell of the encounter, as he scored three goals with a minute and a half to play, while Gorman of School was in the cooler serving a penalty.

The Scarlet and Gold were leading by a two-goal margin at the end of the first stanza, but their defence temporarily came apart at the seams and allowed the Engineers to get in for clear shots on Vic's goalie, Landelle, who did a fair job of his second assignment as keeper of the nets.

Frank Lewarne played a standout game for the Engineers, scoring six of his team's goals. For Vic, Bud Casserly and Glen Munro starred, along with Farmer, the first two scoring six and two goals respectively.

Jr. S.P.S.: Prentice, Winn, Lewarne (6), Capper, Kellam (1), Kelly (1), Rankin (2), Gorman, Crosby.

Vic: Landelle, Munro (2), Farmer (3), Lee (1), Fenton, Kimber, Casserly (6), Patrick (1), Young, Rice.

Feminine pudritude's the thing, I guess, or was it the beauty of that devastating little leather ball? Whatever it was, we could hardly believe there were as many people in the University of Toronto as appeared at the game on Wednesday night.

Vic certainly have some smooth team there with their forward-line rolling in the baskets and the guard-line rolling U.C.'s out. For all we can tell—and who are we to say, anyway?—it's still a your-guess-is-as-good-as-mine affair. If U.C. can play throughout the game today the way they did after half-time on Wednesday, we are warning Vic to hold on to their hats, but if Vic can hold U.C. like they did before half-time, they're off in a cloud.

Well, we're still hoping that one of them will pull out on top—that's as far as we'll go—and it's Friday at 8 in Hart House—that's today, you know!—and the score stands 20-16 for Vic, with crucial moments yet to come.

Come on you men, let's have some more U.C. yells. You were terrible Wednesday, even though we did appreciate your being there. Vic have certainly won the championship for rousing supporters.

PLUS LABORATORY RESEARCH
HELPS INDUSTRY REACH NEW PEAKS

To DISCOVER new uses for Canadian Nickel and to increase the demand for Nickel from its Canadian mines, The International Nickel Company established research laboratories in Canada, England and the United States a number of years ago. Through the efforts of these laboratories and of independent research workers, alloys of Canadian Nickel are contributing greatly to the forward strides of industry.

Nickel Steel crusher shafts have given 5 times the life of Carbon Steel shafts; Nickel Cast Iron stoker parts have lasted 4 times as long as plain Cast Iron parts; "Monel" pump shafts have given 6 times the service of mild Steel. Canadian Nickel is called into use where strength, toughness and resistance to wear and corrosion are required of metals.

A vast amount of technical data regarding Nickel alloys and their use has been gathered together, and this information is now being used more than ever to bring increased efficiency to industry.

Today Nickel and Nickel alloys are providing increasing volume the materials of construction needed to speed Empire production.

CHANNING DISCUSSES CHRISTIAN SCIENCE IN HART HOUSE TALK

"The reason for confusion in men and nations is the lack of an understanding of God, the great Architect who designs all things to satisfy the heart's great longings," said Mr. George Channing in his lecture on Christian Science in Hart House Theatre yesterday.

"The proof of Christian Science is ever in its practice," he declared, "yet these good effects are but the 'sign following'. They are not the purpose of our efforts. Our purpose is to be the man we are without deception; to be the sons of God simply because we are the sons of God; to be spiritual because God is Spirit; to be active in good because God is Life; to be compassionate and helpful because God is Love; to be real and genuine because God is Truth."

CAMPUS SKETCHES

A Canadian University Press Feature

By E. R. E. Carter

The University of New Brunswick is situated on a hill overlooking the beautiful provincial capital. It commands a magnificent view of the winding Saint John River, and in the distance of valleys and hills studded with evergreens. The university buildings are of red brick, constructed in a Georgian style of architecture.

The student population has increased so rapidly in the last twenty-five years that many new buildings have had to be erected. Three of the most outstanding are the Memorial Building built in memory of the students of the university who lost their lives in the last Great War, the Lady Beaverbrook residence and the Lady Beaverbrook gymnasium. Both the residence and the gymnasium were given by Lord Beaverbrook in memory of his wife.

The most important event that has occurred on the U.N.B. campus this term has been the inauguration of a Spitfire Fund. Since the fund's inception early in November it has steadily grown and it is hoped and expected that by the end of the college year its total will be of considerable size. Nearly every organization on the campus is doing its bit to swell the fund. But by far the most unique method of raising money was brought forward by the chairman of the fund. His idea was to saw into small wooden sticks the historic flagpole, from which the Royal Standard flew during Their Majesties' visit to Canada in 1939; this is the

The students of Fine Art have joined forces with the Art Committee of Hart House to put on a display in the art gallery of Hart House. The exhibit ranges from a simple drawing of three or four pumpkins with a twenty-five cent sign in their midst to a group of three large murals.

The murals occupy the most important place in the room, being centred

Montreal College Receives Permission to Form Voluntary Unit for Training of Men of Military Age

FIVE HOURS WEEKLY

Montreal, Que., Dec. 8 (CUP) — Permission to establish a Military Training Unit at Sir George Williams College was received by college authorities from Military District No. 4 Headquarters last week.

Training is optional for students, but men aged 21 to 24 have been advised to enrol in the unit, as enrolment will relieve them of the necessity of being called to training camp during the academic year.

Authorities anticipate that training will be held on two afternoons a week. These sessions will total five hours weekly. Occasional drills will be held on Saturday afternoons and evenings, and evening students will drill two evenings a week.

VIC TO DEBATE POLICY OF C.B.C.

Claire Pratt and Alec Filshie will lead the argument in favour of the Commission and Margaret Eagleson and Charles Scott will be the chief attackers of its policies.

MUSIC COMMITTEE

Members of the Music Committee of Hart House are requested to pick up notices regarding this week's recital in the Warden's office today.

"National Week" Opened By Dr. Hugh MacMillan

Student Service in Convocation Hall Addressed by General Secretary of National Student Christian Movement

The attitude of the Japanese towards Christmas was outlined by Dr. Hugh MacMillan in his address "Christmas in the Orient—1940" at the S.C.M. student service in Convocation Hall yesterday morning. Dr. MacMillan, who recently returned from Formosa, is the General Secretary of the National S.C.M. and is on the campus for the S.C.M. "National Week".

The speaker told how Christmas used to be observed in Japan. The shops had all the traditional decorations of silver bells and Santa Claus and the youth enjoyed the celebration, believing it to be an old custom in America. Only a small group of Christian Japanese kept their observance as simple as possible in order that the real idea and understanding of Christmas might spread.

As Mr. MacMillan pointed out, "The Christmas seed had been sown in the fertile Orient and was beginning to grow when the typhoon of nationalism and the cyclone of war seemed to blight it."

The Victoria and Trinity College choirs, Principal Brown of Victoria College, and Margaret Grant, associate president of the S.C.M. in the university, also took part in the service.

Miss Grant briefly outlined the purposes of the movement, which is celebrating its 21st birthday in Canada this year. She stressed the importance of a National S.C.M., in which all groups can come together in one fellowship. "Our aim this year," she said, "is to seek to understand the teachings of Christ in the light of what is taking place today."

FLOOR SHOW FEATURES LAST O.C.E. FALL DANCE

Ontario College of Education held the last of their fall term dances last Saturday evening, in the O.C.E. gym with about two hundred present. Music was supplied by Vic's George Carty, with an eight-piece band.

Highlight of the evening was the sensational floor show, when Connie McNamara and John Molino surprised their classmates by putting on a show with all the technique and poise of professionals.

C.O.T.C. SERVICE CORPS

The undergraduate parade, Monday, 9th December, is cancelled.

Those undergraduates who attended the last M.T. lecture will assemble at the Toronto Transportation Commission on Tuesday, 10th December, at 1930 hours. The remainder will receive this instruction after Christmas.

STUDENTS' FARES

The Railway Companies are issuing to students of the university, and to members of the university staff, round-trip tickets for the Christmas and New Year vacation, at the rate of the current one way fare and one-quarter for the round trip.

Students wishing to take advantage of this reduction should leave their names with the Registrar of the college, or the secretary of the faculty or department concerned, on or before Monday, December 16th.

The certificates will be issued to the students at the college, faculty or department office, at 5 p.m. on Friday, December 20th.

Members of the staff may obtain certificates at the Registrar's office, Simcoe Hall.

Judge Chosen, Deadline Set For Green Issue

Contributions for the annual Christmas Literary Issue are already flowing into the editorial rooms of The Varsity as embryo authors, poets and artists of the campus seek recognition for their work.

Set for December 18, this year's "Green Issue", as those of past years, will contain eight pages, half of which will be devoted to a special Literary Section. The best of the contributions submitted will be printed, and contributors of prize-winning efforts will receive cash awards.

The competition is divided into three sections — Prose, Verse, and Art. The Verse section is subdivided into Light Verse and Serious Verse.

Judge of the prose will be Malcolm W. Wallace, Principal of University College and Head of the English Department of U.C., Editor Larry Smith announced yesterday. Professor E. J. Pratt of Victoria College, considered by some critics to be the greatest living poet, will judge verse contributions.

C. F. Comfort, lecturer in Fine Art, will act as art judge.

All contributions must be submitted, not later than December 12, to either the Men's Office in Hart House or the Women's Office, Room 42A, U.C.

SYMPHONY TICKETS

A limited number of tickets to the concert of the Toronto Symphony Orchestra on Tuesday night will be available at student rates to undergraduate members of Hart House at the Warden's office today.

Junior and Senior School Share Mulock Cup, Meds and Knox Split Interfaculty Soccer Honours

FULL POINTS AWARDED

The interfaculty rugby and soccer finals, delayed pending a break in the weather, have been definitely cancelled, it was announced by the Intramural Committee following its weekly meeting on Friday afternoon. Joint championships have been declared in both sports.

This means that Meds and Knox will share the soccer title and the names of the two School football teams will both be inscribed on the Sir William Mulock Rugby Trophy. Full intramural points are being awarded to all the faculties concerned.

The Committee first considered staging the finals, but the School representative brought up the point that there would be much danger of injury playing on frozen turf, and it was with the full agreement of the School delegate that the Committee finally decided to cancel the rugby final. There was also the consideration of the great cost that would be involved in clearing the Stadium of snow.

ART GALLERY

Professor E. J. G. Alford will review the work of students in the Department of Fine Art at 1.30 p.m. in the art gallery, Hart House.

Announce Results Of Vic Elections

The results from Victoria College elections which took place Friday, were disclosed by the senior returning officer, Ed Kirkland, Saturday. The number of candidates, he said, reached a new level this year, with forty students nominated for the twelve vacancies.

Rodney Johnston, Pass, is the new president for 4T4, with Margaret Frazer, Pass, as associate president, and Wally Duffield, Pass, vice-president. The new secretary is Helen Bricker, Soc and Phil.

Jim Tapsell, C. & F., was elected president of 4T3 and Betty Bell, Modern History, associate president. The new vice-president will be Harold Landell, Pass, and Ruth Andrew, English Lang. and Lit., the secretary of the second year.

The newly-elected president of the third year is John Hogg, Pass, and the associate president, Joan Foster, Music. Jack Kennure will be the vice-president, and Win Hardy, Pass, the secretary of 4T2.

Ants' Eggs said Ideal Food For Victoria Co-eds' Turtles

The height of novelty in party favours was reached Friday night in Burwash Hall, Victoria College, when each lady at the Gate House formal at-home was presented with a live vestpocket sized turtle. Dissatisfied with the traditional trinkets the residence men turned in despair to the aquarium for their souvenirs.

When they had their tokens and departed the girls realized their complete ignorance of the care and feeding of the little devils. Biscuit crumbs, lettuce, and morsels of bacon were tried, but all were resolutely refused.

To meet this emergency the Gate House executive wished it to be published that a regular diet of ants' eggs would keep a turtle complexion rosy. This delicacy, labelled "turtle food", can be secured at Woolworth's. For variety fish food would be appreciated, and dead flies constitute a special treat from the turtle's point of view.

The brightly coloured tiny amphibians which were imported from Louisiana, had their shells painted blue and were inscribed in white, "Gate House At-Home—1940." They can live out of water for more than twenty-four hours by driving inside their shells and hibernating. This makes it possible to carry them about in a small closed box for some time without harm.

Christmas May be Date Set For Next Year's Term Exams

No decision has been made as yet regarding the time of next year's term examinations. The Varsity was told yesterday by A. B. Fennell, Registrar.

Mr. Fennell announced that a meeting of the Faculty of Arts Council is scheduled for tonight at which any possible changes of policy will be discussed.

This year, the present policy of setting aside the first week of February for the holding of term examinations will be continued, the Registrar announced.

A survey among the professors reveals that some uphold term examinations in December, some in February, and others believe that any decisions should rest entirely with the individual departments.

Prof. R. M. Saunders of the history department believes that first year students need the "jolt" in December so that they may adjust themselves sooner. Spanish and Italian Professor E. Goggin, agrees that February is too late to make up lost work, but he thinks examinations and tests should be held at the discretion of the departments concerned. If these are reasonable about the number of tests, he believes that there should be no difficulty about co-operation between departments.

G. S. Brett, Professor of Philosophy, also believes there should be no designated term examinations. He thinks that the Oxford method of examinations at the end of two and four years is an interesting one. Mr. A. S. P. Woodhouse, University College English professor, believes students haven't time to organize their work for December examinations. Dr. W. A. Kirkwood, Dean of Arts at Trinity, suggests that the new system has not had time to prove itself.

Dr. E. A. Bott, of the Psychology Department, was adamant on spur-of-the-moment decisions. He placed the responsibility for the Council's decision upon the students, who should organize (according to colleges and courses) and assert themselves. They might try to obtain greater co-ordination with regard to tests, essays, and general work, between many independent departments. He stated that this was especially necessary in the Pass Courses.

Jobs to be Filled

Starting are the results of a nation-wide survey of job opportunities and job training among young men and women which was recently made by the American Youth Commission in the United States. The specific findings were that nearly 4,000,000 young people between the ages of 15 and 24 are out of work and out of school today; that the majority of them have no definite job training or experience; that every year 1,750,000 finish or leave school and start job-hunting; that of the 4,000,000 out-of-school jobless and of American youth in general less than one in four have had any practical help in finding out what work fits them best, let alone any organized aid in finding jobs.

In the face of these revelations the Youth Commission makes proposals for far-reaching changes in pre-college education. High schools are urged to drop the still-persistent idea that the high school is primarily a preparatory school for college, when only one in five goes on to college. The high schools are not to become wholly vocational schools, but it is felt that they should provide classroom instruction and shop practice to give students basic information and skill in the chosen vocation. The vocational training offered should be guided by the employment opportunities in that particular community. Full-time counsellors working individually with each pupil to determine aptitudes and abilities, should be a part of the scheme. The counsellor should also keep in close touch with any changes in the local employment pattern.

Much of what was found in the United States could be applied to peace-time Canada, although to a lesser degree, and when this war is concluded, gigantic problems are going to face this country. The task of converting industry back to peace-time operations, and of putting to use all the available labour, will be immense. During the war a Youth Training Program, carried on by the Dominion government with the assistance of the provinces, is in operation, training 26,000 young people annually in war work in 64 technical schools throughout the country. After the war youth will find it all the more difficult to obtain employment once the war boom has subsided and fighting forces are demobilized. We do not speak of university youth, training for white-collar jobs; rather, we refer to those four out of every five who do not go on to college, and in many cases do not complete high school. For those youths a determined effort must be made by the community and the government to provide adequate technical training adjusted to the particular needs of the employment pattern of that locality. It is a problem which demands constant study now in preparation for the day of peace when it will assume immediate importance.

The Madding Crowd Away

We in Canada have been singularly blessed for quite a long time. Living as we do far away from a continent which for as long as we can remember has been the scene of wars, revolutions and oppression, we have been able to find a way of living which to some people seems the greatest blessing we have as yet received. We have come to know what it is to live side by side in our residential districts with people of all races and creeds. In our schools we have studied side by side with young men and women of all colours, all races, all religions.

It is true we have had our internal troubles. Petty politicians have risen and faded away. We have had temporary periods of distrust and disgust with our fellow citizens. All in all, however, we in Canada have become accustomed to living standards which are to be envied. We have become accustomed to certain rights and certain standards. We have had it taught to us in schools and in churches that these rights and beliefs are inalienable. They are ours and must always be ours. In other words they have become self-evident truths, self-evident rights.

Of late, however, our way of living has been threatened. Across the Atlantic in Britain, across the Pacific in China, in the Balkans, in central Europe, wherever the cruel hand of totalitarianism has spread, rights have been stamped on and obliterated. The fact has been brought home at last that right alone is not enough. Truth can be suppressed, rights can be abolished.

We have learned that we are not a country apart. We are not immune to the diseases which afflict our fellow men. We must protect ourselves from a plague which is spreading over a whole continent.

Right now everything we hold worth living for is being threatened. England, the stumbling block over which so many would-be world masters have fallen, is fighting for her life. The storm which raged so tempestuously over the Isles only a few months ago has not ceased. There are still, as the leaders of the British nation themselves have told us, great danger and great risks to be taken. If we cannot partake of these perils ourselves we must at least try to ease and encourage our brave saviours overseas.

Here in the comfort and comparative peace of our own country we must do everything in our power to help the fight for liberty. If we accept liberty of thought, of worship and of the individual as the fundamentals of our own way of life, we must help the struggle for those liberties no matter where the championing of them is being undertaken.

Gold-Bearing Yule Trees

Christmas trees this year will not only serve to bring cheer and beauty into the Yuletide season but will also be of direct help to Canada's financial war position. The exporting of evergreen trees to the United States for use as Christmas has grown to considerable proportions, and over and above providing a source of revenue to Canadian farmers and nurserymen, it is expected to help establish foreign exchange to be used for the purchase of war supplies in the United States.

The symbol of the Christmas spirit indirectly brings about half a million dollars to the Dominion each winter. Last year about six million evergreens, mostly spruce, Balsam fir and Douglas fir, were cut, and of these about five million were exported to the United States. New York City alone imports 750,000 trees, while the large cities on the Pacific Coast offer a good market for British Columbia trees.

There are many legends concerning the origin of the Christmas tree, the use of which did not become popular in England and on this continent until about a half-century ago. One legend in keeping with the spirit of Christmas is that of St. Winifred addressing a group of converts. He chopped down a huge oak, revealing a tiny young fir, standing with its green branches pointing to the stars. "This little tree shall be your holy tree tonight," said the Saint. "It is the wood of peace for your houses are built of it. It is the sign of an endless life for its leaves are ever green. Let this be called the tree of the Christ-child; gather about it, not in the wilderness, but in your own homes; there it will shelter no deeds of blood, but loving gifts and rites of kindness."

And so our symbol of Christmas will be sold, strangely, to bring money that men may kill and be killed, yet sold also that Christmas may again be celebrated in peace throughout the world and that the spirit and lessons of Christmas may be inculcated once more in the race of man.

MULOCK CUP FINAL THIS AFTERNOON!

Hart House Pool to be Scene of Classic Struggle for Historic Trophy. Swimming Meet Postponed

SCHOOL FAVOURITE

Special to The Varsity
(From Somewhere Down Under)

Contrary to rumours published elsewhere in this issue, the 1940 Mulock Cup final is on again. After one of the longest meetings ever to be held in the Athletic Association Board Boiler Room, the Athletic Directorate arrived at the decision of where to hold the finals.

The key to this problem was provided when three doctors and a divinity student were hurriedly summoned from the Directorate meeting to minister to a freshman in Pass Arts who had just been carried unconscious into the Medical Office.

The unfortunate freshman, who had gone to the Pool for a cool dip after sweating in the torrid air of the Tuck Shop, had dived from the high board in a triple-jack-knife-half-somersault-and-gainer only to discover when half-way down that the recent cold snap had frozen the waters of the pool to a depth of six feet. With rare presence of mind the intrepid nator escaped serious injury by landing head first. The only witness to this near-tragedy was a second year Forestry student left over from the recent Saint Night, who saw the whole incident from the door of a little wooden hut from which he was fishing through the ice.

On receipt of the news, the Athletic Directorate immediately postponed the Interfaculty Swimming Meet until the spring thaw. At the same time workmen were dispatched to sand the surface of the pool in preparation for the Mulock Cup final which will take place this afternoon. Students will be admitted on showing their registration cards.

Interviewed early this morning as they whipped their prayers through feverish signal and scrimmage practices, the coaches of the contending teams predicted that School of Science would win easily.

Sunday Evening Concert

The choir of the Church of St. Mary Magdalene under the direction of Dr. Hagley Willan presented a program of liturgical music in the Great Hall of Hart House last night. The surroundings are perfect for such a recital and provide the atmosphere absent in any concert hall.

Dr. Willan's choir of sixteen voices sings as four — one might almost say as one. No one person or group of persons dominated, and soprano, alto, tenor, and bass were of crystal clear quality. It is said that if one person ever sings a note louder than the rest, he is automatically discharged from the choir. Certainly all sixteen present last night are safe.

Five compositions, among the most beautiful of the evening, were by the director. Here are we in Bethlehem was a particularly ingratiating carol, and the four motets, written for this choir, served to show their perfection in pitch, co-ordination and diction.

At the demand of the large and appreciative audience, Dr. Willan added two selections, the Lutheran hymn A Mighty Fortress is Our God, and the Bach Choral, Now Let Every Tongue Adore Him, and then repeated the last carol When Christ was Born of Mary Free, by Brown.

This unaccompanied choir sings without emotion, devoting its energy to purity of tone rather than dramatic effect. Dr. Willan's skill in choir directing and composition was as evident as is his consummate skill at the organ on Tuesday afternoons.

School Junior Swimmers Swamp All Others In Interfaculty Meet

Northwood Misses Intercollegiate Backstroke Record by Single Second; Rogers Gets 13 of School's 55 Points

U.C. IS NEAREST RIVAL

By Doug Green

S.P.S. gained what has been declared by Sports Editor Owen Prichard, who has watched Varsity sports for seven years, to be the most decisive victory within his memory when they won the Junior Interfaculty Swimming Meet held last Friday night, in the Hart House pool. School collected 55 points and all the rest of the university had only 31. U.C. was their closest competitor but even they had only 14, which is not very close. Trinity got one first for 5 points when one of their two swimmers, Cayley, placed first in the breast stroke. St. Mike's had 4, Aerial Navigation and Dents 3 each, and Vic and Emmanuel each received one point by virtue of two third places.

Johnny Northwood from S.P.S. turned in the fastest time of the meet when he won the 100 back in 1:07.6 which is one second slower than the intercollegiate record. Northwood used the underwater turn which was introduced by the Japs in the 1932 Olympics and is much faster than the conventional though easier method.

Rogers of School collected 13 points of his faculty's 55. He placed first in the diving and 300 free and came second in the 100 free. His time in the 300 free was 3:54.5 which if worked out in proportion, would be 5:43 for the 1-4 mile free style. Rogers lacked condition in this race, which was very evident in the last three lengths. With more condition and some coaching from Winst McCreath, intercollegiate mentor, he would be a very valuable man for the mythical intercollegiate squad, and would probably get down to around 5:35 for the 1-4 mile.

The 50 yds. free style was won by Moffat of S.P.S. in 26.1 with Northwood also of School coming in second. Gottlieb from the same faculty took the 100 yds. free style, with team-mate Rogers finishing second and Boville of Vic third.

Most interesting race of the evening was the 200 breast which saw each of the five competitors take the lead at one time or another, only to lose it. Cayley of Trinity sprinted hard the last lap to come in ahead of Payne of S.P.S. and Morwood of Emmanuel, who finished second and third respectively.

In a game that counted nothing in the standing of the same loop, O.C.E. B walloped Trinity C 15-1, 15-0.

Friday Recital

William Morton, tenor, gave a much better recital last Friday afternoon than the size of his audience justified. Certainly it was more than his short walk across Queen's Park deserved. He opened the program with a recitative and aria from Handel's Messiah—Comfort ye and Every Valley. These were sung not in the stodge, note-perfect manner one so often hears, but with a dramatic intensity that, while it was gripping, did not exceed the bounds of good taste. The group of Schubert songs proved to us that Mr. Morton is quite able to disregard technical difficulties (and Schubert done well is difficult) and devote his energies to a search for interpretation. I was delighted to hear much more than an attempt to discover the witty and intellectual Schubert that is so often lost in his loveliness of melody. The singer showed his attractiveness and humour in the attractive and humorous Modern English group. William Morton really merits his position as one of Canada's leading tenors.

Victoria Senior Basketball Squad Again Blast Hard-Fighting U.C. Juniors To Capture Women's Interfaculty Title

Speaking OF SPORT

By Owen Prichard

CONGRATULATIONS, VIC!

This column is generally taken up with news and views of the masculine side of the sport scene, but today we can't let slip the opportunity of giving a raw-raw Victoria to the gals who led the Scarlet and Gold to the Women's Interfaculty Basketball championship by defeating University College juniors on Wednesday and Friday nights.

More than a little colour was added to the Big Gym and the running track by the athletes and the fans, male and female, who came out to root for their respective colleges. The enthusiasm and numbers of the audience on both nights moves us to suggest that the average Varsity sports fan is just waking up to what a lively and interesting brand of basketball is served up by the interfaculty damsels. Our friend of the distaff side of this page, Marg Foulds, can now justifiably blurt out an hearty "I-told-you-so". She has been trying to drum up spectator interest all fall, and saw her efforts rewarded (albeit belatedly) in last week's tussles between Vic Seniors and U.C. Juniors. Perhaps it is not too late to hope that the student body will be treated to more of the spirited scramble-ball which we witnessed in the finals. With the hopes of a women's interfaculty women's basketball game now and then as a feature of one of our Saturday Athletic Evenings?

About the finals themselves, we are sure that not only was everyone pleased with the games, but agreeably surprised at the way the apple was passed around under the girls' rules. Still we have a sneaking suspicion that a few of the gals would have preferred the more vigorous boys' rules which some of them have played under in different leagues outside the campus.

The Red and White basketreets unfortunately got rattled in the second game as the minutes slid by with Vic still maintaining a commanding lead. Consequently the U.C. kids, though chuck-full of the old d. o. r. forgot all they had been taught about the technique of a deft passing attack. Moreover, when they did grab the ball in the vicinity of the Vic basket, they were too excited for anything better than hope-shots. But the University College gang staged a rousing battle in their efforts to keep the crown from travelling Vic-wards; both teams deserved all the cheers the gallery sent their way.

Joan Carter was a mighty mite on the losing side, along with Kay Cunningham and Zoe Christie. For the Scarlet and Gold, Beryl Pollock and Ruth Danard combined experience and skill in an impressive way with their nifty passing and accuracy in making shots.

It is rumoured that Bruce Smith and the Sportsed are to be made honorary water-boys of the Vic girls' basketball team for our brave effort in helping Doris Sargent and Winnifred Hardy to carry two plates of oranges to the players when the game was just about over.

ABOUT THE CANCELLATIONS

That was a wise move on the part of the Intramural Committee which decided that joint-championships would be declared in football and soccer for the year 1940. The cost of clearing Varsity Stadium of snow would be stupendous. What is more important, to hold the games at all after this long a lay-off would be the height of indiscretion, because in football especially the lads would not be in condition to play a final game on hard and treacherous ground. All the teams concerned and their representatives on the Committee, are unanimously in favour of the agreement reached in Friday's meeting. Full points for the T. A. Reed Trophy will be awarded evenly among the faculties concerned. That a need for the cancellation should arise is regrettable, but you can't argue with the elements.

U.C. HALTS FINAL DRIVE OF PHARMACY STICKMEN

Druggists Down Vic Friday Before Bowling in Close-Checking Collegians in Saturday Morning Fixture

Pharmacy's push down the comeback trail hit a snag Saturday morning in the form of a hard-and-close-checking University College boxla squad, who shoved the Druggists into the lacrosse limbo with a rousing 8-4 victory, to hoist themselves into the final bracket of the stick play-offs.

Pharmacy, apparently down and out over a week ago, had come back with a rush to tie Junior School and Vic for the top spot in Group I. Defeated by School last Wednesday in their first attempt to attain a berth, the College-Streeters revivied in time to down Vic Friday afternoon. They then drew a bye into the first round play-downs against U.C., but crippled badly by the absence of Boxcar Boyes and hounded off their feet by the checking Red and White, they passed out of the picture. Junior School and Vic meet today at four balls to decide Forestry's next contestant.

The U.C. boys went out onto the floor determined to cover Pharmacy's ace scorers, Grant Jeffers and Walt Lee, like a blanket. They did just that, though Lee peeked through a hole to nab three of his team's counters. Jeffers, however, a lad who is usually good for any number between five and eight, was held to a single score.

The Druggists took command in the opening frame when Lee and Jeffers whipped in a couple of quick goals. Cliff Ballagh got his first of four before the period ended. U.C. went to town in the second canto as Jack Francis, who played a consistently good game, Alcie Alcombrack, who turned in a great defensive performance, and slick forward Cliff Ballagh each bulged the twine.

That made it 4-2. Both counted once in the third period. Gibson and Ballagh put the game beyond any doubt in the last quarter while holding the Druggists to a solitary goal. McCulloch aided the Artsmen's cause not a little with a stand-out performance between the pipes.

Friday afternoon's tussle in the big gym was a rip-roaring affair that saw Pharmacy advance into the play-downs with a well-earned 7-5 victory over Vic. The Druggists exhibited a superior combination that meant the difference between win or loss. With this passing attack clicking nicely, the Red and Yellow commanded the better part of play in the first half. Jeffers and Jardine started the ball rolling with two early goals. Bud Casserly scored Vic's first-period counter with hard-hitting Glen Munro in the coop. Pharmacy again outscored the Artsmen in the second instalment, 2-1.

The same thing happened in the third stanza. Vic staged their usual last-minute rally which this time fell short. Goals by Al Farmer and Cliff Lee left the Vicmen just one down. With one minute to go wily Grant Jeffers salted the game away with a neat shot that caught the corner of the Vic cage.

Pharmacy: Harkness, Boyes, Jeffers, Lee, Jardine, Quirk, Thompson, Newman, Casselman, Hall.

Vic: Landell, Casserly, Farmer, Lee, Patrick, Fenton, Munro, Kimber, Johnson, Young.

Scarlet and Gold Make It Two Straight Paced by Accurate Shots of Beryl Pollock and Jean Crawford

LOSERS START LATE

By Connie Gray

Vic Seniors emerged victorious over the hard-fighting U.C. Junior team in a whirlwind game played in Hart House gym Friday night to capture the co-ed interfaculty basketball title. The final count stood at 22-11, making the score on the round 42-27.

After last Wednesday's close struggle the general opinion pervading the gym was that this would be either team's game; luck probably would be an important factor in deciding the outcome. But the play in the opening minutes of the Friday game dispelled most doubts and the Scarlet and Gold was given heavy odds.

During the first half Vic held a rigid defence which, combined with fast passing and sure shooting gave them the early and decisive lead of 15-3 at half time. Beryl Pollock and Jean Crawford just couldn't miss, sinking beauties from anywhere, anytime.

When the whistle blew for play at second half it was a tense U.C. team that took the floor. Their defence tightened, they watched their passes and managed to hold the Seniors while they themselves took the offensive. Things began to look brighter for U.C. and at three quarters time the Juniors' play had improved so much that Vic really got worried. U.C.'s passing not only speeded up, but clicked. Betty Mortimer got back into her old stride, sinking three baskets from remarkable angles.

In the final half U.C. scored 8 points to Vic's 7, but the damage had been done in the early play.

Fate played its part in this final game too. Vic played excellently throughout the whole game, while U.C. didn't seem to warm up quickly enough. Hard luck of the evening went to Betty Allen, who shot several nice ones that twirled around the rim of the basket, only to fall outside.

The Seniors' success can be attributed to their foolproof defense, their fast passes and good teamwork. The Juniors lacked the unity of the older and more experienced Vics.

It is difficult to choose any outstanding player for the interfaculty champs, but mention must be made of Beryl Pollock, who scored 12 points, and Jean Crawford 10. Molly Moore and Ruth Danard did excellent work on the defensive line. For the losers Betty Mortimer and Betty Allen scored 6 and 5 points respectively, while Marg. Stock starred at guard.

Vic Srs.: Beryl Pollock (12), Jean Crawford (10), Billy Steele, Jean Stirling, Ruth Thompson, Betty Jackson, Molly Moore, Ruth Danard, Phyllis Hulse.

U.C. Jrs.: Joan Carter, Betty Allen (5), Betty Mortimer (6), Jean Haydon, Marg. Ham, Zoe Christie, Marg. Stock, Kae Cunningham, M. Mollard.

AIRMEN BEAT EMMANUEL TO LEAD FIGHTING IRISH IN VOLLEYBALL GROUP

Aerial Navigation stayed out in front of the Group V volleyball scramble with a well-timed 15-6, 15-10 triumph over Emmanuel B on Friday afternoon in the little gym. The victory changed the hot breath of St. Mike's B into a mere cool breeze on the Flyers' necks, although the Irish won handily from Wycliffe, 15-9, 15-10.

First Game—
Aerial Navigation: Van Huysse, Lake, Tuchak, Buchan, Brice, Haber.

Emmanuel B: Stapleton, Carder, Young, Proctor, Jull, Crysdale, Moyer, Frid.

Second Game—
St. Mike's B: Sullivan, Kelly, Cloonan, Foley, Casey, Barrett, Coughlin, Killea.

Wycliffe: Hunt, Ball, Barnett, Latimer, Doolan, Sutherland, Knight, Smith.

U.C.: Ballagh, Francis, McNulty, Hignell, Macdiarmid, Ledingham, Alcombrack, McCulloch, Gibson, Sheppard.

By Marg. Foulds

We think we're good, you know, but we really don't think that much can be said, even by us, to add to the comments on last Friday's game as given by Connie Gray. But don't get us wrong, we did see it, and we did enjoy it. In fact, we almost fell over the rail on numerous occasions, but decided not to.

This game was a grand climax to two months of rollicking basketball, peopled with gym, roof-raising excitement, little players, big players, round players, lean players, lovely players, lousy players—but above all enthusiastic players. No matter what the grade of basketball, no matter what the score, you knew that every bit of humanity on the floor was giving her all to make her side of the score just 2 more than it stood.

We are certainly satisfied that the two best teams in the league met, tore each other to pieces and went home smiling, though toothless, one with the championship in its pocket, the other—just toothless. There couldn't be any doubt about this fact—the first part—and we are equally satisfied that the best team came out on top with the convincing score of 42-27.

To a smooth-playing, on-their-toes-in-every-department, dandy Vic team, we take out a bobby pin. They deserved every point they got, every one, and we are glad that a senior team, of which probably two-thirds have played their last game for the old college, should end up their 3, 4, 5 years of college basketball right on top. To U.C. we offer our other cheek. They are a game team of fighters and it's hard to reach the finals two years in a row and bite that same dust both times. However, there's always next year, and with this hopeful thought in mind, we say goodbye to the basketball of 1940, and tuck in our drawers for colder things to come.

same flagpole which disappeared from the campus this summer and reappeared again this fall. It was given by a trans-Canada build-up by the C.B.C. due to the statements of Lieutenant-Governor Clark demanding the return of the stick. But the flagpole has remained with the students; the wooden sticks were sold as souvenirs within the college and a considerable amount of money was realized for the Spitz-Fund.

It has now been suggested that if it is at all possible, the signatures of His Majesty The King, Winston Churchill and Lord Beaverbrook should be inscribed on a portion of the pole, and that a drawing for this priceless souvenir be held throughout the Dominion as a means of securing additional money for the university's Spitz-Fund. Plans are now under consideration for furthering what would undoubtedly be an enterprise with great possibilities.

This year the university's weekly publication "The Brunswickian" is celebrating its 60th anniversary. Founded in 1880, it appeared for years as a monthly magazine and it was only a decade ago that it began to be published in its present form. For the first time in its 60 years of publication "The Brunswickian" has a woman co-editor, . . . never before, except when the annual co-ed issue has been edited, has a woman student helped direct the path of this journal.

It is not only the male students of this university who are engaged in war training; the co-eds are also doing their share and are actively participating in many fields of endeavour. Physical training classes are held twice a week which are attended by a very great percentage of the women students; the Ladies' Society, the Leading co-ed organization on the campus, has undertaken to knit scarves, socks and mittens for the soldiers. It has also been decided that with the commencing of the next term a course of instruction in mechanics will be available for all the co-eds of the university.

Editor, The Varsity.

Dear Sir:

Now that the football season is in its closing stages, I have been asked by various men, members of our corps, to express to you our thanks for the opportunities you have afforded the soldiers to attend the games.

We hope you have enjoyed the games as much as we and send our best wishes for a Merry Christmas and a banner year in 1941.

Very truly yours, around the fire-place at the west end. On the left is a rondle for a recreation or athletic club. Above the fire-place is a lunette for a chapel, and on the right a suggested panel for a music room.

There are many sketches in charcoal and chalk whose subjects range from a meaty boar to imaginative drawings, and there are six studies of a weather-beaten man in a checkered macinaw. Three different students show a study in form of a simple chair with a cloth draped over the back and a book placed upon it.

Other displays show second year training in form and movement, with wood puppets as models.

One section of a wall is devoted to designs of sea-life, using snails and shells as models.

The First Year contribution to the exhibit is in a show case in the centre of the room and is called Elements of Form.

Another feature of the show is the fresco work which reveals various stages of fresco technique. Because the students are unfamiliar with this type of medium they have copied heads by the 15th century Renaissance artist, Botticelli, instead of creating some original subject.

LAST FALL MEETING HELD BY FORUM CLUB

The Forum Club held its last meeting of the fall term at 11 o'clock on Saturday morning. It was in Room 19, University College.

There were four prepared speeches. F. H. Connor dwelt on the economic and topographic aspects of town planning. Canada's war effort was the subject of B. M. Kassirer's address. He emphasized the importance of the individual's participation. O. A. Weir pleaded for students to take their military training, their studies, and their play more seriously in time of war.

T. R. Maxwell spoke of man's belief in progress, engendered by the growth of interest in natural science in the 17th century, and by the resulting belief in the autonomy of man's reason.

As a climax to the meetings of the fall term there will be a luncheon at 1 o'clock on Thursday, December 12. It will be in the north common room at Hart House. Dean G. S. Brett is the guest speaker.

let's go places

Director Frank Lloyd has been making historical sagas as long as most people can remember. Here he is back again with another one in "The Howards of Virginia" now playing at the Imperial Theatre.

This would probably be a good film but the trouble is that we've seen it too often. As a matter of fact Frank Lloyd has been making them too often.

It is an ambitious film which deals with the time that the "colonies" decided to break away from the mother country. Cary Grant attempts something more solid in the way of characterization and succeeds in turning in a good performance. Martha Scott plays beautifully, and Sir Cedric Hardwicke works in his usual competent manner. Considering all, the plot is neatly handled by Director Lloyd and the acting is good, but there are too many long dull stretches to sit through.

"Blondie Plays at Cupid" is a neat little quickie which serves its purpose. It makes you laugh. Arthur Lake and Penny Singleton are back again in their customary roles and manage to stumble into enough silly adventures to keep most of their public satisfied. F. S.

STRANDED MEN TO GET YULE CHEER

For many years past the Warden has arranged a Christmas Dinner for those undergraduate members of Hart House who live in countries other than Canada or in distant parts of the Dominion and are thus unable to spend any part of the Christmas vacation at home. Although Mr. Bickelsteth is absent this year, working with the Canadian forces in England, it is his desire that the dinner should be held as usual. It will therefore take place at 6:30 p.m. on Thursday, 19th December, in the Great Hall.

Every member wishing to attend the dinner must have an admission ticket which can be procured on signing his name at the Warden's office. These members are asked to do so as soon as possible so that Mr. J. R. Gilley, the Acting Warden, may know how many guests to expect. A card has been sent to all men shown in the directory as coming from distant parts of Canada or from outside the Dominion. If by any chance there are undergraduate members who have not received a card, Mr. Gilley hopes that they will take this notice as an invitation to come in and sign the list in the Warden's office as soon as possible. There will be a small gift for everyone present.

Coaching and Meets Designed to Promote Faculty Skiing Teams as Part of Winter Sport Program

ALL AMATEUR EVENTS

By Tony Kingsmill

Due to the war, there will be no intercollegiate skiing this year. However, not even Hitler can dampen the ardour of the local skiers. A vigorous interfaculty program is being planned by Mae McCutcheon with the aid of Russ Smart.

In these interfaculty ski meets no man who has skied for the intercollegiate team will be allowed to enter. Previous winners in interfaculty competition will also be excluded.

The Varsity Ski Club is planning to ask McGill's best skiers to spend a week-end with the local team at Collingwood.

The Varsity men who will be asked to compete against McGill in this tentative meet will be chosen from the best of the interfaculty teams.

The men will be picked by George Jost, last year's honorary coach of the intercollegiate team, and this year's honorary coach of the unofficial intercollegiate team.

Mr. Jost has had more experience in picking ski teams than anyone else in the country. He coached the McGill team for some six years, and skied for them as an undergraduate. He is the only Canadian who has ever won the Roberts of Kandahar race in Switzerland.

Dr. Lyons at Youth Group

Dr. Lyons continued his series of discussions on "What Christianity Is" at the meeting of the Youth Forward Movement yesterday afternoon in Emmanuel College.

This group, one of the most active on the campus, is striving to bring a more vital and real Christian life to both those within the group and outside it. It is placing special emphasis on missions.

The group has been divided into panels who will go out to various young people's organizations in the city and offer helpful guidance to them. It is their aim to bring to the members of these societies a more serious interest in Christianity, who will in turn be commissioned to help interest others outside of their own societies.

Value of Instruction Upheld As Safer for Novice Skiers

By Hugh Gallie

Some people say, "What's the use of instruction, get out on the hills with a pair of skis and try anything!" trees will soon teach you to turn." Unfortunately that method of skiing is apt to result in a few broken legs.

Up at Summit the other day a girl was seen having a good time, skiing with absolutely no control, bending from the hips and teetering like a see-saw. She had no idea what would happen to her from one minute to the next. Knowing a few fundamentals, she would have had a more enjoyable and safer afternoon.

The basis of controlled skiing is the snow-plow stem turn. Every turn of any value both in pleasure and competitive skiing starts from the stem. Even the "tempo" has its origin in the stem. When the novice has learned how to do continuous stem turns, under control,

Hart House Glee To Render Carols

For the third consecutive year the men of the Hart House Glee Club will broadcast from Great Hall over a network of the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation their program of Christmas carols. Last year the program went only to the eastern network, but present plans contemplate a coast-to-coast hook-up as in 1938. The Glee Club will go on the air on Thursday, 19th December, from 1.15 p.m. to 1.30 p.m. E.D.T., and carols, sung by the assembled audience of diners in the Great Hall, will be included in the program.

Dr. Charles Peaker, conductor of the Glee Club, has chosen a program mainly of less familiar numbers, although recent revivals are beginning to make some of them very popular.

The broadcast will open with a group of three numbers by the gleemen, "Queen Pastores" (1555), "Puer Nobis" (15th century), "All My Heart" (George Ebeling, 1637-1676). Then all will sing "Hark the Herald Angels Sing". A second group by the club will include "Come All You Worthly Gentlemen" (trad. Somerset), "In Dulce Jubilo" (14th century), and "The Boar's Head Carol" (1521, Winklin de Worde). The broadcast will fade out on the melody of "The First Noel" sung by the assembled group.

Hot Competition Expected as Fourteen Teams Organize to Enter Scheduled Interfaculty Meets Next Term

SIX-MAN TEAMS

By R. S. Smart

Concurrent with the rapid rise in popularity of skiing as a recreation during the past few years, has been the increasing enthusiasm for competitive skiing exhibited by the students at this university.

Not so long ago, all skiers were thought to be a little queer in the head, and ski racers and jumpers were regarded as harmless nuts who should be humoured rather than dealt with harshly. However, as more and more people began to try it out for themselves, they discovered the never-to-be-forgotten thrill of the swift descent, and the exhilarating rush of wind on their faces.

Skiing became a craze and the Toronto Ski Club became the biggest in the world. As time went on, a small group of the younger men became inn (Continued on Page 4)

Trinity Wing Holds A Mystery

Nobody would like to accuse the sincere Anglicans of Trinity College of putting up a false front. But that is what they literally did during the construction of the south wing nearly two decades ago when it was built. Thus it happens that there is a room in the college with three windows, and probably a fine view southward across the back campus; but nobody can get into it.

The room is situated near the southwest corner of the college, immediately above an alcove off the chancel of the chapel. From the outside, it forms a gable above the projecting alcove, and the peak of the roof runs directly back to the west tower, or dome.

The reason given for leaving the space was that it was required for the exterior symmetry of the building.

Vic. Parliament Debates on C.B.C.

With a majority of 2 votes the Victoria College Debating Parliament decided "That this house has confidence in the policy of the C.B.C." last night.

"The C.B.C.," pointed out Alex Filshie, III Classics, first speaker for the government, "by curtailing transcriptions encourages native talent." Marg Eagleton, IV Sociology, first speaker for the opposition, declared that although the C.B.C. was formed to give distinctively Canadian programs, most of our programs come from the United States. To this Claire Pratt, I Soc. and Phil. answered that the C.B.C. tries to give the people what they most desire and they as yet prefer United States music. This point was dealt with even more fully from the floor when the debates had finished.

Another controversial point was that of electronic and propaganda. Marg Eagleton accused the C.B.C. of being neither non-partisan, nor public of giving more time to the political party which happens to be stronger at the time, and with keeping the public wrought up with news bulletins on the (Continued on Page 4)

Collingwood Picked for Ski Training

Blue Mountain Slopes Give Skiing Practice on Terrain Equal to Eastern Canada's Laurentian Hills

FIRST WORK-OUT HELD

By George Jost
U. of T. Ski Coach

Last February the Varsity men's ski team won their first intercollegiate ski title at St. Sauveur, in competition with teams from McGill, Bishop's College, and University of Montreal. This was largely possible because the team did most of its skiing at Collingwood, 90 miles north of Toronto, on terrain that is just as good ski country as the average rolling Laurentian mountains north of Montreal.

A north-eastern exposure, a vertical drop of approximately 700 feet, a series of gentle, medium and steep open slopes combined with seven or eight good downhill bush trails, and assisted by two ski-tows — all this, provides on the Blue Mountain slope at Collingwood one of the best concentrations of ski country in the province of Ontario. Last Sunday on the Collingwood (Continued on page 3)

Science Skiers Guard the Course

They haven't told Hitler yet, but the U. of T. Ski Club property at Glenview is going to be policed on the weekends by some of the burlier members of the Faculty of Applied Science.

They will be armed with devil-sticks and a pocket full of badges which will be sold to all not having them, at the rate of $1.00 for grads and 25 cents for undergrads. It is hoped that a large grad section will be formed and with the aid of the trustees all interlopers will be escorted to the Holland Flats.

Members of the Newmarket and Pickering clubs must not be included in this last class, and a reciprocal agreement with these clubs is in the process of construction.

Heads of University Unit Reveal Progress made by Co-ordinate Service Group in Wide-spread Activities

HAVE LARGE ATTENDANCE

9,952 articles of clothing have been produced by the War Service Workroom this year. It was revealed yesterday at the annual meeting of the Women's War Service Committee in the Women's Union.

The Committee is made up of representatives of the faculty wives, the alumni and the undergraduates of the university, co-ordinates university work and provides facilities as well as revealing exactly the work which has been accomplished. Mrs. H. J. Cody, chairman of the committee, stated at the meeting.

Mrs. W. E. Gallie, in charge of the Workroom, placed the enrolment for sewing at 240, for knitting at 250 and average attendance at 680 per month. The workrooms are open all day five days a week. Of the 2,572 knitted articles for soldiers, almost 1000 were socks.

Among other reports presented was that of Mrs. Peter Sandiford of the Committee for Evacuation of Children. (Continued on Page 4)

Degrees to be Conferred On Visiting Ambassadors At Special Convocation

STUENTS' FARES

The Railway Companies are issuing to students of the university, and to members of the university staff, round-trip tickets for the Christmas and New Year vacation, at the rate of the current one way fare and one-quarter for the round trip.

Students wishing to take advantage of this reduction should leave their names with the Registrar of the college, or the secretary of the faculty or department concerned, on or before Monday, December 16th.

The certificates will be issued to the students at the college, faculty or department office, at 5 p.m. on Friday, December 20th.

Members of the staff may obtain certificates at the Registrar's office, Simcoe Hall.

The Marquess of Lothian will Participate with Others in Receiving Honorary LL.D. from the University

STUENTS TO ATTEND

The Most Honourable the Marquess of Lothian, British Ambassador to the United States of America, will visit the University of Toronto next Monday, December 16, when a special convocation will be held in order that the honorary degree of Doctor of Laws may be conferred upon him by Sir William Mulock, Chancellor of the University of Toronto.

Other dignitaries who will receive this degree at the same convocation are the Honourable Albert Matthews, Lieutenant-Governor of Ontario, the Honourable Jay Pierrepont Moffat, United States Minister to Canada, and Air Marshal William Avery Bishop, Chairman of the Honorary Air Advisory Committee to the Minister of National Defence.

One thousand tickets have been set aside for students who may wish to attend the ceremony; these may be obtained at the office of the Students' Administrative Council.

Zone Meeting At Hart House

An annual part of the zone organization is a meeting held by one club in each district to which other clubs are invited. The U. of T. Ski Club has been given the honour of acting as host this year to the member clubs of the Central District, and on Saturday, Dec. 14 at Hart House three delegates from each of these clubs will be entertained.

As a result it is hoped that outside meets will be arranged and that there will be a better all-round understanding of the district clubs.

MARION GALLIE

Co-president of the U. of T. Ski Club in charge of the girls' section.

Music Discussed By Band Leader

Today's dance tunes of the nation are its folk songs of tomorrow, said Ozzie address last night to Iota Alpha Pi Williams, the orchestra leader, in an address. "We are used to regarding folk songs as being of European origin," he told the group, "but all the songs coming out on this continent today are basically North American folk songs, although we don't realize it."

Mr. Williams told of the phenomenal success of "There'll Always Be An England", which has sold 225,000 copies in Canada — as large a number as any current hit song of the United States.

"The Story Behind a Song" was the subject of Mr. Williams' address and he told what happened to a song from the time it was first conceived until it was a discarded number. He placed song-writers into three categories. First the fellow who writes a song a day, then picks out the best ones and sends them along to a publisher. There's the chap who writes sporadically. First he will write day and night and then he will go near it for weeks. Last is the man who writes systematically and is a steady producer.

Work by Men in All Years Builds Co-operative Residence

By Marian Salter

For career women who want a really domestic husband, the "Campus Co-operative Residence Inc." is a happy hunting ground unparalleled. Here are forty-eight men from all faculties, living together, and "playin' house" in real earnest.

A tall Meds student, in white apron, scoured pots and pans. Two other Meds, both in white aprons, washed and dried dishes. S.P.S. put away silver and set the tables for the next meal.

The boys run their residence on the co-operative plan. Each member has one vote in the election of a five-member Board of Directors. This board appoints, with the consent of the general membership, a General Manager, a Kitchen Manager, a House Manager, an Educational Manager and a Social Manager.

A cook is the only help from outside, and she prepares dinner and supper; the boys get their own breakfasts. The care of the house is divided into a number of duties, dish-washing, sweep-

Happy Skiing, Varsity!

In the interests of skiing and its development on this campus, The Varsity is happy to dedicate this regular issue to the University of Toronto Ski Club. A hard-working group of ski devotees has done wonders to develop interest and skill in the past few years. Great strides have been made, and this year enthusiasm is running high. What is more, the work accomplished is keeping up to the enthusiasm, a fortunate condition all too rare in many endeavours. We sincerely hope that this issue, for which most of the work has been done by Ski Club members themselves, will prove an incentive for keen skiing interest throughout the university.

The U. of T. Ski Club

By Jack Fleming
President, U. of T. Ski Club

The Canadian Amateur Ski Association is the organized body of Canadian amateur skiers and its general object is to advance and supervise amateur skiing throughout Canada. Its member clubs are grouped in zones which in turn are made up of districts containing a number of clubs. Each club has a certain number of votes in the proceedings of the Association, depending on its size and status, and they are helped in their work by the excellent advice of C.A.S.A. officials.

The U. of T. Ski Club is one of eleven members of the Central District Ontario Zone, and has perhaps the most promising future of any of them. With a membership of around four thousand, made up of young people who are becoming keener on skiing every year as high school clubs expand, and having the use of an excellent property during each season, the prospects for the club's future are extremely bright. Every year improvements are made on the property by the Trails Committee, who work entirely voluntarily, and who have the important job of keeping the club on good terms with the property owners. In the past two autumns, as well as cutting a lot of good trails, the jump was enlarged, the clubhouse painted and a map made of the terrain; in the not too distant future, it is hoped a ski-tow may be running at Edwards Hill. As a result of these changes many outdies have been using the trails, and as this is felt to be undesirable, the executive is considering policing the property. Members are urged to carry the club badge which may be had at the Athletic Office, Hart House, and at the general meetings.

Each year the problem of handing on the work of the executive must be decided. The process of electing the next year's officers takes place at the last meeting in the spring. To avoid any suggestion of unfairness, it is hoped that a good turn-out will be there, in order that the good work done in the past years may be carried on. As a footnote it may be said that the handling of any ski club in the world is an education in itself.

Annual Carnegie Report

The somewhat astonishing opinion of a prominent American educationalist, to the effect that there are far too many colleges and universities in the United States, was expressed recently in New York. In his annual report as president of the Carnegie Corporation of New York, Dr. Frederick P. Keppel said that there were in the United States far too many universities, colleges, and voluntary organizations for worthy purposes. He predicted that many of them would disappear in the years to come, for the practical reason that the country cannot afford them.

Evidently it is Dr. Keppel's idea that many such institutions should be grouped together to reduce the expense, since it is scarcely likely that he is suggesting that less higher education should be available. Speaking of educational funds, Dr. Keppel said "It is within the realm of possibility that the combination of calls upon the public funds, which the national defense program has enormously increased, and upon private funds for relief overseas, might together operate to reduce the funds available for educational and scholarly purposes, but there is as yet no indication that this will happen. In any case, there is every reason to welcome the growing evidence of what may be called a conservation movement in cultural philanthropy. This is shown in the co-operative grouping of hitherto competing institutions."

The Carnegie Corporation is a well known institution which was established by Andrew Carnegie in 1911 "for the advancement and diffusion of knowledge and understanding among the people of the United States and the British Dominions and Colonies." In September, 1940, it made grants in British dominions and colonies totalling $13,437,446. The grants were distributed for libraries and allied activities, adult education, the arts, research, studies and publications, and general educational purposes.

The report stated that operations under the British Dominions and Colonies fund of the corporation had been greatly curtailed by the war.

Another interesting section of Dr. Keppel's report was the discussion of research, which he called a cruelly overloaded word as it is used today. "Certain grants for research," he said, "have proved, though not always immediately, to be the best of all possible investments for a foundation to make; on the other hand, a research grant may prove to be an almost perfect device for wasting money."

Discussing what he termed the excess of colleges and universities and voluntary organizations for worthy purposes, Dr. Keppel voiced the opinion that in the years to come many of these would disappear, and thus one of the most difficult duties that face the foundation is that of so directing its grants that its influence will be directed toward survival of the fittest.

"These various problems have forced themselves upon our attention," he said, "during times which, by comparison at least, are normal. The inescapable fact that we are today in a tragically disordered world is in itself a further challenge to the foundation to justify its place as a social instrument enjoying exemption from taxation and other privileges."

"In the face of falling income and increasing calls from every source, will foundations be able to find the things to do upon which their particular assets can be brought to bear most effectively? While they have their limitations, their natural advantages are many. They can move quickly."

"They can continue their support past the stage of novelty and public appeal. They can act with the long view in sight rather than under the pressure of the moment. They can call upon competent and disinterested advice. They can recognize and encourage excellence and the promise of influence and leadership in the individual, the group or the institution."

"They can find situations which it is to the general interest, but, alas, nobody's particular business, to clarify by research and experimental demonstrations. It need scarcely be added that no foundation has ever availed itself of these natural advantages to the full."

"It is hard at any time for a foundation to keep its head amidst exigent and conflicting calls. It is doubly so in times of national tension and excitement. But on the whole, and all things considered, the writer is confident that the American Foundation as an institution will meet the double challenge of a critical present and an unpredictable future."

To the many who have benefited from grants from the Carnegie Corporation, Dr. Keppel's expressed desire that it "justify its place as a social instrument" must seem a needless one.

Brock Pemberton presented Gladys George in Lady in Waiting at the Royal Alexandra Theatre last night. Gladys George was very very good. Lady in Waiting was pleasantly mediocre.

AT THE SIGN OF THE TELEMARK

"Come, let us ski," I said one morning to my little sister, Ambidextrous. So gaily we donned our skis and set out on the crisp cold pathless wastes. For years I have been an enthusiastic skier, and little Ambidextrous also slings a solid ski pole and slithers a stupendous slalom.

Off we went, strewing Christiana bends and herring bones in our wake, and leaving a slender but unmistakable streak in the unsullied snow.

"Whee!" exclaimed little Ambidextrous, executing a neat telemark combined with a half-gaiter.

"What ho," I replied, jumping a small hillock with a series of flying mares. And so the hours passed, as we sported about the Great White Unknown, the brisk wind lending unwonted colour to our usually pallid faces.

"Let's play tag," the little girl suddenly exclaimed.

"Not it!" I cried, beating her to the draw by a good three seconds, and immediately I was off, weaving delicate figure-eights through the trees. Not far behind me I could see Ambidextrous in hot pursuit, her little red ski cap waving in the breeze. Doubling on my trail, I darted past her, derisively brushing a cloud of powdered snow into her chubby little face.

Then I darted at express-train speed through six successive subdivisions and hid successfully in the San Joaquin Valley where I picked oranges until the end of the season.

But poor little Ambidextrous has not been heard of since. I guess she was unable to catch me.

No, she has not been heard of since. . . . But, sometimes, on a cold and wintry day, her ghostly little voice is heard sighing in the wind. And sometimes on a hot summery day, her fluted falsetto cry of "Telemark!" arrests some golfer in the midst of his backswing and causes him to hook mightily into the tall grass.

Ski-ing is SUCH fun!

reviewer with their sparkling originality. But Gladys George carries this ordinary little play to heights of comedy which it scarcely deserves.

Lady in Waiting, hadn't we thought the theme is, does not lack amusing punch lines, which are put across with racy accuracy by a fine supporting cast.

Alan Napier, who receives second billing, has little to do, but does it with complete adequacy, and with a smoothly ingratiating delivery. Lenore Chippendale is a conventionally amusing grandmother, and Carol Curtis-Brown in the ingenue role improves from a very stilted opening scene to an altogether convincing crying jag at the curtain.

Leonard Penn is sufficiently dashing in the part of the acrobat who sues enthusiastically for the hand of Miss George. Richard Fraser is not overly impressive as the juvenile.

But it is to Gladys George that all the orchids go. She romps through the tailor-built part of the would-be lady superbly, getting full value out of Margery Sharp's witty but sometimes overly broad-minded lines. Not that the reviewer has any objection to a little good clean filth, but he felt that at times the playwright was deliberately injecting ultra-purple remarks into the play in an attempt to keep her audience pleasurably shocked.

As we have said, the vehicle is just fair; Gladys George is little short of terrific. If you like broad comedy, smacking faintly of sophisticated corn, and played by an outstanding comedienne who appears to be having a most enjoyable evening herself, we strongly advise you to see Lady in Waiting.

What we want to know is, what's to do with this snow?

Ski meetings have been in progress during this last month; fans have been hopping into animal coats and angora mitts; eds have been adding bright new scarves to their lush outfits, but the snow is still — just there.

Varsity Stadium is getting itself into a state of skating, and we are hoping that interfacery hockey will be launched come January 6th, on the dot. In the past few years, figure-skating has risen to popularity among graceful-minded co-eds, and hours have been set aside at the stadium for free participation in this erstwhile scantily-known sport.

We are hoping to see this pastime gain ever-increasing prominence in the athletic activities of the co-eds, and are even pondering staggering about ourselves on the pickled — not pickled — blades, just to prove our point. We don't suggest that this should supplant the position of hockey in the sport schedule, but wonder if, since there is no intercollegiate basketball this year, and hence a number of people may be wondering just how to keep the scales on the right side of 200 during the long winter months, maybe this mightn't be a kind-of-a-sort-of-an-idea. We say, play hockey if you can, but figure-skating is a little bit of alright too.

But what we really are advocating is more inter-facery snowball fights. We love to watch 'em!

P.S. We'll refrain from the I-told-you-sos suggested by Owen Prichard — but we'll think it!

Varsity Co-ed Ski Enthusiasts Will be Given Greater Scope

By Joan Carter

In the last few years, there has been a growing interest shown in the girls' side of the ski club. This year, when so many of the men are busy with military training, increased opportunities will be provided in the girls' skiing realm, both for the beginner and the advanced.

There will be plans made in the future for instruction on Saturday afternoons at Rosedale by Hugh Gallie or Marion Gallie, girls' president. It is possible that George Jost, well known for his skiing ability, may be secured to instruct the more advanced girls.

Last year several Sunday excursions to Collingwood were held and proved a great success. The skiing there has possibilities unsurpassed anywhere in Ontario. It is expected that these will slopes, the early Varsity ski-birds had a pretty rugged work-out. It was the start of what promises to be one of the best skiing winters we have had in this district since this sport has been taken up in more than a disinterested manner. All Varsity men who want to learn to ski or to try for a representative position on the Varsity ski team are urged to come to Collingwood on Sundays for the remainder of the ski season, and see and learn for themselves.

Those members of last year's ski team who competed and won at St. Sauveur last February, know their local hills to be as good as most of the Quebec ones, so that they are looking forward to the day when Varsity can invite the McGill University ski team to compete with them on their home ground at Collingwood. Also the Varsity Ski Club is looking forward to the day when they will have their own ski cabin at Collingwood, the location already picked out, at the foot of a beautiful open ski slope, beside a crystal clear mountain stream, and sheltered from the raw, north wind sweeping in from the blue-green open waters of Georgian Bay.

The snow is there, the enthusiasm is there, we want you there to enjoy the ski-country, and new training ground of the men's Varsity ski team.

Frequent Penalties Mark Lacrosse Battle as the Engineers' Attack Gets Winning Results in Third Quarter

LEECH NETS TWO

Sr. S.P.S. earned the right to proceed into the semi-finals of the lacrosse playoffs by beating their traditional enemies, Meds, 7-4 in a boxla feature yesterday afternoon in Hart House.

The game was a ding-dong battle for the first half. Goals by Gilbert and Leech made the score 1-1 at the quarter. Gilbert came through again early in the second stanza, but Lampert tied it two seconds later. The School attack began to click in the third period after a goal by Leech put the Meds ahead momentarily. Gilbert, Quist and Reeves all reached pay dirt for the Schoolmen while Quist and Starr put them out of danger in the final quarter.

Ken Gilbert, a substitute forward, led the Schoolmen and was the only engineer to score in the first half. Manager Jack Quist got two more for the Toile Oikers. Leech, with a pair of tallies, was the pick of the Surgeons, while Mighton played a fine defensive game.

The game was fast and rough in the final half. The rivals did not hesitate to hand outshouder and hips, which resulted in frequent penalties and ragged lacrosse.

Sr. S.P.S.: Newman, Reeves, Bryce, Moorhead, Gilbert, Starr, Quist, Radmore, Lamke.
Meds: Carter, Leech, Gulley, Lampert, Barrotes, Mighton, Mewhort, Quinlan, Aitken.

Sr. Vic's great volleyball outfit rode to a triumphant victory over a three-man U.C. team, sweeping to a straight game win by scores of 15-13, 15-3.

The three Red and White men offered superb volleyball in the opening contest, and made Victoria scrap tooth and nail to win by two points. The losers tried visibly however, and the Scarlet and Gold needed little effort to trounce them in the second game.

Axon held the U.C. fort, while Hunter and Fletcher helped immeasurably.

STUDENT SKIERS GAMBOL ON COLLINGWOOD'S BLUE MOUNTAIN

By John Ellis

Tired? Nervous? Depressed? Do you have a friend with a car? Then the smartest thing you can do is to talk him into driving you and some skis to Collingwood. It is 90 odd miles but it's well worth the trip.

When God said "Let there be Light" He also thought it would be a good idea to pile seventeen Hamilton mountains one on top of the other and revolve them about an axis perpendicular to the horizontal plane until we had a slope which was oh so steep. And today we have the beautiful Blue Mountain of Collingwood to play on. When these snowflakes fall from leaden skies, Collingwood undoubtedly is the place to be.

Not enough people know about Collingwood. This was realized last weekend by some of the boys who found very few U. of T. skiers playing on the white stuff. Perhaps they did not know that the Blue Mountain Ski Club charges Toronto ski club members not 50 cents, not one dollar, but merely gives them a friendly welcoming nod. Perhaps they did not know that when there is little snow elsewhere the roads around Collingwood would be blocked were it not for Mitch's hefty plough. And this brings up another point. The roads into Collingwood are always open. Says T. Snyder Thrognerton who gets up there almost every week-end, "I have yet to see the day when I can't drive through to Collingwood" and T. Snyder has an amazing reputation for integrity.

Two towns will soon be in operation at Collingwood. One, which has been used for some years by those wise, wise people who know their Collingwood, consists of red sleighs drawn upwards by Buick-inspired cables. Another will be running in a few weeks time, opening the door to new terrain and easy altitude.

Among the ski centres within a 100 mile radius of Toronto Collingwood stands out like a brilliant diamond in a sea of fungoid growths. On to Collingwood.

Speaking OF SPORT

By Stan Westcott

There was once an old bird, Precipitation, Whose glance froze the heart of the nation. He stymied School's aims For Mulock Cup gains By flinging snow all over the lot and so the Athletic Directorate had to split the kitty between School and the Engineers.

THE SONG OF THE SKI

Although the Mulock Cup and the Arts Faculty Cup boys are weeping woe-fully into their desks these days because of the capricious inconsistency of the wayward elements, there are many men about our native campus who are equally elated over the early tumbling of the snowflakes. These gentlemen's main motive in life is to have the opportunity of cavorting blithely over the frosted earth on their tapered hickory.

The popularity of skiing is growing rapidly in U. of T. and the fellows behind it are anxious to raise the standards so that Varsity will be able to crash the elite society of the International Ski Union headed by the dowagers McGill and Dartmouth. These two colleges have been keen and bitter rivals in ski competition which has been very prominent in Quebec and the New England states.

Last year Varsity met McGill's second team, Bishop College, and Montreal University, at St. Sauveur, a hundred miles north of McGill, in the rolling Laurentians, and scampered back to Toronto with seven of the eight first and second places. By this effort the conquering Blue and White hoped to show the "big time" that they were worthy of stiffer opposition.

Recently the local executive sent an invitation to McGill asking them to visit Toronto with their eight-man first team, and participate in an unofficial week-end meet which would be carried out on intercollegiate lines. If the Quebec boys are able to make the trip to this city, the jump event would probably take place on the Thorncliffe jump, and the remaining events would be dashed off at Collingwood. As yet no answering note has been received.

The campus skiers also hope to take part in the Ontario competition at Peterboro. If they go to this meet it will be only as a group, and not as the official representatives of the University of Toronto.

None of the men who made the victorious trip to St. Sauveur last winter have left university, while several very promising frosh have turned out, and are making the old timers slide ambitiously to hold their spots. Russ Smart of third year S.P.S. heads the list of veteran greats and is improving even over his superlative form of last winter when he won three firsts and a second in the four events at McGill. Hugh Gallie made the trip last year, and, as he is in his second year in Meds, should be around for five more winters (at least?) to assist the Blue and White in their search for glory. Jack Ames, Tony Kingsmill, and "Dooley" Murphy are the other gentlemen who frolicked in the Laurentian snowdrifts twelve months ago, but they are all in their obituary season at Varsity, and will unfortunately have to be replaced another year. Kingsmill at least is doing his best for the ski club by bringing brother Bill to college. "Bill," says Tony modestly, "always could beat me." John Ellis and Don Beattie are other newcomers who are showing great prowess in the club's week-end practices at Collingwood. Beattie is one of the most promising juniors in Ontario, while Kingsmill and Ellis excel in cross country racing.

A great deal of the credit for Varsity's amazing success at St. Sauveur a year ago must be given to Coach George Jost. That was his first season as coach at Toronto. Before he came here, he coached McGill skiers for six years, and was president of the Redbird Ski Club in Montreal. Jost is recognized as one of the best exponents of the cold-weather pastime in Canada and has done a great deal to increase its popularity here.

This year, for the first time, organized interfacery ski meets will be sponsored, and T. A. Reed Trophy points are to be awarded in the manner of other intramural sports. The set-up, as it appears now, will include three groups, each of which will hold two meets, probably at Aurora. The first and second teams in each group, as decided by the inter-group clashes, are to compete in the finals for the intramural ski championship, to be held, if possible, on the excellent trails of Collingwood.

In the intramural tilts the five men of last year's intercollegiate outfit are to be excluded, and also the winners of each event in last winter's open interfacery meet. A rumour is sitting around the campus to the effect that a new cup will be donated to the intramural champion, but this has not been confirmed.

NOTE—There will be a meeting of the interfacery ski executive in the Athletic Office of Hart House at 5 o'clock Thursday afternoon. Every faculty should make sure that their representative is present.

GUFF

Besides being exotically lovely, and, as they used to say in Paris, petite, Kay Cunningham is also an extremely effective basketball guard; a point which she demonstrated most effectively in U.C.'s two games with Vic last week. . . . Jean Crawford and Beryl Pollock showed exceptional skill in basket-potting in the same series as they sank 40 of Vic's winning 42 points, splitting the total evenly between them. . . . Speaking of scoring sprees, Bud Casserly, also of Vic, had one all to himself yesterday afternoon as he counted 5 of the Scarlet and Gold's 7 lacrosse goals to dunk Jr. School into the playoff ashcan. . . . Emmanuel's volleyball quintet came from behind a 14-10 final game eight ball to take 6 points in a row and drop Jr. School in three games.

Playing with four men apiece, Trinity C edged Dents C in a close volleyball tilt in Hart House upper gym yesterday afternoon by scores of 15-12, 11-15, 15-11.

With a little luck Dents might have turned the tables on the winners, the margin between them was so narrow. But Trinity appeared to have a slight edge on the play and deserved their victory.

Dent C: Beatty, Goldberg, Carroll, Trinity C: Williams, Calhoun, Cozier, Downey.

Victoria Take Boxla Tilt From Jr. S.P.S.

Third Period Scoring Splurge Brings 7-6 Victory as Casserly Nets Four Goals for the Winners

ENTER SEMI-FINALS

Jr. S.P.S. bowed out of the play-downs for the Dr. W. A. Dafeo Cup and interfacery lacrosse championship by going down to a close 7-6 defeat before a fighting Vic squad in the big gym yesterday.

Both teams played a close-checking defensive game in the first half but the Engineers were on top 3-2 at half-time by virtue of two second period goals by Lewarne, after goals by Munro and Kelly had left the teams tied at the end of the first quarter. Bud Casserly went on a scoring spree in the third chucker, hanging through the School defence for four goals. Two scores by Kellam kept the Toile Oikes in the running although they were down 6-5. Each squad got a single score in the final stanza to leave Vic on top 7-6.

School drove hard throughout the last quarter but were unable to catch the elusive Scarlet and Gold. Gus Landell starred in the nets for the winners, while Bud Casserly with five goals was Vic's big scoring threat. Lewarne and Kellam were the pick of the Engineers with two goals apiece. Munro and Currie were the bad boys of the game, each serving four minutes in the penalty box.

The win sends Vic into the semi-finals tomorrow against Forestry while the Schoolmen put away their sticks for the year.

Jr. S.P.S.: Wien, Kent, Kelly, Capper, Currie, Lewarne, Prentice, Gorman, Rankin, Kellam.

Vic: Casserly, Munro, Landell, Lee, Farmer, Kimber, Patrick, Young, Pen-ton, Rice, Johnston.

U.C. Squad Hold Cage Practices

University College is looking forward to a most successful basketball season, one that will in some measure atone for the unexpected collapse of the Red and White football machine. With this end in mind Manager Mel Kates sent his proteges through a stiff initial workout on Friday afternoon.

Confronted with plenty of valuable material, Kates will have a difficult task cutting his big Red team down to the required player limit. He is confident, however, of fielding an exceptionally strong squad. "I feel that the title will rest within the portals of U.C. when the day of reckoning is over." So prophesied Mr. Kates.

Headed by Alce Alcombre, Mac McKinley, Cuddy Faber and Sol Feigman, all prominent members of the grid machine, U.C. could very well fulfil Kates' hopes with an even share of breaks. George Beattie, Bill Dewar, Buck Zierler, Cliff Ballagh, and Lorne Clayton add much experience to the quintet while Don Nicols, Mitchell and Simpson appear to be the pick of the rookies.

SPORT SCHEDULES

An error was listed in yesterday's Varsity regarding the lacrosse play-offs.

On Wednesday at 4:10 U.C. will play the winner of the Forestry vs Victoria game, not the winner of the Sr. S.P.S. vs Meds game as stated. The winner of the latter match will draw a bye into the finals.

who reported that over 150 children had been placed by the group since evacuation started. She described how they had begun by contacting Cambridge, Manchester and Birmingham Universities, planning to take charge of the children of faculties of these colleges. The work involved the arrangement of reception committees and funding of finances.

Mrs. Edmund Boyd, giving the financial report of this committee, pointed out that it cost $200 a month to maintain the children and mothers. To date the balance is -6,000 although she pointed out the necessary qualification of this statement. It was also stated that the committee worked in this field in close co-operation with the alumni.

Mrs. Davidson and Mrs. Aldhouse reported for the Speakers Committee. At the meeting reports were given as well from the other groups engaged in war service work.

SKIING EVENTS CENTRE ON CAMPUS

that when the war is over, Varsity will be in a position to enter the Inter-collegiate Ski Union with a strong team.

Skating circles in Toronto are of the opinion that the Varsity skiers could give a good account to themselves in competition against the American and Canadian colleges that have been making names for themselves as competitive skiers for several years.

INTRAMURAL SPORTS TO INCLUDE SKIING

terested in racing. This competitive urge was very catching, and the small group grew until it embraced a large percentage of the men in the club and some of the women as well. At the present time nearly every person who skis holds the idea that as soon as he (or she) is proficient enough he would like to enter a ski race.

Last year, the number of men interested in racing in the university warranted the inclusion of the sport in the intramural set up. T. A. Reed trophy points were awarded to the winners of a full dress interfaculty ski meet.

This year, indications show that an even greater number of skiers are present at Varsity, and an entirely new system has been designed to sponsor competition. The sport has been accepted on an equal basis with all the others in the interfaculty scheme, and the various faculties are producing teams to vie with one another in several meets which are to be run next term.

The reception of this idea has been very encouraging and it looks as if there will be some very hot competition. At the present time fourteen or fifteen teams are organizing themselves to take part in this series, representing in all eight or nine faculties.

Various details remain to be worked out, but in the main, the organization will be as follows:

The athletic directorates of the individual faculties will enter, and manage their six-man teams as in any other intramural sport.

The teams will be divided up into groups of four or more teams each.

Each group will have two meets, and the two teams emerging with the highest standing from each group will take part in a final, or playoff meet.

The meets will comprise four events: slalom, downhill, jumping, and cross country, and will be conducted according to standard C.A.S.A. regulations.

Members of last year's intercollegiate team, or men who won their event in the interfaculty meet last year will be barred from competing in the event which they entered last year.

T. A. Reed trophy points will be awarded according to the system which prevails in the university at the present time.

The inauguration of this series of meets constitutes a milestone in the development of the sport here at Varsity, a milestone along the road to a higher standard of skiers and skiing. Where the road leads to, only the seer can foretell.

Nevertheless the writer can visualize a hill in Vermont, blanketed with snow which sparkles in the sunshine. Down the hill are streaking a sextet of skiers clad in Varsity blue.

war, Claire Pratt declared that it is not the C.B.C.'s policy to waste time on political differences and it is not necessary to listen to news bulletins, and that we have commentators and Canadian programs such as "Let's face the facts".

Further points for the opposition were that the C.B.C. was under inefficient and questionable management, there had been ill-starred attempts to educate the people; that the C.B.C. suppressed free speech; and that it showed complete failure of imagination in dealing with the presentation of the news.

The speakers for the government and their supporters on the floor urged, however, that the C.B.C. was doing its job firmly and steadily; that the organization is a unifying force, in that it speaks French as well as English and reaches inaccessible parts.

let's go places

She's double feature this week is a balanced mixture of sweet and hot. The sweetness is dished up by Gloria Jean in "A Little Bit of Heaven", and the warmth emanates from the droves of lovelies who amble about in "A Night at Earl Carroll's".

SHEA'S "A Little Bit of Heaven" DOUBLE is quite enough for this mortal's endurance. Gloria Jean is cast as the singing prodigy of a weird Irish family which includes Hugh Herbert and thirteen uncles whose occupations range from lion-taming to deep-sea diver and back. Following the inevitable discovery of her vocal talent, Gloria Jean travels the usual gamut of triumphs and vicissitudes, contracts and crochety producers, until she arrives in time's well-known nick at Carnegie Hall for the BIG CONCERT. Gloria Jean's singing is lovely, and her acting is well above the usual juvenile standard. She's definitely a pleasing youngster with a gift for putting across even the corny songs given her in this film.

More could have been made of "A Night at Earl Carroll's" in the way of plot, but as a super floor-show depicting all the feminine glamour and clever routines for which the famous producer's offerings are noted, this effort rings the bell. The action is staged with Carroll's Hollywood night-club, complete with revolving stage and decorative damsels. Comedian Ken Murray is hardly terrific as the male lead, the laughs being stolen by Brenda and Cobina, the gruesome twosome of radio fame.—O.P.

Vic. S.P.S. and Trinity Meetings to Hear Dr. Hugh Macmillan, Visiting S.C.M. National Secretary

FULL PROGRAM

S.C.M. "National Week" goes into full swing today when Rev. Hugh Macmillan, General Secretary of the National S.C.M. addresses three meetings to be held on the campus during the afternoon and evening.

At 1.30 p.m. the visiting student leader will meet the Trinity men's study group to discuss the possibility of peace after this war. At six o'clock in Hart House an S.C.M. supper party for S. P.S. and Dentistry men will hear Mr. Macmillan, who recently returned from Formosa, speak on "The Headhunters of Formosa". Following this he will be present at an open meeting of the Vic S.C.M. to be held in Alumnae Hall at 8 o'clock. A forum dealing with the work and history of the S.C.M. will be led by Mr. Macmillan, followed by refreshments and a square dance.

The Trinity group is to relate the discussion to their regular study topic, "The War—and Afterwards." Mr. Macmillan will talk about the part the S.C.M. has to play in creating the possibility of a sane peace.

Although the S.P.S. group of the S.C.M. has sponsored the Hart House supper meeting especially for School and Dents men, others are invited. After assembling in the east common room at six o'clock the group will have dinner in the Great Hall. Following the dinner Mr. Macmillan will recount some of his personal experiences with the aborigines, and then enlarge the topic by dealing with Christianity among the young people of the island. To enliven the event the traditional costumes of Formosa's three national stocks, the Japanese, Chinese and Malays, will be displayed.

The Vic meeting is to be opened by a short period of worship and carol singing. Prof. Robins of Victoria College will entertain the party with one of his Christmas stories. For the open forum it is hoped that the students will come with criticisms, and suggestions as to how the S.C.M. work can be improved. To mark the special occasion of "National Week" the Vic S.C.M. monthly meeting is to be open to people from the whole university.

bread and butter let", and the boys are allowed to raid the ice-box, providing they write opposite their names, on an adjoining list, the food they have taken.

"For psychological reasons," Bruce Newman, the manager said, "the snack bill is presented monthly." These bills vary from the $3.09 of the member from B.C. to the Meaford man's $08, but the bills average about $1.75 per month.

The co-operative medical service is an addition to the residence even more recent than the new house at 186 St. George Street. $3 per year is collected from each member, and up to $15 is paid on medical attention for each member who requires it. Excess is returned at the end of the year. The Co-op hopes that in a couple of years this medical insurance will cover the campus as it has the province of Saskatchewan.

"Up to 50 men," the General Manager says, "can live together comfortably. Next year we hope to increase by half our membership, or perhaps even double it."

The addition of Kagawa House this year, to the five year old institution, marks the beginning of the expansion of the Campus Co-op in this university. It started in a house donated by Victoria College in 1936.

The house is governed by the boys and supervised by the don, Mr. G. D. MacCullagh, and his wife.

I.S.S. To Begin Campaign To Aid Promising Students Of Europe and China

Studies to be Continued by Men in Internment Camps in Many Countries Due to Efforts of I.S.S.

R. G. RIDDELL, CHAIRMAN

Starting at the end of January or the beginning of February, it was disclosed by the International Student Service yesterday, a campaign will be begun, the proceeds of which will go to help European and Chinese students of promise whose studies have been disrupted by war.

The campaign will probably be started by the Students' Administrative Council or the Student Christian Movement calling together committees of representatives from all student organizations which are eager to co-operate. Professor R. G. Riddell of the University of Toronto is chairman of the I.S.S. committee which supervises the collecting and transmitting of the money to an international committee for administering it.

From British, French, and Polish men who have been interned in Switzerland have come over a thousand requests for study material. Four hundred interned students have been segregated in a separate camp to form a university of their own and are taught by a number of professors permitted by the Swiss Government to do so.

REV. ROBERT MACKIE

Who speaks at the final S.C.M. Noon Hour talk at Hart House today, Mr. Mackie will also address the S.C.M. Refugee Tea this afternoon. The speaker is General Secretary of the World Student Christian Federation.

Effect of Budget At U. of T. Slight Say Professors

The general consensus of opinion in faculty circles would seem to indicate that the new budget will have no appreciable effect on the university as regards obtaining laboratory supplies.

"I don't think that the budget will have any effect on this faculty," stated C. H. Mitchell, Dean of the Faculty of Applied Science and Engineering. Dean Mitchell said that the only article required by the department which might be affected is glass. However, he expressed his belief that there would be no difficulty in obtaining it from British countries. Prof. J. W. Bain, of the Department of Chemical Engineering, shares the Dean's opinion.

Dr. J. B. Brodie, head of the Department of Household Science, doesn't expect that it will affect her department to any extent. She said that a scarcity of citrus peels has been predicted but she is sure that substitutes will readily be found to take the place of any restricted commodities.

Dr. Brodie added that the greatest difficulty encountered by the Department of Household Science since the beginning of the war is that of obtaining articles, such as granite ware, ordinarily manufactured in Europe.

Czechs Hang Up Stockings For Santa on December Sixth

Christmas begins early in Czechoslovakia. The Varsity learned on Friday, as three Czech students — Trude Janowski, and Reta and Ena Petschek gathered to describe their Yule festivities. The sixth of December, it was learned, is the Day of Santa Claus, when the children hang up their stockings on the window to be filled with candies, fruit, and nuts. On that day they are told that if they are not good, the devil will come and get them. Usually, the children are permitted to give a party for their youthful friends, at which some grown-up dresses as Santa Claus and dispenses good things with lavish hand.

"At about this time," Trude told us, "all the small children write a letter to the little Jesus, or 'Christkind', and put it in the window-frame, believing that an angel comes down to fetch it."

The twenty-fourth of December is, however, the real day of celebration. On that day the "festive board" groans with the traditional goose, and the "striztel", which is the very important Christmas cake. This has the appearance of a long braided loaf, with a brown crust; inside, however, the cake is white, and weighted generously with raisins.

The Christmas Eve is very important, indeed, chiefly because the children are allowed to stay up an hour longer. Then it is that the "Christkind" as they are told, brings down to them the Christmas tree, "which is quite essential," along with the presents which the children's letters have previously requested. The youthful members of the family are banished from the room while the parents set up the tree, and adorn it with real candles, candies and other ornaments. Reta stressed the candles particularly, and deplored the decadent custom of using electric lights. On Trude's own Christmas tree "all the decorations were white, candles and ornaments and everything."

Many families also make a crèche under the tree, with little figures to represent Mary, Joseph, the three kings, a cow and a donkey. The children believe that these, too, are arranged by the "Christkind." A little bell is rung when all is prepared, and as the impatient youngsters enter, the family sings a carol. The celebration concludes with the traditional Christmas Eve midnight mass.

Christmas Day itself is usually spent "relaxing." Often a Christmas luncheon is held, to which intimate friends are invited, but all the actual excitement that the gifts and feasting hold for the children, is over.

Both Christmas and New Year's greetings cards are exchanged — and the festive season concludes with the Feast of the Three Kings on January seventh, when the tree is taken down.

Dentistry Professor To Contest Mayoralty At Municipal Elections

HON. ALBERT MATTHEWS

Who will receive an Honorary LL.D. degree at a special convocation Monday.

Favours Establishment of a Naval Training Centre in Toronto as an Aid in Solving War Problems

AUTHORITY ON HEALTH

A member of the University of Toronto staff Dr. Fred J. Conboy, Professor in Dental Praxis, will contest the mayoralty seat of the city of Toronto at the municipal elections January 1, it was learned yesterday. He is believed to be the first U. of T. professor ever to run for the post.

Associated with the Dentistry staff since 1917, Dr. Conboy has been a member of the City Council for the past six years, the first two as Alderman and the last four as Controller, and is now serving his second term as Vice-Chairman of the board. He graduated from the Royal College of Dental Surgeons in 1904.

A past president of the Ontario Dental Association and of the Canadian Dental Association, he is now secretary of the Ontario body and editor of its journal, Dr. Conboy is also a fellow of the International College of Dentists and a professor of the Canadian College of Optometry. For a number of years he has been Director of Dental Services for the Province of Ontario.

The Varsity professor also has a deep interest in education and social work, and is a past president of the Community Welfare Council and for many years superintendent of Westmontland Church School.

Considered an authority on health matters and municipal government, Controller Conboy is favouring the establishment of a naval training centre in Toronto as an aid in solving war problems; an increased annual appropriation for the Toronto Industrial Commission to enable that organization to bring foreign business to the city in post war years, and a regional market, provided with proper sales, storage and refrigeration facilities.

CHRISTMAS EMPLOYMENT

Men and women students from the following cities and towns who will be going home for Christmas and who would be interested in two days' employment between Christmas and New Year's, please call TODAY at the Students' Administrative Council office in Hart House.

Fort William
Kirkland Lake
Sudbury Timmins
Woodstock

There are also opportunities for students who will be in Toronto.

With Floor Show And Xmas Spirit U.C. Ball to Occur

Tonight is the night of the long-awaited University College Arts Ball. Tonight students of the Royal College will celebrate the approach of Christmas and surcease from academic worries by treading a stately measure in Simpson's Arcadian Court to the music of Richard Avonde and his orchestra.

Feature of the evening will be the professional floor-show, starring Jack Lemen, ballroom dancer. Other top-liners will be the U.C. Trio, Mary White, Jean Stobie and Enid Gallic, featured in the recent Follies production, who will present their specialty, "We Are Three Freshies from Old U.C."

The Arts Ball will be the first of this year's big campus dances to observe the new unofficial ban on corsages. In some cases the girls are sharing the cost of the evening with their escorts, in order that Leap Year be ushered out in a seemly manner.

Co-eds have been working feverishly during the last few days to decorate the Arcadian Court with Christmas colours of red, white, and green. Holly boughs and sprigs of mistletoe, indispensable to the finer type of Christmas celebration, will grace the Court.

Richard Avonde's orchestra will feature special arrangements of Varsity and U.C. songs, C. L. Dubin, Literary Director of the U.C. Literary and Athletic Society told The Varsity yesterday. Songs from the recent Follies will also be featured.

Tickets are still available today, he added, and may be obtained at the door.

From Magic to Science Geophysics has Emerged

Physical Properties, Electrical and Magnetic, Elastic and Gravitational, Facilitate Tracing of Formations

ELABORATE APPARATUS

In the mind of the public, the term geophysics is connected with special methods of prospecting for minerals. In this sense geophysics has emerged from the realm of the magic and now occupies a fixed position in practical applied science. Many physical properties of different kinds of rocks and geological formations enable the operator to follow formations, even at great depth. These physical properties are quite varied: electrical and magnetic, elastic and gravitational. Many elaborate forms of apparatus have been perfected for this work, and new methods are being developed daily.

However, the study of geophysics in its broader aspect goes far beyond this. It includes for example the study of the earth's structure, the distribution of land and water, meteorology, volcanology, and seismology, the study of earthquakes. It has practical applications of importance in fields other than prospecting. The preliminary study of sites for dams, foundations of structures, and subterranean construction is carried out by these geophysical methods.

The recent gift of the Viking Foundation is, we hope, an initial donation leading to the organization in the University of Toronto of an institute devoted entirely to development in the field of geophysics. There is probably no country in the world where geophysics has a greater future. In mining prospecting alone, there seem to be almost endless possibilities. The geophysicist follows the trail of the geologist and fills out details hidden from the surface view.

The first work in the University of Toronto was undertaken by Professor Lachlan Gilchrist, who has carried out many important investigations, and his work has been supplemented by a few of the younger men. The striking work carried out recently by a geophysical party under Professor Arthur Brant on the ice over Steep Rock Lake has struck the popular imagination.

For the last two years due to the co-operation of Mr. Hans Lundberg research work has been proceeding on determinations of the age of rocks by measurements of their radioactivity and there is promise of new methods of prospecting developing from this radioactive work.

STUDENTS' FARES

The Railway Companies are issuing to students of the university, and to members of the university staff, round-trip tickets for the Christmas and New Year vacation, at the rate of the current one way fare and one-quarter for the round trip.

Students wishing to take advantage of this reduction should leave their names with the Registrar of the college, or the secretary of the faculty or department concerned, on or before Monday, December 16th.

The certificates will be issued to the students at the college, faculty or department office, at 5 p.m. on Friday, December 20th.

Members of the staff may obtain certificates at the Registrar's office, Simcoe Hall.

WAYS AND MEANS OUT OF ICY MISERY SUGGESTED

The icy condition of Toronto streets which has been causing much misery to students and citizens alike, can be alleviated in various ways, the commonest being the sanding of the streets, Prof. Lorrman of the Chemistry Department, explained when questioned by The Varsity yesterday.

"But the only really adequate cures lie in the use of calcium chloride or sodium chloride (common salt). The calcium works on the simple chemical principle that when a substance is dissolved in a liquid, the resulting liquid freezes at a lower temperature than the first," the professor explained. "Common salt works in the same way and the resulting chemical solution is the slush that is almost as unpopular as the original ice."

Cleveland and other cities in the United States have been using this method for some time, but in Canada it has not been so popular, Lorrman revealed. In Montreal the snow is allowed to pack down and, with the addition of a surface of sand, is left that way all winter. There has been no attempt there to try the newer method.

The Toronto Street Commission recently experimented with calcium chloride on a downtown street, but found that while the chemical was completely successful in reducing a six-inch layer of ice to slush inside of an hour, the cost of using it was almost prohibitive as it worked out to $259 a mile.

"Various merchants and private householders," continued Prof. Lorrman, "have used chemicals on the parts of the street directly in front of their homes and places of business, but neither in charge of Toronto streets nor of the university thoroughfares have used anything but sand to solve the ice problem. This state of affairs is quite acceptable to most people," he remarked, "always provided they do use sand."

There are several drawbacks to the use of calcium chloride beside its high cost. On the sidewalks it is often impossible for the resulting slush to reach the gutters owing to obstructing snowbanks, and the sidewalks are turned into miniature lakes. On the roads the mixture of calcium chloride and melted snow causes havoc to cars by rusting the under sides of fenders and other parts that the slush reaches. Car owners' complaints are an important reason why the chemical is not more widely used.

Gala Turnout at Xmas Party Expected by Modern History Club

Tuesday, December 17th, is the date. It is that evening, at 7.45 to be exact, and at Cartwright Hall to be even more precise, that the First Christmas Party of the Modern History Club takes the spotlight. Then the men and girls of History, not to mention the professors, step out in unaccustomed frivolity.

Highlight of the evening is to be the stage performance by the staff of the history department, but no one — no, not the members, not the executive, not what it's going to be all about. From beneath the pall of secrecy have leaked out odd rumours (which the faculty hastens to deny) of toe dances by a well-known Canadian socialist, romantic songs by a statesman on the staff and recitations of Christmas nursery rhymes by a medievalist of great repute. Then there is no undue curiosity on the identity of Santa Claus. But nothing is known, nothing will be known until Tuesday, December 17th.

Paling into insignificance beside the faculty venture are the riotous skits of the undergrads. The men give an inside glimpse into the life among some of the professors of Baldwin House in a sketch, "The Danger of Being Frank . . ."

"The first meetings and activities this season have shown that the Modern History Club this year is a different organization. The Christmas party is to be the height of its achievement," promised Social Director Bob Phillips. "Our membership now is double that of any previous year in the history of the club, our average attendance at meetings is four times that of other years and the enthusiasm is immeasurably greater. The Christmas party is a manifestation of the expansion of the organization by which it has become THE club of the campus. Or am I sticking my neck out?"

The party is primarily for members of the History Club, but a few are being reserved for those who can only wish they were in Modern History. "To avoid a reputation of keeping all the good things in life for ourselves, we're letting some others in to enjoy the evening of their lives at a foolishly small cost," explained the social director.

Speaking OF SPORT

By George Forster

A real hearty clap on the back goes to the Fighting Foresters for the get-up-and-go-and-never-say-die spirit they showed yesterday afternoon. They were outscored and outplayed by Vic in a very, very dull game but still showed the fire and fight which should be the ideal of every man in any sport.

Grant Puttock and "Moose" Eccles of the Woodmen come in for special mention. Puttock played the whole game and scored both his team's goals, while many would-be scoring threats broke across Eccles' broad back.

Cliff Lee and Al Farmer were tops for a Vic crew forced to play without two regulars. The Scarlet and Gold coasted most of the way in an attempt to save themselves for the all-important U.C. game Thursday.

The only bright spots in the game would occur when Eccles would bounce some unwary Victorian and he really bounced them. Gus Landell contributed to the afternoon's entertainment by whistling in the Vic net as the ball came at him.

Vic now meets U.C. in the semi-finals, and the winner plays Sr. School in the finals for the Dr. W. A. Dafeo Cup, emblematic of interfaculty lacrosse championship. We hesitate before even attempting to pick the winner because it might very easily be called a toss-up.

However, we will stick our neck out and string along with U.C. They have a habit of close checking, which many teams have discovered to their sorrow. This, coupled with McCulloch in the nets and Alcie Alcombrack on defense gives them almost water-tight protection. Scoring punch is very ably supplied by Francis and Ballagh.

It is doubtful if Vic will be able to stop this powerful squad when they meet on Thursday. Glen Munro, star defenseman of the Scarlet and Gold, sprained his ankle against Jr. School Monday and will probably be unable to dress for the conflict. Without Munro the Vic quintet will be seriously weakened, and, by all rules of the game should lose.

Sr. School is still to be reckoned with, and cannot be brushed aside lightly. In Quist, Gilbert, and Starr they have plenty of scoring oomph, but somehow we don't think they can take the boys from the Royal College.

However, such seemingly trivial things as penalties and injuries can make a great deal of difference and lacrosse games are never over until the final whistle, especially when they are between such evenly matched teams as Vic, U.C., and Sr. S.P.S. But no matter which way you look at it there is plenty of good lacrosse ahead; so hold your hats and may the best team win.

IT SHOULDN'T HAPPEN TO A DOG

A fine thing! No sooner do we get used to being philosophical about the fact that the Mulock and Arts Faculty Cup Finals have been definitely and irrevocably cancelled, than Ol' Man Weather decides that it's going to thaw. A peek over the red brick wall of the Bloom Bowl taken today revealed a gridiron completely free of snow and ice. Less than a week after the cancellation!

We saw a sight, however, that dispelled the bitter memories of what might have been from our heart. Work has commenced on the Stadium rink and if Ol' Man Weather decides to have a freeze-up (he probably won't now that we want him to) it will only be a matter of days before all you lads and lassies will be gliding merrily around the ice.

SPORT SPLASHES

By Doug Green

Sr. S.P.S. defeated Vic 17-16 in yesterday's meet to qualify for the play-offs, which begin on Thurs. Vic, however, were without the services of Morrison, their best swimmer, who is sick. S.P.S. now meet Sr. U.C., winners of group I on Thurs. in the semi-finals.

School won the medley and also the next two events, the 50 back and 50 free. Bill Staples took the former and John Girvan, former intercollegiate record holder, won the latter, although Nixon of Vic, who placed second, pressed him closely. Byron Boville captured Vic's first place, by coming home away out in front in the 50 free and the relay foursome from the United Church college won the final relay. The score of 17-16 would have been reversed in favour of Vic had not Boville, who finished third in the 50 breast, been disqualified for touching with one hand. That precious point was given to School and so they won the meet.

Another meet of equal importance from Trinity's viewpoint, took place when S.P.S. III's defeated St. Mike's 19-14, to capture first place honours in group 3, which has been the most closely contested of the four groups. Had St. Mike's won, Trinity, St. Mike's and S.P.S. III's would all have been tied for first spot. S.P.S. III's now meet Jr. S.P.S., winner of group two in the finals on Thursday.

Crane took the 50 back for St. Mike's and Flaherty the 50 free and their relay squad won the final relay. Although S.P.S. took only two firsts when they won the medley, and when Bo splashed through to win the 50 breast, they gathered in enough seconds and thirds to come out on top 19-14.

Aerial Navigation made a clean sweep of group 4 when they won their sixth straight meet. This time it was poor old Wycliffe, who got only 3 points leaving Aerial Navigation with 30. The latter team will be strong contenders in the play-offs and are now strengthened by the presence of Jim Brown, former intercollegiate star, who has been unable to turn out in the past.

Frank Sloan performed as usual and won the 50 back and 50 breast. Green-slade took the 50 free and both relay teams finished a length or two in front of the Theologs. It will be a different story when Aerial Navigation come against some real competition in the play-offs. They meet the winner of Jr. S.P.S. and S.P.S. III's on Friday.

Youth Hostels Plan Ski Trip

The Canadian Youth Hostels announce a ski trip to the Collingwood Youth Hostel in the heart of the Blue Mountains from Dec. 26th to January 1st. Accommodation which is limited, will be simple, either at Craigleith Station or at the hostel proper, a nearby farmhouse. Both places are within a short mile of the Collingwood Ski Club and the start of the tow. The station is fitted up as ski hut, with sleeping arrangements on the dormitory plan.

Rubber Boots and Snow Boots Vie for Popularity on Campus

By Adelaide Leitch

Co-ed winter footwear is becoming glamourized. Influenced, doubtless, by the excessive shyness and hence non-cold-resisting qualities of nylon stockings, the trend is towards higher and warmer styles.

Few are the co-eds who trip daintily about the campus these days in high-heeled slippers. They prefer suov boots, whose popularity is speedily growing and which may be had in white or beige, round or square-toed styles, all lined with the cosiest fleece. The girls are unanimous in their approval, and so far none have complained, literally or figuratively, of "cold feet." A few have experimented by using them for ski boots, but report that the leather is too soft.

Rubber boots warmly lined for the winter, vie for popularity with the snow boots, and at least exceed them in variety. There are rubber boots which come barely above the ankles, others which

By Marg. Foulds

Now that we have the ski situation tucked away, let's tackle a little indoor subject.

Badminton has been going on during the last few weeks, as we advertised some time ago, but nevertheless, numerous innocent co-eds have embarrassed us by asking all sorts of details about it, complaining that nothing has been in The Varsity about it at all. On checking up, we observe indifferently that we ourselves have mentioned all details on two occasions, and further reports have been found under "Sport Notices" in two other issues. Well, if "Sport Notices" can take it, so can we. You simply don't read our worthy column, that's all. Well, hurt as we remain we cordly offer to repeat the following information.

Anyone bird-minded may play badminton on Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays from 1-4 p.m., and Thursdays from 1-5, from now right on through the Christmas holidays and into next term at St. Paul's Church, at the corner of Bloor and Church, on condition that you fork over the simple sum of $1.00 to your college representative to fix you up for the season. And to really corner you, we list the names of college representatives for your confusion. Jean Sterling, Vic; Betty Kirby, St. Mike's; Adine Seagram, Trinity; Jean Wallace, U.C.; Betty Clarke, Occ. and Physiotherapy, and Lauris Patten, Meds. These ladies will also provide you with keys to the locker rooms down there, so it's rather vital to contact one of them before going down, unless you know someone in your college is down there to do their deed, when you are planning on arriving.

For those in doubt, you bring your own playmates too. Now carry on, my friends.

U.C. IN LINE FOR PLAY-OFF AFTER VICTORY OVER KNOX

The Knox C volleyballers provided easy pickings for University College out-spilled and out-served by the classic IV yesterday, as the Presbyterians were Red and White sextet, the Artsmen emerging victors through straight wins of 15-6 and 15-7.

Their win of yesterday puts U.C. in a nice position for a play-off spot. The next game between U.C. and Trinity B will decide the group leadership. U.C. IV: Gibson, McNulty, Ballagh, Clayton, Alcombrack, Feigman.

Knox C: Sindair, Gillies, Barr, Jack, Self, Tucker, Swallow.

Food will be plentiful and well-cooked though, of necessity, simple.

Application forms for this trip are to be obtained from any of three sources, the Athletic Office in Hart House, the Women's Athletic Office, or from the hall porter at Trinity.

According to Amy Britton, a graduate of last year and organizer of the trip, it should be a successful venture—and if the snow thaws on the mountain the would-be skiers can swim in Georgian Bay.

Vic Win Easy Victory; Triumph with Score 7-2

Yesterday's Victoria Over Forestry Lacrosse Team Another Step in Direction of Dafeo Cup

U.C. NEXT OPPONENTS

Vic's boxla artists took another step in the direction of the Dafeo Cup yesterday afternoon as they walked over an inexperienced Forestry quintet, 7-2. The Scarlet and Gold now square off with U.C., winners of Group I, who knocked out Pharmacy Saturday, tomorrow to determine a finalist for Sr. School in next Monday's and Wednesday's playdowns.

Minus the services of hand-hitting Glen Munro and high-scoring forward Bud Casserley, Vic threw most of their second-string men into the fray. The rookies, bolstered by veterans Cliff Lee and Al Farmer managed to handle everything that Forestry had to offer with the exception of Grant Puttock. The Woodmen's great standby notched both his team's goals, but muffed numerous tries. Outside of his speedy length dashes, Cliff Lee's wicked shot that accounted for four Vic goals, and the clever ragging play of Farmer when his team was short-handed, the game was a ragged, scramble-ball affair that disappointed a half-packed gallery.

Farmer, Kimber and Lee hung up three tallies in the opening frame before the Treemen made a bid. Bud Casserley was whacked across the face in the first minute of play and was forced out of the fray. Glen Munro, who was limping badly in Monday's tilt with Junior School, did not turn out yesterday.

Vic's Munro Johnston countered Grant Puttock's second period goal to leave the score 4-1 at the half-way mark. Lee received a crushing body check from big Bill Eccles, left the game, but came back to score thrice more.

Puttock nailed the twine again in the third stanza after a mad race the length of the boards. Lee came right back to discount Puttock's effort, and in the final quarter whipped in two screaming drives, one with goalie Gus Landell in the coop and the other on a perfect pass from Patrick.

Vic: Landell, Patrick, Young, Fenton, Kimber, Farmer, Lee, Rice, Johnston, Casserley.

Forestry: Puttock, Bentley, Gray, Eccles, Larson, Day, Ballantyne, Hope, Monahan, McBride.

TRINITY WINS AGAIN AS SHE DOWNS U.C.

The Trinity A volleyball sextet wound up its regular season undefeated yesterday afternoon as they handed a 15-1, 16-14 loss to a struggling Junior U.C. team. Not a single team threatened the Anglicans' intentions on the Group I championship, and yesterday's game was a mere formality as the Red and Black had decided the issue better than a week ago.

It was all Tseng and Cowan again as the indomitable Trinity spiking duo turned in their usual scintillating performance. Mac McKinley made a vain effort in the second instalment to pull his team out of the doldrums and succeeded only in extending the Anglicans into taking a close 16-14 decision.

Jr. U.C.: McMeley, Vesa, Cameron, Berg, Stokola, Mieczko, Brannen.

Trinity A: Cowan, Riley, Tseng, Delaney, Wagland, Rooke, Thorpe.

War Gives Birth To Social Work

"Born at the outbreak of one war, it is with a feeling of patriotic duty that the Department of Social Science is celebrating its anniversary in the shadow of another. More than ever it realizes that it should play its part in the strengthening and enriching of community life through the service its graduates will give," declared Miss Agnes C. McGregor, Acting Director of the Department of Social Science, speaking to The Varsity.

Since 1914, well over 600 graduates have left the department to occupy prominent positions in public and private social work in all parts of the Dominion, and now with an international emergency on hand, more are rushing to fill the breach. A number have found service in direct war work: Tom Morrison is doing personnel work with the Defence of Canada Industries; Donald Love, now with the Citizens Committee of Toronto, is doing vocational work with men discharged from the army; Miss Helen Kirkwood, recently with la Societe d'Amis in Paris, assisted in getting war guest children to Canada.

But it may also be realized that war brings new tensions to family life. These may be due to separations, emotional distress, or new problems of child guidance and protection, Miss McGregor explained. And here is another breach which Social Science graduates are helping to fill by taking their places in the agencies which give service in such fields.

Perhaps the most important service social workers can give is to carry on the work which it has been developing in the last twenty-five years of social planning for the community, and is now more difficult than ever.

When the department was established there were comparatively few social agencies. When the last war was declared, social workers realized that in view of the pyramiding costs, they might have to face reductions in the support of social services, but also recognized that the services were of tremendous importance. The fact that the family welfare services and services for the children are much more strongly established than in 1914 makes it possible to give services which strengthen and hold home morale, and also to give service to some of those still idle in Canada despite the increase in demand for workers.

Canada's Department of Social Science was the Canadian pioneer in its field and is now one of three such departments in the Dominion. At present there are 93 students enrolled representing the whole of Canada. The number of men in the course is gradually increasing with the opening of new social science fields for them, and now one-third registered are men.

Miss McGregor, the enthusiastic head of the department, is herself one of its graduates, having enrolled in it during its second year.

WIDE-EYED IN GOTHAM

By Reuven Frank

(A Canadian National Press Feature)

NEW YORK: The man said to me, "Yes, we did have a white Christmas about three years ago — or was it five years ago?" It is like the inhabitants of the Nile delta trying to recall the last time it rained. It blows and freezes out here, but the snow is afraid of the big city, and when it comes down, relaxes into a grey-brown slush. And small wonder, for the efficiency of the street-cleaners and snow-sweepers is amazing. As soon as the snow hits the street it is bundled off or even blasted off by a heavy charge of water. So they shall be waiting for it with baskets.

Everyone knew Christmas was somewhere in the offing when Macy's held their super-trendy Santa Claus Parade on Thanksgiving Day. (We celebrate Roosevelt Thanksgiving in New York, but Connecticut and Massachusetts stick to the old one, thus greatly inconveniencing those who live in Connecticut and Massachusetts and commute to New York every day.) And speaking of Thanksgiving, which we observed on November 21, a wise guy approached me and said, "Is Thanksgiving in Canada today or next week?" "Oh, we had ours several weeks ago."

"You mean there are three Thanksgivings?"

I left him still gibbering.

But back to Macy's parade. I really think that the ridiculous emphasis on mere bulk would have been less marked if Gimbals had not erected a sixty-foot Christmas tree. Then, of course, Macy's just had to beat their bitter rivals with a sixty-five foot Uncle Sam and a seventy-five foot Superman, not to mention assorted monstrosities of a lesser dimension. I refer to the huge balloons, spaced through the parade, towed by frantic men trying to keep them from rising and floating away forever, and attended by advisory experts in Goodrich Rubber Co. overalls who just came along for the fun of it. Superman, the biggest balloon ever, looked a trifle sick, and some helium escaped from his solar-plexus, thus strengthening the impression.

Santa Claus, or rather his balloonized representation, indicated a lamentable trend that is found in this country. The jolly fat guy with the nose like a cherry, has disappeared, and in his place we have a little skinny runt with big feet, a scraggly Uncle Sam beard and a long red nose that is more like Pinocchio's. Highly lamentable, I should think — probably sabotage. But these half-pint St. Nicks are all over the place, advertising beer, canvassing for good, bad and indifferent causes, and generally adding to the confusion of downtown New York during the Christmas rush.

The very season has become streamlined. The wandering minstrels they are, swinging the carols, and, although most of the stores retain the gentlemen in red habit and beard, one has installed Superman, and it is to him that the young confide their secret wishes about what they would like to find in their stockings on the morning of December twenty-fifth. And the North Polar gentlemen have been affected by this modernism, too, for they talk through microphones, kiss the sales girls and tell the kids to scam.

The stores are packed fuller than a subway train at five-forty-five. The million and a half who watched the Thanksgiving Day parade down Broadway are hermits compared to those who shop. And the stores have opened their warehouses and trotted out all the wares and relics that could never be sold in normal times, so that Ma can get something cheap for Pa's Aunt Matilda. (Aunt Matilda bought the same thing for Ma, so that we reach a state of equilibrium.)

What do the kiddies read? Well, Treasure Island is selling very poorly this year, according to reliable advice, as are the works of Captain Marryat and Horatio Alger. The big boom is in comics, so called. Ace Comics and King Comics are near the top, although Superman has them all beat. Fantastic Comics and Ghost Comics are doing well, as are Mystery Comics, Blood Comics, and Adventure Comics. That is part of the same trend that is exemplified by the fact that adults are flocking to see Walt Disney's Fantasia, but Boris Karloff's The Ape is the show for the children.

The taste in toys runs to lethal weapons and hideous masks. The parents continue to buy electric trains, however, so that they (the parents) will have something to play with. As for Father Christmas, "That bun's a fake," one urchin told me, and seeing his multiple manifestation, I have little reason to doubt the statement. But then, again, I'm sophisticated. . .

The advance sale on Christmas cheer seems to be going very well. A taxi pulled up to the corner of Broadway and Forty-Four the other day, and out stepped a happy gentleman who would rather drink the stuff than carry it around. The meter read ninety cents, but he didn't pay immediately.

"Have you courage?" he asked the driver.

The driver thought that this was another way to get out of paying, and merely clenched his fists and said, "Hus?"

"Are you brave?" the questioner continued.

The driver took a step forward and said, "Yeah, I'm brave."

"I'm glad that you are brave," said the pickled one, "for only the brave deserve the fair." And with that he handed him a dollar and strode off as steadily as he could.

Accommodation Ability Of Canada's Areas Discussed by Dr. Taylor

Slides of Pictures and Maps Used by Head of Geography Department to Illustrate His Remarks

DISCUSSION FOLLOWED

Canada's vast areas with their sparse populations could easily within the next two hundred years accommodate 40 or 50 millions of people, was the opinion forwarded by Professor B. E. Griffith Taylor in addressing the Sociology Club last night.

Dr. Taylor, who is head of the Department of Geography, spoke in Cartwright Hall of Saint Hilda's College on "The Population Problems of Canada." Following the address proper, the speaker's remarks were discussed by the meeting, which was under the chairmanship of Roland Hill, president of the Sociology Club. Among those who participated in the discussion were Professor A. F. Coventry of the Biology Department, Professor C. W. M. Hart of the Sociology Department, and Doctor Innis, head of the Department of Political Economy.

Illustrating his remarks with slides showing pictures and maps of the places under discussion, Dr. Taylor showed how various areas of Canada could receive increases in population by comparing the sections with geographically similar areas in Europe. For instance, he pointed out, a province such as British Columbia has geographical conditions which may be termed analogous to Norway, so as in Norway the land of British Columbia could stand a population as high as three million people. Similar analogies were drawn between the Maritimes and Sweden, which has six million people, and between the Ontario Clay Belt and Finland, where three million people have been able to turn the land to an arability adequate for their needs.

"The future of Canada is wrapped up in the Western Provinces," declared Professor Taylor. The average annual rainfall, which has been computed as somewhere between thirteen and fourteen inches, is sufficient for the growth of wheat, for which there is the greatest economic demand. Since Southern Alberta also contains the third largest coal deposit in the world, the next two centuries should see a substantial growth in the population of the West, predicted Doctor Taylor. Basing his predictions on a comparison of the importance to Europe of the coal-fields of Germany and Poland, the speaker foresaw great possibilities for the Western Provinces, declaring that Alberta's coal deposits had not yet started to bear their full significance.

Explaining how population movements follow the lines of impulse set by natural controls, Professor Taylor showed the meeting how a wedge of populated country just north from Edmonton and through Athabasca, Mackenzie River Valley. The summer isotherm of this area, which is about 56 degrees, is the same as the average temperature of well-populated sections of Siberia. There is no reason, said Dr. Taylor, why Canada can not put three millions of inhabitants in her own Northwest, and achieve there a population of 64 people per square mile instead of the present two persons per square mile.

NEW MICROFILM NOW PRESERVES PRINTED MATTER

Experts estimate that it is now possible to keep exact copies of all types of documents and publications for several hundred years, by the application of microphotography.

The idea was originated by M. Dagron, during the siege of Paris in the Franco-Prussian War. At this time, much of the wartime communication was carried on by means of carrier pigeons. M. Dagron perfected a method of reducing by microphotography, sixteen folio pages on a small film strip, measuring 3 x 5 centimetres, which could easily be tied to the pigeon's leg.

Microfilm has only been in use in libraries during the past three or four years. The librarian in charge of this department of the Toronto Public Library stated that to her knowledge, it is the only public library in Canada to own a microfilm camera. However, it has been used extensively by American libraries.

Microphotography is of particular use in the preservation of publications of ephemeral nature, such as newspapers. It is widely used as a substitute for inter-library loans. It is much safer and more convenient to send a roll of film than the book itself, especially in the case of very valuable books.

W. S. Wallace, librarian of the university library, is of the opinion that microphotography hasn't a particularly bright future, due to technical difficulties encountered in the use of it. However, he appreciates its value as a convenient means of keeping and transporting valuable literary material. The university owns a microfilm projector and is gradually gathering a library of microfilms.

STUDENTS' SOCIETIES

All student societies are requested to send representatives to the organizational meeting of the International Student Service Campaign in the Women's Union at 4.30 p.m., Friday, December 13th. Robert Mackie, Vice-Chairman of the International I.S.S. Committee, will explain the aims of the campaign on the campus, which will be carried on again as it was last year.

TO DANCE TO HOOEY AT ST. MIKE'S COLLEGE BALL

The date has been set, the committee picked and all is in readiness for the third annual St. Michael's College Ball, which is to be held on January 24th at Hart House.

The 1941 committee is headed by Tom McDermott, who is assisted by Ed Crawford, Larry O'Brien, Tom Murphy, Leo Mahoney, Len Tierney, George Denison and John Casey.

The boys of the Double Blue will dance to the rhythm of George Hooey's orchestra. Hooey is well known in university social circles and has had many engagements on the campus.

This, the third annual dance, is expected to draw graduates from many parts of the province and a good many from the United States.

TEUTONIC CLUB PLAY IS CHRISTMAS FEATURE

In keeping with the New Year's rather than the Christmas spirit, a comedy entitled "Der Nachste Morgen", or, the Morning After, will be presented by the U. of T. Teutonic Club, December 12 in Cartwright Hall.

Professor Bosenstein, well known to club members for his last year's representation of "Vater Nicholas", is directing the play, and has promised, in addition, a special Christmas feature.

The audience will be able to do its part in the singing of German Lieder and Christmas carols, as well as in the usual dancing. Viennese waltzes, which are to be a regular feature of the meetings this year will be interspersed with current tunes.

Red Rooster Required For San Toy Production

Property Man Douglas Stewart Starled by Demands of Musical Director Thomas J. Crawford

KANG ALSO NEEDED

The loud crow of a rooster now would probably add a few more years to the already aging features of Property Man Douglas Stewart of the Victoria College Music Club. Doug has had a lot of headaches lately in his search for properties for the Music Club's January production of the operetta "San Toy," but the latest one has him reeling.

Like a bolt, as Doug put it, out of the ultramarine, Musical Director Thomas J. Crawford turned to him the other day and demanded that he get a rooster — a big, red, crowing, live rooster. The rooster is one of the many props required for Li, played by Jack Watson, who is full time secretary to the Mandarin of Pynka Pong, and part time kleptomaniac. Li has a knack for lifting things, including alarm clocks, knives, busts of sculpture, etc., and roosters, and all these articles have to be obtained so that his appetite for thieving can be satisfied. But where to get a decent rooster and what to do with it once it has been got has the bewildered Stewart practically out of his mind.

Another article on the list of props is a kang — an ancient Chinese type of stocks in which Li's arms and head are locked after he has been caught for his misdeeds. The prisoner can walk around while wearing the kang because his feet are left free, but it hinders considerably his ability as a kleptomaniac. The kang, according to latest reports, is still under construction and, when finished, will probably be the only thing of its kind in the country.

Sixteen wooden words have had to be hewn for the Emperor's Amazon Guard to carry. The Guard's "16-Lovely-Ladies-16" were picked for the Emperor's protection, but they apparently have not been tutored under the latest military systems, for they still form rows besides carrying swords. Their job is to see that "no vision of beauty can lure him (the Emperor) from duty when they have him under their eye."

Two mock pedestals, hollow on the inside, in which two of the cast have to hide, are also under construction for the show. A genuine Chinese umbrella, drums, gongs, tea wagons, lanterns and

"moon cakes" are other props that Stewart has been ordered to get for the show. The "moon cakes" are supposed to be passed around by the chorus during the opening number of the show, but nobody seems to know what they are exactly. There's a strong suspicion that the commodity which finally reaches the Hart House stage will closely resemble bran muffins.

FELLOWSHIP OFFERED FOR YEAR'S RESEARCH

The American Association of University Women is offering a fellowship of the value of $1,500 to enable the holder to carry on a year's research in some country other than her own during the academic year 1941-42, it has been announced.

The award, which will be announced about April 1, 1941, will be tenable at any approved university or institution in a country other than that in which the Fellow has received her previous education or habitually resides.

The fellowship is open to all members of Associations or Federations of University Women forming branches of the International Federation.

Further information concerning the fellowship has been posted on various bulletin boards on the campus.

whose work has been interrupted varies slightly in different countries. In Germany a paid member of the staff of the International Student Service is allowed to visit the imprisonment camps throughout the country. In Canada our Government has given permission to two secretaries of the Y.M.C.A. to travel abroad and discover the needs of men in prison and internment camps.

This afternoon at Wynnwood Rev. Robert Mackie, vice-chairman of an international committee of the I.S.S. and General Secretary of the World S.C.A.F. Federation, will discuss the situation of students throughout the world who have been prevented from continuing their studies on account of the war.

Lothian to be Honoured At Special Convocation

REFUGEE COMMITTEE HOLDS BENEFIT TEA

Refugees Attending University of Toronto Assemble and Meet Rev. Mackie at Wymilwood

SPEAKER PRAISES REFUGEES

"A refugee is someone who can no longer live and study in his own country," said Rev. Robert Mackie, Vice-Chairman of the International Students' Service and General Secretary of the World Students' Christian Federation, who spoke at a Refugee Tea at Wymilwood yesterday.

The meeting was sponsored by the S.C.M. Refugee Committee and was a refugee student at the university.

held for the benefit of a German refugee student at the university.

The purpose of the tea was to bring together all refugee students on the campus and to introduce Mr. Mackie to them.

Mr. Mackie pointed out the difficult position of refugees who have to be dependent on the good will of a country, uncertain of where they stand and of what their future will be.

Refugees are people of a great deal of character, the speaker claimed, because they will not let themselves be submerged. They are refugees simply because they belong to the wrong race, or because of having opinions that don't agree with those prevalent in the countries they have left.

XMAS PARTY TO AID VIC INJURED PLAYERS

Yuletide Entertainment Planned by Members of Rugby Team;
Victoria Students to Go
"Dutch"

$60 ALREADY DONATED

The Victoria College Athletic Union will hold an Injured Players' Fund dance on Wednesday night in Burwash Hall, Bill Wilson, president of the V.C.A.U., announced last night.

Students of Vic will go "dutch," and if the sale of tickets is sufficient Alumni Hall will also be pressed into use. Howard Cabel's band will supply the music.

Members of the Vic rugby team are planning special entertainment. Jim Carson, gargantuan inside, will enact Saint Nick at the All-Vic Christmas party.

Two prominent Torontonians have already contributed $60 to the Fund, and it was on their suggestion of increasing the Fund that the party is being held.

Spaniards Celebrate Two Holidays During the Christmas Season

"Christmas night, in Spain, is the noisiest night in the year," reminisced Trude Janowski recently, in describing Christmas as she knew it when she lived in that country a few years ago.

"All the Spaniards go out into the street, with pot-lids, and shout and sing to express their joy at the Nativity.

"The children have a very large creche, with as many sheep as there are youngsters in the house. This is set out about a fortnight before Christmas. Every day that the child is good he can advance his sheep further toward the stable where the Child lies." A complete set has about 75 persons,

Lieut. Gov. Matthews and U.S. Minister to Canada among Those on Whom Degrees will be Conferred

STUDENTS CAN ATTEND

Arrangements are nearing completion for the special convocation Monday at which figures of national and international importance will receive honorary degrees in Convocation Hall, it was learned last night.

Headlining the historic ceremony is one of the world's most important diplomats, Lord Lothian, British Ambassador to the United States, who will make one of the principal speeches to the staff and student body. J. Pierpont Moffatt, career diplomat whose appointment as United States Minister to Canada early last summer was hailed as significant of the importance President Roosevelt placed in "the Ottawa post," will deliver the other.

University authorities yesterday said Lord Lothian planned to arrive in Ottawa Saturday before coming to Toronto and attached importance to the fact that he will confer with the United States Minister there before the two men make their Convocation Hall addresses.

Also receiving honorary degrees of Doctor of Laws will be Air Marshal W. A. Bishop, Chairman of the Honorary Air Advisory Committee to the Minister of National Defence for Air, and the Hon. Albert Matthews, Ontario Lieutenant-Governor.

Brett to Address Forum Luncheon

Celebrating the close of its fall term activities, the Forum Club will hold its annual Christmas Luncheon Tuesday in the North Common Room of Hart House, officials of the club announced yesterday. Dean Brett, Head of the School of Graduate Studies and of the Philosophy Department, will address the members on "French in Post Graduate Education in the United States."

The weekly Saturday morning sessions of the club will resume in January.

News Broadcasting

DISCLOSED AT DEBATE

On Jan. 1, 1941, the C.B.C. will initiate a new news policy, it was disclosed at the Vic debate on Monday night. This policy is to re-write the news exclusively for the air and will require a special kind of journalistic writing, a more friendly and conversational style.

In the debate "Resolved: That this house has confidence in the policy of the C.B.C." the question of news was brought up and Claire Pratt, I Soc. and Phil, second speaker for the government, informed the audience that any dullness they might at present complain of in C.B.C. news would be eliminated by the new policy. This later led to a discussion which showed that many students have erroneous ideas and others (Continued on Page 4)

CONVOCAION TICKETS

Tickets admitting students to the Convocation to be held on Monday, December 16 at 3.15 p.m. in Convocation Hall, may now be obtained by undergraduates of the university at the S.A.C. Office in Hart House and Room 82, University College. Because of the unprecedented demand for seats, all tickets not taken by Saturday, December 14, must be returned to the Registrar's office. Students are therefore advised to secure their tickets immediately. At this time Honorary Degrees will be conferred upon His Excellency, the British Ambassador to the United States, His Excellency, the United States Minister to Canada, Honorable J. Pierpont Moffatt, the Honorable Albert Matthews, Lieut.-Governor of Ontario, and Air-Marshal W. A. Bishop, V.C., each of whom will address convocation.

Peggy Evoy Plays the Lead In Victoria Production

Singer Has the Part of "San Toy" in Coming Operetta; Has Played with Music Club and Sung on the Radio

EXPERIENCED ARTIST

That a university education can be successfully combined with a career is being ably demonstrated by Peggy Evoy, a third year student in the General course at Victoria College. Peggy, in addition to playing the leading roles in the Victoria College Music Club productions for the past three years, also sings on "Mixture Melodies," a well-known weekly radio program, and is a member of the choir of Timothy Eaton Memorial Church in Toronto, where she frequently does solo work.

Miss Evoy, having made her debut in radio at the early age of 10 on a popular children's broadcast, has had wide and varied air experience. This season she is undertaking her first regular series of broadcasts over CFRB each Tuesday evening.

In her freshman year Peggy sang the leading feminine part in the Vic production of "H.M.S. Pinafore," an honour rarely accorded to a first year student. Last year she took the title role in "Patience," and she will also take the part of "San Toy" in this year's Music Club production to be

DEMOCRACIES SHOW SELFISH ATTITUDE SAYS REV. R. MACKIE

Interruption of Individual Privileges Resented by Democratic Peoples, Says Noon-Hour Speaker

BASIC CONVICTIONS TALK

"We need a greater sense of community, and to think less of ourselves," was the point emphasized by Rev. Robert Mackie in his S.C.M. noon hour address on "The Responsibility of the Individual to the Community" in Hart House yesterday. Mr. Mackie as General Secretary of the World's Student Christian Federation is the foremost Christian student leader in the world today.

The speaker termed the attitude of many of the people in the Democracies as "extreme selfishness." During a recent tour of American universities Mr. Mackie observed the great emphasis put on the rights and privileges of the individual, and the resentment of any interference on the part of the state.

"Communism and Fascism have a much stronger sense of community," stated Mr. Mackie. He went on to point out, however, that the purpose of the totalitarian community was the aggrandizement of the individual, and was therefore essentially selfish.

"The best basis for this sense of community is Christianity," declared the speaker.

As an example of what he meant by "the sense of community" Mr. Mackie gave a quotation from a letter written (Continued on Page 4)

I. S. S.

All student societies are requested to send representatives to the organizational meeting of the International Student Service Campaign in the Women's Union at 4.30 p.m., Friday, December 13th. Robert Mackie, Vice-Chairman of the International I.S.S. Committee, will explain the aims of the campaign on the campus, which will be carried on again as it was last year.

Peggy Evoy Plays the Lead In Victoria Production

presented early in January. Peggy is well known among the Vic co-eds for her impromptu noon-hour recitals in Wymilwood.

Although she is preparing herself for a career in teaching modern languages, Peggy's real love is her music, and she admitted to The Varsity that she would really prefer a singing career should future events prove favourable.

STUDENTS' FARES

The Railway Companies are issuing to students of the university, and to members of the university staff, round-trip tickets for the Christmas and New Year vacation, at the rate of the current one way fare and one-quarter for the round trip.

Students wishing to take advantage of this reduction should leave their names with the Registrar of the college, or the secretary of the faculty or department concerned, on or before Monday, December 16th. The certificates will be issued to the students at the college, faculty or department office, at 5 p.m. on Friday, December 20th.

Members of the staff may obtain certificates at the Registrar's office, Sincere Hall.

Varsity Debaters Return After Good Will Tour

Representatives Find United States Friendly and Co-operative During Trip to Six American Universities

PASSPORT TROUBLE

Ted Gray, President of the Victoria College Union and Ed Crawford, head of the Saint Michael's Students' Administrative Council, back from a "wonderful trip" to six Midwest and Western United States colleges were interviewed by the Varsity yesterday. These two men were chosen by the University Students' Administrative Council to represent Varsity in an invitation debating tour of the six colleges.

The only sour note was struck early in the trip when it was found that Ted Gray's passport was not complete. Forced to remain in Windsor until Gray had been fingerprinted, the two arrived at Northwestern University a bare half hour before their formal debate.

The subject debated was "Resolved that the United States should join a federation of English Speaking Nations". The Canadian representatives supported the affirmative side throughout (Continued on Page 4)

Christmas Reading Is Not Favoured

Yesterday was the day when students could begin to sign for books from the library. You asked so what? Why should any student want to use books during a perfectly good holiday? Various reasons are advanced by students whom the Varsity interviewed on the subject recently.

Marg. Hogarth, Trinity studies to while away the weary hours up in the barren northland. Lynn Howard studies "so I won't have to go out on windy nights," and hopes there won't be any windy nights. Don Groffkurth of S.P.S. will study if there is no snow; Tom Munford, as a last resort. Jack Love of School claims he can't read. Said R. Hitwell, another S.P.S.er, "I am going to study for an exam."

In response to more widespread questioning, Physical Ed co-eds chorused, a lusty "no" and fled.

Sheila Sharp, II English, complained, "The line-up is too long. I can't wait." A first year Arts student who asked to remain anonymous, is going to study because he is "not attending enough lectures."

Opinion was expressed by Alan Mitchell, I Commerce and Finance, that he would have enough to do without studying.

Despite this apparent lack of enthusiasm about Christmas reading, over three thousand books were borrowed.

Chemicals and Chocolate Bars Associate in Economics Building!

Students whose time-tables require periodic visits to the Economic Building may consider themselves lucky, for here the craving for nourishment, usually aroused by labs and lectures, may be satisfied without leaving the building.

On the third floor in the Chemistry Wing is a small room lined with shelves of flasks, beakers and test tubes which was originally intended for chemistry supplies, but which now also offers chocolate bars and apples to hungry lecture-goers. The apples, according to Mr. Chadwick, who has been in charge here for over a year, are new this season at the request of the girls who have to watch their figures.

However, there will be no more apples now until after Christmas, and students will have to be satisfied with

PRINTING PROGRESS IS LIBRARY FEATURE

500th Anniversary of Invention of Printing Commemorated by Exhibition of Almanacs, Newspapers, Documents

FIRST NOVEL DISPLAYED

Five centuries of printing progress are displayed in the Toronto Public Library's exhibition, which opened Monday, to commemorate the 500th anniversary of the invention of printing.

The first novel printed in Canada, Mrs. Julia Beckwith Hart's "St. Ursula's Convent", is on display amid early almanacs, political documents and speeches. The novel was printed in Kingston in 1824.

The history of news-printing is featured in the show. A photostat copy of The Upper Canada Gazette, printed in monotype by Louis Roy of Newark (now Niagara-on-the-Lake) holds an important place as the first newspaper to be printed in Canada. The issue is dated Thursday, April 18, 1793.

In the exhibit also is a copy of the first newspaper printed in lino-type, the Herald Tribune of New York. It is the printer of this paper to whom the readers of The Varsity owe their gratitude for the low price of the publication, for he invented this method, which eliminates much of the elaborate machinery of the monotype method.

POETRY, PROSE, ART MAKE UP LAST ISSUE

Principal Wallace, Professor Pratt and C. F. Comfort will Judge Contributions and Award Prizes in Each Class

DEADLINE FRIDAY

Friday is the deadline for the green issue of the Varsity. In the final Varsity of the Michaelmas term the paper will go literary in four out of eight pages.

Material is being selected from contributions made by students in all faculties of the university by judges drawn from the suitable departments. This year Principal M. W. Wallace of Victoria College is judging the prose contributions and Professor E. J. Pratt of Victoria College is selecting the best of the poetry in both the Serious and Light Verse classes. C. F. ## Emphasis on Democracy

In the last few months Canadian educational authorities have become increasingly conscious of the need for greater emphasis in the schools on the principles of democracy. Suggestions have been made for many ways of bringing this about, including the study of democracy as a regular school subject.

In the United States a similar attitude has been adopted. At a congress of the National Association of Manufacturers a few days ago in New York, it was revealed that the Association has undertaken a study of some 800 public school textbooks throughout the country, so that its members might move against "any that are found prejudicial to our form of government, our society or to the system of free enterprise."

The Association announced that it has engaged the services of Ralph W. Robey, Professor of Economics in Columbia University, to abstract all textbooks in the field of history, civics, sociology and economics in general use in the public school systems of the country.

Professor Robey is described as one "who has long been one of the foremost critics of the socialism of the New Deal. He has been commissioned to the objective function simply of abstracting such books, primarily by means of actual quotations, which will illustrate the author's attitude toward our governmental and economic institutions.

"The question whether such an attitude is wrong or right or neutral is something which individual readers of the abstracts will have to decide for themselves. Naturally, we will urge that the abstracts be used only for preliminary analysis and that each manufacturer should read in full any book which, on the basis of the abstracts, seems to him to be of questionable merit."

Explaining its motives for such a move the Association said, "Belatedly, we in the United States have come to the realization that human freedom is not self-perpetuating and that the basic principles which underlie our institutions need constant repetitions. Although the present need to strengthen vastly our physical defenses demonstrates the need for training in the arts of manufacturing production, we also are faced with the task of strengthening the internal structure of our nation by building an understanding of and faith in the principles and institutions that have made America great. It is in this latter field that we have been negligent."

The Association also outlined a three-point program designed "not only to aid in the formulation of basic policies but to encourage manufacturers in every community to cooperate wholeheartedly with their local educational authorities in analyzing sound means by which the concept of private enterprise and the details of its operation may be taught in the schools."

Although this move on the part of the National Association of Manufacturers is doubtless a good beginning, the whole matter would seem to be one for the educational authorities of the country to study seriously and to do something concrete about, before the slight alteration of textbooks would be of any appreciable benefit.

War-time Problem

The problem of education in connection with the need for more trained workers in wartime industries arose again last week, when approval for the establishment of additional war emergency classes in Toronto schools was granted by the Board of Education, at the request of the government. Classes will be opened in three of the city's technical and vocational schools, and all boys over 16 years of age will be eligible.

The question of the effects of this course on education was bound to arise. The proposal was objected to by one trustee on the grounds that it would cause boys to give up matriculation courses. He held that "it is the first duty of a student to finish his education," because "leaders will be needed in the days ahead."

Dr. C. C. Goldring, Superintendent of Schools, admitted that these courses will disturb education, but said that the government is laying great stress on the need for war emergency classes and is asking for full cooperation from the Toronto Board of Education.

It is inevitable that the increasing demand for trained workers will decrease the enrolment in the upper grades of the high schools and the universities. However, such workers are an absolute necessity to the country's war effort, and therefore such a result must be looked on in a different light than in ordinary times. In any event, the students who give up their education in favour of these courses are scarcely likely to be those who are seriously interested in their work, or those who will be the "leaders in the days ahead."

How to Finance Yale

Commenting on the deficit reported by the treasurer of Yale University, the New York Times slightly underestimates the matter when it says that "it may not be without interest to lovers of contrast to compare the Yale of 1940 with that of its early days."

It goes on to explain that in 1727 the deficit was something over 52 pounds. "A committee, having considered this account, reported their opinion that the 'impost paid for Rhum in this Government for the space of three years next coming be for the use and support of Yale College.' The upper house voted yes. The lower house dissented, perhaps from habit. Finally to the Reverend Trustees the impost income for rum was granted for one year 'to the use, benefit and better support of the said college, its rectors, tutors, etc.' So Yale's first deficit was provided for and the revenue from a New England staple and necessary of life devoted to education."

Co-eds Versus Emily Post

It may be true that Emily Post is the "undisputed autocrat of etiquette," but she would have a little run-in with co-eds the country over if she confronted them with one of the rules laid down in her latest book.

States Mrs. Post firmly—"Girls should wear hats outdoors. Hatlessness is a definite sign of inferior class."

Under ordinary circumstances for wear on city streets, no doubt few girls would disagree with her. But hatlessness at universities and high schools, especially in warmer weather, is a great Canadian and American custom that it would take a revolution to change. As we say, Mrs. Post would have an argument on her hands.

Fine Art Exhibit

The display of work at the Hart House Art Gallery by the University Fine Art group marks as usual a representative selection of student art. The exhibit as a whole is not too skillfully arranged. The many divisions of the fine art crafts are not all displayed, and those that are all run together, rather than stand distinctly in their own field. This forces an unevenness on the whole display that calls for real attention on the part of the average viewer, a product not often achieved.

The visitor will probably find the frescos placed right inside the door of most and immediate interest. If he does not go beyond these he at least will have seen the best group of the exhibit. Nearly all show careful colouring and delicate arrangement. Space form composition is treated in oil by third year students in studies of two female forms. All these demonstrate a few modern groupings, those with the simplest balance securing by far the best effect. Strong colour and line are in all these, and the work

Corsage Crazy Co-ed Kills Swain At Arts Ball

The murder of Cardwell Jones, first year Pass Arts student, was reported early this morning at Police Headquarters. Jones was found shot in the Rotunda which must have been a painful death. Five bullets as well as a scout knife were taken from the body. Campus police upon discovery immediately suspected foul play.

By following a bloody trail of smeared lipstick and old cigar butts, which led directly to Whitney Hall, the police speedily solved the case with the arrest of Moira O'Toole, third year Physiotherapy student. Miss O'Toole immediately confessed to the slaying but pleaded extenuating circumstances.

"He didn't send me a corsage, the low-life," she explained to a questioning Varsity reporter. "I'm not used to that sort of treatment. Better he should be dead yet!"

The night-court rocked with the raucous approval of a deputation of fifty from the United Florists Association who defended Miss O'Toole's action. "She had every right to do away with that parsimonious swine," they exclaimed as one. "Any man like that doesn't deserve life let alone the special advantages of the discount we are offering in our new Mother's Day Greeting Cards."

Miss O'Toole admitted that she had killed young Jones in a fit of passion. "When he first called without the corsage, it was all I could do to keep from strangling him with my bare hands. Later in the evening, when the orchestra played 'Flowers for Madame,' something snapped in my brain, and that's all I remember."

After sentence was passed, Miss O'Toole accepted her fate with calm resignation. "Corsages are here to stay, and so am I," she stated as she pensively fingered the iron bars of her cell.

Roostersentzel.

employing a distinctive shadow and outline on each figure is probably the nearest approach to a good qualitative study that the exhibit possesses.

Other studies in oil are the portraits styled by the reviewer Man with a cap. Here realistic treatment is stressed purposely to put the viewer at ease with the subject. The students who felt that the rough clasped hands of their figure placed in the portrait were trying for a feeling that only one achieved. Still life groups all centred the effects in a very rigid manner that cut a very formal pattern in every case.

None of the murals reached farther than a portrayal of events of slight interest. None contained the smooth spreading of design that would have constituted a good mural. The Ronde for a Recreation Club was warped and chopped in design to the extreme. These, however, showed colour effects well above the other groups. In form and movement composition of second year students both selections by C. A. Pritchard had distinct effects. In them the clustering of the figures marked a more distinctive use of line for movement than did the contrasting of shadow.

The viewer who passes the frescos should note the drawing and decorative design. These show good planning and a rigid use of the motifs. The work of R. Bower is carried along very well, that in black and white being a complete contrast to his colour selection, however. All work will be left until the beginning of next week.

for it. Excessive vulgarity is still amusing in itself—to some people.

There is a cult among playwrights of the present day to amuse certain elements of their audience by referring to unmentionables in a completely casual manner. As a critic recently said in this column "the playwright was deliberately injecting ultra-purple remarks into the play . . . to keep her audience pleasantly shocked."

With vulgarity where that vulgarity is necessary to carry the atmosphere—Steinbeck, and Hemingway to name two—even with vulgarity where that vulgarity is wittily used as in Claire Booth's The Women, there is little objection, but when it becomes nothing more than mere shock to one's conventions, there is no defence. If it serves no artistic purpose—if it is there only to allow the audience some delighted titters and squeals (and horse laughs from the rest) it has no place in art. It should go to Minsky's or the Casino where it belongs. The theatre in the Restoration period was in the same difficulties—too much escapism—but the Restoration's escapism was witty.

Attention Amateur Photographers

This year in Torontonensis we wish to have a comprehensive Campus Life Section. To do this we need the co-operation of amateur photographers from all the colleges and faculties, particularly those numerically small.

The Editorial Board of Torontonensis will consider any photographs which are submitted for insertion in the 1941 Torontonensis. We would prefer human interest shots, typical of the activities of the various colleges and faculties in the university. Other subjects such as pictures of university buildings, candid snaps of professors, sporting activities, etc., will be welcomed, but we would particularly like representative pictures of activities typical of the college or faculty to which the photographer belongs.

When a selection has been made the pictures will be placed in separate categories. The person who, in the opinion of the judges, submits the best shot in each group will receive recognition to that effect in Torontonensis, and the one who submits the best of all will receive in addition a copy of Torontonensis.

The deadline is February 1st, by which time all pictures submitted must be in the S.A.C. office in Hart House. Each picture should be properly captioned—in choosing the best, the most original captions will be considered. Name and college of photographer must accompany each picture.

The decision of the Editorial Board of Torontonensis shall be final.

Senior School Encounters U.C. In Swim Finals

First of the swimming play-offs will be staged today at 5:15 in the Hart House pool when Senior U.C. winners of Group I in a breeze, meet Senior S.P.S., runners-up in the same pool; also beginning at the same time S.P.S. Thirds, champs of Group II, take on their elders, Junior School. Aerial Navigation, victors in the last group, drew a bye into the semi-finals.

On Friday the semis will be run off. This will find the Flyers pitted against either School Seconds or Thirds. The winner of today's first listed game draws a bye into the finals.

Next Tuesday the two survivors will get together for the final showdown to decide the new interfaculty champion.

The Red and White will launch an exceptionally strong team. Ged Clawson, intercollegiate record holder in the breast stroke, and the fastest sprinter in the college, is entered, as is George Meen, U.C.'s other ace, who two years ago swam with the intercollegiate squad.

Senior School also boast two intercollegiate stars in Bill Staples, back-stroker, and John Girvan, former intercollegiate record holder. Junior School have Johnny Northwood, a great back-stroke natator, who missed the intercollegiate high-mark by a single second in the Junior meet. Aerial Navigation's best offering is Frank Sloan who has yet to be defeated in the 50 back and 50 breast. He has won these two events in six consecutive meets. School Thirds are not blessed with any outstanding swimmers, although Boa is good in the breast stroke and Christlaw has won a few first places in the short sprint.

On pouring over our annals the other night, we found to our great surprise a sport—fast and fascinating, but forgotten and forlorn—yes, sleigh-riding. Who could suggest a more pleasant way of enlivening one's spirits after hours and hours of lectures, essays, and just plain studying? Really, you've no idea what a thrill it is to feel that cold captivating wind rush against your cheek, whilst ice cracks beneath you and snow-drops fill your boots! And, girls, you don't even have to go to Rosedale to engage in this breath-taking sport. Just go to Library Hill any time when the children are about and approach them tactfully. They may even lend you their prized possession if you do, but we don't make any rash promises, for we've heard it said that "kids" today just aren't as generous as we were of old. Anyway, it's really worth trying just in case your young sister doesn't get a sleigh for Christmas. If she does, you can have the added advantage of practising this sport at the eerie hour of midnight, "neath the sparkling stars and flowing moon. Whatever you do, don't take us so seriously that you forget your Christmas carols.

CAROLS WILL BE FEATURED AT CHRISTMAS SERVICE

The annual S.C.M. Christmas service will be held at 5:15 this afternoon. The emphasis of the service will be on the singing of Christmas carols by the congregation.

The newly-formed S.C.M. choir will render five chorals and J. L. McDowell will be at the organ. Margaret Kinney Associate Secretary of the National S.C.M. will be unable to lead the service.

Vic Stickmen Tangle With U.C. Today

Speaking OF SPORT

By Doug Green

DOWN THE TANK

Next Tuesday with Sr. U.C. meeting Jr. S.P.S. in the finals of the swimming meets (so we call it) swimming for this term comes to an end. The meets went over in a big way and have done much to encourage this sport.

Last year, and all the years before that, swimming seemed to be reserved for the select few who were good enough to make one of the two intercollegiate squads. This term three and usually four nights a week, about thirty natators have gathered to plough up and down the tank. In days gone by if you didn't make the intercollegiate outfits you had only one (and for the past three years two) meet a year, in which to strut your stuff. Even then the intercollegiate super swimmers always took first, second and third and you just couldn't have much fun training for months, not make the "big" teams, and coming in last in the one or two meets you were allowed to enter. Of course you should be in there for the love of the sport and all that but it didn't seem that you were being encouraged very much.

This year it has been different and we hope it will continue to be so. 15 teams were entered with seven or eight chaps on each squad, which makes about 105 men who took part. Every time Wycliffe or Knox showed up, they had a different bunch it seemed, or at least they changed their strokes. Some of their splashes sure took an awful beating as they laboriously struggled up and down. Sometimes it seemed as though somebody would have an opportunity to practice the "dred swimmer" (taught by Mr. Winterburn in life-saving classes) but it didn't quite end in that. The point remains that they had a good time and so did their fellow theologians as they cheered them on.

WHO WAS WHO

In group one were Sr. U.C., Sr. Meds, Sr. S.P.S. and Vic. Sr. U.C. came out on top with 5 victories and one loss. Sr. S.P.S. qualified for the finals also when they defeated Vic Tuesday to finish in second place. As this first group contains the best teams, two qualified for the finals.

In the second group Jr. S.P.S. won their four meets quite handily, vanquishing both Jr. U.C. and Jr. Meds twice.

S.P.S. IIIRs took their group with five wins and one loss. St. Mike's had three wins and three defeats, Trinity the same, while Emmanuel lost five straight meets.

In the last group Aerial Navigation swamped all opposition, winning 6 and losing none. Wycliffe were just the reverse. Dents gained victory four times and suffered defeat twice while Knox won two and lost four.

THE WINNAB

Sr. U.C. are overwhelming favourites to take the championship. They have George Meen and Ged Clawson, former senior intercollegiate swimming stars. Clawson is the best all-round swimmer to ever attend this university and swam on the 1936 Olympic team. Nobody can beat Clawson in the 50 breast and the same might go for Meen in the 50 free, as he does under 26 seconds, which is mighty fast. Bill Wadds swam the breast stroke on the intermediate intercollegiate team of last year and Crawford Biggs was a sprint man on the same team. If these four aren't enough they have McIntyre, Breit and Patchett, three swimmers who would be welcome on any other team, but who never get a chance due to the preponderance of stars. However, they still grab off the odd second and third and assist in making a strong final relay.

Jr. S.P.S. will end up in the finals unless something miraculous happens (that's how sure we are). Their strong swimmer is Johnny Northwood, who will probably take the 50 back, although Clawson won't be very far behind (if he is). Biggs swims the back stroke in the medley and Northwood "might" get enough lead in this race that School "might" take it. But after this poor old School "may" be stumped. They can't beat Clawson in the breast stroke or Meen (maybe) in the 50 free and U.C. have an exceptionally strong final relay team in Clawson, Meen, Patchett and Biggs, although Vic nearly licked this strong foursome once. Moffat of School is a strong sprinter and might be good for a first in the 50 free as he won the Junior Interfaculty 50 yds. free style in around 26 seconds. It's going to be mighty close between Meen and Moffat although judging from past races Meen might have a slight edge. Gottlieb and Graham are fair sprinters, the former capturing first honours in the Junior Interfaculty 100 yds. free style. Anyway, it will be mighty interesting.

By no possible stretch of the imagination can we see S.P.S. Thirds, Aerial Navigation or Sr. S.P.S. getting anywhere, other than in the waste-basket. They've one or two outstanding swimmers on each squad but nothing to compare with the Red and White or Junior Engineers. John Girvan and Bill Staples are the aces on the Sr. S.P.S. outfit. S.P.S. IIIRs have no supermen although if there was a 300 yd. free style Rogers would undoubtedly take it, as he won the 300 yd. free style in the Junior Interfaculty Swimming in very fast time. Rogers and Charde are fair sprinters, however. Payne should do well in the breast stroke, as he's won a good many races this year and came second in the 200 breast at the oft-mentioned Junior Meet. Aerial Navigation have only Frank Sloan and Jim Brown, who are really good. Sloan is strong in the back and breast, and Brown is a fast sprint man, swimming last year on the intermediate intercollegiate squad. As Edith Cavell once said "Patriotism is not enough."

Dozen Fencing Novices Parry Under Eye of "Grand Old Man"

Charlie Walters, the Grand Old Man of Canadian fencing, is to be seen three nights a week in the salle d'armes of Hart House, imparting to over a dozen beginners bits of his vast fund of sword knowledge, acquired over a long period of years. In his prime Mr. Walters captured the Dominion title in the epee, sabre and foil better than a half-dozen times, and his love of ye noble art still prompts him to take bludgeon in hand and sally forth on the floor with his boys.

Because of the increased number of hours required for military drill, a Tuesday evening period has been tacked onto the regular afternoon sessions. Last year beginners did not receive much attention due to the fact that Mr. Walters spent most of his tutoring hours whipping an intercollegiate squad into shape. Two members of that team, Jim Tapsell, Dominion finalist last spring, and Bill Horsey, are aiding the Varsity mentor in the coaching duties. Thus more opportunity is being given to the beginners, and with all the new equipment that has been purchased for this express purpose, the novices are sitting pretty in comparison to neophytes of other years.

Some good talent is beginning to emerge from under the freshman bushel, but all is not as well as it might be in the sword shop. Second-year men have not been putting as much into the game as they took out last year. The absence of intercollegiate sport, it is assumed, has taken some of the lustre from the game for the would-be duellists. But with continued interest on the part of Mr. Walters' new proteges, things have been kept humming at a merry pace. The Tuesday night get-togethers have been very successful.

VOLLEYBALL ROUNDUP

The volleyball schedule winds up this week and the playoffs for the Victoria Staff Cup will commence the first week of January.

Sr. Vic and Trinity A are already being picked to meet in the finals. Both teams have swept through Groups I and II respectively without even meeting stiff opposition much less a defeat.

Dents A is leading Group III and is so far undefeated but if they lose their remaining game to O.C.E.'s A team the Teachers will tie the Molarmen for first place in the group.

Emmanuel A has taken the championship of Group IV. The Theologs have won five straight games, but have one game still remaining.

Group V sends Aerial Navigation into the playoffs. The Fliers have won five games with only one defeat.

Group VI has no less than three teams fighting it out for group honours. Pharmacy A and Knox B are tied for first place but S.P.S. III is close behind and still has a good chance of coping the laurels.

U.C. IV leads Group VII but Trinity B has an outside chance of tying the Royal Collegians.

In Group VIII Pharmacy's B team leads the pack with O.C.E. B close behind. The Teachers have still a mathematical chance of catching the Drugists before the end of the schedule.

Aerial Navigators Group Champions

Aerial Navigation clinched the Group V volleyball championship by swamping Wycliffe 15-9, 15-8 in the upper gym last night. Fliers now go into the playoffs for the Victoria Staff Cup, symbolic of interfaculty volleyball supremacy.

The Theologs could do little against the set-ups of "Dutch" Vanhuse or Mike Tuckah, and the smashing spikes of Ronnie Lake, and their organization fell apart under the continuous bombardment.

Aerial Navigation: Vanhuse, Lake, Haber, Tuckah, Dods, Reilly.

Wycliffe: Hunt, Knight, Ball, Barnett, Dookan, Bradbury.

EMMANUEL B OUST IRISH FROM VOLLEYBALL PICTURE IN TILT AT HART HOUSE

Emmanuel B volleyballers put an end to St. Mike's Second's playoff chances by downing the Irish 15-10, 15-17, 15-11 in a thrilling tilt in the upper gym last night. The game meant nothing to the Theologs who have no chance for a playoff berth but it caused a complete disintegration of all Irish aspirations. If the Double Blue had come through with a win it would have given them an outside chance of tying Aerial Navigation for the Group V championship. Art Young led the Theologs to an easy 15-10 win in the first game but the Irish came back to take the second one 17-15. The consistent spiking of Young and the set-ups of Frid proved too much for the Double Blue in the third and deciding game and they went under 15-11.

Emmanuel B: Jull, Proctor, Young, Kelley, Stapleton, Crysdale, Frid, Hord.

St. Mike's B: Sullivan, Kelly, Blinger, Casey, Coughlin, Cloonan, Barrett, Foley, Flaherty.

Undefeated U.C. Squad Comes Up Against Scarlet and Gold, Injuries Handicap Vic Team

FINALS NEXT WEEK

By George Forster

This afternoon at four, the big gym in the Male Mansion will be the scene of what promises to be one of the most thrilling boxa tilts of the year — the Vic-U.C. clash in the semi-finals of the Dr. W. A. Dafeo Trophy Race.

The Royal Collegians go into the conflict slight favourites to beat the Scarlet and Gold, on the basis of past performance. U.C. is as yet undefeated having turned back such crack crews as Emmanuel, Meds and Pharmacy.

The Victorians will be greatly handicapped by the old bugaboo—injuries; no less than three regulars are casualties as the result of the tough fight Vic has undergone in gaining a playoff berth. Glen Munro, star defenceman of the Scarlet and Gold, sprained his ankle in the tilt against Jr. School on Monday. Bud Casserly, the team's high scorer, had six stitches taken in his forehead after the game with Forestry on Tuesday, while Cliff Lee, another high scoring forward, had his nose broken in the Pharmacy fracas last Friday. Casserly and Lee are expected to play, but Munro will probably be forced to watch the game from the sidelines. He will be greatly missed by Gus Landell, Vic's apprentice goalie, whose past capable performances are due in a large measure to the big freshman.

U.C. on the other hand will be at full strength and have had five days' rest, while the Scarlet and Gold has already played two bruising games this week. Cager McCulloch and Alcie Alcombrack have made the Royal College net a very tough object for opposing forwards to find. Cliff Ballagh and Jack Francis of the Red and White have been running up high scores against all teams they have played this year and are confident that Vic will be no tougher than any other squad they have beaten. The U.C. boys point out that they trounced Pharmacy, which in turn defeated Vic in the Group I playoffs.

Vic is confident however that they can break the winning streak of the Royal Collegians and refuse to admit the possibility of defeat. Despite their long list of injuries they still have plenty of good material in Farmer, Kimber and Patrick and can be counted upon to make the game interesting.

The winner of today's game will meet Sr. S.P.S. in the finals on Monday and Wednesday. The Engineers reached the playoffs by winding up top of Group II and defeating Meds, one of the two teams sent into the playoffs by Group III.

O.C.E. BLAST KNOX IN VOLLEYBALL GAME

The O.C.E. volleyballers jumped within striding distance of their group leaders, Dents A, with an easy 15-5, 15-15, 15-5 victory over a five-man Knox team yesterday afternoon on the upper gym floor. That makes the Teachers' record four and one while the Dentists stand at five and nothing. If O.C.E. can take the final engagement they will create a top-spot deadlock. Last time they met, Dents, with only four men, overcame the Pedagogues 15-15, 16-14, 18-16 in the most thrilling spiking saga of the season.

With a star-studded line-up including the Brown Twins, Charlie Prince and Charlie Belchamber, the Teachers sprinted through the first installment in twenty points flat, marked time in the second while the Theologs made a determined effort and picked up the final game as a matter of course. Jack McKay turned in a scintillating performance for the Presbyterians but his support was woefully weak.

O.C.E. A: W. Brown, H. Brown, Belchamber, Prince, Sederington, Eccles and Wynne.

Knox: McKenzie, Hood, McKay, Johnston, Ferguson.

CANADIAN CAMPUS

(A CUP Feature)

By E. R. E. Carter
Staff Writer, The Brunswickian
Across Canada there is every indication that there will be an attempt in the near future to have some intercollegiate sport. The Universities of Alberta and Saskatchewan have signified their willingness to compete with one another; while Queen's and the University of Western Ontario have announced that they are not in accord with the entire abolition of inter-university
sport.
Even though intercollegiate sport in Western Canada stages a comeback after Christmas, there seems little hope of any such event taking place in the Maritimes. However, Dalhousie and Acadia did have fairly extensive football schedules and for the next term
U.N.B. students are pinning their hopes on intermediate basketball. At the present time there is every hope of forming a league and with coach "Beet" Andrews as the newly elected president of the N.R.A.B.A. we can expect action.

...
This year Canadian Campus, written each week from a different Canadian university, ends its fall debut at U.N.B., and with it the staff of the Brunswickian wish all member C.U.P.s papers Merry Christmas and all of the best for the coming year.

C.B.C. TO INTRODUCE NEW TYPE OF NEWS

no idea at all as to what this new policy is to be.

The C.B.C. does not aim to gather its own news. It will get its news from the Canadian Press and the British United Press, it was stated. The new staff of the C.B.C. will merely re-write the news in a conversational style intended for the ear and not the eye.
C.B.C. is to be the news room and Toronto, the central bureau for the new system. There will also be news bureaux in Quebec, Montreal, Winnipeg and Vancouver.

The Chief Editor, over all the news bureaus, will be Dan C. McArthur, formerly regional representative of the C.B.C. Press Information Service, who has had 20 years' experience in newspaper and publicity work. His father was the noted writer, Peter McArthur.
In each region there will be a senior editor.

"The present aim of the C.B.C. is to provide news bulletins that are dependable, authoritative, and completely unbiased" (the latter will be an innovation in itself according to the opposition in Vic's debate). "There will be no editorializing, or indulgence in comment, or speculation, on the part of the news writers. The C.B.C. news will be regulated by the same censorship and wartime regulations as applied to newspapers," the Press and Information Department of the C.B.C. revealed.

U.C. HOLDS ARTS BALL IN ARCADIAN COURT

Offering numerous attractions, topped by an all-round grand performance by Richard Avonde's orchestra, the University College Arts Ball scored a hit last night with some six hundred undergraduate dancers who termed it the Best Arts Ball in history.

Held in the Christmas-decorated setting of Arcadian Court, the dance caught much of the holiday spirit. A floorshow featured the "Three Freshettes", singing stars of the Follies, in several song arrangements, a dance routine staged by Jack Lemen, and a novel act by the "Man of Music", Clare Rouse.

The music of Richard Avonde proved the feature of the evening, however, and campus dancers acclaimed him as one of the finds of the season, although he has played campus engagements several times in the past. During the floorshow the band played the theme-songs of a dozen or so well-known orchestras and brought the house down with their rendition of "The Blues."

TORONTO DEBATERS RETURN FROM TOUR

out their five debates and one discussion. Support for the federation scheme is growing in the states and the pro-British attitude is strengthening, the debaters said. One concrete evidence of the latter is the popularity of the Bundles for Britain organization. Even the girls at Stevens have a branch.

Of the girls at Stevens Gray and Crawford could hardly say enough. "We were invited for one day by the faculty," Gray interpolated, "But the girls entertained us for another half day."
"Biggest Charm School in the World," Crawford added.

At the University of Missouri, Columbus, they found that the School of Journalism publishes one of the town's evening papers, "The Columbia Missourian". Another Missouri school, Westminster College at Fulton, entertained them.

The striking feature of the University of Kansas is its horse-shoe campus on a ridge around a little valley. A consistency of architecture Varsity's ambassadors found a pleasing note on American Campuses.

The University of Texas Campus at Austin is one of the finest architecturally due to a fabulous building endowment, but the big feature about the campus was the Cowboy boots affected by the male students. Campus fashions feature comfort, Ted Gray informed the Varsity, "for instance, there's the fingertip coat." There are a few of these on this campus, one of the newest of which was brought back by Gray.
Some wierd features are purple lipstick and the Stevens fad of nailpolish-ing born rimmed-glasses. Knee socks are out it seems, but ankle socks are universal with the co-eds, who, almost as universally go without stockings.

As for the co-eds themselves, the debating team said, "They're the kind of girls you feel you've known for years after the first five minutes."

The weather on the tour ran from a blizzard in Chicago to Christmas carols in the boiling sunshine at San Antonio, Texas. After a twelve day tour the Varsity men returned to this side of the border last Friday at midnight.

some in the office now with no names

Military Training Units To Rest from Duties Until After Xmas Holidays

Auxiliary Battalion to Finish off Drill Today until January 13 and C.O.T.C. will Write Examinations Tomorrow

BOTH UNITS TO GO TO CAMP

The Auxiliary Battalion will take exactly one month's rest this Christmas, finishing off today, Friday the thirteenth, and starting work again on Monday, January 13, it was announced. Then drill will continue outside when possible, inside when not, and courses in elementary tactics will be introduced.

The C.O.T.C. proper on the other hand will write exams tomorrow night and will then be through until it starts again, the graduates on Monday, January the sixth and the undergraduate companies on the seventh, when they will assemble together before being split up into groups for training in the different special arms of the service.

The group aged 18 to 20 will continue its two hours a week taking in a mixture of physical training and rifle drill. According to "Chesty" Martin instruction is also planned in almost all phases of the use of the rifle, shooting positions, lying low, kneeling, etc., and shooting on the ranges if time permits. They have to put in a total of 36 hours of some sort of exercise.

The C.O.T.C. will have examinations on their specialized training in the different branches some time in March, and both it and the Auxiliary Battalion will have to take a period in camp some time in the summer.

Comet Discovery Made at Harvard

New in the heavens is the Cunningham Comet discovered at the end of August from the Harvard Observatory. At present it cannot be seen without the aid of a telescope. According to Mr. P. M. Millman, Astronomer at Dunlap Observatory, it will be visible to the naked eye about the end of next week.

The Comet is now close to Beta Cygni, the star at the foot of the Northern Cross, high in the north-western sky. It appears immediately after dark. Travelling south towards the sun, it increases in brightness as it goes. On New Year's Eve it will be about the size of the Pole Star or the stars in the Big Dipper. Mr. Millman added.

So far this comet has a very faint, short tail. This is important to a comet. The tail will probably lengthen as it approaches the sun. After it passes the sun and disappears over the southern hemisphere the comet will have a still longer and brighter tail.

Co-eds Have Conflicting Opinions On "Evil Designs" of Friday 13th

And so today is Friday the 13th — that day which in the eyes of many people has evil designs on us. Co-eds were conflicting in their opinions about today.

Miss M. Lavery, III Arts, had much to say on the matter, although she summed it up by saying, "I watch my step at all times, including Friday 13; so it doesn't bother me."

"The only thing I can see about Friday 13 is a couple of examinations and believe me you, that bothers me," declared Miss M. Redfern, III Arts.

"I think it would be a lovely day to get in some good studying," remarked Ruth Masters, I Arts.

The male students had much more clear and blunt opinions on the matter, although many thought nothing of this

December Acta, Second Vic Issue Makes Appearance

Magazine Matter not up to its Own Standard Because of Page-Packing but Has Several Good Items

By Michael O'Mara

The second issue of Acta Victoriana, official Victoria College undergraduate magazine, made its appearance early this week.

The complaint which we aired last year that the magazine, in an effort to fill space, prints matter which is not up to its own best standard, and thus reduces the whole, in the mind of the reader, to the mediocre level of its filler, still holds good. Of the 40 pages devoted to printed matter, perhaps 10 could have been omitted. This omission would mean a smaller magazine, but one which contained none but the best contributions of which Vic students are capable. In short, the flavour of this issue is impaired by dilution.

In spite of this page-packing, which we believe to be a flaw in editorial policy, there are several commendable items in the December Acta. Best of these is the short story, "Mr. Carver Takes a Walk", by Rignmore Christopher, a girl whose work is beginning to show maturity. The story employs a remarkable degree of insight.

VIOLIN RECITAL

Peggy Moreland, violinist, will give the recital at 5 p.m. today in the Music Room, Hart House. Miss Moreland studied for several years with Elic Spivak, Concert Master of the Toronto Symphony Orchestra, and in 1939 won a scholarship which entitled her to study for two years at the Royal Schools in London, England. Unfortunately the outbreak of war has made this impossible for the time being. Miss Moreland will be accompanied at the piano by Miss O'Greta McNeill and the program will be as follows:

Concerto Number 4 in D major — allegro Mozart andante cantabile rondau
Priesleid ..... Wagner
Sicilienne and Rigodon ..... Franconeur-Kreisler
La Fille aux cheveux de lin ..... Debussy

Trinity College To Have Formal

Plans are well under way for the annual Trinity College Conversat which will be one of the first big formal dances of the 1941 university social season, it was announced yesterday. The dance is to be held Friday, January 24 in Simpson's Arcadian Court.

The Conversat committee stated that Stanley St. John and his orchestra will provide music for dancing from 9 until 2. Supper will be served at 11 p.m.

The function will conform pretty much to tradition, but the committee hopes that a new Trinity feature, a blackout dance, will be inaugurated that evening.

Engineers to Hold Last Fall Meeting

The Engineering Society will hold their last general meeting of the fall term today at 4 p.m. in Room 43, of the Physics Building.

An address will be given by Mr. M. S. Kuhring of the National Research Council at Ottawa on the testing of aircraft engines. Mr. Kuhring has played an active part in Canadian aircraft construction for the past 20 years, and has been a leader in aeronautical research. He is, at present, engaged in important aircraft testing work for the R.C.A.F.

Student Family Canvass Intriguing Holiday Position

Most intriguing of the holiday jobs the Student's Administrative Council has to offer to men and women students of all faculties for the Christmas vacation is to interview Canadian families in scattered Canadian cities and towns in an attempt to find out just how effective radio advertising is.

"This group of students who will interview all kinds of people, and will spend two days interviewing an average of 50 families per day and will earn 20 cents per interview," Mr. E. A. MacDonald, General Secretary-Treasurer of the Students' Administrative Council, told the Varsity yesterday. A Canadian firm who wishes to remain anonymous is making a survey on marketing problems and wishes to find out from the people themselves the effectiveness of radio "commercials."

A cross-section of public opinion on these problems will be obtained by quizzing people of all classes and classes and care has been taken to choose cities of varied industries and locations where the interviews will be made. Timmins, Fort William, Kirkland Lake, Galt, Woodstock and Toronto are among those chosen.

STUDENTS TO SING CHRISTMAS CAROLS

Students who are commencing to feel that yearly urge to sing Christmas carols, will have an opportunity to practise this worthy and time-honoured custom on Saturday evening at 8 p.m. The Varsity Christian Fellowship has arranged for a carol sing-song to be held in Student House, 624 Spadina Avenue.

The singing is to be conducted by Prof. Cogan of Wyldlife College. A musician of note, Prof. Cogan is a distinguished graduate of Cambridge and was formerly on the staff of the University of Manchester. He has been prominent in I.V.C.F. work in Great Britain. At present, he is professor of the New Testament at Wyldlife.

"Any virtuosos who may plan to attend are urged to come prepared to sing the descendant of 'The First Noel', but enthusiasm will be regarded as an adequate substitute for musical ability," Tom Barnett, V.C.F. president, told the Varsity.

Marquess of Lothian British Ambassador to U.S. Passes Away at Washington

Lord Lothian was to Have Visited the University Next Monday to Receive the Honorary Degree of Doctor of Laws at a Special Convocation; Conferring of Degrees on Three Other Notables to be Postponed

AMBASSADOR WAS PERSONAL FRIEND OF PRESIDENT COOY

The Marquess of Lothian, British Ambassador to the United States, died at Washington early yesterday morning. Lord Lothian was to have visited the university next Monday to receive the honorary degree of Doctor of Laws at a special convocation.

Following the news of Lord Lothian's death, President Coady announced that the convocation, at which degrees were also to have been conferred on three other notables, has been postponed until a later date — "perhaps in February or March."

The President sent the following telegram to the British Embassy in Washington: "The University of Toronto extends heartfelt sympathy in the passing of Lord Lothian, a warm friend, a constructive imperialist, a wise educationalist and a great diplomat who combined directness with tact. We are postponing the special convocation which was to be held on Monday out of respect to his memory."

Lord Lothian was a personal friend of the President's through his association with universities as the Secretary of the Rhodes Trust, and since taking that post in 1925 had visited this campus a number of times.

Speaking of the Marquess, President Coady said, "We had been planning for some time to confer an honorary degree on Lord Lothian whenever he should be able to come to Toronto, and at the same time on the American Minister in Ottawa. We took advantage

Coulton Delivers Another Lecture On Medieval Topic

World Renowned Authority on "Symbolism in Medieval Art" to Large Audience

"Symbolism in Medieval Art" was the subject of a lecture delivered last night by Dr. G. G. Coulton, world renowned authority on Medieval history. Dr. Coulton, formerly a lecturer at Oxford and Cambridge, is at present filling the post of Temporary Lecturer in History at the university for the present academic year.

Dr. Coulton began his lecture by explaining symbolism. "Symbolism is a form of mysticism. Mysticism is the conviction that there is in the universe an order that cannot be described by mere discursive reasoning, and that it is possible for the human soul to come in contact with it."

Essing the remainder of his lecture on a quotation by an ancient author "The church is the Bible of the poor," Dr. Coulton went on to prove the fallacy of this statement. He illustrated his lecture by an excellent choice of slides of sculpture pieces from many of the medieval churches. Dr. Coulton made the point that the poor were much too uneducated to follow the very complicated symbolism involved in most of the illustrations. Pointing out that this would refute such statements which imply that through art even the loftiest sentiments reached the common people.

The singing is to be conducted by Prof. Cogan of Wyldlife College. A musician of note, Prof. Cogan is a distinguished graduate of Cambridge and was formerly on the staff of the University of Manchester. He has been prominent in I.V.C.F. work in Great Britain. ## Noted Physicist To Give Lecture

C. J. Phillips, B.S., A.M., noted physicist of the Corning Glass Works, Corning, New York, is to lecture tomorrow evening on "Modern Miracles in Glass" in the Royal Canadian Institute's series of Saturday Evening Lectures.

Born in St. Louis, Mo., on December 31st, 1908, Mr. Phillips was engaged by the Mellon Institute in 1928 as an assistant in industrial research, leaving there in 1930 to obtain the degree of Bachelor of Science from the University of Pittsburgh.

Having gained his A.M. degree in 1931 from Oberlin College, where he enjoyed a fellowship, the youthful physicist has since been employed at the Corning Glass Works, N.Y.

An expert in quantum mechanics, electron diffraction, the tensile strength of glass and the heat treatment of glass, Mr. Phillips will illustrate his talk with demonstrations and motion pictures in colour. The public is cordially invited to attend this free lecture, which will be given at 8:15 p.m. in Convocation Hall, December 14th.

Beta Sigma Rho Will Present Annual Extravaganza at Hart House

Lord Lothian Passes

The sudden death of Lord Lothian, apart from shocking Britain and America by its unexpectedness, has struck home with dramatic intensity at the University of Toronto. The announcement of his death came just as arrangements were being completed for his visit to the university next Monday when he was to have been conferred an honorary degree.

Lord Lothian's passing has removed from the diplomatic scene one of the most important men in the Empire today. He held a position of importance in Britain's affairs second only to high cabinet posts. He was in a place where his every action could influence the extent of America's participation as a friendly neutral in the war. A false move by a man in the British Embassy at Washington could easily reach disastrous proportions as far as American sympathy for Britain was concerned. Lord Lothian made no false moves. His simplicity, his democracy and his frankness had won him the confidence of the American people, and he was a man in whom such confidence was not misplaced. He had the ability to talk plainly, to face the facts from which others might shrink, and yet retain the confidence and friendship of America.

The dramatic tragedy of his death was heightened by his last speech which was read for him from a Baltimore platform just a few hours before he died. In that address he told the American people plainly and simply that Britain could win the war by 1942, or before, if she were assured of American help "in airplanes, munitions, in ships and on the sea and in the field of finance." America's fate is at stake, linked to the end with that of Great Britain, and the issue now depends in large measure on the action taken by the United States. He reviewed the progress of the war, commented upon growing British successes and also upon increasing sea losses, predicted a concentrated Nazi attack upon Britain's oceanic lines of communication and transport, and called upon America to prevent the spread of war to her own shores by extending all possible aid to Britain now.

"Alone almost among the nations of the world you still have the chance of making your country immune from the devastation of war, not by pacifism or attempted appeasement of the dictators, but by helping to maintain the frontiers. But if the ramparts fall, the war will inevitably cross the oceans and roll up against your shores. . . . The issue now depends largely on what you decide to do. Nobody can share that responsibility with you. It is the great strength of democracy that it brings responsibility down squarely to every citizen of every nation. And before the judgment of God each must answer for his own actions."

This was plain speaking from a man who died in the service of his country. It was plain speaking, but we are certain that it was the kind of language Americans like coming from a man whom Americans liked and respected. A man who can speak plainly and yet preserve sympathy is needed as British Ambassador to the United States. Lothian was such a man; the filling of his place will be a grave task.

Housing Problem Created

The rapid expansion of industries due to war needs has brought in its wake an acute housing shortage in many cities throughout Ontario. The problem has become so great in some localities that the municipal authorities are no longer able to cope with it, and have expressed a desire for Dominion or provincial co-operation. Furthermore, the lack of housing accommodation in certain cities has produced a shortage of skilled artisans who have been unable to secure lodging for themselves and their families. Cities near which military centres have been located are also experiencing severe shortages.

The city of St. Catharines is an excellent example of this new war-time problem. That city has always been the seat of much industrial activity, and since the outbreak of war industries there have speeded up immensely. The population has made the record gain this year of over a thousand, considerable for a city of under 30,000. Typical of the expansion is the largest company there, a firm formerly producing automobile parts. A year ago it employed 1,700 men while today it has on its rolls 3,300. As a result there are practically no houses for rent, and all apartments are filled to capacity.

The problem, prevalent throughout the province, is one which has grown beyond the resources of municipal taxation, and is demanding of provincial government interference, or even national control. Housing in urban areas has come to be a problem which must be solved by long-range, comprehensive planning by a higher authority than the municipality. A brief interest in municipal housing projects, assisted by senior governments, was developed during the post-war boom of the twenties. At present the National Housing Act is no longer in force. Some industries are complaining about loss of skilled labour due to lack of housing space, and mobility of labour has thus been greatly curtailed. National expansion of industry has been created by a national emergency, and it is to be hoped that something in a national or a provincial way will be done about the problem when the Dominion and provinces get together next January, if nothing has been done before that time.

Snow in Our Hair

When it's cold and stormy or wet and slushy, or when any of the other unusual weather phenomena known in these parts are holding sway, there is always some bright spot to cheer one's outlook (or vice versa). Yesterday it was the annual southern winter resort publicity edition of Boston's Christian Science Monitor.

We have no grievance against the Monitor. On the contrary we think the Monitor is one of the best newspapers on the continent. We are very happy to see it every day in our office. In fact, when a recent co-ed debater accused the editor of rewriting his editorials from the Globe and Mail, he was silently but definitely indignant. One of his guiding editorial policies is: Never scalp editorials from a paper too close to home—somebody might find you out and tell all! Try the Monitor first!

We were mildly annoyed at the Monitor yesterday however. Why, oh why, did the winter resort edition from The Sunny Southland have to arrive on the editor's desk on a day like yesterday? The "snow-rain-sleet" was slushing down from a leaden sky; his feet were soaking wet and the melting snow from his head was dribbling down his neck; he had an essay overdue and some editorials to write; the prospects were more snow. And there on his desk lay eight pages of pictures from sun-drenched Florida, replete with beaches, bathing beauties, tennis courts, bathing beauties, sailboats, bathing beauties, palm trees and . . . bathing beauties.

Of course it did add a bright spot to a dull day. But its total effects were quite the reverse. In fact it made the editor quite gloomy for a few moments. Because it was slushing out and his feet were wet and snow was running down his back and he didn't have any money to go to Florida and he had some editorials to write. This is the result.

Blame it on the Monitor.

OF MOUNTBANKS AND MUSIC

When (and if) the musical history of our times comes to be written, who will be the towering figures in it? Who will be the Brahms of the twentieth century, who the Berlioz, who the Paganini? (We select these names as typical, rather than giants like Mozart, Beethoven and Wagner, because the latter seem still to possess the kind of greatness that transcends period classification.)

Well, these are dangerous questions, and no one can hope to answer them with certainty; yet con-

And Get on With the Story

As we neared the towering mass of Everest my native bearer pointed to it and said "Here is a Mountain", so I forthwith horsewhipped him to death and left the native officials to hold the necessary PM. But, in short, the mountain as usual proved unscalable, and so, leaving our bones to whiten in the rarified atmosphere we returned to the province of Dhownpore for the pig-sticking season.

Dhownpore, with its ghats teeming with gangs of natives and its native gangsters teeming with ghats, is a centre of native industry. The largest producer of Wallahs outside of Washington, its stock market boasts "When punkah wallahs are made, our buffaloes will wallah in them!"

The Rajah proved an excellent host but our visit was cut short by the approach of the Rane season. "She'll give me hail Columbia," said our urbane host through an interpreter, "unless I get the cigar butts cleaned up and the emetics returned." So, sadly we boarded our smorgasbords and with cries of "Vive Les Canadiens", and "Twelve Ounces for a Nickel" ringing in our ears we set off with hearts choked with emotion and little thought for what the morrow might bring little knowing that we would be investigating working conditions among the banjo makers of Pago-Pago in order to satisfy the insatiable demand of our too generous public ere twice the sun had passed the gentle land of Dhownpore.

Horace the Haggard Blackguard.

lecture is possible, and perhaps even profitable, if only because it may lead us to estimate the importance of our famous (and not so famous) contemporaries by means of a broader frame of reference than we customarily use. The writer admits, for instance, that of late he had come to look upon the amazing Leopold Stokowski as something of a mountebank. This opinion, based largely on Mr. Stokowski's reported association with a well-known screen actress, his recurrent passion for trick machinery and his general tendency to flout artistic convention, collapses utterly upon more careful consideration.

The first point in this flimsy indictment (our own, remember) of a great man is worse than irrelevant, for even if it were relevant it would be inapplicable. What would have happened if Richard Wagner, to name only one, had encountered modern American journalism? As for the second point, it is clear enough that Leopold's toys justify themselves by Getting Results. Consider for instance that only a week or two ago he and Walt Disney between them frightened Dorothy Thompson into laying certain cultural problems of no slight importance before vast hordes of readers. Something worth come of this. As Deems Taylor once pointed out, art is a process, not of manufacture, but of growth. Among the other activities of this brilliant musician which have caused considerable unjustifiable exercise to the writer's eyebrows are his orchestral seating experiments, and of these an entirely adequate defense can be given in one sentence. The form of the modern symphony orchestra is not yet so full of years that it is safe to regard it as crystallized for all future time.

In short, if Mr. Stokowski is a mountebank he is at least one who will not soon be forgotten.

What about the composers? Which is to be elected permanent class president? Sibelius perhaps? Very probably — at it seems now. Strauss? Stravinsky or Elgar? Or will it be the mysterious Delius, or Arnold Schoenberg, the twelve-tone scale atomist?

Last week our old friend Stokowski and the Philadelphia Orchestra premiered a new violin concerto by Schoenberg. Many of the audience left early. Others, it seems, laughed. A noted HOOT... With this summary salutation, today's Hither plunges into the pleasant performance of amusing you callous collegians. And here is a veritable gem entitled "The Fly that Was" from the Western Gazette, which, shocking to say, is quite clean.

O little fly that is no more Because, he is
The fly that was.
He used to crawl along the floor
Or with a zooming sound he'd soar
Above my head
Around my bed

Or breakfast table,
If he were able.
'Twas his delight
To stop on flight,
He'd light
On something sweet
And good to eat
Then tramp his gummy little feet
About, wherever he buzzed—
And that is why, he is,
THE FLY THAT WAS...

AWARD OF THE WEEKLY DEAD FISH... goes to him who revived this hideous hunk of Connecticut conversation, a la the Bronx, twixt Butch and Slug McJones. Quoth Butch: "Purty big pigeons, them are". Quoth Slug: "Them ain't pigeons, them's gulls." Quoth Butch: "Gulls or boys, them's still big pigeons". THOSE IN THE AISLE SEATS WILL BE CARRIED OUT FIRST.

SURELY NOT AT BRYN MAWR. It would seem that the Bryn babies are celebrating something or other with a vengeance. The following startling announcement comes from their staid College News: "Free-for-all. To cheer up the Bryn Mawr leftovers on Thanksgiving weekend, Haverford's Football Team is tackling the girls' Second Hockey squad on Saturday afternoon. Watchers and players are all to join for "hot" tea in the Common Room at four." BEAT ME DADDY... TO THE BAR.

PICTURE... A cool, crisp, quiet evening. Despite Daylight War Saving Time, Inc., the campus is dark, very dark. Only a few lights burn in the Library and, mirabile dictu, on the top floor of the Schoolhouse. But nary a soul is to be seen, not even anywhere. Suddenly an Engineer throws open a window and, filling his lungs with a shot of fresh air, shatters the silence with a shriek: "Dirty old Meds". The words bounce off the walls of the black Medical Building and re-echo into eternity. And with his soul satisfied, the Engineer shuts the fenetre and returns to his research. FADEOUT.

critic likened the concerto to the sounds of a barnyard.

To the thoughtful observer (who, it should be remembered, would very probably have laughed as loudly as anyone) there is a curious aura of portent about this story. Whatever that audience thought, it wasn't bored. Such demonstrations don't happen very often, and it's a little odd that in several past instances things like Brahms' First Symphony and the Cesar Franck D minor have been involved. It must have been back around the time that a man called Raff was generally regarded as an ace symphonist that these were first heard.

Certainly you know Raff. You'll find his Cavatina in three out of four collections of the world's favourite violin pieces. The ones that no top-ranking concert violinist this side of 1910 ever plays.

So, if you like Sibelius, shudder the next time you hear Polske Triste.—H.C.

SECONDO ACTA VICTORIANA MAKES APPEARANCE

and too laborious to be enjoyable, although it contains the germ of a clever idea.

This month's issue does not fulfil the promise of its November predecessor in the field of light verse. There is nothing in it as amusing as was "Demise of a Professor" and not worthy of praise, as a piece of verse, which required a great deal of thought, was the unsigned "The Tragedy of Aspiration", an elaborate variation on the theme of T. S. Eliot's "The Love Song of J. Alfred Prufrock."

In the serious verse, "The Wager," by Norman Christopherson, holds a certain compelling power, and Margaret Gould's "Mediæval" shows fine pictorial imagination.

Another interesting bit of verse is David Bairstow's "Love is a Prison." As well as stating a rather ephemeral thought coherently, it has the advantage of being free verse, yet retaining capital letters at the beginning of lines.

The Art, Music and Drama section is soundly written, but there is too much of it in proportion to the content of the rest of the magazine. This comment is true of the Book section also.

Printed in green ink, the issue looks very pretty, but the verdant pigment does not flatter the otherwise excellent photographs and art cuts.

let's go places

Four stars to Laughton for his performance of "Tony Pattucci" in "They Knew What They Wanted," which opened this week at the Uptown, and three at least to the plot of the show, a 1924 Pulitzer prize-winner by Sydney Howard. Constructed so that the burden of the acting fell more or less equally on the shoulders of Laughton and Carole Lombard, with the remainder of the work done by William Gargan, and comparatively simple in structure, it could scarcely have gone wrong. All three were very fine. Carole Lombard, masterfully splendid in a difficult role, is perhaps a little Carole Lombardish now and then as "Amy," but Laughton is less Laughton than we have ever seen him. Setting, drama and plot are real, and the plot original, and heart-warming is the only word.—H.D.H.

By Owen Prichard

A BEEF ABOUT BEEFING

A goodly number of athletes in this university need to have their wrists soundly slapped and be made to write 500 times, "I am supposed to be a gentleman," and hand the completed opus to the nearest interfaculty referee.

Recently we ambled Upper Gym-wards to cover a couple of volleyball tussles, and before we reached the stairs a tremendous din filled the whole Athletic Wing. "Zounds!" we muttered, with a gasp from our sounder lung, "Argybastron must have been captured again! or perhaps Wycliffe is winning a swim meet!" But the tumult and the shouting was all coming from the volleyball matches we were intending to witness. Some volleyball fixtures attract fairly large galleries of spectators. But the gate at this tilt could have crowded into a telephone booth with room left on the aisle for two tuba-players and a ski team. The full complement of racket, which rivalled Times Square on New Year's Eve, issued from the dozen players, a few subs, the team managers and a brace of onlookers.

Gently draping the frame over the top rail, we tried to determine the cause of the frenzy. Immediately the howling set up again and the answer was clear. The referee had been forced to call a close one, and the hysterical players were clustered around the harassed arbiter with each complainant yelling enough to wake the soundest snoozer in Hart House Library.

The whole situation is too ridiculous to have to mention in the columns of a college journal. It is important for all players to remember that the fate of a nation does not immediately depend on the outcome of any interfaculty match, and a university gym floor is not the place for verbal brawls over every decision made. The referees are appointed by your Athletic Association and have nothing to gain by calling the shots in your opponents' favour whenever they deem it necessary to do so.

If you think the man with the whistle is incompetent tell your intramural rep and the matter can then be dealt with promptly and in seemly fashion. Running over to the official to be the first in with the wail only tends to confuse the ref's future decisions, and what is more important in the long view, will give the faculty or college whose colours you wear a reputation for being champions of the Interfaculty Beef Trust.

MUSINGS

The as-yet unexplained default of Senior S.P.S. in yesterday's swimming semi-finals sets one wondering how this could happen, that a faculty of 982 men could supply only three out of a five-man squad in a novice meet, when colleges of one-tenth School's registration can go through a whole season without defaulting such an important match. . . . Most general comment from spectators at yesterday's lacrosse struggle was that Victoria lost the game to a smoothly-working University College outfit simply because the Scarlet and Gold players forgot about a passing attack and concentrated too much on individual effort. The solo work of Casserley was superb, but not enough to beat a precision-squad which passes with the precision displayed by Campbell, Ballagh, Alcombrack and the rest of the Red and White victors. . . . It looks like a quiet holiday season for Athletic Directorate member Thor Stephenson, who received a broken leg in Wednesday's hockey game at Varsity Arena.

Vic Stickmen Bow Out To Polished U.C. Squad

Scarlet and Gold Drop 9-6 Decision to Royal Collegers in Semi-Final Round of the Playdowns

U.C. TEAMWORK BETTER

By Ed Nicholson

Vic bowed out of the lacrosse picture yesterday afternoon as they dropped a close hard-fought game by a 9-6 margin to U.C. in the semi-final round of the playdowns. The Red and White displayed a much better brand of teamwork, which was a decided contrast to the individual style featured by the Victorians.

Vic put up a hard fight all the way through the affair. And that they were playing without the services of Cliff Lee, one of their starriest performers, speaks volumes for the grand game they played. "Bud" Casserley of the Scarlet and Gold, was the higher scorer on the floor with four goals, in spite of the fact that he was performing with six stitches in his head.

"Al" Alcombrack opened scoring for the King's College crew early in the first quarter on a pass from McNulty. Ballagh added another a few minutes before the chukker ended to give his team a 2-0 lead.

The Scarlet and Gold began to force the play in the second quarter but the U.C.-ers were right on the spot and outscored their opponents by two goals to one. Macdiarmid and Alcombrack netted for the Red and White and Farmer broke the ice for Vic.

Macdiarmid and Campbell added a brace of counters to give U.C. a 6-1 lead. But Casserley potted two for Vic to put the Scarlet and Gold right back in the game just before the third quarter ended.

The final frame produced the most exciting lacrosse of the entire game when Farmer and Casserley scored two fast ones to make the count 6-5 in favour of the University lads. U.C. pulled away momentarily when Francis added another. But Casserley bulged the twine to bring the Victorians within one goal of the pace-makers.

With only three minutes left to play McNulty and Macdiarmid put the game on ice with a couple of brilliant efforts making the final score 9-6.

Alcombrack was the star for U.C. Always a tower of strength on defence, this husky netted a pair of goals and was the spark-plug of the team all the way through the affair. Francis and Macdiarmid also went well at times.

Casserley led the attack for Vic. He was easily the headiest performer of the Scarlet and Gold aggregation. Farmer played almost the entire game and was always a scoring threat.

U.C.: Ballagh, Alcombrack, Francis, McNulty, Gibson, Campbell, Macdiarmid, McCullough, Ledingham, Hignell. Vic: Landell, Johnston, Patrick, Farmer, Munro, Casserley, Young, Rice, Kimber.

PHARMACY A EDGE KNOX IN VOLLEYBALL ENCOUNTER

Pharmacy A volleyball squad successfully staved off a home-stretch threat from Knox B in the upper gym last night, as they edged the Presbyterians in the second game to take the match 15-7 and 15-13.

The Purple and White made a determined rally in the second set-to, and had the Druggists a trifle rattled before the game finally ended in a victory for the Pill Rollers, who spent the closing minutes arguing heatedly over every other point scored.

Meek Asked To Devise New System

Asked to Undertake Project to Devise Acceptable Scientific System for the Transliteration of Hebrew

HEADED SIMILAR PROJECT

President H. J. Cody announces that Professor T. J. Meek, Professor of Oriental Languages, University of Toronto, has been asked by the American Council of Learned Societies to undertake the project of devising an acceptable scientific system for the transliteration of Hebrew. This means that Professor Meek will be a regular delegate to the meetings of the Society of Biblical Literature, the American Schools of Oriental Research, and the American Oriental Society for consultations with scholars.

Some years ago Professor Meek headed a similar project for the transliteration of cuneiform and now that system is used throughout the world. The present project is to devise a system of transliterating Hebrew that will be followed throughout the world.

Mile of Tape, Ton of Cotton, Apothecaps' Aim

Members of the Apothecap Club, organization of pharmacy apprentices, held their annual membership dance at the Silver Slipper this week. The committee included Miss Sylvia Levitt, only girl member among 27 men; Louis Pasternak, Edward Leibovitz and James Sorbara.

The Apothecaps are planning to conduct a drive for adhesive tape and absorbent cotton for the Canadian Red Cross. They will visit personally every drug store in Toronto for donations of these articles. If they get their objective they will have a mile of adhesive tape and a ton of absorbent cotton. Joseph Fox is president of the organization.

Varsity Students Far from Home Already Making Yuletide Plans

While most students are dreaming pleasantly of returning to their not-too-distant homes for the Christmas holidays and are making plans for every sort of activity from parties to studying, those students whose homes are in distant parts of Canada or in other countries also have their plans.

Anita Johnston, II U.C., from Moose Jaw, Sask., has already made her reservations for the trip home. "It is a long trip," she replied to the Varsity's reporter, "but the fun afterwards makes up for it. And there are always the chances that the train will get stuck in snow-drifts and make things exciting."

On the other hand Yvonne Finley, II U.C., whose home is in Luskland, Sask., plans to visit friends in Ottawa. "I'm going to investigate the skiing conditions there," she said, "and that should keep me pretty busy all holidays."

Coming from the opposite side of Canada, Miss A. J. Pickard, II Vic, of Charlottetown, P.E.I., is returning home for Christmas, even though she

Editors to Meet In Xmas Holidays

Dr. Cody will Open Convention of Editors of High School Publications in U.C. During Christmas Holidays

DANCE IN WOMEN'S UNION

Two days of bustling activity are planned for the Annual High School Editors Convention, to be held in West Hall, University College, Dec. 27 and 28, it was announced last night by Ben Holdsworth, I Soc. and Phil., Editor of "The Canadian High" and Chairman of the convention committee.

President Cody will formally open the Convention following the registration of candidates in West Hall on Friday, Dec. 27, following which the High School Editors will be taken on a comprehensive tour of the University of Toronto Campus. It is expected that about 125 candidates, from all over the province, will attend.

Following the tour of the grounds, the young editors will get acquainted at a dance to be held at the Women's Union, to which former editors of High School magazines and newspapers will be invited.

The following day the convention will get down to business and will hear (Continued on Page 4)

Student Nurses Come from Afar

Only a half dozen nurses from the University of Toronto School of Nursing have gone overseas with the Ontario unit, Miss E. K. Russell, director of the school, told the Varsity. There are very few Canadian nurses in England, she explained.

The School, directed by Miss Russell since 1929, is a development of the former School of Public Health Nursing, and took its present shape in 1933 when it moved into old Queen's Hall, 7 Queen's Park Crescent. The rather small building contains the administrative offices and teaching section as well as the women's residence.

Among the nurses doing post graduate work here are selected people from all over Canada and other countries — (Continued on Page 4)

Club, Under Direction of Dr. Peaker, to Broadcast on Coast-to-Coast Hookup from Great Hall on Thursday

FULL REHEARSAL TODAY

With the final rehearsal slated for 1.15 p.m. Wednesday, in the Great Hall at Hart House, the men of the Hart House Glee Club are putting on the finishing touches in preparation for the coast-to-coast broadcast from the Hall from 1.15-1.30 on Thursday. Dr. Peaker has called an extra full rehearsal at 5 p.m. in the Music Room today, in addition to the regular rehearsal at 5 p.m. Tuesday. Near perfection is hoped for despite the fact that military training has reduced the club's membership considerably in comparison with other years.

The final program of carols is as follows: a group of three by the Glee Club; Quem Pastores, Puer Nobis and the Old Watte's Carol; the First Noel sung by all present; three more carols by the club: Come All You Worthy Gentlemen, Oh Little Town of Bethlehem, All My Heart; finally Hark the Herald Angels Sing, sung by all present.

The members of the Glee Club will cat luncheon in the Great Hall both (Continued on Page 4)

Representatives of campus organizations wishing to insert notices in the Bulletin Board or Coming Events columns are warned that such notices will not be accepted over the telephone. They may be left at the Men's Office, Hart House, before 7 p.m., at the Women's Office, Room 4A, U.C., before 6 p.m., or the press before midnight. Positively no notices will be accepted after these deadlines.

Physicist Demonstrates "Miracles with Glass"

C. J. Philips, Noted Physicist of Corning Glass Works, Illustrates "Modern Miracles in Glass" Lecture

SPONSORED BY R.C.I.

That the simile "as light and as fragile as glass" is no longer necessarily true, was demonstrated on Saturday night by Mr. C. J. Philips, B.Sc., A.M., noted physicist of the Corning Glass Works, in his lecture on "Modern Miracles in Glass," sponsored by the Royal Canadian Institute in Convocation Hall.

"We are now able to make glass as strong as cast iron," Mr. Philips informed his dubious audience. "For many years we have had two clues but it is only recently that we have found out how to use them. The first is the Prince Rupert Drop." This drop, it seems, is a drop of melted glass which is plunged into cold water where it solidifies in a shape rather like a tadpole with a very long straight tail. Mr. Philips pounded this drop again and again with a hammer and nothing happened! However, with much effort, Mr. Philips managed, with his fingers, to break the tip off the tail—and there was a shower of powder! The Prince Rupert Drop, tail and all, just crumbled.

"The second clue to producing hard, durable glass," continued Mr. Philips, "was found in Bologna Glass." Mr. Philips had with him a Bologna vase.

Vic Union Sponsors Xmas Party

Only All-Victoria Informal Dance of the Season to be Held Wednesday to Defray Expenses of Injured Athletes

TICKETS NOW ON SALE

Held to defray the expenses of injured Vic athletes, the Victoria College Athletic Union Christmas dance will take place Wednesday, the Union executive announced last night.

The dance is the only All-Victoria informal dance to be held this season, supplementing the regular series of class parties, which are restricted to the members of a single year.

Howard Cable's orchestra will provide music in Burwash Hall, and another orchestra will play in Alumni Hall, should the ticket sale warrant it. Jim Carson, all-star intercollegiate inside will give a modern interpretation of St. Nick. Trinity College footballers are expected to attend.

Tickets, which are being sold singly, go on sale at Alumni Hall today from ten until two o'clock, or can be procured from members of the Football Club. There will be dancing from 9 until 12.30.

Theologs Hold Carol Service

Illuminated Christmas trees and a brightly-blazing hearth-fire lit the Leonard Library on Friday night as Wycliffe College students and their guests gathered for their Literary Society's annual Carol Service.

Mr. J. Campbell-McInnes, lecturer in Reading and Public Speaking at Wycliffe, led the singing of a varied group of carols and folk songs. The guests were received by the Senior Student, Owen P. Prichard, B.A., and John Flagler, B.A., Prime Minister of the Society, along with Reverend Principal Armitage, and two representatives from the College Council.

STUDENTS' FARES

The Railway Companies are issuing to students of the university, and to members of the university staff, round-trip tickets for the Christmas and New Year vacation, at the rate of the current one way fare and one-quarter for the round trip.

Students wishing to take advantage of this reduction should leave their names with the Registrar of the college, or the secretary of the faculty or department concerned, on or before Monday, December 16th.

The certificates will be issued to the students at the college, faculty or department office, at 5 p.m. on Friday, December 20th.

Members of the staff may obtain certificates at the Registrar's office, Simcoe Hall.

To demonstrate its strength he used it to pound a nail into a block of wood—and the glass didn't even chip! He then set the vase on the table, and scratched the interior with a light object. The vase collapsed—just like a house of cards when someone removes the bottom card.

Experiments based on these two phenomena have produced results, it was demonstrated by Mr. Philips. Among his vast array of glassware, tumblers, pitchers and colourful vases of all kinds, (Continued on Page 4)

Rockefeller Foundation Chooses Professor Best As Scientific Director

Grads to Frolic New Year's Eve

Music will be Supplied by Joe de Courcy's Orchestra at Fifteenth Annual Ball in Hart House

PROMISE MIDNIGHT FEATURE

The Graduate Committee of Hart House has arranged the fifteenth ball of the series for the coming holiday season. Although called "Annual" the Graduates' New Year's Ball was not held last year due to New Year's Eve falling on a Sunday.

The ticket sale for this most elaborate of all Hart House affairs is limited to the Senior Members of the House and their friends. Only 450 tickets will be sold since the Great Hall and the five other rooms where supper is served will seat only 900 people.

A smaller affair than the All-University dance, the Graduates' Ball will need almost as much space. Beside the six rooms used for supper, the big gym and one of the common rooms will supply dancing space.

Although the ticket price has been reduced from $6.50 to $5.00 this year, expense is not being spared to make the Graduates' Ball the most spectacular House dance. "The electrician is allowed to spread himself for this affair," the Warden's office informed the Varsity. Entertainment in keeping with the holiday spirit and the decorations. (Continued on Page 4)

Tonight at the Art Gallery the National Film Society is presenting a program featuring the cultural development of moving pictures. Films to be presented include "En Natt" a film which concerns the Finnish Civil War of 1918 "Between Two Worlds" a saga of Swiss life and "The Transfer of Power".

Professor E. J. G. ### Pond, Once Site of Many Picnics Supplanted by Hart House Pool

Once the site of Sunday-school picnics, McCaul's Pond now lies beneath Hart House. Only in extremely wet weather does the ghost of this former adjunct to university initiations stalk the lower regions of the house.

The stream which fed the pond, known as the Taddle to undergraduates, flowed from the hilly region to the north of the university through the grounds beside the "cinder path", down behind the university library and south-eastward into Toronto Bay. It received its name, which is correctly Tattle, from a farm through which it flowed belonging to a family of that name. Descendants of this family are said to still live in Toronto.

When the road which crosses the ravine north of the library was built the Physiology Professor Here Second Canadian Scientist to be Chosen Head of International Health Division

ANNOUNCED BY CODY

Dr. C. H. Best, Professor in Physiology, has been chosen a scientific director of the International Health Division of the Rockefeller Foundation, it was announced Saturday by President H. J. Cody.

Dr. Best is the second scientist in Canada to receive the honour, the late Dr. J. G. Fitzgerald having been a director for some years. However, he is the first physiologist to be so honoured.

The Board of Trustees of the Rockefeller Foundation has asked Dr. Best to continue in his newly-appointed post until the end of 1943, the announcement stated. He will be one of the five directors, of whom four are Americans, to direct health services all over the world.

The appointment is not expected to draw Professor Best from the university for any long periods of time, and it will not, it is understood, involve serious curtailment of the war research work in which he has been engaged.

Contributions To Green Issue Being Judged

Deadline for contributions to the Varsity's Green Issue was Friday and those sent in are now in the hands of the judges. Principal M. W. Wallace of U.C., Professor E. J. Pratt of Vic, and Mr. C. F. Comfort, whose decisions on the prize-winning prose, poetry and art respectively will be made public on Wednesday in the big issue itself.

According to the Editor-in-chief, Larry Smith, the bulk of the literary contributions this year is poetry. For competition purposes this poetry is being divided into two classes, light and serious, both of which will be judged by Professor Pratt. The prizes in each class will be in cash and no announcement of winners will be made until the issue comes out.

The Issue will comprise eight pages of green print, of which at least four will feature the literary and art work. After publishing this version of the annual verdant splurge the Varsity staff will go to sleep for three weeks so as to get wound up for next term's grind which starts with an issue on January the eighth.

stream was dammed to form McCaul's Pond. This became the favourite resort of picnickers and model yacht enthusiasts.

With the growth of the city the stream became defiled and was gradually forced to take its way through the sewers. Some time before the turn of the century the little woodland lake, now become a stagnant pond, was suppressed, and later Hart House was built above it.

The water spirits are not easily coerced, however, and it is necessary to have an automatic pump on guard at all times in the shooting gallery at Hart House. From time to time the confined brook gets the upper hand and floods the sub-basement.

Battalions . . . Stand Easy!

The exams for prospective officers have been written and parades and drills are finished as a term whose dominant characteristic has been military draws to a close. Not for another month will the huge military organization which has sprung up on this campus begin to function again. In the intervening time three thousand men will concentrate on academic studies and holiday relaxation.

In retrospect, the past term has been without doubt unique in the college experience of those of us who have been here for several years. Last year, of course, many students took the C.O.T.C. courses but not until this autumn, after passage of the National Resources Mobilization Act requiring all males over 21 to take military training, did the campus take on such a martial aspect. It is a far cry from our first few years at Varsity. But for those who entered this year, their whole college course, if they are able to complete it, will be dominated by military activities to an increasing degree.

The military organization set up here on the University of Toronto campus is the largest in any Canadian university, and numerically it is larger than most of the training centres provided under the N.R.M. Act. On several occasions in the past we have complimented the men of Varsity upon the way in which they have entered into the new scheme, and likewise we have commended the officers of the two battalions on their work. As the first period of the training scheme closes we would like to extend compliments to both again. Few people realize the tremendous amount of detailed work entailed in setting up and maintaining smoothly the huge organization which embraces so many men. There have been mixups at times; that is natural. But on the whole the organization has been carried out splendidly, and to the officers of the C.O.T.C. and the Training Centre Battalion much credit is due. To the students who have studied military manuals, marched, listened to lectures, shouldered rifles, dug trenches, and at the same time have carried on their academic work, much praise is due.

But it's all over for almost a month, so—stand easy!

Things We'd Like to Know . . . Mussolini's Thoughts

It isn't always a wise thing to start making guesses about a world war, but if we were allowed to hazard one prognostication it would be that we wouldn't be at all surprised if Signor "Second Caesar" Mussolini were perhaps regretting a certain decisive action he took last June when France was being beaten to her knees. If history gave second chances, it might well be that Mussolini would think again before coming to the side of Germany by stabbing France in the back.

For if Il Duce could stand on the shores of Italy and look across the Adriatic, a sorry sight would meet his eyes. And then should he turn his gaze south across the blue Mediterranean towards the land where once his men so nobly battered down a few thousand half-clad natives, again he would hasten to cover his eyes (and the eyes of his Italian citizens still at home). In Albania the heroic Greeks, drawing inspiration from their ancient ancestors, have surprised the whole world in general, and the Italians in particular, by pushing them from the Greek border right back to the Adriatic from whence they came. On a wide front, the length of the border from Corizza inland to Porto Edda on the sea they are pushing the Italians north along the coast, and have isolated many Italian columns in parallel valleys. The Italians now have only three small ports left on the coast through which they can bring supplies and men from home.

In the sand-swept lands of North Africa, Mussolini's legions are likewise moving at full speed—in reverse. After penetrating far into Egypt earlier this fall, they have been smashed and demoralized by a vicious British offensive launched at the beginning of last week. Reports say that 30,000 Italians have been captured, and the remaining forces have been pushed back until they are wedged in between the sea and a high escarpment. Other forces are farther back in Libya but the British have not penetrated into Libya at all. The mechanized land blitzkrieg of the British has been accompanied and aided by constant shelling from Royal Navy battleships moving along the coast.

Reports trickle out from Italy, partially true no doubt, that there is much grumbling about increased rationing, and even rioting. A campaign to warn Italian citizens against food hoarding and to strengthen their mettle has been launched by the government-controlled newspapers. All in all, prospects for a Merry Christmas in Italy are none too good.

A Message of Strength

(Editor's note: The following Christmas message to the Faculty of Dentistry by Dean Mason was brought to our attention by a student in that faculty. Believing that it well typifies the spirit and resolve of our peoples as we face the stern task ahead, we take the liberty of reprinting the message in part in the hope that it will prove of inspiration to others.)

During the past year the Empire has experienced the horrors and atrocities of modern warfare. Our boats have been torpedoed on the high seas and the magnetic mines have taken their toll. From the air, destruction has entered the homes of our friends and relatives in England, exacting its death quota. These physical trials, however, will never break the courage and spirit of the British people. We shall carry on, with our ally, Greece, until other friendly nations can be reorganized and finally participate in ultimate victory for right and for the privilege of peace-loving peoples to govern their own countries.

We have a strong conviction of duty. We will play the game in the full knowledge that by travail is the spirit and soul of man developed to its highest ideals. We must be calm in adversity, relying on spiritual powers to uphold our morale and give us strength to bring the nations to a joyous peace.

It Has Been Said . . .

We learn wisdom from failure much more than from success. We often discover what will do by finding out what will not do; and probably he who never made a mistake never made a discovery.

Joseph Bonnet at the Console

The man who is called the greatest organist of our time played in Eaton Auditorium Saturday afternoon. If one could say any more than has been said in that first sentence, Joseph Bonnet would still deserve it. Ordinary organ music is not difficult enough for him—he writes his own.

Twelve numbers (and four encores) made up the recital; this review will be limited to three. It was all excellently done, with an artistry and a musician-ship which very few people in this world possess. Any mistakes which were made were so entirely unimportant that they did not matter and were obviously caused by unfamiliarity with the console of this

snow, snow
beautiful snow.
How I love to lie in the mud.
anon.

The Bobbsey twins were out of bed early on the beautiful Friday morning. "Look," said little Billie, gazing out of the window enraptured, "snow . . . piles and piles of snow."

Quicker than you could say Jack Rabinowitz, the laughing children were into their warm leggings and bonnets and dashed downstairs to the breakfast room.

"Oh mummy," said little Alice, "look . . . piles and piles of snow."

"Eat your Crispy Crunch and shut up or I'll knock out both your teeth," said their mother, sweetly, for she loved her twins dearly.

Before you could say Jack Rabinowitz, the fun-loving children were up and out of the house playing in the deep snow drifts. First, Billy buried little Alice in the snow and then little Alice buried Billie in the snow, and after tiring of this sport, they buried Jack Rabinowitz in the snow.

Soon after a strange bearded gentleman in a fur coat walked by and the Bobbsey twins buried him in the snow.

"What a lark," said little Billie. "This is more fun than the time we drowned old man Jenkins at Tacoma Beach last year," assented little Alice.

Before long, they had buried over fifty pedestrians in the snow and it was not until late evening that the happy youngsters decided to call it a day. They made their way homewards with happy footsteps. At home, waiting for them, and seeing that her precious darlings were safe, she kissed them and sent them to bed.

The following day the Bobbsey twins were arrested and sentenced to life imprisonment in the State Penitentiary. To this day, as they pensively finger the iron bars of their little cell, they think back upon those happy carefree days spent in the Azores which may be found in their book "White Hell" or "The Bobbsey Twins in the Siberian Salt Mines."

particular organ.

I could listen to Mr. Bonnet play Bach as long as he would play. The one number he chose, the Toccata and Fugue in D Minor, happened to be one which a good many listeners thought they knew. It has suffered the unkind fate of a great deal of Bach's music: to be known in arrangement rather than in its original form. It is indubitably an organ work, especially when played by someone who has enough technique to do it justice. Bonnet injected into it an abstract clarity which allowed its true structural beauty to be recognized.

Cesar Franck, the man who made an organ sound like an orchestra and an orchestra like an organ, was represented by Piece Heroique. In it one could trace different developments of the same germ ideas which inspired the D Minor Symphony. Bonnet's dynamics are so subtle in comparison to those of other organists that one must gaze in amazement. Instead of moving in jerks, his crescendos were brilliant developments, almost as gradual as those in a symphony orchestra. I could not keep from wondering where he always found an extra foot available at precisely the right instant.

To show us why this other music appeared so easy to him, Joseph Bonnet played his own Rhapsodie Catalane, with a pedal cadenza of surpassing difficulty. Chromatic scale passages in thirds, passages in sixths, and three note chords played with two feet, are certainly spectacular. The whole program was an eye-opener of what an organ could really be. I have always thought that somewhere, sometime I might hear it sound as it did Saturday.

Peggy Moreland

A performance is good when one comes away with the desire to master that instrument. Peggy Moreland's performance gave me, unfortunately not a violinist, this wish. All of us seemed to find real pleasure in feeling and thinking on equal terms with performer and instrument. Her very personal playing was well suited to the arrangements on her program. The Kreidler arrangement was, as are all his arrangements, Kreisler; but this may be enjoyable. I am quite sure Miss Moreland deserves one of the credit. The Girl with the flaxen hair of Debussy was meant for the piano; the de Falla Spanish Dance was better than usual.

The high point in the program was the Mozart concerto. The performance was interesting and, within the bounds of her interpretation, good. The violinist caught the gaiety of the first and third movements and hinted at the tender staidness of the second.

Miss O'Greta McNell's accompaniments were, on the whole, adequate. The program was to me, one of the two or three most satisfying ones I have heard in Toronto this season.

Preston Sturges is the latest wonder man of Hollywood. The latest example of his genius may be seen this week at the Imperial Theatre under the title of "Christmas in July." The plot is simple, CHRISTMAS dealing with a young fellow who is hoaxed into believing that he has won a twenty-five thousand dollar slogan contest and proceeds to spend the money as the title of the film suggests.

Sturges, who accomplished so much with his "Great McGinty," has another hit here. Again the same simplicity, the same quiet note of sincerity pervades the picture, and again, an excellent picture to his credit. His direction is the neatest and the most inventive seen here in a long time. The film is simple, the acting is excellent and Sturges' own script provides all the laughs and romance that anyone could ask for.

"The World in Flames" is one of the best documentary pieces of work to come out since the war. Simply a compilation of newsreels, it sketches the history of the war in a swift and complete manner. The narration is just fair—F.J.S.

Intramural Cage Squads To Shed One Player' In Upper Gym Contests

Intramural Committee Announces Introduction of Four Man Basketball for Little Gym Games

S.P.S. FINED FOR DEFAULT

Four-man basketball will make its appearance for the first time in university cage history when the inter-faculty basketball schedule gets under way soon after the Christmas holidays. Announcement this followed the weekly meeting of the Intramural Committee on Friday afternoon.

This decision, which only one representative opposed, was made because of the smallness of the upper gym floor, where 80 per cent of all basketball games will be played. The teams will add the fifth man when they descend the stairs to engage on the wider expanse of the big gym. The Meds delegate argued that the participants would not take the same interest because, with one man stricken from the squad, they would not get the same chance as with a full quintet. However, "Mac" McCutcheon said that with play opened up, substitutes would have to be thrown into the fray more often.

The committee also decided to clamp down heavily on defaults which have been growing steadily more numerous. Junior Meds were fined for defaulting without notice a swimming meet to Junior U.C. Senior School was also fined three dollars and one hundred points for defaulting the swimming semi-final to Senior U.C. The committee wished it to be stressed, however, that no fines would be levied if a team voiced its withdrawal beforehand.

The proposal to initiate boxing, fencing and wrestling meets on the same lines as that of the swimming was voted down unanimously by the committee on the grounds that it was too big an affair to undertake at the present time.

ROUND THE TRACK

By Stan Westcott

The boys of the winged hoof from each faculty are still scampering merrily under Hart House's elevated oval under Hec Phillips' watchful eye as they tune up for the interfaculty indoor track meets beginning after Christmas.

In former years these meets were all held on Tuesday afternoons, but in 1941 this custom will be altered to allow for men whose time is spent on military training Tuesday p.m.'s an opportunity to participate. The competitions will be run off on alternate Fridays and Tuesdays.

The interfaculty speedsters will start active competition on Friday, Jan. 24, then follow meets on Tuesday Jan. 28, Friday Feb. 7, and so on, until Feb. 25, which falls directly on a Tuesday.

As soon as the interested collegians return from their Xmas invasion of turkey and have hurdled any unsettling stumbling blocks that may be placed in their paths by inconsiderate profs, track training for the indoor season will begin in earnest.

Coach Phillips announces that several talented freshmen have been strutting their stuff, many of whom could become outstanding if they had more time to train. Many of these lads may launch careers which will carry them to Varsity track immortality as they enter the indoor championships in January.

The executives for the 1940-41 University Track Club has been elected and consists of the following gentlemen: (we learned that word from the company sergeant-major)

President: Tom Barnett, Wycliffe.
Vice-President: Gerry Proderick, Victoria.

Secretary: Bob Delaney, Meds.
Assistant Secretary and Cross-country Rep: Geoffrey Parke-Taylor, Wycliffe.

Speaking OF SPORT

By Dave MacIntosh

YOU MAY BE THANKFUL

We found out something on Friday afternoon. We sat in on the weekly meeting of the Intramural Committee, and were amazed at the number and the importance of the questions that it handled. Here is a body which has the interests of the sportsman at heart, which does everything in its power to make the running of the interfaculty scheme as smooth as possible. The representatives do not sit idly around the big table in the Directorate Office, listening with stifled yawns to proposals of Chairman Bill Wilson or Intramural Director Mac McCutcheon. Those boys dig in and speak positively of their views. Throughout the university it is they who are attempting to promote and foster spectator as well as participant interest.

To date their efforts have borne little fruit, though through no fault of their own. How many U.C. or Vic men came out to witness the semi-final lacrosse match between their two faculties? A hundred, perhaps, all told. And that is only one example in this entire season's schedule of interfaculty sport. Don't come back at us with the old argument of Time. If you have any interest in your college at all you can find Time. Interfaculty sport has been on a higher standard this year than ever before and an hour spent in Hart House taking in any one of the sights along the Muscle Midway will not be wasted.

You have representatives who are working their heads off to make interfaculty sport everything that you would like it to be. But they must have the support of you, the players, the team managers, and the fans, if the system is going to accomplish the purpose for which it was meant.

4-MAN BASKETBALL

Mac McCutcheon summed up the whole thing perfectly when he said that the new system of four-man basketball is the biggest step ever taken in the history of the cage sport here. It had been in the minds of Mac and Steve for two or three years, and Steve has actually tested it thoroughly in the past few weeks.

The reason for it is simple enough. The upper gym floor is too small for ten men to attempt to play any real basketball on it. They simply clutter up the floor and the game results in a scramble-ball affair. The new rule will allow considerably more freedom. Passing will once again be in vogue, the art of dribbling may once more be practiced. Better players will not be hampered, and those out for the enjoyment of the game will have more opportunity to participate. All this, merely from the players' angle. From the spectator viewpoint, too, there will be a great improvement. The game will be faster, more open, higher-scoring and altogether more spectacular. No more of those 8-6 wins that we heard of more than once last year.

Bear in mind, though, that all this applies only to the upper gym. When the boys come downstairs, they will take on the fifth man and operate in the traditional manner.

KNOCKOUT

Proposed at the Committee meeting last Friday was a series of B.W. & F. meets to be run on a round-robin schedule, as the swimming. It was voted down flatly. Little else could be done under the circumstances and Mac did not press the issue when with one accord around the table disapproval was voiced by all delegates.

The noble arts of self-defence have been languishing in the doldrums for better than six years now and to all intents and purposes this is not the year to attempt to administer the smelling salts. "It's too big" was the verdict of the Congress, and in that we believe they handed down the only verdict possible. To get eight men out to condition for a boxing, wrestling or fencing team would be well nigh impossible. Years ago great names attracted the boys to the Sock Exchange and there was hardly room to skip a rope or throw a punch at your shadow. Of late Varsity fighters have not been bathed in the days of old and the game has taken the long count. When B.W. & F. will be revived no one can say. Maybe two years from now. Perhaps three. For the nonce we will have to be content with our novice and senior meets.

AND TO CONCLUDE

With this, dear readers, we sign off for You Know What. In passing, a hasty vote for the best sporting event at Varsity during the fall term. . . Jack Mullett and Ian MacCallum winning the interfaculty tennis doubles final,ousting Bruce Hall and Johnny Whallon by the count of 6-2, 10-8, 6-6, 2-6, 6-4. . . Now . . . A ripping Yulcಿದೆ . . . to you . . . and you . . . and . . .

U.C. MEETS SCHOOL IN BOXLA FINAL TODAY

Undeafed Red and White Encounter Senior Engineers in Big Gym at Four Bells This Afternoon

U.C. FAVOURITE

The finals for the Dr. W. A. Dafeo Cup get under way this afternoon in the big gym, when Sr. School and U.C. tangle in the first game of a best-two-out-of-three series for the trophy and interfaculty lacrosse championship that goes with it.

The experts are picking the Royal College to continue its winning streak and cop the laurels. The Red and White has a powerful, well-balanced stick squad, with substitutes who are almost the equal of the regulars. It is, perhaps, the hardest checking outfit to appear in the big gym this year and all goals scored against it have been well earned.

Cliff Ballagh, despite a re-occurrence of a perennial knee injury, will play today. Ballagh was hurt in the game against Vic on Thursday but has recovered sufficiently to dress for the conflict.

In Ballagh, Francis, McNulty and McDiarmid the Royal College has a high-scoring front line which will be difficult for the Schoolmen to stop. With McCulloch in the nets and Al-combrack on defense the Engineers will have a great deal of trouble in bulging the twins.

School, however, has a powerful squad which cannot be denied. With scorers like Radmore, Gilbert, Starr and Quist

Ever since reading a commendable article by our pal of 'tother angle of this page, Owen Prichard, we have been consumed with a desire to say a word or two.

Said article — commendable, mind you — dealt with the fact that six wonderful men have become pioneers of a new education, and load shall we sing their praises. We should like you to know that ten women are suffering from the same phobia and 10-6, well, we'd like to say something too. In view of all this, we'll tell you.

These 16 folk have entered this new course in Physical Education, which leads to a Bachelor of Physical and Health Education (B.P.H.E.) degree after three years of the healthy enjoyment of things, and that this course is the first of its kind in the university. Graduates may proceed to O.C.E., and are qualified to accept positions up to the highest grades in secondary schools, and to teach Health Education and they are sure to make things hot around the U.C. net while Reeves on defense has broken up countless rushes on the School goal.

The Engineers qualified for the finals by winding up on top of Group II and defeating Meds from Group III. U.C. led Group III and defeated Pharmacy A and Vic, both from Group I.

Physical Training as subjects. For several years now, there has been a course at Varsity which has Physical Education grafted on to the regular 3 year Arts course and 1 year of concentrated Physical Ed and 1 year at O.C.E. This course, called the Diploma course, since a diploma for Phys. Ed. is awarded after the fourth year, is stopping, and the present second year will be the last to graduate in it. In '43 we trust. The new course, will, year by year, till then, take over.

In the news course, Health Education is substituted for the Arts subjects of the old one. This course speaks for the study of the healthy human being and the way of preserving the health part of it, and incidentally the human being. The object is to teach humanity how to maintain a fair degree of health, and to bring a poor degree of health up to a better standard. In 2nd and 3rd years, the courses in Physical Education are given separately to men and women, as the lectures consist, to a great extent, of the theory of active participation in the different forms of physical activity, and the girls just don't play rugby — not yet!

The immediate purpose of this course is to provide an opportunity for men and women to qualify themselves for positions in the schools of the country as teachers in both Physical and Health Education but the knowledge acquired by its graduates is of such a nature that it should prove valuable, no matter what walk of life they may enter." And this last, my dears, is precisely why these 16 valiant souls have undertaken to blossom forth in this course. We have it in writing!

the result is one of the finest movies the industry has produced in a long time. The whole picture is shot in relation to the tramp steamer, the Glencairn, running over the oceans during this war. The script is remarkable as a semi-silent film — for the first five minutes or so on the screen not a word is said, and this tendency remains throughout.

The deadness of a sailor's life and his hardships are presented with a dis-passionate clarity which makes this picture remarkable, not primarily as entertainment, but as history. The scene in the South American harbour is not so terribly cut that its idea is lost. It would be unfair to close without congratulating the photographers for their high artistic sense throughout the show, and for refraining from inserting news reel shots of dive bombers. The idea of relying on the crew's reactions is much more vivid.

The added attraction, "The Golden Fleece", is an omega picture. It has as much originality as an organ-grinder, repeats as stolidly as his organ, and is about as funny as his monkey. The idea may have been funny about the time of Jason and the Argonauts of that period.

Charlie Zwygard's Gymnasts Prepare for Barton Cup Trials

D. M. Barton Trophy Awarded to Gymnast Showing the Greatest Improvement in All Branches of the Sport

COMMENCE THIS WEEK

By Owen Prichard

Preparations for trials for the D. M.
Barton Trophy will likely commence this week in Coach Zwygard's classes in the Upper Gym at Hart House.

The Barton Trophy, awarded annually since 1936 for the most improved gymnast, is the handsomest prize which can be won by a novice in any individual sport at Varsity. The Trophy consists of a silver bowl, about 10 inches in diameter mounted on a rectangular base about two feet long.
Flanking the bowl are gold figures representing two gymnasts in the hand-stand position.

Tests are held at intervals during the year, and the Trophy is awarded to the gymnast showing the greatest improvement in all branches of the sport.
The Interfaculty Gymnastic competition will be held in the new year, towards the end of January. Interesting competition is expected in this tournament, considering the number of last year's Senior Intercollegiate Championship squad who are back in training.

Victoria has two of the championship quartet who are eligible this year in Toss and Simpson, Brett of Dents and Willie Mark of S.P.S. are also back on the mat and bar. Grandy of fourth-year Meds and Tom Jull of School, are not to be overlooked as contenders for the Interfaculty title. Jull is a former

"Attendance at the classes this season has been about twenty-five nightly," estimated Charlie Zwygard. Coach Zwygard, who has been pretty busy lately in instructing the Physical Ed
Boys in the mastery of gymnastic form and elementary movements, says that there is still room for more students in the afternoon classes. There is plenty of equipment available for the aspiring gymnasts. The Upper Gym is well-stocked with mats, high and parallel bars, rings, four horses, four bucks, and a new box horse which has been used so far mostly for the Physical Ed group.

Brown, who swam intermediate intercollegiate last year, hit the water quite a bit behind Graham, last man for S.
P.S., who wasn't working any too hard. When Graham turned at the end he was much amazed to see Brown out in front. By then it was too late to overtake him and Aerial Navigation won the last race. Poor old Jim was mightily winded by his stupendous effort, as this was the first meet in which he had been able to participate.

Mr. Graham McInnes, art critic for Saturday Night and The New World has been writing their scripts. He told the Varsity on Friday that the Film Board is beginning a new series on Canadian artists. These are on 16mm.
film in colour and with sound. Because of their size they will be distributed only to clubs and institutions.
They have begun a film on A. Y. Jack-

Any students wishing to see the films

THE UNIVERSITY OF TORONTO, TUESDAY, DECEMBER 17th, 1940

No. 58

THE CARILLONNEUR WILL BROADCAST DURING XMAS SEASON

J. Leland Richardson will Present Four Carillon Programs, Mainly Christmas Carols, from the Soldiers' Tower

COAST-TO-COAST PROGRAMS

J. Leland Richardson, carillonneur to the University of Toronto, will present four coast-to-coast carillon programs from Soldiers' Tower during the Christmas season, it was announced last night. The programs, which will consist mainly of Christmas carols, will be presented over the C.B.C. national hookup on December 23, 24, 26, and 27, from 12.15 to 12.30 p.m.

Mr. Richardson gave six radio broadcasts last Easter, and last Christmas Eve he presented the first coast-to-coast program from the Soldiers' Memorial Tower. The year before a program was carried over a local station, he stated.

The university carillonneur, who has been master of the 23 bells since 1931, pointed out that the problem of picking up the tones properly by microphone often presents difficulties for the radio technicians. If weather permits the microphones are set up at the east end of the Hart House quadrangle where the tones can be picked up as they sound to the average car. Should a blizzard be raging, however, the pickup would be impossible, Mr. Richardson said.

The bells were placed in the Tower in 1927 by the Alumni Association and the university at a cost of $35,632.70. The largest of the tenor bells weighs four and three-quarter tons while the tiniest treble tips the beams at a mere 235 pounds.

Students Plan Holiday Reading

With about a thousand books already reserved for the holidays, the library announces that reserved books will be given out beginning Thursday or Friday of this week. Last year a total of 3,179 books were taken out over Christmas from the four main campus libraries, and 1,755 from the central library alone.

Authorities offered a few suggestions as to rules for the guidance of students reserving Christmas books. Reservations are to be made on the yellow "week" slips, and will be received any day between the hours of 8:45 a.m. and 6:00 p.m. until the day when books are (Continued on Page 4)

Will Undergraduates Return Improved By New Year's Resolutions?

When 1941 rolls around, will undergrads return to Varsity improved by New Year's resolutions? Not by any means—that is, if history is consistent. Such resolutions seem only to be broken.

Some undergraduates still have ideas on the subject. Two serious minded third year students came forth with their opinions. One thinks it is much more satisfactory if the resolution concerns some such general idea as obtaining a better class standing in preference to a specific idea like "not skipping lectures."

The other insisted, "Resolutions really are a help and an inspiration because they keep you thinking about the point involved, and subconsciously you strive to improve — that is, if you take them at all seriously."

One had hit upon the idea that if you make resolutions to do the opposite to what you know you should, you will automatically break them and end up by doing the right thing, anyway, maybe...

Holiday Work Is Plentiful

"Employment for Students is Better This Year Than Ever Before," e.g. Department Stores and Radio Surveying

200 IN POST OFFICE

"Christmas employment for students is better this year than ever before," Mr. E. A. Macdonald, General Secretary-Treasurer of the Students' Administrative Council told The Varsity yesterday.

"We have been fortunate in getting positions for a large number of students at the local post offices," Mr. Macdonald added. Over 200 Varsity men and women will be kept busy during the Christmas vacation sorting letters and delivering mail to help the post office through its annual deluge.

City department stores have also hired many university students to help them during the Christmas rush.

The most intriguing bit of work will be a survey of many Canadian families in scattered Ontario cities to determine the efficacy of radio advertising. An anonymous Canadian firm wishes to have opinions recorded in Timmins, Fort William, Kirkland Lake, Galt, Woodstock and Toronto, and S.A.C. officials found prospective Varsity canvassers so scarce in several of these centres that they were forced to advertise for applicants.

STUDENTS' FARES

The Railway Companies are issuing to students of the university, and to members of the university staff, round-trip tickets for the Christmas and New Year vacation, at the rate of the current one way fare and one-quarter for the round trip.

Students wishing to take advantage of this reduction should leave their names with the Registrar of the college, or the secretary of the faculty or department concerned, on or before Monday, December 16th.

The certificates will be issued to the students at the college, faculty or department office, at 5 p.m. on Friday, December 20th.

Members of the staff may obtain certificates at the Registrar's office, Simcoe Hall.

Engineers trounce Royal College in first of three game series for interfaculty lacrosse championship.

SCORE 9-3

By George Forster

Sr. S.P.S. stickmen moved a step closer to the Dr. W. A. Dafoe Cup by downing U.C. 9-3 in the first game of the best two out of three series for the interfaculty lacrosse championship.

The game was very fast and rough, resulting in frequent thrills, spills and penalties. The largest crowd to watch a lacrosse game this year was on hand in the big gym.

The Engineers were never given serious opposition by the Royal Collegians who failed to impress as they did in their league games, as they relaxed the close checking which carried them to the finals.

Both teams were neck and neck throughout the first chukker with Moorehead and Francis getting the only goals to knot the count 1-1. The School attack began to click in the second stanza and they swarmed all around the U.C. net to rap in four goals. Moorehead got two with Reeves and Radmore each scoring one, while Manager Ken Hignell saved the Red and White from oblivion with a fast tricky goal.

Reeves opened the scoring for the Sons of Toike Oike in the third period with both teams a man short after Ballagh and Quist had been chased for staging a stick swinging spree in the corner. Radmore kept the pot boiling by scoring a few minutes later, then Alcombrack broke away to get the final tally for the Royal College. Chukker while Radmore and Quist U.C. was held scoreless in the closing (Continued on Page 4)

MENINGITIS QUARANTINES U.C. CO-EDS FOR TEN DAYS

Twenty-Six Girls Confined in Falconer House, Other Residents of Whitney Hall Under "Moral Quarantine"

LASTS UNTIL FRIDAY NOON

Following the outbreak last week of spinal meningitis which resulted in the death of Betty Boyd, first year Householder Economics student, about thirty-five University College co-eds are under closed quarantine and all others have been placed under a "moral quarantine."

The second floor of Falconer House, south wing of Whitney Hall, has been closed off and placed under quarantine by city health officials, it was learned. All those girls who are thought to have been directly exposed to the disease have been quarantined there and the regular occupants have moved out. In addition, eight city girls have been quarantined in their homes according to an official announcement.

Residents of other sections of Whitney Hall and of Hutton House, home of second-year U.C. co-eds, have been placed under a "moral quarantine" whereby they are forbidden to attend movies, dances, and "any large gatherings", although they are permitted to attend lectures, Miss Marion Ferguson, Dean of Women, stated last night. The quarantine, which according to a city by-law must be ten days' duration dating from the day of contact, will be lifted Friday noon, coinciding with the end of term.

Meanwhile, the twenty-six "interned" inmates of Falconer House, except for one who has been isolated with measles, are enjoying life. Their chief complaint is "too much to eat." "We're eating all the time," wailed one co-ed last night. "We have breakfast, and lunch, and

STUDENTS OFFERED EXCURSION RATES ON BUS AND RAILWAY

University Students Are Being Offered Reduced Rates for the Christmas Vacation; Reservations Heavy

AIRPLANE RATES THE SAME

Following the policy of offering reduced rates to students going home for the Christmas vacation, both bus and railway companies are again issuing tickets at excursion rates to university students. Transportation at reduced rates has been given by rail and motor coach but the airline rates have been maintained at the same level, it was learned yesterday.

By applying to college registrars and department offices, certificates were issued this week to both undergraduate and staff members wishing to take advantage of the round trip "one-way and a quarter" fare that the railway lines offer. It was disclosed that this applies only to trips in Canada as fares to American points were not affected by this reduction.

Motor coach lines are giving a special fare of "single fare and a third" round trip to Ontario cities and towns with Buffalo and Detroit included and special rates to Ottawa and Montreal. These tickets are being issued on presentation of university registration cards.

Reservations have been heavy this year and several speed-conscious undergrads will be winging their way home via Trans-Canada Airlines in spite of the regular fare.

Throughout the holidays, university ski enthusiasts will be travelling far and wide in search of snow covered slopes enjoying the special consideration of not too expensive transportation.

U.C. Girls Give Xmas Cheer

Four Underprivileged Families will be Taken Care of by Whitney Hall and Hutton House

YEARLY CUSTOM

The girls of Whitney Hall and of Hutton House are going to give Christmas cheer to four underprivileged families this year as have been their custom other years. These families, chosen by the University Settlement, live in the district below College Street and west of Dundas. Each house in Whitney Hall has a special family to take care of. These families will be visited by committees from the Hall to find out the special needs of each. If the children want Santa Claus to bring them a doll with blond hair and blue eyes or a sleigh or a set of lead soldiers, Christmas morning will find them starry-eyed and (Continued on Page 4)

DR. THOMAS TO GIVE TALK ON HIS TRAVELS

One of Greatest of Modern Explorers will Speak on "My First Crossing of the Great Arabian Desert" Tonight

ON LECTURE TOUR

Recognized as one of the greatest of modern explorers, Dr. Bertram S. Thomas will deliver an illustrated lecture in Convocation Hall tonight. This world famed and distinguished explorer is to have as his topic "My first crossing of the great Arabian desert."

Dr. Thomas knows intimately the countries of the ancient Near East as few Britishers do. Arabia, Trans-Jordan, Mesopotamia, Muscat, and Oman are only a few of the countries in which he has delved. Many medals and awards have been conferred on him for his work in the field of exploration.

At present Dr. Thomas is on a lecture tour of the United States and Canada. Admission to the lecture is free and members of the staff, students and the general public are invited to attend.

First Year U.C. Student Died Late Sunday Night; Formerly Editor of High School Magazine in Welland

ON VARSITY STAFF

Betty Boyd, popular first year University College student, died of spinal meningitis late Sunday night following a brief illness. The twenty-year-old co-ed, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. John R. Boyd of Welland, Ontario, was enrolled in the Household Economics course at the university.

Miss Boyd first complained of feeling ill last Tuesday when she was helping with the Arts Ball arrangements. Next day doctors diagnosed the case as spinal meningitis, after she had become steadily worse during the night. She was removed to the Western Hospital.

Although her home was in Welland where her father is a practicing physician, Miss Boyd with her mother and a younger sister, had taken an apartment in Toronto so that the two girls could attend school here. She matriculated from Welland High School last June and had been editor of the high school magazine and year book there. She had been very active during her term at university, and had entered into many activities outside her course. She was a reporter on The Varsity staff, and was a badminton enthusiast.

Miss Boyd is survived by her parents and a younger sister, aged 13. The funeral will be private.

Quartet to Give Concert To-Night

This evening the Hart House String Quartet consisting of James Levey, Adolf Koldofsky, Milton Blackstone and Boris Hambourg, will present a concert in Hart House Theatre. These well known musicians will present a program of three quartets, Schubert's Quartet in A Minor, Opus 29; Arnold Bax's Quartet in G Major; and Dvorak's Quartet in F Major, Opus 96. The quartet has recently returned from the University of Western Ontario where they were enthusiastically received by students and other music lovers.

Students are reminded that they may obtain tickets at half price. These may be had through Massey Hall or the Hart House box office. The reduction is granted on presentation of the purchaser's University of Toronto registration card.

Emily Post Arouses Indignation Of Campus Co-eds re Headgear

Emily Post has aroused the righteous indignation of University of Toronto co-eds, a survey of the campus yesterday showed. According to Friday's editorial in the Varsity Mrs. Post states, "Girls should wear hats outdoors. Hatlessness is a definite sign of inferior class."

"We are not members of an 'inferior class' just because we don't wear hats," the majority of the young ladies declared vehemently. "In fact it is just another proof of the modern woman's broadmindedness and intelligence. Why should we wear hats? They're just a nuisance anyway. If they don't blow off it is only because we walk along with one hand planted firmly on top of our heads to see that they don't. Few of them offer any warmth to speak of. And above all, a hat must be carefully guarded. It must not roll in the dirt; you must be careful not to get any spots on it or give it any hard knocks which might destroy its shape; and when it is being worn it must either be hung on a hat stand or be placed upside down, just so, so that the crown and the brim will retain their intended relationship to each other."

The co-eds did admit, however, that hats are useful on "dress-up" occasions. "There is nothing like a chic hat to give you that poise and self-confidence that all girls so earnestly desire," they pointed out. (A sarcastic young man suggested that this may account for some of the styles in women's hats "just a lot of inferiority complex gals going to extremes to attain that much-to-be-desired poise.") The hat is useful also in protecting the head from snow and rain, and when it can be kept on in ways other than the hand-on-head method, from the wind which is so disastrous to a young lady's hairdo. For these purposes, however, the majority of the girls seem to prefer parkas and handkerchiefs that tie under the chin. "They're not so much trouble," the girls explained, "when you don't want to wear them any more you either tie them around your neck and let them drop down your back or fold them up and put them in your note-book. It's just as simple as that — and besides they're warmer if it's warm you want for these cold wintry days."

Dr. Cates will Address Engineering Physics At Last Fall Meeting

The last meeting of the Engineering Physics Club of S.P.S. will be held on Wednesday, December 18 at 7:30 p.m. in the east common room of Hart House.

Following its policy of having speakers on topics of general interest rather than specialized technical subjects, on this occasion the club will hear Dr. H. A. Cates of the Department of Anatomy who will give the Engineers a description of their nervous system and how it functions. This is a return engagement for Dr. Cates, who spoke to the club last year on "Monkeys and Men".

Quarantine---A Joke

A tragedy struck the university in the sudden death of Betty Boyd following a brief illness. To her family and to the many friends which she won during her brief term at Varsity, we extend deepest sympathy.

As a result of the outbreak of the disease which so suddenly struck the campus, about three dozen girls who were believed to have come in direct contact with the disease last Tuesday have been placed in quarantine. We are perfectly agreed that every step possible should be taken to prevent the spread of the disease. But for that very reason, and because we hate to think of other girls and boys being stricken in the same way, we here express our feeling that the action taken by city health authorities and university authorities has been inadequate, lax and inconsistent.

Betty Boyd became ill on Tuesday afternoon, and that afternoon and evening she was in direct contact with the thirty-five girls who are now quarantined. But those girls were not quarantined until the following Friday, after it had been discovered on Wednesday that the case was spinal meningitis. From Tuesday when they came in contact with the disease, and from Wednesday when it was known what it was, until Friday when they were quarantined, those thirty-five girls lived their normal lives, going to lectures, mingling in residence with hundreds of others, attending the Arts Ball, and sitting in crowded drugstores.

On Friday they were placed in quarantine, after being in contact with numerous other people. But all the others were allowed to remain out of quarantine. True, they were mildly asked not to go to dances or movies, but they were allowed twelve-thirty leaves. Also they were allowed to go to lectures in rooms which are usually more crowded and far more stuffy than movies. And on Thursday, Friday and Saturday nights a drug store near the campus was crowded with Whitney Hall girls.

We fail to understand the functioning or the reasoning of the city health officials or the university authorities, whichever is responsible. In the first place the quarantine was announced after it would be of any effectiveness. The contacts had been spread far and wide. In the second place, other residence girls are allowed to go to stuffy lectures and are forbidden to go to dances, movies or "large gatherings". How about the "gatherings" in Room 8, University College, where several hundred attend one lecture?

We fail to see any consistency in the action. If the threatened disease is serious enough to warrant placing thirty-five girls in strict quarantine (and evidently the city officials tardily decided it was), then surely it is serious enough to quarantine all other residence girls who have had secondary contact. A "moral" quarantine which still permits girls to go to lectures and drugstores and mingle with others is worthless in our point of view, especially after those girls have been in contact for two days with girls who were directly exposed. The term is almost over and it is probably too late to do much about it, and although we hope such a situation never arises again, it is to be hoped that if it should, it will be handled properly.

Musical Starvation

The "Battle of Music" being waged so desperately by ASCAP and BMI has only two more weeks to go before it culminates in the banning of ASCAP's music from the American networks and as the Jan. 1 deadline approaches the struggle is gaining more and more publicity. Much is at stake for all concerned, including the public who seem to have no say in the matter, but ASCAP naturally stands to lose most — the combined loss of royalties to the composers, authors, and publishers belonging to ASCAP will be tremendous. BMI, on the other hand, has nothing to lose and everything to gain.

The listening public's side of the question was put forth for the first time a few days ago by ten of America's leading music educators, who claimed that the music of America and the music of the world, both serious and jazz, is at stake in the broadcasting industry's row with the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers over the fees to be paid for melodies heard on the air.

The educators announced the formation of a committee to circularize 2,000 educational institutions in an effort to force the Federal Communications Committee to intervene before Jan. 1, because they claim that the barring of all ASCAP's music will prove an incalculable blow to the musical development of the nation. However, the fact that they are all members of ASCAP is likely to lessen their chance of forcing a settlement. The committee said that the threat of the National Association of Broadcasters to "scrap the experience and achievement of a generation of artists is a calamity to music itself and a deprivation for the public amounting to musical starvation."

"In the field of standard music it takes a long time to produce men of solid craftsmanship, not to mention genius, and even a longer time to gain familiarity and acceptance for masterpieces," stated the committee. "The great figures in music belong to the public. It is therefore unthinkable that a group should be permitted the power to deny to the public its own property, so to speak, and to force it to accept 'ersatz' music."

In an effort to bring the general public into the square, to insist on the playing of their favourite music, ASCAP's envoy's urge that "This is not a private fight. It concerns every music lover and radio listener in the nation. We call upon educators throughout the country to join us in protest against the purely commercial aspect which this dispute has taken, waving aside all other aspects as of less importance. The music of America and the music of the world is at stake at this crucial moment."

Their urgent plea would no doubt be far more effective if it did not come from men belonging to one of the groups involved. The public will read it with a grain of salt, suspecting other motives than a desire to save the world's music. At any rate, we in Canada can sit back and watch the struggle with as much interest as concern, for the ban will not affect Canadian radio stations, since ASCAP's fees here are set by the government.

Opponent of Isolation

Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler, president of Columbia University, in his recent annual report to the trustees made public a few days ago, condemned isolation as "fatuous folly and profound immorality" and termed it a crude doctrine opposed to civilization itself.

Dr. Murray, discussing the role of the university in the present situation, declared that the world's surviving free universities bear their greatest responsibility in history, to guide public opinion in constructive policies that alone can represent effective resistance to threat.

Condemning the isolationist theory, said Dr. Butler "Surely it must now be plain that civilization cannot rest upon the theory that nations are separated and isolated from each other. It can only rest upon the opposite theory, that they are interdependent and deeply concerned with the others' welfare, in order that their international production, whether economic, intellectual or political, may be helpful as well as profitable. The universities are now confronted by the necessity of grasping these fundamental facts and of interpreting them to so much of the world's public opinion as is still free to hearken and to act."

Dr. Butler again warned of the abuse of academic freedom, as he did last fall, contending that American colleges and universities in the last fifty years have exercised growing influence on public opinion, and that this puts upon them a very great responsibility to which the conduct of their members should be adjusted. "The liberty and the freedom of which we quite properly hear so much," he said, "carry with them a direct and distinct responsibility for their proper use."

Stressing the importance of greater union between the Americas, Dr. Butler urged that the schools, colleges and universities of North America teach Spanish language and literature to their students, and that the South American institutions emphasize the need for a knowledge of the English language and literature, as well as the social, political and economic ideals of the English-speaking peoples.

Passion Over Panama

Scene: A Bushveldt sixty miles east of Cristobal. Dody Lamour is discovered reclining on a divan. Flute players are beating daddy eight to the bar. Daddy's anguished screams can be heard south of Pago Pago.

(Enter a fever-stricken figure in frayed flannels.)

FFFF — I hate to trouble you, lady but would you be so good as to tell me the way to 42nd Street?

DODY (languidly) — Take the express submarine from the ferry-docks. (She hangs a languorous smoke-ring around his left ear and he exits rapturously.)

JON AMECHE (springing from behind a palmetto tree) — Viper, I heard you consign that poor wretch to a watery grave.

DODY (himplily) — We all have to die some time, you know. Have a smoke ring?

JON — Thanks, don't mind if I do. (Munches it ecstatically. After some thought.) — By the way, what is the nearest way to 42nd Street?

DODY (confidentially) — Well, I tellya, bud, straight throo da jungle thataway, see? Then ya toin left at Poughkeepsie and follow da Hudson. Ya can't miss it.

JON — Thanks. (Leaves through the jungle.)

(Dody remains reclining on her divan, idly tossing smoke rings at passing tramp steamers, which immediately hit her magnetic mines. The flute players are heard again, beating out louder and stronger than ever before. The screams that are heard are head-rendering. Finally a regiment of head-hunters enters with flutes shouldered. Their leader carries a shoe-box which he reverently places before Dody's divan.)

DODY (lifting Jon's left ear from the box and idly twining a smoke ring around it.) — Put it away in the box with the others, boys. Section 57B. (As they leave to do so, enter Ned Dawson with a lacrosse stick.)

DAWSON (threateningly) — I saw you box that ear, you cat.

(Dody hastily blows a smoke ring at him. He catches it skillfully in the pocket of his lacrosse stick and flings it back at her. It catches on her left ear. She is immediately metamorphosed into a year's subscription to The Varsity, which Dawson tosses away in disgust.)

DAWSON (scornfully) — Huh! Better I Should Be Gd!

Mostly on "Trios"

The Vort Society was called upon to face a rather difficult situation on Sunday night. The program had to be completely rebuilt at almost the last minute. Artists were often playing almost extemporaneously, with the inevitable results.

Working under the severe handicap of a bad cold, Miss Pichler managed to get real tone out of a very good soprano voice. She gave her French numbers an excellent pronunciation and her diction was always clear. I, no linguist, could understand her. Her personality, too, is completely charming.

A winner of a Canadian Performing Rights Society Scholarship for original composition was introduced, to me at least, in the third movement of her Third Sonata for Piano, played by Earl Moss. This meeting up with Phyllis Gummer's music was the most important thing that happened all evening. Her music is very contrapuntal (at least this movement was), and she depends on a combination of all the famous composers for her originality. The result is very far from the hedge-podge one (Continued on page 3)

Attention Amateur Photographers

This year in Torontonensis we wish to have a comprehensive Campus Life Section. To do this we need the cooperation of amateur photographers from all the colleges and faculties, particularly those numerically small.

The Editorial Board of Torontonensis will consider any photographs which are submitted for insertion in the 1941 Torontonensis. We would prefer human interest shots, typical of the activities of the various colleges and faculties in the university. Other subjects such as pictures of university buildings, candid snaps of professors, sporting activities, etc., will be welcomed, but we would particularly like representative pictures of activities typical of the college or faculty to which the photographer belongs.

When a selection has been made the pictures will be placed in separate categories. The person who, in the opinion of the judges, submits the best shot in each group will receive recognition to that effect in Torontonensis, and the one who submits the best of all will receive in addition a copy of Torontonensis.

The deadline is February 1st, by which time all pictures submitted must be in the S.A.C. office in Hart House. Each picture should be properly captioned—in choosing the best, the most original captions will be considered. Name and college of photographer must accompany each picture.

The decision of the Editorial Board of Torontonensis shall be final.

THE BEGINNING OF THE END

The Engineering Society, after grasping the Mulock Mug tightly in both hands, are about to be presented with another trophy to place on the upper shelves of their kitchen cupboard, name of Dr. W. A. Dafeo Cup. The kind and noble donors of this lovely embossed silver memento will be the University College lacrosse team who apparently mistake their pretty Red and White uniform for that of the benign old gentlemen of Eaton's (and Simpson's) toy dept., and are attempting to bring joy to the hearts of all men, especially Schoolmen, in this festive season.

The youthful followers of St. Nick are using the instalment plan for their lacrosse and delivered the first portion yesterday afternoon by a score of 9-3.

As the game descended from a contest to a rout it became choppy and rather ragged. A surplus of energetic slashing crept in as feeling rose between the two teams. Often the bounding ball would do a little hopscootch dance all to itself in a corner while two opposing players crossed sticks and aimed fiery glances at one another. But there was no open warfare, and the squads probably left the floor thinking that the other gang were a great bunch of fellows. Maybe.

The Engineers, whenever they felt the need of a goal, played checkers with their rivals, out-maneuvering them with a clever pass attack until their appetite had been gratified. S.P.S., when they go seriously on the warpath, possess the happy faculty of being able to keep one man in the clear progressively nearer the payoff centre as lightning passes flit from man to man. Their alert, careful playmaking resembles a basketball formation rather than the headlong lacrosse usually witnessed in the big gym.

Sure, this is the first game that U.C. have dropped, and, quite true, they certainly ought to be allowed one defeat in a whole long season. True also that they were off form, not even close to their best. Yet School humbled them so easily, so effortlessly, so completely, that it is difficult to see anything but another championship for the high-flying Engineers, and, in our humble and paltry opinion, Wednesday afternoon will close the lacrosse season for 1940.

The first quarter was very close, as the rival outfits sparred carefully, feeling each other out. It ended in a 1-1 tie. As the speed increased, individual man-to-man checking increased to a similar degree. The Engineers soon began to forge ahead and were never headed as they took complete command of the performance. The Royal College boys were well and soundly thrashed.

Both goal keepers, Newman and McCulloch, played outstanding games. Fast, shifty Ken Hignell, was U.C.'s brightest light, and made one sensational dash, outspeeding all the opposing team, to count the second goal for his team. Alcombrack was strong on defence, and made an occasional power-house rush, but he wasn't as good as he can be.

George Reeves led the winners as he played a ragged, hard-hitting, sure defence, set up several fine plays, and took time out to score two goals. Quist too showed some nice ball handling, and smooth playmaking ability. Moorehead and Radmore led the scoring spree with three goals apiece.

ATHLETIC NIGHTS?—WELL, WHY NOT?

Whilst we were dreamily ensconced in a comfortable armchair last evening chinning leisurely with contemporary Edward W. Nickerson, an electrifying idea suddenly stabbed at our (meaning Nickerson's) brilliant mind. The shock was disturbingly overwhelming. The idea—why can't we have Athletic Nights this winter? At first it sounded impractical. But on second thought it began to take on a feasible tone.

Suppose we combined an interfaculty boxing, wrestling and fencing assault, with a water polo championship match, and toss in a basketball game or two between top ranking intramural teams. Maybe we could have another at the time of the interfaculty basketball championship playoffs.

Of course the notion would take a great deal more thought and planning, than suggested in such sketchy form above, to make it practical. But if it could be arranged it would bolster the shaky support of intramural athletics and elevate students' interest in it. The nights shouldn't prove costly, as, so far as we know, all the necessary equipment is still at Hart House. Athletic Nights during the last two years became red letter events in college life, and if they could be brought back should prove popular and successful. And if anyone was worried about the profits, there is always a war going on which might be able to use them.

Connoisseurs in Art of Judo To Hang Up Robes and Glances

By Sam Keler

Two Jiu Jitsu Competitions to be Held in January and February; Shimidzu Intends to Present Blue Belt to Winner

IMPROVED COSTUMES

Those of you who turn somersaults in the air and land with a terrific thump on the canvas with your right or left hand are slated for a little rest.

Connoisseurs in the gentle art of Judo will hang up their robes and mean glances for the Christmas holidays this Thursday for the simple reason that when the F. Shimidzu is away the wrestling Johnnies who don't wrestle but have SO much fun, will play.

In short, the hardened gentlemen of the don't-hit-him-he-takes-judo fraternity have decided to stand at ease for the rest of the year.

All of which is not a bad idea as long as the boys bear in mind a few salient features about the program for next year. Both features taking the form of two Jiu Jitsu competitions in January and February, one for each month.

In the contest held in February, Shimidzu intends to classify his manly material and present the winner of the competition with a blue belt. This may not sound so important to the average stupe but it means a lot to the boys who beat you daddy, eight to the bar. Shimidzu stressed the fact that students who were unable to get hold of the regular judo outfit might use the old pair of trousers in the attic and the pants you paint the garage with, as a reasonable substitute.

The genial little general of the supermen of tomorrow was very happy about it all and wished us a delightfully sincere Merry Xmas as we beat a hasty retreat before the student of divinity at Trinity started to explain his pastime with demonstrations.

By Marg. Foulds

In looking over the records of events in this past term, we are wondering if Vic is just a nickname for any college in the university, or if perhaps we see triple.

This term has covered three complete schedules in the co-ed athletic program of the 1940-41 season, and first place goes to a humble, name of Vic, every time.

We started out the year with a tennis tournament which produced some of the best tennis players in interfaculty competition for some time, and out of it emerged the name of Virginia Rappell, freshie, but definitely Vic. This diminutive miss — we refuse to be seen saying petite — mowed down experience and skill and the two combined as she met them, and quite decisively gave to Vic the first championship of the year.

Next, we set out, with confused hopes, into the basketball series. From the beginning, it looked as if there was quite a possibility of Vic and U.C. Juniors reaching the finals, but it was no easy trip up, specially for U.C. who met definite trouble with St. Mike's and somewhat with O.T. & P. However, Vic Seniors had made the semi-finals last year, being beaten out by this same U.C. team to the tune of approximately 1 basket, and U.C. had lost in the finals to their senior sisters by, if we remember "correctly", 1 point. So when the finalists reached the finals, we were not altogether surprised though we did not let on, and when Vic came through to take the second handshake of the year, they certainly had what was on the menu — regular and a la carte.

Now we hear that that same lad, name of Vic, has romped off with the baseball title and we're seriously considering having him forcibly ejected from the union for hogging all the silverware (?). In the end, it was a Vic vs Vic affair, the A team fighting it out with the sophs, and last night in the final game the sophs broke the 2-all game tie with a close 8-7 victory. With this victory go our congratulations to Vic himself for a clean sweep of the 3 titles of the term.

But Vic, we'd like to ask one question — Do you or do you not eat wheateys?!

The Last French Film

A film that may be the last of the great French story pictures was presented to the members of the National Film Society at their December meeting in the Art Gallery last night. This was End of a Day produced in 1939 under the excellent direction of Julien Duvivier.

It was his sensitive and inspired direction that made the account of a group of actors at the twilight of their day into a telling and absorbing dissection of theatrical life. The cast included Victor Francen and Louis Jouvet and will probably be the only picture Filmarte can enter as a "great" for a good many years.

The final days in the lives of ageing actors is not a commercial undertaking that an American company would attempt. The success made of it in End of a Day is part of the reason France and Scandinavia could once be counted in the lead in world art. Except for its length, over 100 minutes, this film would have rivalled Grand Illusion as a touring continental box office attraction for the American public.

The Case of Charlie Gordon is now a dated documentary produced by the Canadian government in 1939. It shows the Federal Government's youth training plan at work and is marred by uninspiring direction. It can be criticized as being un-Canadian in its approach and really begging the whole question. It will probably soon be relegated to an archive piece, so swiftly have events moved in the field of social legislation.

Student Pilots in Norwegian Air Force Admitted to Hart House while Here

Training at "Little Norway" Members of Norwegian Air Force Granted Temporary Graduate Membership

GRANTED ALL PRIVILEGES

If one should wander along the corridor of the Hart House Athletic Wing some Tuesday evening and watch Mac MacCutechne put the graduate gym class through their paces, one could not fail to notice about twenty tall, blond, and muscular men among the most efficient members of the class.

These men are all student pilots in the Royal Norwegian Air Force, training at "Little Norway" behind the Fleet St. ball park. They have been granted temporary graduate membership in Hart House as a friendly gesture of welcome by the House and for the purpose of broadening the relationship of the undergraduate members.

The Norwegians are entitled to all the privileges of the House during their stay in Toronto, and are taking advantage of them. Mac is tickled pink by the new members of the class, who, he says, are perhaps the finest physical specimens he has ever worked with. They realize the necessity of first rate physical condition, both in flying and in everyday life, and so are seeing to it that they stay in good condition.

The men are using the lockers formerly the possession of the intermediate rugby team, and are making full use of all athletic privileges. Besides the Tuesday evening gym class the pool and the boxing, wrestling and fencing rooms come in for a great deal of attention.

The fliers will be in Toronto only a few months, but their athletic achievements during that time will long be remembered by frequenters of the athletic wing.

ART, MUSIC & DRAMA (Continued from Page 2)

might expect. In fact, it's very very enjoyable.

Unfortunately, there was a trio of Kosheoffs. They are excellent instrumentalists, even the baby brother almost hidden behind his 'cello, but they persist in playing syrupy arrangements of Liebestraums. If I seem to hit hard remember I have been waiting for a very long time to speak of these radio retaining programs. Solo violin, with continual vibrato, obligato 'cello, very amorous or sensible, and ump-pling-pling perpetually recurrent on the piano. Hack stuff, all of it. They could have been learning and teaching us something of the trios of Beethoven, but instead it was this.

I shouldn't be so unsympathetic, perhaps. The Kosheoffs very likely thought we liked tripe (maybe the others did) and the company is very entertaining.

given out, students may reserve only two books in any one subject, and in this regard political science and economics are regarded as one subject. A little leeway is being allowed here; if you want a book in either of these subjects that is not in great demand, two may be allowed you in political science and one in economics or vice versa.

If you have managed to unravel the intricacies of this rule, when the day of giving out the books arrives, you may then reserve as many in any subject as you wish. All reservations must be made in person, but someone else may call for your books.

The librarians request that you ask for books known to be in demand, as a list is kept of all works of which all the copies have been reserved. This can be consulted by the librarians and will save them searching through the piles of yellow slips.

In regard to returning books, they may be returned any time on January 6th, and out-of-town students will be granted an extension until the 7th if they ask for it before taking out their books. Reservations will be held until December 27th.

U. OF T. CAMERA CLUB
EXHIBITS IN JANUARY

Hart House Camera Club is holding its annual exhibition in the Art Gallery beginning January 18.

Once a year the Camera Club sponsors a show to which all members of Hart House may submit pictures to be judged by photography experts. Though the slate of experts is as yet incomplete it is known that Prof. K. B. Jackson will be one of the judges.

"Our plans are still incomplete," said committee members, "but we hope to have a lot of entries."

The photographs will be grouped into four divisions: pictorial, record, colour, scientific and nature pictures. Prizes will be awarded to winners in each of the four divisions. Entrants may submit up to 12 prints each, exclusive of colour photographs and transparencies. They may be in 11 x 14, 14 x 17, 16 x 20 inch sizes. Entries may be handed to the Hall Porter till January 17.

REFRESHMENTS, DANCING

Tonight at 7:45, the historians on the campus will cast aside their text-books and documents, and gather at Cartwright Hall, St. Hilda's College, for their first Christmas Party. The Social Committee of the Modern History Club, under its convener Bob Phillips, have thought up many novelty features which will give the party a "different" flavour.

GIRLS WHO COLLIDE with things and then make fatuous remarks are growing more numerous, it seems. . . . Yesterday we told you of the Strange Case of the Freshie and the Skeleton. . . . Today we relate the one about the maiden who, upon leaving a coffee-shop on Bloor Street, failed to notice that a horse, attached to a milk-wagon, was standing quietly on the side-walk. . . . Busily holding her hat on, she walked into the horse. . . . "I beg your pardon," she simpered sweetly, and went on her way. . . .

CAUGHT RED-HANDED DEPT.

An editorial in the Southern Methodist Campus discusses the 78-piece Mustang band in terms of the highest praise, and bellows enthusiastically, "The 1940 Mustang Band is the best this Hilltop has ever heard — and the best in the nation!" . . . Further down on the same page is an unrelated bit of filler, quoting Hume to the effect that "When men are most sure and arrogant, they are commonly the most mistaken."

RAISED EYE-BROWS DEPT.

We hear (and I just crammed with bonhomie and Xmas spirit) that there will be no carol-singing at the City Hall this year. . . . IT'S A WAR MEASURE. . . .

INTERCOLLEGIATE CROQUET

Has reared its ugly head in the Ivy League. As the Daily Princetonian is our witness, the "Yale Croquettes" met the "Smith Croquettes" at Northampton. . . . And the Smith girls won with the greatest of ease. . . . Aided by a four-year-old ball boy gifted with agile feet, who kicked their spheroids into place in front of the wickets. . . . After the battle, the captains of the two squads declared over the tea-cups: "This gentle sport will stimulate the latent manliness in Yale men and womanliness in Smith women."

When I asked her to read, "Go to father," she said.
She knew that I knew that her father was dead.
She knew that I knew what a life he had led.
She knew that I knew what she meant when she said:
"Go to father."

each bulged the twine to complete the downfall of the Red and White.

The Schoolmen checked the Royal Collegians off their feet and this victory. The U.C. men seldom got into position for a good shot at Newman, who did an excellent job between the pipes for the Engineers. Moorehead and Radmore got three goals apiece to pace the School attack, while Georgie Reeves stood out defensively. Jack Quist, manager of the Engineers, was the play-maker of the crew when he was out of the penalty box.

McCulloch starred in the Red and White net but was hampered by lack of support from his team mates. Balogh and Alcombrack tried hard to organize the U.C. squad but were unable to overcome the team work and tight defence of the Engineers.

The teams met in the second game of the series in the big gym on Wednesday. U.C. must win to stay in the running and force another game while a victory for the Engineers will give them the trophy and finish lacrosse for the year.

Sr. S.P.S.: Newman, Reeves (2), Bryce, Moorehead (3), Gilbert, Radmore (3), Lambie, Starr, Quist (1).
U.C.: Balogh, Alcombrack (1), Sheppard, Bayce, McNulty, Francis, McCulloch, Gibson, MacDiarmid, Higgin.

A most distinctive feature will be the auctioning of cartoons of the history profs done by artist Dorothy Train, a third year student. The professors themselves are promising a surprise "turn", possibly in the nature of a barber shop quartet. Other features include the singing of carols, and the presentation of skits satirizing aspects of the lives of history students.

Refreshments and dancing are also on the program, and the presence of Santa Claus will round out what is hoped will be the most successful venture of the club this season.

let's go places

The legend of Tugboat Annie so firmly established in the hearts of movie goers by Marie Dressler is revived in the current production "Tugboat Annie Sails Again" now playing at Shea's Theatre.

TUGBOAT ANNIE
cost task of taking the place of Marie Dressler in the role of Annie is entrusted to Marjorie Rambeau. Fans expecting to see the personality of Marie Dressler as well as Tugboat Annie perpetuated will probably be disappointed with Miss Rambeau's performance. However, as an actress in her own right she portrays the coarse but big-hearted mistress of the tugboat "Narcissus" very well.

Although the plot is interesting and lively it is more superficial than that of the original film. The original dealt chiefly with the characters of Annie, her good-for-nothing husband and their son and with the relations between them.

In the present picture Annie vies with a financier and rival tug captains to keep her job and save her boss's business. Also a spoiled rich girl introduced into the plot seems out of place in a Tugboat Annie setting.—R.B.

wishes come true. Each family will not only have a Christmas dinner "with all the fixings" but also other food supplies and warm clothing.

Toys, such as dolls, jumping frogs, or Christmas stockings which were received by the girls on Sunday at their annual Christmas breakfast party were relinquished, after they had been played with all day.

Children from these homes will be given a party before Christmas. The girls will be entertained at the U.C. Women's Union, and the boys at Hart House.

The University Settlement helps many underprivileged families all during the year also, through the Music School and through the nursery.

Glee Club Broadcast Prepared

C.B.C. Officials to be Luncheon Guests at Practice Concert Today; Audience will Join in Carol Singing

The Hart House Glee Club, in top form after a before-supper workout in the Music Room at Hart House yesterday, are now awaiting their first coast-to-coast broadcast on Thursday. Theoretically they are now ready for their big day, but following luncheon today they will go through a full-dress rehearsal of the broadcast in the Great Hall. Mr. Claringbow, Mr. Delafield, Ian Smith and John Adaskin, of the C.B.C. staff, will be the club's guests at luncheon today.

As in former years this enthusiastic body of carollers will be joined in certain numbers by those present in the Great Hall. Their final program is as follows: first, a group of three by the Glee Club, Quem Pastores, Puer Nobis, and Old Watte's Carol; then all present will sing The First Noel, and another group by the club will follow. Come All You Worthy Gentlemen, Oh Little Town of Bethlehem, and All My Heart. The concluding carol will be Hark the Herald Angels Sing, sung by all present. Dr. Charles Peaker, director of the Glee Club, has prepared all the arrangements especially for his group.

Although the Hart House Glee Club has previously broadcast over an east-coast network at Christmas time, this is the first time their carol singing has gone on the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation's networks from coast-to-coast. The two concerts will start at 1.15 today and Thursday.

Ball to Feature Grads on Broncos

New Year's Eve will see hundreds of Varsity graduates ushering out the old and welcoming the new in Hart House. Music and merriment will be the order of the times as the fifteenth such celebration gets under way.

But dancing will certainly not be the only means provided to hurry away the last fleeting hours of the twelvemonth. The whole House will resound with merriment as Mermaids disport themselves in the pool; troubadours will wander through the halls; and hobby-horses will hold the spotlight for a time.

The witching hour itself will call for a special novelty feature.

Grads' Ball, Editors' Convention To Highlight Christmas Holidays

There will not be very many activities on the deserted campus during the coming two weeks and three week-ends of holidays.

The Grads' Ball and the High School Editors' Convention will be the only social functions, while in the basement of S.P.S. feverish work will be going on on 400 feet of murals for the Annual School At-Home in the Royal York Ball Room on January 8.

Hart House will remain open and the Great Hall and the Grad Dining-room will serve no meals and in the athletic wing the pool will be drained out and given its semi-annual scrubbing. The Orderly Room will continue to function throughout most of the holiday period.

On Friday and Saturday the 27th and 28th of December editors of High School papers throughout Ontario will assemble in U.C. West Hall for their annual convention. After the convention has been formally opened by President

STUENTS' FARES

The Railway Companies are issuing to students of the university, and to members of the university staff, round-trip tickets for the Christmas and New Year vacation, at the rate of the current one way fare and one-quarter for the round trip.

Students wishing to take advantage of this reduction should leave their names with the Registrar of the college, or the secretary of the faculty or department concerned, on or before Monday, December 16th.

The certificates will be issued to the students at the college, faculty or department office, at 5 p.m. on Friday, December 20th.

Members of the staff may obtain certificates at the Registrar's office, Simcoe Hall.

Warden's Dinner Set For Dec. 19th

Students stranded in Toronto for the holidays will have no need to go without their Christmas turkey, cranberry sauce, and all that goes with it to make for an ideal Christmas meal. As has been the Warden's custom for a number of years, those away from home for this festive season will be entertained in Hart House at 6.30 on Thursday evening, December 19.

It has been the wish of Warden Bickersteth that this custom be continued while he is in England, and in view of this, a card has been sent to all men shown in the directory as coming from other countries or distant parts of Canada. If any have been missed, it is the wish of Acting-Warden J. R. Gilley that they should make it known by reporting to the Warden's office.

Speaking of the Christmas dinner, Mr. Gilley said: "It exemplifies the democratic spirit in Canada when representatives of so many different countries can sit down to a common meal. We hope it will help cement the countries represented, as well as the province, in a closer relationship of goodwill."

Already 109 students from the farther parts of the Dominion and many from other countries have signed the list in the Warden's office, and more are expected. Countries to be represented will include Ireland, Newfoundland, China, Jamaica, The United States (California), Brazil, Iceland, Columbia, Mont-

Rev. Robert Mackie, World Vice-President of I.S.S. Points Out Needs of War-Handicapped Students

HELP INTERNEE STUENTS

At a recent organization meeting of the International Student Service, Rev. Robert Mackie, world vice-president of the society, addressed the meeting on the general present-day situation and the particular needs of students in Europe and China.

Bill Small, last year's chairman of the local I.S.S. committee, opened the meeting by giving a summary of the work carried out in the past twelve months.

Rev. Mackie pointed out that last year the chief work of the committee dealt with the refugee problem. The situation is now different and the work is being conducted to meet the needs of interned students in Canada and Switzerland, and university undergraduates in China. The importance attached to education in the new China is emphasized by the hardships willingly undergone by students there as a result of the recent acquisition of air bases in Indo-China by Japan.

Turning to Europe, Mr. Mackie spoke of the organization of educational work in internment camps in Switzerland, and emphasized the fact that a very large proportion of French prisoners still in Germany are those who would ordinarily have assumed positions of leadership.

In conclusion, Rev. Mackie stressed the fact that not only is the need urgent in foreign countries, but that Canadian students should also recognize the opportunity for aid in distribution of text books and the establishment of suitable educational systems for students interned in Canada. Only by keeping in touch with the situation before the future.

Following the address, a committee was set up to plan the line of activity to be conducted on this campus. Although no campaign is possible this term, it was felt by those present that Toronto students should be made acquainted with the situation before the vacation.

NEWMAN CLUB CHAPLAIN GIVES CHRISTMAS MESSAGE

Father J. H. McHenry, Chaplain of the Newman Club, last night issued the following message to all students of the university, in particular to Roman Catholic students:

"To the consideration of youth particularly do I deliver this Christmas Message, not because of youths' importance but because our beloved university looks to the alleviation of its particular problems.

"Life's fight today is not unlike the battles existent at any age or time. The same enduring fundamental principles do not change; as for instance, the nature of man, human dignity and human destiny; inalienable rights; personal and social obligations; moral responsibilities to a personal God, Divine Sanctions for right and wrong; the unity of the human family, the function of the home, the family, the school, the government, the Church in our human family. The proper settlement of these vital questions are our concern as they were the concern of our forefathers.

"Democracy based on Christian principles has been our answer in the past. It is still fundamentally sound and morally true and we must take up the challenge against those forces of chaos which would disrupt the completed and practical culmination of our ideals.

"However it requires our work and application of energy and thought. It must be our endeavour to understand these principles so vital to proper living and through careful digest of study and prayer, work out an equitable answer based on social justice and social charity, the only steps to social peace.

"May He, the Incarnate Word of Bethlehem, Who is known as the Prince of Peace, guide our footsteps along the paths of virtue; enlighten our minds to true understanding; and direct our will to accomplish something of merit to the greater glory of God and country and the salvation of our immortal souls."

Grid Injured To Benefit By Vic Dance

All-Victoria Affair to be Featured by Rotund Jim Carson's Modern Interpretation of Jolly Ole Kris Kringle

Sponsored by the Victoria College Athletic Union, Vic grads and undergrads will attend a Christmas Party in Burwash Hall tomorrow night.

This party is being held specially to defray the expenses of athletes injured while playing on teams for their college. Speaking on this point last night, President Ted Gray of the Victoria College Athletic Union emphasized, "This isn't just a Vic get-together. There's more than that to it: there is a real spirit behind the thing. We don't want people to turn out with the motive only of having a good time, but also with a purpose of generosity."

This party, the only informal All-Victoria dance of the season, gives members of all years an opportunity to mingle with each other, and in a way makes up for the closed year parties decreed by the Social Caput of the college, and which were the cause of a stormy open meeting of the V.C.U. earlier in the term.

Music for this dance will be provided by Howard Cable's orchestra in Burwash Hall, and should the ticket sales warrant the use of Alumni Hall to accommodate an overflow, a second orchestra will be signed up.

Members of the Vic rugby team are planning special entertainment for the evening, and Jim Carson, rotund star interfacially inside, will present his own interpretation of Ole Saint Nick. Members of the Trinity College football squad are also expected to be on hand.

Dancing will begin at nine o'clock and continue until twelve-thirty. Tickets are on sale in Alumni Hall, and many students are planning on attending (Continued on Page 6)

Oliver Lodge Speaks Thursday

A noted author and lecturer from the Old Country will address students and friends of the university on Thursday, December 19, at 8.15 o'clock. Mr. Oliver Lodge will speak on "Three Critics and a Quarral."

Mr. Lodge is the son of Sir Oliver Joseph Lodge, the eminent physicist who achieved fame through physical research and spiritualism, fields which overshadowed his work as an educationist and as an experimenter with electricity and electrolysis.

The "three critics" he will speak of are Andrew Lang, Churton Collins, and Sir Edmund Gosse; the "quarral" he will tell of in his lecture Thursday evening.

Hart House Host To 250 Boys

Next Friday evening the facilities of Hart House will be thrown open to 250 boys from the University Settlement. For this annual Christmas party the underprivileged boys will be the guests of the House.

A full program of sports and entertainment under the supervision of various Hart House committees has been planned. The guests will play basketball, baseball, and floor hockey in the gym under the direction of the Varsity athletic instructors.

The water in the swimming pool will be lowered to allow for the younger boys. The older ones will be able to shoot pool and fire on the rifle ranges. An entertainment in the debates room will include a Punch and Judy show for the youngsters, and a ventriloquist. The party will conclude with a dinner (Continued on Page 6)

Students' Voices Raised in Song As University Gets Yule Spirit

Proving that the university is still a fortress of tradition Varsity students have been much in evidence this year in the time honoured custom of carol singing. Running more to solid comfort than to the flagellate-and-horn-blastern school, most activities of this nature are pursued indoors.

Both the V.C.F. and the S.C.M. have held carol services. Last Friday's meeting at Knox College Chapel, an annual affair which grows each year in impressiveness, featured the newly formed S.C.M. Choir. The V.C.F. sang the same day welcomed trained voices but put the emphasis on enthusiasm.

Varsity students are meeting this week at 1.30 each day in Alumni Hall to gather about the piano to sing the merrie old songs of the season.

G. R. Sproat, Director of Service, Announces Need of 150 Donors During Holidays; Special Clinics Dec. 23, 30

SERUM NEEDED OVERSEAS

Due to a pressing need for blood serum overseas, and the slack Christmas season, the Toronto Red Cross Blood Donors Clinic is urgently in need of blood contributors during the holidays. G. R. Sproat, Director of the Service, told The Varsity yesterday.

The regular clinics, held Mondays and Thursdays between 9.30 a.m. and 1 p.m. at 410 Sherbourne St., have been cancelled during Christmas and New Year's week, but the need for shipments of blood serum continues strong, and clinics will be held Dec. 23 and 30 in an attempt to make up the absence.

"About 150 men are needed during the holidays," the Director said, "and it is felt that many students might be willing to contribute blood during the holidays."

Although about 500 university men offered their services to Dr. C. H. Best, who is in charge of the clinic, shortly after the service was begun, Mr. Sproat said, it is very hard to contact them at present.

Any men who would like to donate blood during the holidays should telephone the clinic at MI. 3579 or the Red Cross at MI. 6692.

Relief Worker To Be Honoured

New York, N. Y. (Special) — Clarence E. Pickett, Executive Secretary of the American Friends Service Committee, Quaker organization notable for its relief work among European war victims, will be presented the Annual Award of Pi Lambda Phi, national collegiate fraternity, at the fraternity's 46th annual convention in New York City on Sunday, December 22nd. It was announced today by M. Robert Herman, chairman of the National Executive Council of the fraternity.

The honour is conferred upon the one "who, during the past year, has most convincingly achieved world-wide recognition as an exponent of true humanitarianism and brotherhood."

Mayor F. H. LaGuardia of New York was the 1935 recipient, and James G. McDonald, the first recipient in 1934, for his humanitarian services as 1934 Commissioner of the League of Nations Commission for Refugees.

Mr. Pickett, who has held his present post of leadership with the Friends group, known popularly as the Quakers, since 1929, has come to represent the war-stricken throughout Europe the (Continued on Page 7)

Our Thanks to All . . . And a Merry Christmas

As The Varsity fades from the scene and we relax for a while, after fifty-nine issues this fall, we would like to express our thanks to the many who have made the publication of this paper possible.

First of all thanks should go to the staff of The Varsity. Although smaller in number than in past years, and carrying the burden of extra military work in the case of the men's staff, they have worked long and hard to produce your undergraduate newspaper. Some reporters have been doing three and four stories a day, while a small night-editing staff has been carrying a heavy load.

We would like also at this time to express our thanks to the Student's Administrative Council for co-operation and assistance through the year. Especially are we grateful to the office staff for their constant efforts to make our task lighter.

Our thanks go also to those men without whose help we would be unable to produce a daily paper—the linotypist, the composer, and the other boys at the Press who spend weary nights seeing that young night editors manage to get the paper out by morning.

Finally we express our gratitude to you, the readers, for whom this paper is published. Your interest and your criticism are invaluable.

And so we have successfully finished the first term of publication. We look forward to an even more successful forty-one issues next term. Until then—Merry Christmas and a Happy New Year!

We Go Literary!

Today in bright green ink The Varsity presents its traditional Christmas Literary Issue, consisting of contributions from ambitious poets, writers and artists among the students on the campus. The prize-winning efforts in each of the three fields, along with several honorable mentions, have been published on the other pages of this issue.

On the whole the response to the Literary Issue was very disappointing, especially in the prose field where only six contributions were received from a university in which over seven thousand are enrolled.

That is something we find hard to understand. Surely there is more talent on the campus than that shown in the small contribution to The Varsity. If there is, the youth of today is lazy; if there isn't something is the matter with the youth of today. The contributions in the poetry section were very numerous and helped to make up for the lack in the other sections. There were only a few art contributions.

The prose awards go to C.G.S. for his first-person story, "For Those Who Hiss," and to William Hincks for his "Conformity." Principal Wallace of University College, judge of the prose selections, expressed disappointment at the number submitted and also at the general standard of the work.

Out of a huge pile of poems, Dr. E. J. Pratt of Victoria College chose "Restitution" by Selma Bartlett for first prize in the serious verse section, with Rose Marie Moore taking second prize for her "September 1st Near Owen Sound." He chose four for honourable mention, some of which have been printed. They are "Thought" by M. L. Hogarth, "Consequences" by Melvin Oliver, "Empty" by Winifred Hillier, and "Snow and Retrospect" by Lloyd Haines. Miss Hillier too captured top honours in the light verse division with "Frivolity" while John Ross' parody, "Hia! Watha!" received second prize. Honorable mentions were awarded to Rose Marie Moore for "Triquet for 1940" and to Kay Cannon for "Degrees of Degradation." Dr. Pratt's general comment about the poetry was that it suffered either from over-sentimentality or from conventionality of phrase—or both. He felt that Miss Hillier, who submitted a large number of poems, had more freshness and original phrasing than most.

Art awards, chosen by Mr. Charles Comfort, went to Elizabeth Powell for "Madonna" and to M. Bloy Graham for "St. George Street." Honorable mention went to M. Schwarzmann for a series of cartoons on the war, which for reasons of space, we were unable to reproduce.

To the winners we offer our hearty congratulations, and to the many contestants who were unsuccessful, we offer our sincere thanks for their co-operation. We would also like to express our deep appreciation to the three judges who gave up valuable time to go through the contributions.

"I wonder if you have ever read Dickens' Christmas books? I have read only two of them yet, and I have cried my eyes out and have a terrible time not to sob. But, O dear God, I feel so good after them, and would do anything to make the world a little better for people." Robert Louis Stevenson.

ART MUSIC

A Bohemian in Harlem

We're terribly cramped for space tonight, for this is the green issue. The Hart House String Quartet deserves much more praise than I am able to give it for its superlative performance of everything it attempted last night. Schubert's Op. 29 was completely satisfying and was given just that degree of subtlety which Schubert deserves, in fact needs. I prefer the Andante a trifle slower, but it is completely a matter of personal taste.

Speaking of subtleties, the Bax Quartet in G Major is one of the least obvious pieces of chamber music ever written. The last movement with its extremely complicated cross-rhythms and vagaries in the first violin must have been rather difficult to synchronize as perfectly as it was done last night.

Certain otherwise great composers have failed utterly when it came to writing string quartets. Dvorak tried and failed. The "Negro" Quartet is a perfect piece of writing—for string orchestra. As a quartet it is a failure, although it is fun to listen to, and even more fun to play. There are no subtleties, and almost no rests for any instrument. Dvorak was temperamentally unfit to write in this medium and still more to write in an "American" idiom.

The final word in ultimate praise: I could never forget that I was listening to a quartet, there were no "scene stealers".

Willan on Bach

It was a revelation to hear Dr. Willan play Bach in the concluding organ recital for this term. The organ literature of Bach is so great and so varied that I wonder why Dr. Willan avoids it in all but his final programs which are entirely by this composer. Many of Bach's organ works are seldom if ever heard, for the organ of today is seldom used

Three Ubiquitous Travelling Salesmen Return with Mechanized Army, Wreck Store. Aux. Batt. Disintegrated

NO CHRISTMAS!

Stark tragedy struck at the quivering heart of Toronto's Christmas festivity. The fifth floor of Eatson's is a shambles. Yesterday, just before closing time, the Three Ubiquitous Travelling Salesmen from Dubuque suddenly reappeared disguised as waiters and tried to get to see Santa Claus. Their intelligence service, functioning from Arcadia, uncovered the appalling fact that the dastardly Santa Claus was out doing his Christmas shopping in Kres-worth's. After unsuccessfully waiting as waits to present their last piscatorial demands they decided something was fishy, and accordingly rushed their diabolical plans to completion.

While fifth columnists disguised as Pandas laid the ground work, by hanging mistletoe where it would have the most demoralizing effect, the three conspirators seized all the available supplies of weapons—reducto-guns, tanks, airplanes, transports, heavy artillery, machine guns, and a disintegrator. Using the reducto-guns in reverse, they built up the equipment to normal size. Eatson's bulged with the effort. Thousands of German soldiers, left over from pre-war years were liberated from the stock room, built up to normal, and used to man the equipment.

When the dive bombers arrived, the staff took refuge in the Wishing Wells and the railroad tunnels. They were utterly destroyed by the concoction cooked up by three traitorous chemical engineers. The store was now in a panic and called upon the Auxiliary Battalion, which was mobilized on the scene. Fortified with chocolate malteds, and advancing behind a barrage of painted rubber balls and plum-puddings, pushing "Mind the trucks" in front of them for protection, they were no match for the enemy's mechanized equipment. Although they could advance no farther, they had made the enemy's position, if not untenable, precarious in the extreme. Desperately the villains seized a disintegrator and obliterated the fifth floor. The Auxiliary Battalion completely disappeared, not a trace was left. (The orderly room declined to express fear, "The situation is not alarming," they said—"the trainees are not due back until January 13.") as a concert instrument. We hear only the few which have been transcribed for other instruments and our hearing of them only awakens our desire to hear them in their original form.

This was a representative program including several of the beautiful Chorales, two arias, three movements from Part III of the Klavierübung, the Great C Minor Prelude and Fugue and a Chorale Prelude and Fugue. The artist's excellent treatment of fugues has been mentioned often before in this column. He was equally at home in the quiet chorales, some well-known, others unfamiliar.

I would like to make a request for Pasacaglia and Fugue for the next Bach program. — BLYTH YOUNG

Conformity . . . A Journey With a Mind Through Insanity

By William Hincks

I once was asked—"Who are the insane?" I replied—"The insane are those who fail to conform with the life and thoughts of the majority." Then I was asked—"How does it feel to go insane and is there a cure for madness?" I related this tale and the questioner was satisfied. It is a weird story called Conformity. It is a journey with a human mind from sanity to insanity and back to sanity again.

* * *

Twelve o'clock on New Year's Eve—everyone (all but Mark Giles) was gay in the blue room. Twenty stories above Times Square, above a surging mob of merry New Yorkers, the little blue room party from François and Tapier Co. were beginning to celebrate in full spirit. At his own expense the floor had been reserved by Monsieur Cecile François, French dress importer. His employees were benefiting from his generosity.

With the sudden outburst of bedlam in the street below, the blue room band took its cue for "Auld Lang Syne". From its first pathetic playing, the Scottish tune was soon jazzed into a climax of clashes and crooning. With an ever increasing tempo, the air, on its sixth repetition lost its identity. Horns blared, saxophones wildly shook with a counter melody of "Loch Lomond", the pianist leaped with each chord, and the drummer and brass violinist competed for speed in slapping their instruments. At one lamp-lit table, two couples stood with dazed smiles toasting a clock. At another, six young people were tooting horns in nursery style. Seated on a side stool, with heads together, dreamed two happy people—man and woman. The rest of the party seemed to be lost in the general hub-lub in the centre of the floor, amidst streamers, crepe hats, balloons, crackers, clicking noisemakers and more horns.

There was one other celebrator,—Mark Giles. He stood alone at the ballroom doorway, resting an unhappy head against a marble pillar. He was well dressed and handsome but looked tired and a little old. Somebody close to him was talking.

"Smile", said that somebody. "Enjoy yourself". How could Mark smile? How could he enjoy himself? These people were mad, childish, and his own partner was one of them. How he had worried about getting a partner. He had phoned and phoned and all had replied, "I'm sorry, but you're too late with your invitation". And when, on the seventh attempt, Mark did get a girl, she deserted him for this—this chaotic noise, this so-called welcome to a New Year. Smile at this? How could he?

The voice close to Mark Giles repeated its order to smile and then introduced itself. Mark was silent. He was disturbed. It seemed as if all spirits, nymphs and Greek gods were shouting down his ears in horrible unison.

"I am the Count de Fontaine", said the somebody near him. "What

For Those Who Hiss

By C. G. S.

This is a letter which came to me from England some weeks ago. It concerns someone whom many of you know, and although much of it is intimate I have decided that it is right that it should be printed.

I have longed to tell, for Alan's sake, the feelings which his death in action aroused amongst his friends at home. But I feel myself incapable of the task, and I believe it is impossible for me to express better than Anne has done the strangely confused agony of his approach to death.

This, then, is the letter. It is dated September 4th, 1941.
DEAR SALLY,

This letter is misery to write. Please God it may not be such misery to read. I have started it half a dozen times and been unable to finish it. This time I must finish it, for the knowledge that I have it still to write haunts me.

You know by now that Alan died. How he died I am not allowed to tell you, although I know. It was a noble death, fighting for England. The rest I must tell you when the war is won, for until then, apparently, it is a military secret.

We are strangers, in spite of the fact that Alan told me much about you. But there is no reason why we should know one another. I have a promise to fulfill, and I write this letter only to carry out that promise. Of you, Alan said so many nice things; but I won't flatter you, nor distress you, by writing them. It is enough, after all, to know that he thought of you often, and that at times he was lonely for you.

I saw a great deal of Alan during his last leave, before he went to sea, and during our last day together he asked me to write to you, if anything happened to him. He asked me to tell you how happy he was during his weeks in Devon, and to tell you what he thought of the war—for he believed that his ideas concerning it had changed since he left you, in Canada.

We met because a relative of his who is also a relative of mine told him to get in touch with me. He telephoned one evening two weeks before he left England and we went to a movie together. It was a bad movie, but the conversation after it was good. We liked one another. In war time love is born easily; but I think that even in peace time there would have been love between us. I like to think so anyway, now.

I was working—and still am—in a hospital. Volunteer work only, for I'm not a very able creature. Whenever we were off duty at the same hours we spent our time together. We didn't talk much really, except for the first evening and the last day, but we went for long walks across the Devon hills and along the beaches west of Plymouth; and sometimes we went on picnics. We laughed a lot—at little things that, God forgive me, I've forgotten already; but we said very little. I tried to make those last days of freedom happy for Alan, and I think I succeeded; but I didn't realize then that I should feel, as I do now, that they were my last days as well.

Alan is a strange boy, kind, lovable, yet at times blind, and always almost a stray in this world. But you know all that, of course, for he was in love with you.

He came to England because he believed in democracy, and because he was drawn by adventure, and because he had no job, and because his friends had come here already. (I tell you this because he asked me to.) He came because he loved the sea—he said he'd seen it from the rocks of Maine. (He thought that at times the sea was more human than humanity.) He hated to tell that he had done nothing, and that he was taking no part in this present chaos. And so he joined the Navy, feeling mildly patriotic. And came here to Devon. And died.

When I first met him he felt differently. I wish I could tell it in his words, but I'm afraid I can't. It would sound like parody.

He loved the English. They fight this war as he believed wars should be fought, with courage and humour, and with stolidity. He told me once of going to London on leave and passing through a famous square that had been bombed. There was débris all around, bricks, glass, rubble. And in the midst of the rubble an old man was slowly and quietly sweeping up the autumn leaves. He told me, too, of the silent queues of women and children lining up in the early afternoon to get into the Underground shelters for the night. He revelled in the London bus drivers' comments on the war and Hitler.

But he did not believe in the war. He hated the attitude of the smug people who were escaping the suffering, and even profiting by it. He hated the universal cant and hypocrisy, and the flag waving. He hated the people who sat in the movies and hissed at the enemy. He hated his own parents, he told me, for thinking that a young man's duty was to fight and die for his country—thinking so, when they remained safe and secure in Canada.

This war was to him the death of ideals. But he had no more ideals. Or so he said. He told me time and again that he thought ideals were valueless—mere stimulant hopes, to keep the human soul alive. He could not, he said, see the sense in dying for freedom when freedom itself was dying.

Yet he died an idealist, I believe. His deep despair, his abject misery over humanity, were significant of his own faith in ideals. For he was an idealist in spite of himself and against his better judgment.

You must remember that none of this is what I believe myself. I live for England. To me nations are like people, some good, some bad. Those that are bad must be punished, or must, if they can learn, be taught. Nations can be taught, I think. They can learn to live in comradeship and tolerance. And it is our task, the task of the English race, to teach them. British world union is to be the mainstay of the years to come.

But it is what Alan thought that matters to you, not what I think. I argued with him, and always lost, yet was never convinced. I suppose my faith in the intrinsic goodness of humanity is more deeply rooted than his was.

On his last day Alan had to go up to London. He got back about six in the evening, and we met for dinner. I wish I could tell you the rest of the night as it happened: quiet, serious, yet sheer rapture.

Over coffee Alan told me he wanted me to write to you, if he was killed. He called it his "last sop to sentimentality"—if by chance he should die and be unable to throw any more sops himself.

We sat on the hotel terrace watching the sun go down. He said, "It doesn't matter who wins this war, Anne. It makes no difference. It doesn't matter who wins, and it doesn't matter who loses. You should read Spengler. This is the end for us and for our civilization. All the rest is going down."

"We shall win," I told him. "People are going to be happy again in twenty years time."

"You believe in utopias, do you? I don't. History hasn't any direction. It's just a casual drifting; and I think today we're drifting backwards if there is such a thing as backwards."

"But, Alan, there's too much good in the world, too much beauty, for everything to come to nothing."

"There's no more beauty now, and no more good now, than there was a million years ago. All those things are transitory, just as we're transitory."

"Then why are you fighting, if that's what you think? You have to be an optimist if you're going to fight. You can't fight a war without believing in the war and in the cause for which it's fought. I know that there's a great deal of democracy that deserved to die. But there is much that deserves to live; and will live. There's going to be a clean future, in spite of the dirty present. Maybe we'll die. And maybe a million others will die. But England will go on and so will democracy. I want to be free. If I can't be free then I want my children to be free, and that's what I'm fighting for. That's what I'm willing to die for, and even have you die for. You keep saying that freedom is dying, but it isn't dying, it's merely changing. I don't know why you can't see that. All that's happened is that Hitler has speeded up history. We've got to take his ideas and make a world state for the good of the world instead of a world state for the good of Germany. That's all."

He sort of grinned and raised his eyebrows: "All?"

"Yes, but England can do it. England can lay the foundations for world union. And when we've won this war—and we're going to win it—that's what will happen. It isn't going to be easy, I know. But it's a task that can be done and if I'm able I want to help to do it. Tell me what you think. Tell me why you're so blind to the good things that war can bring—this war."

He didn't say anything for a long time, but just sat looking out at the sea. Then when he spoke, he spoke slowly.

"Maybe you're right, Anne. I don't know. I hope you are. But I think you're not. You write this bit of conversation down when you write to Sally; if you do write to her. Or tell her the gist of it, at any rate. She thinks as you think, but I don't agree with either of you any longer."

He paused for a full minute and then went on again.

"I fight because I've been taught to believe in things that don't exist—freedom, democracy, tolerance, and all the rest. I've been bred to live by certain standards. Those standards may not be right, but because they're mine I must fight for them. Though I may not like my world, I'm human and because of that I've got to stand up for the kind of world I live in. Doing that makes me feel I belong. Otherwise I'm an outcast."

"But I can't see that I have any reason to think that my way of living is the best way. The German way is a good way too, to Germans. They are fighting this war with exactly the same grand ideals in their souls as we have in ours. And they're suffering just as we're suffering. They're no more cruel than we are: we're no more kind than they are. Man is the fault, not race or nationality. I guess I've always had a sneaking sympathy for the under-dog. I've an even greater sympathy for Germany and the Germans now than I had in peace time. And that's partly because I think the direction history will take will be much the same whoever wins this war."

"There is no utopia. There's no goal towards which the human race is going. I've been thinking lately how silly it is to believe in the immortality of humanity—which is all faith in the millennium amounts to—when we admit that individual men are mortal. We suspect (or I suspect) that individuals die, snuffed out like candles and never lit."

CONFORMITY

I say will make you smile, smile at anything, even this night. My tale will be a revelation. Listen.

"Seven years ago, I led a comparatively peaceful existence in a land where flowering cascades fall from the balconies of white villas and where gorgeous jasmints, geraniums, carnations and anemones gem the roadsides. I lived in a land of warm sunshine, palm trees, delicious breezes and yellow mimosa. My home was in the French Riviera on my father's estate, six kilometers north of Nice. I was a student of art and was given liberties, too generous I fear. My social life was nil. I rejoiced in my own company, away from custom and formality. More and more did I shrink from society. People were dull and uninteresting. My work and my own life—they were everything. Under a tree or by a lonely shore, I passed away my teens with a brush and a hermit's life. My family did not miss me."

"When I became twenty, my father died and I fell heir to an estate, a title and, worst of all, the responsibility for worldly matters. It was as if a straight jacket had been thrust upon me—I was bound hand, foot, body and head. At first I tried to get free with excuses. I spoke of my poor health, my timidity, my awful fear of formal people, my poor intelligence, my lack of common sense, and my younger brother's desire for the estates. No one understood me. They laughed and said with caustic entreaty, 'Count, you should be proud'. Count, Count—why did they call me that? Even my mother, child of convention, called me 'Count'. Had they all forgotten my Christian name? Besides, titles passed out with Louis Philippe."

"A year later I married. My wife, Milicente, was eighteen; I was twenty-one. Perhaps the most vicious tradition in France, at least in our province, is the custom of marrying young. Milicente and I were victims. France makes it a humiliating disgrace if her daughters are not married before twenty-one. And what does that mean?—Parental intervention, parental encouragement and force, social maladjustment and bitterness. I simply met Milicente; took her to two balls; people said 'Look', and, in accordance with custom, we were engaged. To object would be scandal. Milicente was pleased; I was miserable."

"The horrors of the wedding still haunt me. I see this moment, like an attacking army, column on column of advancing counts and countesses, English lords and ladies, delegates from the Moroccan army, (my father fought in Morocco), and even the direct descendants of Louis XVIII and the Duke of Orleans. Red, white and blue, gold braid, silks, perfumes, bows, courtseys, perched heads, proud heads, laughs—all this stepped towards me. With careful precise diction, the guests would spout with pressed lips, 'Count de Fontaine, we wish you happiness.' Wish me happiness—ha! ha! The fools. What did they care about me? Wish me happiness! They'd sooner see me destitute. A chance for scandal; yes that's it—scandal. They loved it; they lived for it. Wish me happiness! Why couldn't they leave me alone—that was my happiness."

"The week following the wedding was peaceful. I was ill, very ill. No one could see me; not even my wife. 'The result of extreme nervous strain,' said the surgeons of Nice. Parisian doctors diagnosed the trouble with prettier names. Although I felt intense pain, it was a physical pain, not mental—that was a blessing."

"Afraid to face my position again, I made up my mind to remain in bed for life. I would proclaim my disease hopeless. I was ill. Don't doubt me, Mr. Giles, I was ill. Milicente soon made this refuge impossible. She would cry at my bedside every day, every hour, 'Get well dear. There are so many invitations and you were going to take me to Italy, Corsica and Monte Carlo.' I had forgotten these promises. Blast my tongue. Her baby cooing and fretting often placed me in a rage. Such methods were too successful. I was compelled to get up. During the next few hectic months, I sought the odd moment of repose by the sea. I was going mad. There was America. Yes! America! They didn't know me there. Books said it was a land of freedom, too young for tradition, natural and wild, no class distinction."

"Fortune favoured my distracted mind. My wife died of typhoid fever a year after our marriage. I used her death as an excuse for selling my property, and leaving France. There was much objection to this plan particularly from my stubborn mother—but eventually I won."

"In May, 1935, aboard the S.S. Macawin, I sailed for New York. As the French port lights glittered like a golden necklace on the night horizon, as France faded from my life, my feelings were not saddened but relieved. The smell of the sea air, the sense that at least for seven days my solitude would be unmolested, gave me renewed confidence in myself. The tenseness of the skin about my temples which had afflicted me since my father's death, seemed cured and relaxed as the night mist kissed it. I could think clearly, walk without embarrassment, eat without care (for I ate in my cabin). Can't you see, Mark! I was free, free as the boy I had been in the sea, before that wretched curse, that awful tide had crushed me. Now, in a land where men did not know me, where counts did not exist, I was to be just plain so and so. I would associate with those careless, don't-care Americans for a livelihood and then, in the evening, enjoy my own thoughts at home, alone."

"New York came too soon, and with it a rapid succession of disillusionments. Entering the employ of François and Tapier Co., I was drafted into a social set about as fastidious as the Nice clique. François and Tapier repeatedly reprimanded me for my 'anti-social tendencies', declaring that it was imperative for their executive, (I was an executive), to offer and accept entertainment, to receive everyone with courtesy, and generally to make a pleasant impression on New York society. I might have stood this formality for six months but news of my title was rumored and in time became a known fact. François and Tapier were delighted—so was New York society. Invitations flooded my apartment. I refused them all. I was bitter. Even the America which I had waited weeks to see, was filled with petty people and social politicians."

"There was one hope left—become a farm labourer. Surely convention did not exist in the country. I resigned from the executive of François and Tapier and gave my inherited wealth to state art institutes."

The Count paused. Mark Giles seemed to be getting a sinister pleasure out of the tale. Tired of standing, he took a seat at a deserted table. The Count followed him. The crowd were getting gayer.

"On the Lamolite River," continued the Count, "deep in the valley of Lake Champlain, in the State of Vermont lies a little village called Vermilion. How the settlement got its name no one knows. For my own satisfaction, I expounded the theory that the village

Athletic Office Accountant
Granted Leave of Absence from University to Assume Duties as Sub-Lieutenant

MANAGED ATHLETIC OFFICE

Leave of absence for the duration of the war has been granted J. P. Loosemore, accountant in the Athletic Association Office in Hart House.

Mr. Loosemore, who has been given the rank of Sub-Lieutenant in the Royal Canadian Navy, will report for his new duties at Halifax on New Year's Eve.

Coming to the Athletic Association Office almost eleven years ago, Sub-Lieut. Loosemore has had charge of the multifarious tasks involved in handling game receipts, and tickets for the football and hockey games and the Promenade Concerts which have been held in the Stadium and Arena. To these duties was added the management of the Athletic Office and the accounting of its books.

Sub-Lieut. Loosemore was graduated from Trinity College School, from which he went to the Royal Naval College in Esquimaux, British Columbia.

"We shall all miss him while he is away," said Mr. T. A. Reed, Secretary of the U.T.A.A. yesterday, "but we are likewise pleased with his new appointment."

Bill King, who was a junior in the Athletic Office under Mr. Loosemore, has also been given leave of absence. Bill is now Lieutenant King of the Toronto Scottish, and is now in charge of instructing the machine-gun section at Brantford Training School.

Speaking OF SPORT

By Owen Priehard

This university is about to complete the first stage of the most unusual sport season in many a year.

Last July the expected bombshell burst on the pages of hundreds of Canadian newspapers, announcing that intercollegiate sport would be suspended for the duration of the war.

This was the acid test for the intramural athletic system which has been built up on this campus over a period of years. Other universities in Canada were not so fortunate, and either compromised with the ruling or struggled along with a makeshift interfaculty program.

The theme which has been stressed by the University of Toronto Athletic Association is that athletics are for as many as can participate and wish to participate. Varsity's efforts in intercollegiate sport in the past few years have not been carried out to the disadvantage of this idea of sports for all.

Consequently, when the cancellation was announced, Toronto students did less grouching than those of any other campus, and pitched right into interfaculty sport, even with the increased pressure of military training. We think the following statistics provide the answer to any person who suggests that the athletically-inclined in this university are not wholly satisfied to play their games on an intramural basis until conditions justify a return to the more glamorous and exciting intercollegiate brand of sport.

During the season just closing no less than 81 teams competed in the sports of football, soccer, swimming, volleyball and lacrosse. New entries from previously unrepresented faculties were received in football and lacrosse. The swimming series, a completely new venture, attracted 15 teams. Volleyball was a leading sport with 32 squads entered in the league. In this sport University College and School of Science each had four teams in competition.

In sports which feature individual effort the numbers turning out for the meets were equally encouraging, with some sports establishing new records for entries: Relay Track, 27; Senior Track, 55; Senior Harrier, 64; Novice Harrier, 87; Novice Track, 99; Golf, 103.

All of which adds up to the inevitable conclusion that a lot of students on this campus have been enjoying and learning a number of varied sports. This, we believe, is the basic function of an athletic program, and not gate receipts and marching bands, granted that these have their rightful place under happier conditions. Let's go on to bigger undertakings next term!

TO YOU FROM US

To the loyal and hard-working sports-writers, to my indispensable assistants Dave and Stan, to Warren Stevens, "Mac" McCutcheon, Mr. T. A. Reed and the Athletic Directorate, Misses Boyd and Lee of the Athletic Office, the lads of the Downtown Press, and the kind and patient folks who have borne with our thrice-weekly mutterings in this column—May all that Christmas means be yours to enjoy in the New Year.

SOCCER TITLE SHARED BETWEEN KNOX AND MEDS

This year, for the first time in history, the Arts Faculty Cup, emblematic of intramural soccer superiority, was won jointly by two teams. Because of weather conditions the final could not be played and so the trophy is to be held jointly by Meds and Knox.

The teams were divided into three groups. Group I consisted of S.P.S., Vic, and U.C. Meds, Dents and Pharmacy made up Group II, while Trinity, Knox, Wycliffe and Emmanuel went together in Group III.

Vic, last year's champions, ended up in a tie with School one top of the first group and edged out the Engineers in the group playoff. Meds breezed through Group II without serious opposition. Knox edged out Trinity in the third group and then defeated Vic after they had been tied by the Scarlet and Gold in the first game of the playdowns.

SCHOOL MEETS U.C.
IN LACROSSE FINAL

Engineers Move into Second Tussle of Dafoe Cup Series with One-Game Lead Over Royal College

Sr. School drive into the second game of their best of two championship series for the W. A. Dafoe Cup against U.C. in Hart House big gym this afternoon at 4 o'clock, in a contest that may well write final to the 1940 lacrosse season.

For the Artsmen this is a last ditch struggle. If they lose this game their hopes for a boxa title are irretrievably shattered. The Engineers can drop the battle and still hold an even chance for the honours.

The first game of the title hunt went to S.P.S. on Monday as they took a decisive 9-3 victory from U.C. on the basis of that performance School are top heavy favourites to close the series with a win today.

Yet in the opening tilt the Royal College boys played the worst lacrosse they have displayed this year. The loss was their first defeat of the season, and it is reasonable to expect that they will return to the polished form of their previous games.

U.C.'s checking was atrocious on Monday, and their offensive efforts were uninspired and poorly organized. They are likely to prove a totally different outfit this afternoon.

On the other hand the Engineers couldn't do a thing wrong in Monday's game. Their passing plays clicked to perfection, their shots on goal were clutching the corners, and their defence was almost impregnable. They were hot. Maybe those same Schoolmen will not be able to attain the same perfection today.

If both squads play up to their respective potentialities, a rousing, fast-moving struggle will result, with the smooth pass attack of the Engineers giving them a slight edge at the wire.

SKI EXECUTIVE

There will be a meeting of the intramural ski executive today at 5 p.m. in Hart House Athletic Directorate Office. Every faculty should be represented.

HIA! WATHA BATTLE!

Where the freshman come to college,
Comes to get his higher learning,
Comes to get his Latin sheepskin,
Comes to get initiation.

To the southward of the campus
Stands a red-brick ancient Schoolhouse
Haunt of many doughty warriors,
Haunt of Engineers and Miners,
Of a husky crowd the hangout,
Rough and tough, they sweep the campus.

Near the Schoolhouse on the south-east
Dwell the smoother tribe of Med-men,
Conquerors of Mice and Microbes,
Dealing all to Germs the death-blow,
Wielding microscope and scalpel,
Mercurochrome and anaesthetic,
Pitting wits against the Schoolmen,
Spitting wit against their rivals,
Content with boasting that in battle
They could smear the smirking Strongmen.

To each seat of seething vigour
Came its '40 flow of freshmen,
Bare-faced lads from far-off places
With open minds and open faces,
Came and heard the tales of prowess,
Heard the battle-cries and curses,
Swallowed all the propaganda,
Swelled-up, filled with war-ambition,
Filled by scheming second-year men;
Both the surgeons and the gear-men
Waited only for the challenge.

Came the trees red with October
Round the broad Toronto campus,
Came the Med-men all in war-paint,
All their throats with red ties glaring,
Shrieking, bent on demolition
Of the Schoolhouse in the sunset,
And the freshmen who did fill it,
Young 'demolish forty beers' men.

Like a corral filled with bronchos
Surged School's halls with 'Toike-Oike' men;
Like bees angry from their home-nest
Streamed the dauntless green-tied freshmen,
Hurling eggs of doubtful vintage,
Hurling over-ripe tomatoes,
Hurling books and hurling Med-men
Flailing arms in mad commotion.
In the air rose howls of glory,
Howls of beefsteak, howls unholy,
Hundreds milling on the greensward,
Trampling freshmen on the campus.
Pants and shirts ascended skyward,
Red ties vanished to the limbo,
Vanished likewise many Med-men,
Fleeing madly to their classrooms,
To their labs and their professors,
To their ether and their scalpels,
Barely beating off the bad men
From the Schoolhouse, who, victorious,
Strutted down to the Casino,
Drank their rum and damned the Med-men
In the year of 1940.

Second Prize, Serious Verse

September 1st,

By Rose Marie Moore

When the long still shadows come with slanting rays
To gild the shingles and the unpainted barn-side,
When the elms stand darkly in unmoving fields of tansy,
And the maple bush is sparkling with a brighter gold,
When the cows come up late from the lowland meadows,
Lowing through the yellow sun shafts, along the paths
Now lined with golden rod and pink jo-pie weed
A sadness, a certain bitter smell of wood smoke,
A settling of tiny particles in every sunbeam,
Envelopes quietly the mellow vales and hillocks.
In but an hour Summer has ebbed away and left the land
To a slow, aching, yellow glory.

on display more often during the time that students are here to see it. Canadian painting from its beginning with Paul Kane down to the present day forms the largest part of this section, and this includes a surprising number of important canvases by the Group of Seven.

There is also a selection of the old masters. An important addition to this section is El Greco's Virgin and Child with St. Anne, owned by Thomas Harris of London, England, which was sent over for the recent Great Masters show, and will stay for the duration of the war. Another outstanding piece of refugee art is the large tapestry, Triumph of Fortitude, of Hispanic-Flemish workmanship, dated 1520, and evacuated from England from the collection of Sir Ronald Storr.

The four contemporary Canadians exhibiting in the Print Room are B. Cogill Haworth, Roddy Kenny Courtice, Yvonne McKague Housner and Isobel McLaughlin. Among a good deal of artistic junk in this show there are two that are important. Nunsia by Cogill Haworth is a portrait that is conceived decoratively and treated humorously and with fantasy. Sumatra by Roddy Kenny Courtice, is a fine painting of rugged

FOR THOSE WHO HISS

Logically I have to think that there is no reason to believe that the human race will not be snuffed out too, eventually. And these years, perhaps, are the beginning of the snuffing process.

"The important thing is that it doesn't matter what the future brings. You don't have to believe in ideals in order to fight for them. You don't have to have ideals in order to live. You can sit and watch, and glory in it. You can see misery, and courage, and intelligence, and hatred, and you can be fascinated by it all, utterly fascinated. What's more you can be a part of it all.

"What's it matter where we're going? What does inevitable destruction matter? We're here, and we're alive, and we're close to death. That's all any human being should ask. It's all I ask. Or rather it's all I've got, and I think I'd be a fool to ask for more when I can't get more."

"If we found liberty and freedom we wouldn't know what to do with them."

He said more, much more. I wonder if I've captured the way he said it—this little that I've written?

I did answer. I said again the things I'd said before; and I still believe them. Sometimes I feel that perhaps Alan was right—God knows, it looks as though he was—, but even so in my heart I can't agree with him.

While I tried to tell him why I thought as I did, stumbling and retracing my steps and sometimes almost pleading, the air-raid siren sounded. A heart rending soulless wail, falling and rising. Have you ever heard it? It's a symbol of the horror of this war.

With that strangely sympathetic cynicism in his eyes that you must have known, Alan said, "Shall we go down to the shelter? It's going to be a bad night by the sound of it."

I think I said, "Shall we hell. This is our night."

It was our night.

We had a room in the hotel, by special arrangement, but the idea of making love to the sound of shells and droning planes was not over-pleasant, so we begged three car rugs from the hotel manager and hired a taxi to drive us out of the town to the heath behind. The taxi driver was quite obviously shocked beyond words when Alan told him to leave us and call for us again at six in the morning. He said, "Yes, sir." (A long pause and an embarrassed cough.) "Six o'clock, sir. But what if it rains, sir?"

It didn't rain. England was kind, and the night was beautifully warm, stars shining, and the sound of the bombs very distant, almost in another world.

I have to tell you this. Alan said you would understand, and that you would want to know.

When the taximan came back in the morning—a misty dawn and cold—he brought with him six ham sandwiches in a paper bag and two pints of milk. We made him eat two of the sandwiches with us before we started.

I know this sounds impossibly romantic. But it happened.

The goodbyes. Only the gods could say goodbye without crying. I didn't mean to cry.

I'm remembering now that Alan is dead, and my thoughts are falling to pieces. I'm writing in little starts, for somehow sorrow makes one's emotions all patchy. In a little while I shall settle down again into the cold and angry determination that is the only feeling I have left which to face realities. I want to make a new world. I want to make Alan's death have some meaning. I don't want to escape. All I ask is that I be allowed to stay here and work.

For there is no escape any longer. In movies life moves always towards happiness and safety, but in the real world it moves towards tragedy and death—in these strange days, anyway. Alan told me that and I didn't believe him. How could I believe him? For one must have faith in one's future and in one's country's future in order to go on living as we in England are living today.

I can't write lovely words to tell you what I feel. They sound false. And hollow. But the bitterness of his death. And the bitterness of a world that would let him die so, for nothing, a wasted being. And the bitterness of having to believe, as I must still believe, that the future for us and for humanity is not so dark as he would have had us think.

Well, I've written what I had to write, and the promise is kept. While I was writing the last few sentences the thing started again, the wailing dervish. There will be work for me to do. I can hear the heavy drone of bombing planes: you get to know the sound after the first few times.

Write to me if you wish. I'm lonely here—war is a very lonely game—and I should be glad to hear from someone who still lives in the world as it used to be.

Yours,

ANNE CHRISTOPHER.

spirit of American sympathy with the victims of catastrophe. Shortly after the people of Poland—their country ravaged by a lightning attack—found their homes destroyed and their food supplies disrupted, the Friends Com-

THE EXCHANGE DEPARTMENT WISHES THE MANAGING, NEWS, SPORTS, A. M. & D. AND C.U.P. DEPARTMENTS A MERRY CHRISTMAS. . . .

AT THE FINAL LECTURE of the Training Centre Battalion, held in Convocation Hall Saturday afternoon, there was much jolly rivalry between School and Meds and Vic, with good-natured hissing, booing and cat-calls causing the rafters to ring. . . . EXCHANGE DEPARTMENTS A MERRY CHRISTMAS.

MOST DOGGONE FRIVOLITY that the Varsity Press has seen for many a dreary night took place yesterday evening when a reporter rolled in late with a balloon she had picked up at a party. . . . The Boys in The Back Room immediately instituted a volleyball game, using the partition of the inner office for a net. The battle was featured by the magnificent all-round work of the Sports Editor, abetted by the A. M. & D. Editor and the ex-A. M. & D. Editor. On the other side of the wall were a Cub Reporter, the Managing Editor, the C.U.P. Editor and the Exchange Editor, who employed the very finest set-up-and-spike methods. No decision was reached in the crochial clash when the balloon broke in the midst of a rally which had lasted seventeen minutes. . . .

derived its title from its autumn reds. Never have I seen such beautiful scarlets in autumn leaves as in Vermilion. I am a painter and such fall beauty thrilled me—the deep blue Lamoille flowing through golden wheat fields, and in the background, those reds broken here and there by dark green spruces.

"This rural escape was my new home. I was to work in the fields for an old gentleman named Tate. What a paradise! How invigorating is the smell of the harvest; how delightful, the sunset; how sweet, the touch of early dew; how grand to be alone. The day of my arrival proved the happiest of my life. It was as if I had been struggling for centuries in an effort to escape from a black pit and had found a ladder; light and clean air were mine again. In the evening of this first day, as I lay on a leather sofa beneath a flickering lamp in Tate's cottage, I met the only person whom I have ever loved. Tate had a granddaughter, a beautiful girl of twenty-one, who managed his house. Her name was Louise. In the warm lamp light, she was introduced to me. Her pure white face was framed in soft brown hair. Her smooth hands and arms clasped a spray of pink asters which made her smile seem divine. She looked at me with kindness and made me feel that I had something to offer her. I thrilled with delight. She seemed to understand me, my life, my joy in nature. She even shared my solitude. That night in bed, I lay awake until dawn, until the rising sun had wiped out the moon. I was very happy.

"I was happy but very ignorant—ignorant of the evil yet to come, and ignorant of the universal nature of mankind. I soon learned that rules of conformity were adhered to just as strongly in a provincial village as in a French aristocracy.

"I became very attached to Louise. Our loves, our likes were reciprocal. After work, we would wander in the fields, along the Lamoille through the spruce woods. She would pose and I would paint her and, best of all, she would admire my work. She never laughed at me like others of her kind. Often she would coax me to go to little socials—I could not refuse her. Soon, however, her friends became impossible. I had always disliked gossipers and Vermilion's gossip was of the worst kind. "Did you hear that Mr. Felp was drunk last night," one would say. "I heard he beat his wife," said another.

Didkies! Rumors! Petty scandal!

"One evening, a particular bore, Mrs. Wendy, invited me to a taffy-pull being held for her daughters. I refused. That same evening a town steeper found me doing nothing in Tate's woodshed. A rumor soon developed that I disliked Mrs. Wendy and her set. I didn't mind, in fact I was relieved. Louise made no mention of it.

"This refusal encouraged more. Many villagers were beginning to dislike me. What did I care! They were stupid clouts, and besides, I still had Louise. Even though she begged me to be more sociable, something in me, I don't know what, a drunken sense—told me to act as I liked. I began to reason and support my age-long beliefs with careful explanations. Why should I not refuse the invitations of stuffy women and sloppy men? There were no laws against it. My reasoning went further. If there were no laws demanding us to conform to etiquette, why conform? If governors saw no need to institute penalties for disregarding social niceties—then conforming was ludicrous. Because statesmen found it right to pass serious laws on killing and robbing—we should not kill or rob, but I had been a fool all my life thinking I had to yield to etiquette. The more I reasoned, the more I was convinced of my innocence in refusing Vermilion's invitations. I continued to reject the company of many villagers. Every day my friends became fewer and my enemies increased. People on the street would look the other way. I followed suit even with my friends. It was rumored that Tate was housing a misanthrope. As the clamour arose for him to rid himself of the awful wretch—he came to me one day and apologized for discharging me. "I like you," he said, "but I like the villagers too, and they refuse to associate with me if I keep you." Louise, also, acted with indifference and, although she called me 'dear', said she had better not see me again. She had been my last hope for security. Her loss to me was like murder. I remember clinging to her dress, praying, begging, weeping for her love. She struggled to get loose crying—"Your eyes! Don't stare that way". She freed herself, and ran frightened into the attic. I never saw her again.

"I was ostracised from Vermilion. But more and more did I cling to my belief in favour of non-conformity. More and more did I abhor stupid conventions. I was learning to curse everyone. Mankind was acquiring a bestial nature. Mankind was beginning to hate me. Nowhere could I keep a job. "You are too disagreeable," they would say.

"I plodded over America trying to secure some basis for my theory. I grew poorer and poorer—destitute. The world was fading on all sides. I struck forward blindly, condemning everyone. My melancholy grew worse. I was helpless. People became venomous. The strain became terrific. I began to steal my food, there was no other way. I stole pistols from arsenals. I practised running. Everybody was after me, hunting me, trying to kill me. Green and brown objects, whirls and mazes, stampeding felt like rampaging dinosaurs on Broadway, Hollywood Boulevard—they were all after me. They mustn't kill me. I took a stick one day and stunned a child who had hugged me and had called me a 'nice ninn'. What was nice? What was man? I began to run at the horror of her fall. Had I hurt her? But she had wanted to trip me and make me fall—she would make me die. I screamed. I ran and ran. Monstrous people began to stare at me. I ran harder and harder. Was there no escape? Finally some blue coated creatures with guns grabbed me. I was in a panic. "Don't kill, don't kill, don't kill—" I shouted. I began to fling my arms helplessly about. I began to shout and shout and growl, and then came tears and I cried.

"For six months I was oblivious to the world about me. Doctors told me later that I was recovering from a mental derangement called Dementia Praecox. At first, after this state of delirium, I would go wild at the sight of a hospital attendant. Gradually, month after month, the bestial qualities of man receded as his kindnesses to me increased. The nurses fed me, and gave me a bed and read to me. They were very good.

"Before I left the hospital, I wrote a book, A Contrast between American and French Traditions. Customs were good things. Conformity was a good thing. It had to be a good thing. I am sure it was. I am sure it is. The book was the greatest approach to customs ever written, said New York critics. I made a fortune of ten thousand dollars.

"On the day before my departure from the hospital, Monsieur Cecile Francois, my former employer, begged me to come and work for him again. For a few moments I thought, and then accepted. My former associates at Francois and Tapier have been very kind to me. They ask me how I feel and inquire if they can do anything for me. Tonight they invited me to this New Year's party. Mark Giles, do you hear me? Smile, Mark. You were the Count de Fontaine. Be proud of your ancestry. Be proud of your book. Be proud of life as it is."

The throbs of these memories passed from the mind of Mark Giles. He, the Count de Fontaine, finding a torn horn at his feet, with lipstick on the mouth-piece, picked it up and ran to join the gaiety of New Year's Eve.

HIGH SCHOOL EDITORS HELD XMAS SESSION HERE IN VACATION

Ontario Magazine Editors Discussed Problems, Heard Talks by Local Journalists and Held Banquet

Editors and staff members of high school magazines from all parts of Ontario gathered in University College during the holidays, to attend the Second Annual Ontario Secondary School Editors' Convention. The Convention, sponsored by the Canadian High News, took place December 27 and 28.

During the two days, delegates attended discussions conducted by authorities on various branches of magazine production. They heard an address of welcome by Dr. H. J. Cody, President of the University, and were guests at a dance in the Women's Union, and, the following night, at a banquet in the Union at which prizes for the outstanding magazines of the previous year were awarded.

Among speakers at the convention's discussion groups were A. J. Monk of the Globe and Mail, P. M. Richards of Saturday Night, Lloyd Hodgkinson and Carl Thuro of the Canadian High News, and Michael O'Mara, Exchange and C.U.P. Editor of The Varsity. Chairman of the convention committee was Ben Holdsworth, Editor of the Canadian High News.

The Varsity Shield, awarded annually to the magazine containing the best literary section, was won by the Runnymede Magna Charta, and was presented by Edgar Simon, Managing Editor of The Varsity. The Magna Charta also received awards for outstanding make-up and for containing the best short story of the year.

The Danforth Tech Tatler, adjudged the best all-round magazine in Ontario, was awarded the Star Shield. Other prizes were presented, at the banquet which closed the convention, to the Lawrence Park Robur, the Humber-side Hermes, the Central Tech Vulcan and the Cobourg Review.

Dr. M. W. Wallace, Principal of University College, addressed delegates attending the banquet.

Grad's Dance, Warden's Dinner Break Hart House Holiday Lull

With most of the male undergraduate body far away, Hart House did not relapse into somnolence during the Christmas holidays. Not only was the den of the stag at ease the scene of intensive interior decoration, it was also the locale of several social functions.

Chief among the latter was the Grads' Ball on New Year's Eve, one of the greatest festive programs in years attracted a capacity party of 750. More than a hundred applications for tickets had to be refused for lack of accommodation, the Warden's Office announced.

Rivalling the Ball in festive gaiety was the Warden's Annual Christmas Dinner on December 19. From points as widely separated as Holland, Norway, Brazil, and China, 128 men were present to have dinner with the Warden and listen to the Saint Simon's Boys' Choir sing carols by candle-light. ## TERM EXAM DATES LEFT TO PROFESSORS

Arts students who have hitherto been haunted by the bogey of term exams in the first week of February will hail with delight the decision of the Council of Arts which restores that period to its normal place in the routine of academic life.

At a meeting of the Committee on Examinations held last November it was recommended that any instructor should be free to hold announced term exams in any of his regular lecture or laboratory periods at any time during the session, and that a set period for term exams should no longer be prescribed. This proposal was approved by the Council of Arts on December 9th, and came into effect on that day.

A. B. Fennell, Registrar of the University and Secretary of the Council of Arts, told The Varsity that the Council has felt for some time that the former method was inconvenient and inadequate. "This does not mean that the professor may not retain his privilege of springing unannounced term exams upon his classes," he warned, "but it is hoped that this practice will disappear."

Mr. Fennell pointed out that the difficulty of holding such surprise tests is that there is rarely full attendance in a large class on any given day, and that it is difficult to find some fair way of later examining the absentees.

"The only difference in the new method is that all announced term exams may be held at any time, instead of being confined to the one-week period. Under the old method this was contrary to the ruling of the Council," he stated. "Students would do well to note that the length of the notice given depends entirely upon the instructor's own discretion."

The University, who was unable to be present. A cable of good wishes to the men from Warden Bickerstaff, now serving in England, was read and each guest received an etching of the north end of the Great Hall by Wendell Lawton, president of the Canadian Society of Painter-Etchers and Engravers.

The boys of the University Settlement were entertained just after University classes ended on December 20. There was an evening of sports and games.

The convention of High School editors which met at University College during the holidays were given a pre-Freeman inspection of the House and all its facilities.

The voice of Hart House, the carillon in Soldiers' Tower was heard over the Canadian networks from coast to coast and in the United States over the Mutual Network from December 23-27.

U. of T. Professor of Dental Praxis Has Imposing Record in Dental Research, Social and Civic Work

BEGAN PRACTICE IN 1904

A member of the faculty of the university is the new mayor of Toronto. Dr. F. J. Conboy, the Mayor-elect, is a professor of Dental Praxis in the Faculty of Dentistry and plans to continue lecturing at the faculty and the College of Optometry during his term of office.

The story of the success of the man who is mayor of the second largest city in Canada begins when a lad of ten paid his first visit to the dentist. This visit must have made a lasting impression on the boy for then and there he decided that his life work would be dedicated to the relief of suffering humanity. Today Dr. Conboy has risen from the ranks of his profession to become a professor at the Royal College of Dental Surgeons, secretary of the Ontario Dental Association and editor of the association's journal.

Dr. Conboy began his dental practice in 1904, near Bloor and Westmoreland Sts., kept at it until 1925 when he was appointed provincial director of dental services, a post he held up to 1934. For six years he served on the Board of Education, the last year of which, 1934, saw him chairman. In 1935 and 1936 he served as Alderman from Ward 6, and for the past four years he has been a Controller. In addition, he has been or is on the executive of the Canadian Dental Hygiene Council, president of the Canadian Dental Research Foundation, director of the Social Service Council of Ontario, past-president of the Ontario Association for Prevention of Feeble Mindedness, and a lecturer at the College of Optometry. Dr. Conboy is also superintendent of Westmoreland United Sunday School.

Annesley anomalies and their swanky swains will trip a measure on Friday night to the tricky troika of Fred Evis in the first big formal of the campus' New Year social slate.

The dance, to be held in Annesley Hall, is the annual get-together of all Vice residence girls. Joy Martyn, president of ASGA, and a committee of the girls are drawing up last minute plans which include ice-cream, strawberries and program captions depicting a day in the lowly life of the Annesley maidens. Preparations are being made for 100 couples, a number slightly less than last year's record breaking crowd.

C.O.T.C. Lecture Cut, Schoolmen May Attend Exam Dance Tonight

In order that about 150 members of the Mining, Metallurgical and Civil Club may be allowed to attend the Exam Dance at the Arcadian Hall tonight, a special C.O.T.C. lecture will be cut short, it was revealed last night by Jack Wachsmuth, chairman of the club.

Arrangements for the dance had been completed some weeks ago but a sudden change in C.O.T.C. orders would prevent many students from attending. Major Tate has announced he will end his special lecture to the Engineering Companies shortly before 9 p.m.

MAUROIS OPTIMISTIC IN AUDITORIUM TALK ON WORLD OUTLOOK

Spirit of Forty Million Frenchmen Will Restore France, Says Historian in Talk on "How to Save Freedom"

"We are at the beginning of a civilization, not the end," declared Sir Andre Maurois, eminent French historian and biographer, speaking in Eaton Auditorium last night.

Sir Andre optimistically looks to the future, and in his lecture, "How to Save Freedom," he explained the reasons for France's fall, described how its recurrence may be averted in the future, and told why England will not meet a similar fate.

France's defeat was more certain than any other in history, declared this aggressive-looking Frenchman who has been on the general staffs of both the French and English armies. He emphasized that both armies were as good as they had been in '14, but that the weakness was in the generals and commanders, none of whom he considered traitors. Men and allies were lacking, but the main deficiencies were in materials: planes, tanks and guns were needed.

However, he affirmed, security includes not only weapons, but will and faith—England has both of these; that is why she fights so well. "Freedom was born of strength and discipline, and only by discipline and strength can it be safe."

In closing, the speaker admitted that perhaps he should be unhappy with his home and books destroyed and his family in continual danger far away, but he has not lost confidence. France will be restored despite her mistakes because forty million Frenchmen have not changed; their culture remains and they can't be deprived of their freedom and their love of freedom which has been nurtured in them for the past two hundred years.

C.O.T.C. Catches up Back Files As Battalions Take Month's Rest

While members of the C.O.T.C. Battalions relaxed during the holidays, the Orderly Room continued to function. Despite the fact that organization behind the battalions was practically nil last September, everything is now up to date.

In a comparatively short time a filing system has been set up, and all records and documents have been put in order. Reports have been sent to the headquarters of the Department of National Defence in Ottawa concerning those taking training and their progress to date.

After a lay-off of a month, lectures and drills for the Training Centre Battalion are to be resumed on Monday, January 13.

SEPARATE PETITIONS

Taking action in the face of a threatened dismissal of Professor F. H. Underhill, member of the History department, graduates and undergraduates who have studied under him yesterday circulated petitions affirming their confidence in him as "a thorough scholar and a stimulating, tolerant teacher" with "a high sense of public service."

The two petitions, one graduate and one drawn up by members of the third and fourth years of the Modern History course, have been presented to President Cody, but no general undergraduate petition has been drawn up. Many members of the staff are reported to have addressed representations to the President and the Board of Governors on behalf of Professor Underhill. A meeting of the Board of Governors is to be held this afternoon, it was announced.

Following is the petition addressed to Dr. Cody by the members of the third and fourth years of the History course:

"We, the undersigned, who are students in the Third and Fourth Years of the Modern History Course respectfully ask permission to make the following statement.

"We do not represent any political organization or party but are acting in a private capacity as students who are in daily contact with Professor F. H. Underhill and who know him personally.

"We regard Professor Underhill as a man of the highest integrity, possessed of a keen sense of duty and dedicated to serve the cause of truth and freedom. At all times in his teaching he has put forward the highest ideals of Democracy. Most especially we affirm that he has not used lecture hours or tutorial sessions to try to inculcate his personal political beliefs among us.

"The very keynote of his teaching is to inspire each and every one of us to think for ourselves. We consider this to be the worthiest aim of any University and such an ideal to be the very foundation of Freedom itself.

"We pay this tribute to F. H. Underhill gladly, as students who admire and respect him, knowing him to be a thorough scholar and a stimulating, tolerant teacher."

The graduate petition reads in part: "We testify that Professor Underhill is, and always has been, regarded with respect and admiration by his students."

"We consider him to be an inspiring teacher, a scholar with a high sense of public service and a man of fine character. We recognize our deep indebtedness to him for the part he has played in our intellectual development."

Duncan to Fill Vacancy In Governing Board Left by Russell's Death

James S. Duncan, Acting Deputy-Minister for Air, has been appointed to the Board of Governors of the University, it was announced by Premier Hepburn Tuesday. Mr. Duncan's appointment will fill the vacancy caused by the death of the late Dr. T. A. Russell.

Funeral services for Dr. Russell, who died during the Christmas holidays, were held in a special ceremony in Convocation Hall at which President H. J. Cody officiated.

Also vice-President of the Massey-Harris Co. Ltd., the new governor was appointed to the Air Ministry post last April.

Happy New Year

As the new year opens and the undergraduate body sets out upon the last lap of the academic year 1940-1941, The Varsity takes this opportunity of extending to all its readers sincere wishes for the utmost happiness and success in the coming twelve months, and indeed in all succeeding years.

Last term was, we believe, a most successful one in every way. The university swung into high gear on its war effort, both financially and in the matter of military training. At the same time normal activities were carried on fairly well, and in the absence of intercollegiate athletics, the students rallied behind the intramural system with great enthusiasm.

This is traditionally a time of resolutions. The chief resolution of everyone concerned with the university, from the top down, should be to exert every effort to make this term a truly successful one and to bring credit and honour to the name of the University of Toronto. May we all continue our war effort, no matter what line of activity it may fall in, and may we judiciously carry on our normal activities. May we also settle down to hard academic work for the rest of the term, for that is our prime purpose in attending university—to get a good, liberal, truth-seeking, practical university education which will fit us to take our place as responsible Canadian citizens. That is no mean task in a world such as surrounds us today, and it should be the constant endeavour of all in the university to see that success in that task may be realized, and to safeguard all that we now possess.

So welcome 1941!

A Brighter Dawn

A new year has dawned following the passing of one of the blackest years in the recent history of the world. Although war was declared in 1939, not until 1940 were the hounds of war unleashed in all their mad fury so that their bite brought death and desolation to untold thousands and their barking filled all the world with fear. Swiftly following upon months of stalemate the vaunted Nazi blitzkrieg swept through Europe, laying half a continent at Der Fuehrer's feet. Masses of planes filled the skies, raining death over protected and unprotected cities alike. England bore the brunt of the Luftwaffe attack, and she bore it unflinchingly.

A general survey of the world scene as 1941 gets underway shows a much brighter picture for the Allied cause. England, although undergoing a terrific battering from the air, has been able to withstand all assaults, and the invasion which was evidently scheduled for last summer has failed to take place. In north Africa Britain's mechanized forces have carried off a string of victories against the Italian army, and seem to be pushing on irresistibly, proving that Hitler is not the only master of the modern mechanized blitzkrieg method. The Greeks have made a notable stand against Italy in Albania, with aid from the R.A.F. which on a wide front from Norway to Africa has been bombarding enemy industries, concentrations, and emplacements.

In warfare there are always many uncertainties and many mysteries. In the present phase of the war one of the immediate mysteries is what Hitler intends to do in the Balkans. Large masses of troops have been sent into the Balkans, and into the lines to help the Italians. Germany has extended her way over the majority of the Balkan states, and the feeling of suspense and tension which has so long existed there continues. When it will be snapped no one can foretell.

One of the fairly positive factors in the present situation is that the United States will continue to send aid to the allied forces, aid which will increase in quantity and which will not be hindered by the condition: "Pay cash on the line." President Roosevelt, in two recent speeches, has taken a definite stand of "all-out aid for Britain", and has recommended that a future payment in kind take the place of immediate payment in cash. Meanwhile, U.S. defence production, still bogged down in numerous spots, is gradually gaining momentum under a more centralized administration and control of effort.

And so as we look out across the world, we may be glad that 1940 has passed and take heart in the dawning of a new year which seems destined to be a much brighter one for the British peoples, and indeed for all their sympathizers. There must be no diminishing of effort, rather new and more strenuous efforts must be made to insure the brightness of the new year.

We Quote "The Star"

President Roosevelt recently listed what he considered to be the six foundation principles of a strong democracy. They were equality of opportunity, jobs for the able, security for those who need it, abolition of special privilege for the few, preservation of civil liberties for all, and the enjoyment of fruits of scientific progress in a rising living standard.

In an editorial, The Toronto Daily Star yesterday commented upon these in general, and upon the fifth in particular—"the preservation of civil liberties for all." Pointing out that in war-time civil liberties inevitably suffer, The Star feels however that it may have suffered unnecessary setbacks in Canada, and that freedom of speech may have been curtailed to an unnecessary degree. This might have serious consequences with regard to American relations, it is felt.

We take the liberty of reprinting a portion of the editorial: "In the United States there is an isolationist group hungry for specific instances of that sort of thing, ready to quote them as proof that Canada is not really fighting for democracy because she is not practicing it herself. It would be unfortunate if at this time any specific case were to arise to give color to such a supposition. Everyone knows that individual liberty does suffer some curtailment in war. But war should not lead to curtailment which, excessive in itself, is sure to be magnified by those who wish to alienate American sympathy."

This is Whiteside Speaking . . .

In The Man Who Came to Dinner, Messrs. Kaufman and Hart have wrought a nice revenge on intellectual sadists. The fact that the play is a horror of dramatic disorganization has anything but undesirable effect on the delighted audiences which are filling and seem likely to go on filling the Royal Alexandra throughout the present two week run.

The story concerns a literary idol, reputed by open secret to be Alexander Woolcott, who came to dinner at the home of the Stanleys in a small Ohio town. He slips on the ice, injures his hip, and is forced to remain at the Stanleys', carrying on his activities from there. He institutes a lawsuit and under threat of more dire consequences takes over the living-room, dining-room and library of the Stanley home, cutting the family off from the telephone and banishing them to the upstairs part of the house. In this setting the playwrights, with incisive satire, put the members of the top layer of international literary and theatrical sophistication on the table. Throughout the three acts the topflight sophisticates and sophisticates throw their intellectual weights around like pingpong balls. Among these characters and discerning people readers of Life will recognize Noel Coward and Harpo Marx. Oscar Levant is unfortunately among those missing.

The dialogue of this play is the acme of what a previous reviewer in these columns has heartily damned as not even "clean filth". Here, however, it is quite in place, being overdone for satiric purposes.

Clifton Webb, in the part of the idol, Sheridan Whiteside, holds the audience throughout his nearly continuous presence on the stage unhampered by the fact that he is almost completely immobilized in a wheelchair. This part, it is to be hoped, is greatly overdrawn, yet Mr. Webb makes it completely con-

CHAMPUS CAT

Joe Gitch came back to the university a changed man. No longer would he waste hour after hour happily chalking his cue in lecture rooms while carelessly drinking Pepsi-Colas through long straws. No sir, Joe Gitch wanted to be the perfect student. This was his New Year's resolution and he was determined to keep it.

On the first day of the new term, he entered the Bursar's office with his pockets jingling and paid his fees in full. Mr. Higginbottom was taken from the room in a stupor.

On the second day of term, young Gitch donned his respirator and entered the Hart House Pool Room. Standing on the centre table, he gave a short but admirable sermon on The Sin of Scratching on the Plink and made his exit amid the plaudits of the student body. Within two days the entire Pool Room trade had fallen away to nothing and Phil, the faithful attendant committed suicide.

Gitch became top man of the university. He could do no wrong. The entire staff and student body lived in fear of him. It was his wont to take out twenty library books every evening and go home and study for the evening professors on the following day. He was the perfect student. But one day the break came.

He slept in. He was horrified and rushed towards the library with his books. He handed in the books but it was too late. The bill came to four thousand dollars. Gitch's resolutions and power seemed to vanish, and it was not long after that Joe Gitch hanged himself.

The university mourns the loss of the man who wanted to be the perfect student, and if you happen to wander into the Hart House pool room some day, and who doesn't, you will find a small memorial to Joe Gitch, behind an eight-ball.

vincing throughout the play. His incidental gestures and pantomime, to which his action is mostly confined, lend solid support to the authors' satiric lines.

Second honours go to tall, dark Sally McMorrow who plays Maggie Cutler, Whiteside's secretary and the only one who can get the better of the selfish and petulant idol. Miss McMorrow is closely pressed for her position by the voluptuous and alliterative Doris Diana Dalton who plays the actress, Lorraine Sheldon, blonde menace to the secretary's love life. Barry Sullivan, who supplies the romantic bone of contention deserves credit not only for being handsome, but for standing out in a uniformly fine cast.

Piccolos and Bells

Robert Farnon's Symphonic Suite is so good that criticism of it is dangerous. A great measure of it necessarily is personal. It is an excellent composition especially as a first attempt, it is enjoyable to listen to, but it has some immaturities which Mr. Farnon should not mind having pointed out to him. My first reaction was that it was a perfect imitation of Debussy, but it soon became more complicated. Before I lost track of the influences, I had noticed Tchaikowsky and Ravel, to name but two. The composition as a whole is over-orchestrated, and lacks unity. The witty piccolo solos in the second movement were very good modern music. The bells in the last annoyed me.

Mieczyslaw Munz, back again with the orchestra for the second successive season, gave a brilliant interpretation of the Liszt second piano concerto. Munz is a real musician and he has a superb technique. His solo encores were of equal interest and equally skilfully interpreted. Mr. Munz is one of the most satisfying artists Toronto has heard.

Now we come to Brahms. I wish there were something left to say about him, and for that matter about Mozart and Beethoven. They all speak so well for themselves that comment is superfluous. The orchestra was in fine shape for the Brahms First Symphony; Sir Ernest MacMillan knew exactly what he wanted and generally got it. There were a few mistakes, but the attitude of the musicians did Brahms justice. Strings generally, horns and oboes particularly, were fine every time they were called upon.

Speaking OF SPORT

By Owen Prichard

HERE WE ARE AGAIN, coyly pecking out from amid the encircling ads. A QUICK GANDER at the Varsity sport scene is the most we have space for today, and so:

THE VOLLEYBALLERS are still busy with the spike-and-set-up business in the Upper Gym, and have now reached the play-off stage in the long battle for the over-the-webbing title. Come up and take a look at these remaining contenders, and you will go away convinced that there are few games with no body contact which provide more gasps and thrills for the spectators than a well-played volleyball tilt.

THE FISTICUFFERS will be resuming their five o'clock sessions for another term of leather-pushing. The other rooms along Cauliflower Alley (to wit the fencing, wrestling and ju-jitsu departments) will also be resuming their tea-time tutorials. We have been shaking the noggin to see if an explanation would emerge to account for the desultory attendance of some of those who signed up for instruction. Perhaps it is that these games are individual efforts and the fellow concerned can decide for himself whether he will turn out for the practice or shoot another game of pool. There is no one who will come to him and say, "Listen, chap, we won't have enough for a full team if you don't show up," or some similar entreaties. There are not a few faculties who are losing out in the T. A. Reed Trophy race largely through the apathy of fellows who by regular training amass a goodly total of points for dear old Whatsis besides polishing up their proficiency in one of these sports.

THE ICEMEN are sharpening their runners in preparation for the opening of the interfaculty schedule. Team managers should get the entries in right away so that playing dates may be arranged quickly and satisfactorily.

THE SCRAMBLEBALLERS have a lot of fun ahead of them playing with the four-man teams which have been proposed for the contests in the Upper Gym. We are all for the new rules, since they will allow for more freedom of movement on the small court. Faster games and higher scoring are the anticipated results.

AS A SERVICE TO OUR READERS, we wish to inform any who might be spending the day thumbing through today's super-colossal issue of Toronto's other morning newspaper, that Blonde will be found on page 81.SCHEDULE RELEASED

VIC AND DENTS REACH
VOLLEY SEMIFINALS

Both Sr. Vic and Dents A advanced into the semi-finals of the playdowns for the Victoria Staff Cup and interfaculty volleyball supremacy by downing Trinity A and O.C.E. A in the upper gym yesterday.

In the first game the Tooth-tuggers beat out the Teachers 16-14, 15-8, to clinch the Group III championship. A win for the Pedagogues would have resulted in a first-place tie with the Molarmen. Ollie Brett and Jack Mullett led the Dentists, while the Brown twins stood out for the Teachers.

Sr. Vic came from behind to write a story-book finish in the second game. Trinity took the first game 15-13 but the Scarlet and Gold came back with a 15-11 victory in the second. In the deciding game the Red and Black went into an early lead and at one time was ahead 13-7, but in a thrilling comeback Vic took eight straight points to win the game and advance further along the road to the finals.

Frank Hoffmao and Hugh Young starred for Vic while Cowan and Tseng were the pick of the Red and Black. Vic made the playdowns by breezing undefeated through Group I while Trioity failed to suffer defeat in winning the championship of Group II.

Dents A: Brett, Sproule, Schneider, Smyth, Cameroon, Mullett, Elliott.

O.C.E. A: Belchamber, Prince, W. Brown, H. Brown, Goulding, Wendorf, Eccles.

Trinity A: Morgan, Riley, Delaney, Tseng, Rooke, Thorpe, Cowan.

Engineers Make Plans For Annual At-Home

Jan. 17 is Date Set for Party
Featuring Floor Show and War Savings Stamps as Lucky Number Prizes

Friday, January 17, is the date set for this year's School At-Home, annual formal dance of the Faculty of Applied Science and Engineering. Bob Shuttleworth and his orchestra will provide music for the rhythm-hungry Schoolmen and their ladies, as the affair which the committee calls "the dance of the year" takes place in the Banquet Hall of the Royal York Hotel.

The School At-Home is the only party of the year at which the Engineers play host to the rest of the students, Bill Brown, chairman of the Dance Committee, pointed out.

The At-Home is to feature an "all-star imported floor-show" and War Savings Stamps will be given away as lucky number prizes. The committee hints at two or three other novelty ideas, in order that the "Engineers may win the war on the dance floor."

The architects of School are planning decorations for the Banquet Hall the nature of which are as yet undivulged, but which they proclaim will be "the most novel ever seen on the campus."

C.O.T.C. NOTICE

All undergraduate members of the Contingent who were absent from parades at the Physics Building at 1600 hrs. or 1700 hrs. on Tuesday, 7th January, must attend a special parade at the same place at 1700 hours on Friday, 10th January, 1941.

Varsity Students Back at School Frown on New Year Resolutions

In a campus survey at the opening of term, the Varsity found only a few undergraduates still in favour of making New Year resolutions.

The general opinion of students was voiced by Betty Talbot of Trinity. "I had such a guilty conscience after the holidays I didn't dare make any resolutions. They are no good," she declared. "Frankly, I don't believe in them," stated Shirley Hill, IV Law. "I was too sleepy!" groaned Freshman Ted Reynolds, while Sophomore Phil Whitehead sighed, "Even if I made them I couldn't put them into words."

But the Varsity found exceptions. Helen Lakie, I Pass, declared that she had lots of resolutions. "But I don't tell what they are—then people don't know when I break them," she added. "I'm going to work!" cried Sheila Sharpe of Trinity. Whitney Hall girls have given up chocolates, according to Vera Mason. Helen Nickerson of III English has resolved not to get married till she finishes her year.

A horde of unidentified Commerce students on their way to the card room declared: "We're not going to play so much bridge this year." Medical student J. D. Gillies stated, "In 1941 I'm going to cut out cutting-up in the anatomy room."

But the majority appear in favour of dispensing with resolutions during war time. One supporter of the old custom, Jack Sivers, IV Com. and Fin. voiced a bitter protest. "I've resolved not to phone Falconer House any more," he complained. "Either the line is busy or she is."

SERVICE HELD FOR FORMER DEAN OF VICTORIA WOMEN

Dr. Margaret Addison, C.B.E., Dean of First Women's Residence at University, Passed Away Dec. 18

ALUMNI PRESIDENT

Dr. Margaret E. T. Addison, C.B.E., former dean of women at Victoria College, died on Dec. 18 at the age of 72. She became dean of residence at Annesley Hall, the first residence for women students at the University, when it was opened in 1903. She was dean of women from 1920 until her retirement in 1931.

A public funeral service was held in Victoria College Chapel on Dec. 20, at 2:30 p.m. Rev. Clark Lawson of Simpson Ave. United Church, Rev. Richard Davidson, Pres. A. J. Cody, and Rev. Frank Langford, head of the board of Christian education of the United Church assisted in the service. Principal Brown of Victoria delivered the address, followed by Dr. R. J. Bowles, chancellor emeritus of Victoria.

"Her career was not marked by meteoric brilliance but by steady growth to a position of eminence among the women educators of Canada," Principal Brown said in his address. "Miss Addison had a warmth of personality and" (Continued on Page 4)

HART HOUSE GALLERY SHOWS SCULPTURE

Wood Carvings of E. B. Cox and Paintings by John Hall Composite Exhibition Shown at Art Gallery

Paintings by John Hall and sculpture by E. B. Cox make up the current exhibition on view at the Hart House Art Gallery.

Both oils and water colours by Mr. Hall are on display. Many of these are of an unusual and weird character, for example the oils entitled "The Magnificent Bone" and "The Boy With a Skull." The oils are painted on wood rather than canvas, and in some of the pictures the paint is applied very thickly, creating a theme or impression rather than an exact portrait.

Mr. Cox's wood carvings are noticeable for the smooth effect created by the artist's skilful handling of the grain of his wood.

Mr. Hall, who teaches art at Upper Canada College, has done all of his paintings during the last four or five years. Mr. Cox, a recent graduate of Victoria College, was appointed last year to represent Canadian wood carvers at a convention in New York.

Both artists will review their work in the Art Gallery Monday from one-thirty to two o'clock.

DESPITE PITCHING LOSS DENTS BASEBALLERS HOPE TO RETAIN CHAMPIONSHIP

In spite of the loss of Joe Kulyk, last year's pitcher, Dents A baseball team expect to retain the championship. It has excellent prospects in Loucks and Shapiro to fill his position, stated Don Chapple, manager.

There is lots of hitting power with practically all of last year's team turning out again. Smokey Spackman, Jim Sproule, Bill Hamby and Cameron, all of lacrosse fame, will hold down their usual positions. Andrews, Chapple, Coleman, Channell, Weiler and Pat Beatty all on last year's team, are back again determined to turn in a sterling performance.

Dents B team, intact except for their pitcher, should again reach the playoffs and have fond hope of walking off with the championship.

S.C.M. SECRETARY CROSSES BORDER FOR CONFERENCE

John Coleman, Returning from North American S.C.M. Council at Vassar, Reports Growing Pro-British Attitude

VISITED PRINCETON

John Coleman, secretary of the U. of T. S.C.M., with S.C.M. secretaries of four other Canadian universities, attended the council of the North American S.C.M. held during the holidays at Vassar College in Poughkeepsie, New York.

The conference was designed to replace the World's Student Christian Federation meeting which was cancelled this year on account of the war. The S.C.M. representatives from all parts of the United States, from Canada, and other parts of the world discussed the meaning and importance of the Student Christian Federation throughout the world.

Coleman visited Princeton University where last year he did post graduate work. He was impressed by the very pro-British feeling there, and reports that the editorial policy of the Daily Princetonian, campus newspaper, abandoned its isolationist attitude during the past year.

According to John Coleman the S.C.M. convention was made aware of the recent steps taken by the Japanese government to check Christianity. The Japanese Christians are being forced to form a central bureaucratic organization which will be held responsible for all that is said and done by Christians in the country. This body is to have no connection with foreign Christian groups.

Vic Music Club to Stage Musical Comedy, 'San Toy'

Peggy Evoy, Soprano, Takes Leading Role in Musical Comedy to Run Next Week in Hart House

CRAWFORD DIRECTS

For the first time in six years, "San Toy," musical comedy by Sidney Jones, will be staged before Toronto audiences in Hart House next week. The production is being put on by the Victoria College Music Club.

Starring in this year's show will be Peggy Evoy, soprano, who appeared in the leading role of the club's production of Gilbert and Sullivan's "Patience" last year. This year she is again taking the title role. The part of Captain Bobby Preston, her English lover, will be taken by Elmer Phillips, who played opposite Miss Evoy in last year's show. Jack Watson will appear as Li, the thieving, scheming secretary to Yen How, mandarin of Pynka Pong. A kleptomaniac of no mean ability, Li will take some watching.

Others featured in the show are Vera Argument, who, as Dudley, has to keep Li in his place; Glen Eagles as Yen How, Ed Kirkland as Tupper, Nancy Robson as Poppy, and Cuert Stone as Preston.

Directing the club's production for the 14th successive year will be Thomas J. Crawford, Mus.Bac, F.R.C.O., who holds an enviable reputation in Toronto musical circles. Mr. Crawford's revival of "San Toy" in Toronto seven years ago played to capacity audiences, and all the papers heaped praise on him and the Music Club for their excellent presentation of the show. The show goes on Wednesday, Thursday, Friday and Saturday of next week, with a matinee on Saturday afternoon.

Praises Effort of Volunteers Who Work During Horrors of Raids to Fight Fires and Care for Wounded

SPOKE AT QUEEN'S

Kingston, Ont., Jan. 9, (CUP) — Hon. James A. Gardiner, Minister of War Services and Agriculture spoke here last night under the auspices of the Queen's University War Aid Commission on "The Battle of Britain."

Describing his recent visit to England, Gardiner related that his crossings had been uneventful. He saw no ships during the voyage, the navy keeping the seas clear. He told of his surprise on his arrival when he saw troops being sent out of England and found it difficult to see evidence of bombing despite the fact that there had been an air raid on the port the previous night.

Approaching London, which has been bombed more than any other city, Gardiner saw more and more evidence of raids. He gave a very clear description of an air raid—sirens droning, planes dropping and bursting bombs. The raids usually took place at the hours of seven, eleven and one o'clock. (Continued on Page 2)

No Action Taken At Board Meeting

No Discussion of Rumoured Dismissal Threat is Held at Board of Governors' Meeting Says Chairman

No action whatsoever was taken with regard to the threatened dismissal of Professor F. H. Underhill at the meeting of the Board of Governors held yesterday afternoon, The Varsity learned last night.

The topic did not even come up for discussion according to a statement made by Dr. D. Bruce Macdonald, chairman of the Board. "The matter was not dealt with," he stated after the meeting.

Earlier in the day Dr. Macdonald had been quoted by the downtown press as denying that Professor Underhill had been asked to resign from the university. "I do not know if he is going to resign, but he has not been asked to do so," he said.

BOOK FAIR TICKETS

At the book fair now being held at Simpson's Arcadian Court, Mr. Wyndham Lewis will lecture. Tickets are 75c. A number of complimentary tickets have been given to the Students' Administrative Council for distribution to students who are interested, particularly students taking a course in English. These may be obtained today at the Students' Administrative Council office, Hart House. As there is no charge for these tickets, students are advised to secure them early.

Mirth and Music will Feature Vic At-Home on Valentine's Day

Lads and lassies of Victoria will toss their troubles to the four winds come February the fourteenth, and will replace the bothersome matters of the moment with a night of music and laughter as the annual Vic At-Home gets under way.

Jollity and mirth will be the order of the times as the cadences of swing-smooth Jack Wachtler and his Commanders are dealt out to the dancing eds and co-eds. This year, as in the past, Simpson's Arcadian Court has been acquired in order that the "personality" of the party may be maintained. The At-Home is presented by the executive of the Victoria College Union with Social Director Don Ferguson in charge of the important matters. Dancing is scheduled to begin at nine o'clock and is to continue until some small hour of the morning, and of course the ticket includes eats and such that all go to make an affair like the Vic At-Home as perfect as possible.

The S.C.M. Questionnaire

Only about one quarter of the S.C.M. questionnaires concerning students' financial condition have been filled out and returned. This lack of co-operation on the part of the student body is serious.

It is imperative that these questionnaires be in as soon as possible. The sooner they are in, the sooner the results can be tabulated and it is on the basis of these that a program of meeting the problem can be carried out. There is need among the students; the extent of it will be revealed by the survey.

Some may feel that since they need no financial assistance themselves, it is not necessary for them to fill it out. Others may claim that since it is sponsored by the S.C.M. the information gained would profit only those who belonged to that organization. Neither of these reasons is valid. In order to have a satisfactory survey, each one approached should answer the questions. Secondly, the questionnaire was put out for the benefit of the whole student body, not for one particular group.

Some students are handicapped by financial difficulties. You can help to show how widespread the problem is by answering the questions asked and doing it as soon as possible.

One Shipment for Relief

The result of the decision of the British Government to allow one shipment of relief supplies for Spain and unoccupied France to pass through the blockade will mean a great deal to all the famine threatened, Nazi-dominated countries of Europe, for if the British are convinced that every ounce of the supplies sent reach their proper destination, then perhaps they will permit the International Red Cross and Herbert Hoover's society to ship food for the relief of those countries.

It was decided in London a few days ago, after the personal request of President Roosevelt, that one shipload would be permitted through. The American Red Cross reports that a ship carrying the supplies will sail for Europe late this month, carrying whole-wheat flour, powdered whole milk and evaporated and condensed milk for Spain, and vitamin concentrates, milk and clothing for children and drugs such as insulin, quinine, iodine and camphor for France.

The food situation in Spain seems to be the most urgent at the present time, for according to the Red Cross, wheat, rye and other cereals are so scarce as to present not only a menace to the health of the whole population, but in some sections actual famine. To relieve this situation the American Red Cross, authorized by President Roosevelt, has offered Spain, on certain conditions, the shipment of a cargo of wheat or flour for the civilian population. In order to be sure that the supplies reach their proper destination, representatives of the Red Cross will go to Spain to supervise the distribution.

After holding out against any such relief plan up until this time, for fear that it would not be successfully executed and thus would prove a detriment to Britain, the British Government is now cautiously testing the plan of the American Red Cross. Only one shipload will be allowed through, and that only under the following conditions:

Relief shipments are to be confined to medical supplies in the strict sense, dried or canned milk, children's clothing and, with certain exceptions, vitamin concentrates. Distribution must be made solely by the American Red Cross, either direct from their own warehouses or under strict supervision to children's hospitals and clinics. The extent of this program will depend on developments and the fulfillment of the general conditions of the agreement.

Herbert Hoover, whom one would think would have been discouraged by the refusals of the British Government to let him carry out his plans, as well as by the general lack of enthusiasm towards them in the States, has been encouraged by this to again plead for relief for such countries as Norway, the Netherlands, Belgium and Poland. Stressing the great need in Belgium, he referred to the recent statement issued in Washington by the United States Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce, which announced that the Belgian bread ration had been reduced to eight ounces a day, which is one-half the normal; the daily meat ration is only two ounces, and butter, margarine and lard rations are practically unobtainable. Whether he will be permitted to carry out his relief plans will probably depend a great deal on the result of this shipment to France and Spain.

Words to the Wise

It's an unpleasant thought—especially for the first week back at school—but it's just three weeks till February, and with February come the term exams for a great many students. It isn't exactly easy to begin studying seriously the minute holidays are over, but no doubt you will agree that it is to be preferred to cramming frantically night and day during the last week. So, it's probably unwelcome advice, but you had better get busy!

Probably many first year students do not know just how important the term exams are, or for how much they count when final marks are given at the end of the year. For their information—if you fail in any of these February exams, it means that you will have to make up for the failure on your final exam in the spring. A mere pass mark will not get you through. More than a few students find this out every summer when they are forced to rewrite a paper on which they obtained a pass mark, because their term work was not satisfactory.

Obviously it is a risk that isn't worth running. Better start opening your books!

We Don't Believe It

Co-eds, particularly at American colleges, go in for many a strange thing in the line of dress. Some of these incredible and often horrible fashion fads get as far as the Varsity campus and enjoy a brief career, but if the latest one to blossom forth in the States reaches here, someone should form a society to protect us against such things.

According to the report, college girls will "wear front pants, with a boy's necktie tied about her waist and a 'cow's tail' stocking cap on her head."

Can you picture the campus peopled with such sights?

Variations on Galliard

There is a war on and passport difficulties arise out of it. Virova could not come to Eaton Auditorium last night and his place was taken by Zino Francescatti, a French violinist who at least equalled the man whose place he was taking. I cannot conceive of a finer, a more musicianly, recital than the one which held us spellbound.

From the first notes of the Tartini Concerto in D Minor to the last moments of the I Palpiti of Paganini there was nothing that was not completely satisfying. Francescatti is possessed by a superlative technique and a deep and scholarly musicianship. Everything he played represented serious thought and was done in as nearly a perfect manner as it is possible to imagine.

The Beethoven Kreutzer Sonata was the highlight of the evening. It was done with a sweep of expression and a versatility of technique which were absolutely thrilling. The accompanist, Otto Herz, achieved a unity of purpose remarkable for its rarity and completely satisfying in its results. Beethoven himself would have enjoyed it.

The post-intermission part of the program was more technical than the earlier part, but Francescatti never forgot his musicianly ideal. What might have been no more than a display of unsurpassed technique was also very happily seriously musical. The Ravel

MOTOR MAGNATE MANUFACTURES MIRACLES

The most awaited and by far the most exciting event of the year was the River Bleu meeting yesterday when Hendrik Fjord showed his purveyors the new line of super-cars.

By far the most startling announcement was that of the production of a new SIX to compete in the low price class and complement the Zephyr. It will be known as the Sea-Breeze and one will be given away free with every purchase of a 3-1-2 tons of salt water kisses.

Unfortunately the new creation did not make the show, for in that style peculiar to an automobile manufacturer, the final assembly line got mixed up with that of the mass production pursuit plane and the first hundred products came off equipped with a V-12 aero-engine, eight fixed forward-firing Brownings, and twin rudders. These cars, our informant tells us, were snatched up by another manufacturer and sold as Terraplanes.

The pick-up qualities of the whole line were emphasized by the producer and he pointed out the electric sign built into the right fender—"GOING MY WAY?"

Another addition to the line was the Narvik Fjord, a special amphibian equipped with caterpillar treads. Mr. Fjord commented that no competitor could touch the FLOATING RIDE. "We are really in the swim with this car," he said, "and we ought to take the whole field with a long steady crawl!"

Commenting on the future he disclosed that the mass production LIGHT plane was very close to completion, but that the research men had found it necessary to use coal, air, and water in addition to light in its architecture. In conclusion he expressed his desire and that of his dealers quickly and completely to fortify America.

GARDINER RELATES LONDON EXPERIENCE

at night, another raid coming just before dawn.

At one time, during a raid, Gardiner saw no less than ten different fires. He extolled the magnificent work of voluntary workers, who extinguished fires, took the wounded to hospitals and cleared away the debris.

The speaker emphasized that this voluntary work was very different from anything in Canada and stressed the calmness and the adaptability of the people of London.

"Though their dwellings and offices were destroyed, they still lived; while the morale of bombed European cities crumbles the morale of London is strengthened by bombing," Mr. Gardiner said. "The people are doing their utmost to repair the damage and continue their life in a normal manner."

Gardiner stated that increased Canadian production of war materials is the vital matter of the moment.

"In supporting Churchill and Britain, we are supporting the best cause which we possibly could," he concluded.

Trigone showed off the first signs of what was to be the most startling part of the artist's equipment—his pizzicato passages. Even the Tambourin Chinois managed to sound unacknowledged. With I Palpiti he became Paganini and played his harmonic double stopping with stupefying ease.

Francescatti made us all look very foolish with his first encore. Unaccompanied, he played a very difficult version of God Save The King for which we all appropriately stood up. After waiting for us to get settled again he launched himself on a series of variations on the National Anthem which made the theme sound pretty easy. The last one was double stopped with a fast pizzicato accompaniment played with the left hand. He must be another incarnation of the devil or Paganini.

Attention Amateur Photographers

This year in Torontonensis we wish to have a comprehensive Campus Life Section. To do this we need the co-operation of amateur photographers from all the colleges and faculties, particularly those numerically small.

The Editorial Board of Torontonensis will consider any photographs which are submitted for insertion in the 1941 Torontonensis. We would prefer human interest shots, typical of the activities of the various colleges and faculties in the university. Other subjects such as pictures of university buildings, candid snaps of professors, sporting activities, etc., will be welcomed, but we would particularly like representative pictures of activities typical of the college or faculty to which the photographer belongs.

When a selection has been made the pictures will be placed in separate categories. The person who, in the opinion of the judges, submits the best shot in each group will receive recognition to that effect in Torontonensis, and the one who submits the best of all will receive in addition a copy of Torontonensis.

The deadline is February 1st, by which time all pictures submitted must be in the S.A.C. office in Hart House. Each picture should be properly captioned—in choosing the best, the most original captions will be considered. Name and college of photographer must accompany each picture.

The decision of the Editorial Board of Torontonensis shall be final.

Speaking OF SPORT

By Dave MacIntosh

INTO A NEW YEAR

In a world today that ponders the issues of right and wrong—and fights for them, one's thoughts turn but infrequently to sport, and we are the poorer for it. That the Olympic games were not held last year is as much a symbol as their material loss. In Europe sportsmanship has faded far into the background, and in certain countries has almost disappeared. Over here we have resigned ourselves to the loss of intercollegiate competition, but enthusiasm has not died and we await the day when the world will play again.

Results of intercollegiate sport have been more than encouraging, and it is significant that more are participating than ever before. For instance we learned yesterday that 40 basketball teams are entered in this season's cage loop.

In fact, crawling out from under our New Year's table, we are even more daunted upon surveyance of our sport scene. No less than eleven full-fledged sports are in progress at the moment or are due to weigh anchor early in the coming week.

The boys along the Muscle Midway are banishing the holiday kinks. Play-offs in two sports are under way. Four new pastimes start next week. Friends, things are humming already, and when the season gets its doors pushed all the way back, the intercollegiate offerings at the Arena, track, pool, gym, and b. w. and f. rooms promise to be of high calibre.

Mel Gionna's proteges are warming up for their meet which should appear on the menu in approximately three weeks, but the lads still have a long way to go.

The intercollegiate indoor track meet is carded to begin Jan. 24 and Hec Phillips expects his boys to be turning out in full force by the end of next week. Of interest to many will be the fact that Larry O'Connor is to compete in the Knights of Columbus Meet in Boston on Jan. 25. He has been invited down to defend his 45 yards high-hurdle title which he won last year. Larry has been training faithfully under the expert eye of Hec throughout the holidays.

Directors of the university sport scene will no doubt be on hand for the initial four-man basketball contest on Monday to witness their brainchild in actual operation. Not that it hasn't been thoroughly tested, but this will be the ultimate. Added attraction will be Jack Lavarway acting as ref. Jack, you will remember, was Varsity's ace scorer on last year's intercollegiate quintet.

Hockey and baseball games remain exactly the same as last year, and with intercollegiate hockeyists falling back into intercollegiate play the puck loop should present some games worthy of a trip to the Arena. Waterpolo has three new entries and the usual quota of intercollegiate. The first game of the swimming finals is set for Tuesday. It has not yet been decided whether to put it on a sudden-death or two-out-of-three-games basis. Added wrestling, fencing, judo, jitsu and the eleventh, volleyball, and you have a pretty fair idea of things in general. We'll call Vic to win the Victoria Staff Cup (volleyball, you know), which calling promptly puts the hex on the Scarlet and Gold.

And that about takes care of all that goeth on.

U.C. Pucksters Practise Today

University College pucksters will hold their first practice of the season today in Varsity Arena at 1 o'clock, Manager Harold Bailey announced yesterday. All members of last year's team who are still at college and any other hockey players who want a place on the team are urged to attend, he said.

Ken Hignell, member of the 1939-40 Varsity hockey team, which was undefeated in collegiate competition and won the I.I.H.L. championship from McGill Redmen, will coach the Royal College team, Bailey told The Varsity. "Ken learned a lot under Ace Bailey last year," said the U.C. manager, "and is just the man for the job."

FIELD IS NARROWED AS TEAMS ADVANCE IN NET PLAYOFFS

Dents, Aerial Navigation and Emmanuel "A" Are Winners in Volleyball Playoff Games Staged Yesterday

DENTS VS. U.C. IV

Dents' volleyball team easily brushed aside the previously unbeaten U.C. IV's in an intercollegiate play-off last night by scores of 15-2, 15-6. Both teams were below form but Dents still made their spikes count on nearly every chance they got. Dents now meet Vic in the semi-finals this afternoon.

Ralph Smythe and Ed Schneider continually sent up perfect set-ups and Ollie Brett and Jack Mullett pounded them down into the U.C. court. Sam Stellman played his usual starry game for the losers, but his set-up men did not give him many chances to excel. Cliff Ballagh also tried hard and put away several hard spikes.

Dents: Mullett, Smyth, Schneider, Sproule, Brett, Cameron. U.C. IV's: Stellman, Ballagh, McNulty, Norman, Feigman, Gibson and Clayton.

AERIAL NAV. VS. PHARMACY

In a very ordinary game for a semi-final, Aerial Navigation sent Pharmacy A into the volleyball discard with a 15-8, 15-9 victory yesterday afternoon in the upper gym.

Pharmacy could only get points one at a time while the Flyers continually would make a run of three or four. Ron Lake made good use of his height and did the only play-off calibre spiking in the game. Grant Jeffers was the best man for the Druggists as he stepped a large number of spikes.

In both games the Navigators jumped into a three point lead and gradually increased it to fifteen.

Aerial Navigation: Haber, Buchan, Lake, Rice, Tuchak, VanHuyse.

Pharmacy A: Levine, Litchen, Steele, Hilton, Berger, Kestenberg, Jeffers, Russell.

EMMANUEL "A" VS. O.C.E. "B"

Emmanuel's A volleyball team pounded their way into the semi-finals with a convincing victory over O.C.E.'s B team yesterday afternoon. The scores were 15-8, 15-9.

Capt. Hamilton and Art Young put on an exhibition of spiking which was the best to be seen in the upper gym this year and thus belittled the good efforts of George "Specs" Oliphant and Fred Siberry. Doug Green, tennis and swimming star, was in rare form and his set-ups were really good. Emmanuel now meet Aerial Navigation in the semi-finals.

Emmanuel A: Green, Young, Hamilton, Staples, McKennitt, Pritchard, Fee. O.C.E. B: Oliphant, Siberry, Thom, Shapiro, Swanick, King, McKenzie.

Skiing Plans Materialize As Snow Finally Arrives

Organized competition between intercollegiate ski teams is the newest thing in this year's intramural setup. Final details of the schedule of the scheme are all to be settled at a meeting of all the faculty ski representatives in the athletic office on Monday. The first meets will probably be about the last weekend of this month so all the faculties will have to hurry up and get some teams organized if they want to be in the running.

Also very necessary are officials for the meets. They will be paid regular referees' fees, so anyone who wants some cash in exchange for a little outdoor exercise is urged to sign the lists in the athletic office as soon as possible. Previous experience is desirable but not essential.

Yesterday morning the members of the University Ski Club awoke to the sound of that soft fluttering music which betokens the leisurely descent of those delicate white crystals that are to bring at last the days of happy skiing so sorely longed for during the black week of Christmas. And what is more they now know that the skier's perennial problem of transportation is going to be solved by buses to be chartered to go up to the club grounds (snows that is) at Aurora at cheap rates for all and perhaps the competitors themselves may be able to persuade their faculties to pay.

Added to the usual decorations of the rotunda is now a masterpiece of a winter landscape, replete with skiers, good, bad, and indifferent and the words in large red letters: "If You Ski, U.C. Needs You," plus a place marked "Sign Here," for the benefit of the thaw before last Christmas, but the only enthusiasts to arrive for a discussion of how to uphold the red and white on the white of the snows were the other U.C. ski rep, Vernon Lash, plus one other lonely snowman. Hence the large poster at the first sign of 1941 snow, so that co-ed-harassed U.C. men might find something different to the usual crop for their attention in passing through the rotunda.

By Beryl Pollock

It appears that there was no room for The Sportsman in yesterday's Varsity, but Marg. Foulds still wants to wish all her readers (both of them) the very best for 1941.

This term is the time to take advantage of the Athletic Fee Privileges for Bowling, at the Uptown Bowling Academy, and Skating at the Stadium. We could also suggest ping-pong to keep in condition for tennis next summer (?).

Donna McLennan, Vic's first ping-pong curator, has a tournament under way at Wymilwood for the non-resident students, and plans to get another started shortly in Annesley for the girls in residence. Later on the winners will play off for the college singles and doubles championships.

Would it take much trouble to organize an Intercollegiate Table Tennis League? It could probably be run similar to the tennis tournament, with each college entering a team.

Most of the colleges have tables, and there are usually tournaments held at Whitney Hall and at St. Hilda's. The girls at Loretta and St. Joseph's have been talking for several years of organizing an inter-college competition, but they have not succeeded in doing so as yet. Perhaps this will be the year for ping-pong.

The first practice of U.C. women's hockey will be held on Monday, Jan. 13, from 5 to 6 at the rink on Trinity Field. All interested please turn out.

SPORT SPLASHES

By Doug Green

The day when the much-awaited-for waterpolo league begins will soon be upon us.

This year there are 14 teams in the entry which is the largest number of entries in the history of waterpolo in this university. Three new teams which have never participated in intramural waterpolo before are in this year's lineup. They are from the three theological colleges of Emmanuel, Wycliffe and Knox. Emmanuel is reported to have an exceptionally strong team for their first year in the sport and boast of two former intercollegiate aces who played on Varsity's senior squad for the past two years. Also they will have Ben Morwood who played on championship senior teams in Montreal, the waterpolo club, plus about three or four men who have had previous experience playing for Vic. It is even rumored they might be good enough to take the title from Senior Meds who won the crown last year and are strong this year.

There are four groups with two teams qualifying for the play-offs from group one and one team from groups two, three and four.

Vic I, Sr. Meds, St. Mike's and U.C. comprise the strong foursome. Group two finds Trinity, Vic II, Jr. S.P.S. and Jr. Meds stacked up against each other. In group three Sr. S.P.S., Dents and Emmanuel will fight it out for that coveted play-off position. The weakest and final group is made up of Vic III, Wycliffe and Knox.

Six games a week will be played off with two games on Tuesday, Thursday and Friday nights. The first game will take place at 5:00 and the second at 5:30. Managers wishing a synopsis of waterpolo rules for the members of their teams may get the same from Mr. Winterburn at the swimming pool. There will be four five minute periods with time out for a rest space of three minutes at the end of the second quarter.

U.C. BASKETBALL

Important practice today at 1 p.m. in upper gym. All those desirous of playing basketball turn out. Uniform measurements taken. Schedule starts Monday.

Dr. Addison was the daughter of a prominent Methodist clergyman, Rev. Peter Addison of Herring's Mills. She graduated in arts from Victoria College in 1889. She taught at Ontario Ladies' College and Lindsay Collegiate before becoming Dean of Women at Victoria.

In 1932 the University of Toronto conferred on her the degree of LL.D., and in June, 1934, King George V conferred the title of Commander of the Order of the British Empire on her. She was the first President of the Alumni Association of Victoria in 1898 and for many years President of Victoria Women's Association.

A lasting memorial to Dr. Addison is Addison Hall, one of the Victoria College residences named in her honour.

hither and yon

with michael o'mara

THE HOLIDAYS ARE OVER and it is now our post-prandial duty to fight our way back into print and offer you a synopsis of the hitherish events of the past three weeks. . . .

FIRST OF ALL, we give out with a belated round of applause for the Beta Sigma Rho show which ran in Hart House Theatre during the first holiday week-end. Our tired old eyes have winced at a good deal of campus theatre this year but so far have seen nothing to equal this revue for solid entertainment. We had heard so much about Weingarten-Shuster shows that we were sure that we couldn't help but be disappointed when we finally went to see one, but instead we found that the advance notices had been understatements. . . . Very few professional comedians have the sheer perfection of timing that Shuster and Weingarten possess, and few can put a punch-line across more successfully. And the refreshing thing about their show was the ingenious way in which they set out, not to uplift the audience's morals nor to deepen its artistic perception, but merely to entertain it. . . . Entertainment is a function of the theatre that too many college drama groups are prone to smother. . . . Finally, we would like to understand that we do not insert this panegyric merely because Lou and Frank happen to be friends of ours, but because we enjoyed their show very much and consider them the TWO FUNNIEST GUYS ON CAMPUS.

ANOTHER TID-BIT we have been saving is the meaty little morsel about the Meds Sophomore and the Man with the Three Pips and the Crown. . . . It seems that the embryo embryologist encountered the army man at a very jolly party, and was puzzled by the impressive insignia on his august arm. . . . So he enquired as to its significance. . . . "Don't you belong to a unit?" countered the tin hat. . . . The student admitted his allegiance to the C.O. T.C. . . . "What faculty?" barked the big wig. . . . "Meds," said the Dr. . . . "I," snarled the brigadier, "am an engineer myself. DIRTY MEDS!"

NOW THAT 1940 HAS PASSED AWAY, we are moved to mark its close by awarding a very special prize. . . . THE DEAD FISH OF THE YEAR. . . . Which is granted, amid an off-key fanfare, to the editors of LIFE, in recognition of their distinguished services to journalism. . . . The tribute is paid upon noting the following quaint coincidence. . . . We quote from the second issue of 1940, that of January 8, a caption under a picture showing undergraduate frolic in the snow at Bowdoin College, Maine: "A frosty faculty is administered. . . ." We quote from the fifty-second issue of 1940, that of December 30, a caption under a picture showing undergraduate frolic in the snow at Smith College, Massachusetts: "A frosty faculty is administered. . . ." This praiseworthy conservation of verbiage wins the highest honours within our power to bestow, and now all that there is left for us to do is to recommend the editors of LIFE to the editors of The New Yorker for inclusion in their far-famed In Love With The Sound Of His Own Words Dept. . . .

HIGH IN THE BATTLEMENTS of the saintly old pile of Hart House is the Varsity Office, an aerie of sanctuary for tired old newshawks, worn out by the travails of campus existence. . . . This sanctum sanctorum of the collegiate fourth estate has all the modern conveniences essential to efficient news-gathering. . . . Ash-trays to lay burning cigarettes beside, typewriters to copy out essays, tables to sleep on, and a telephone to communicate with friends and families. . . . Although the nook is primarily intended as a hide-away for exhausted reporters and editors, its hospitality stands ready to embrace any weary traveller in need of respite from life's struggle. Full tableting, typewriter-drumming, varnish-burning and friend-telephoning facilities are freely granted to all under-privileged leaders. . . . But such magnificent generosity should not be abused. . . . Thus, we were stricken aghast when we learned, during the holidays, that some nefarious cad, some unspeakable bounder, some impious spawn of Satan was abusing it most vilely. The blighter was sneaking in there, into the sanctified old office which lay sleeping blissfully, peopled only by the spirits of former reporters and the Ghost of Christmas Present, and using the battered old telephone to make long-distance calls. . . . We foamed at the mouth when we heard the grim news, and had to sit down weakly in a pile of holly as we gathered strength to sound our barbaric yawn over the roofs of the world once more and bellow indignantly that THIS SORT OF THING MUST STOP.

BUT THE HORRID SEQUEL to this tragic tale was revealed upon return to the office at the opening of the new term. The phone was utterly dead. Reporters, forced to drop reluctant nickels into the greedy maws of pay-phones, went berserk. . . . Search parties at length discovered that the induction coil ("Whatever the hell that is," commented an Engineer acidly) had been removed from the little black box that goes with the machine. . . . Now we have a lovely new telephone and all we gotta say is: Please Don't Bust It.

WHILE VISIONS OF SUGAR-PLUMS danced in the heads of sleepy students on Christmas Eve, United Press wires crackled with a story on the result of a survey conducted at Alfred University, New York. . . . Equally sleepy teletype operators across the nation woke up with a jerk as their machines spelled out the startling news that the average university student says "Hello" about 175 times a day, no less. . . . The revelation continued to the effect that on warm spring or summer days the total of salutations may rise as high as 350. . . . Oh well, there's no harm in trying. . . .

THE MOST IRRELEVANT CONVERSATION which we were privileged to hear during the holidays came in the early hours of last Wednesday, as the cacophony of whistles and the tinny mummulation of tin pan crescendoed shrilly, and the swirling fumes of cocaine completely overcame the rational powers of the celebrants. . . . HE: "Bananas don't grow on pine trees. . . ." SHE: "No, but then neither do roller-skates. . . ."

NEW YEAR'S DAY WAS A RIOT of fun and frolic for us long-range football fiends, with tangled radio announcers busily describing six classics of the century all in one afternoon. . . . Hopping briskly from Bowl to Bowl, we were disappointed to learn that our favorite American college team, the Fighting Polish of Notre Dame, were not in action, but managed, nevertheless, to have a very fine time, especially in the Sugar Bowl game, the plot of which closely resembled that of a Betty Grable movie.

The boys from Tennessee and Boston College took turns scoring thrilling touch-downs, and the announcer was reeling on the ropes from his stirring three-hour struggles against polysyllabic nomenclature, when Boston College finally climaxed an 80-Yard March in The Dying Moments of The Fourth and Final Quarter as a gentleman by the glamorous name of Chankin' Charlie O'Rourke went and Upset the Old Dope-Bucket by Faking a Pass and Stepping 24 Yards for the Game-Winning Touch-down. . . . Quoth the poor, tired man at the microphone, having already altogether exhausted his lavish stock of suave aphorisms: "Ladies and gentlemen, how do you like them apples?"

SUNDAY CONCERT

The Joyce Trio, composed of Maurice Solway, Charles Mathe and Simeon Joyce, will give the concert on Sunday next 19th January in the Great Hall of Hart House at 9 p.m.

Representatives of the various colleges and faculties are requested to call at the Warden's office between 2 p.m. and 6 p.m. today (Monday 13th January) for their allotments of tickets.

Every member is urged if he finds he cannot use his ticket to return it to the hall porter's desk if at all possible before 1 p.m. on Thursday 16th January.

MUSIC COMMITTEE

Members of the Hart House Music Committee are requested to call at the Warden's office today for the notices regarding Friday's Recital.

Appointees will Have Secret Duties and will be Required to Take Command of Special Radio Stations

NEED KNOWLEDGE OF RADIO

An appeal has been sent out by the Royal Canadian Air Force for Radio Officers, preferably university graduates, who will be required to take command of special radio stations. Their duties will be secret and cannot be specified in detail, but the R.C.A.F. has issued the following information as a guide to the qualifications sought in candidates for these commissions.

A candidate must be between the ages of 21 and 40 and in good health. Appointments will be to the rank of Pilot Officer. Appointees will be promoted to the rank of Temporary Flying Officer on successful completion of a course of training.

RADIO OFFICERS

Some time ago the Air Service of the Department of National Defence sent out an appeal to the Canadian Universities for officers for urgent overseas service, and the response was most gratifying. The R.C.A.F. has now sent me a further appeal for radio officers to serve in Canada and, if required, overseas. The qualifications required are outlined elsewhere on this page.

From information I have received both privately and from official sources, I believe that the need for scientifically trained men in connection with every arm of the services is most urgent.

Definite information regarding this appeal may be obtained from the Commanding Officer, R.C.A.F. Recruiting Centre, 297 Bay St., Toronto.

U. OF T. GRADS HELP TO FILL METEOROLOGICAL NEEDS

Men Trained at Varsity Meet Necessities of Airports, and Form Staff of New Observation Stations

MANY BRANCHES TO SERVICE

By Dorothy Northwood

With the advent of the war and the concurrent increased need for trained meteorologists at airports, graduates trained in this field at the University of Toronto are filling this need and forming the staff of the new observation stations. Air force, Trans-Canada and commercial airways suddenly demanded workers versed in the science and their existence can be credited to the far-seeing policy of John Patterson, Controller of the Meteorological Division of the Department of Transport of Canada who was largely responsible for the inauguration of the graduate course in this study now functioning here.

This forms one branch of the service which also includes providing information to the newspapers and companies shipping perishable goods and storm signals to ships. The devices whereby it collects its data are typified by those to be found at the Meteorological Bureau on Bloor Street. Tipping bucket rain gauges, thermometer screens and weight barographs are to be found on a comprehensive tour of the building from cellar to attic and even into the backyard.

High up in the sky, on the top of the tower, three whirling cup-shaped bulbs react to the wind's every whim. Far below, on the main floor of the Meteorological building on Bloor Street, a needle tips up every time a mile of it passes.

John Patterson Addresses Royal Canadian Institute Meeting on "100 Years of Meteorology in Canada"

PIONEER IN STUDY

The Royal Canadian Institute held its first meeting of the new year on Saturday evening in Convocation Hall. The speaker, John Patterson, gave a talk entitled "100 Years of Meteorology in Canada".

Mr. Patterson is a graduate of Toronto and Cambridge and was at one time connected with the Imperial Meteorological department of India. He at present holds the position of controller of the meteorological service of Canada.

The speaker stressed the fact that the public service with which he is connected has increased in importance as aerial navigation has advanced because aeroplanes must have accurate knowledge of weather conditions before leaving the ground.

Mr. Patterson then traced the development of the meteorological facilities of Canada since the inception of the Magnetic Observatory under the British Government in 1837.

These services were merely temporary and when the Imperial Commission came to an end the Federal Government took over the existing equipment. The speaker went on.

The Meteorological Service was incorporated into the University of Toronto and a new building was erected. Mr. Patterson continued. The original building is still standing and is now situated just east of U.C., having been moved from its original site to make way for the McLennan Lab.

PLAN TO RELEASE STUDENTS EARLY, NO FORMAL EXAMS

Nine Fourth Year Chemical Engineers Permitted Immediate Release from Studies for Urgent Work in Munitions

Third and Fourth Year Final Exams Cancelled to Allow Men to Leave Early and Join in War Work

SENATE APPROVAL GRANTED

Senate approval has been given to a resolution of the Faculty of Applied Science and Engineering permitting fourth year students in the Department of Chemical Engineering to leave their studies to engage in urgent war work in the manufacture of munitions, it was announced Saturday by the Registrar.

These men will be exempted from further attendance at the University and from their final examinations, but will receive their degrees in June if their service is satisfactory, the announcement said. Those to whom the privilege has been extended are: W. G. Carlton, A. E. Cummings, R. W. Fugler, L. R. Macrae, C. E. Skay, W. A. Wachsmuth, J. F. Walker, J. R. Whitehead, and A. P. Vila.

TERM TESTS GIVE RANK

A plan to free all fourth year students in the Faculty of Applied Science and Engineering by March 15 and all third year Engineers by April 1 in order that they may aid Canada's war effort by engaging in technical war work has been adopted by the Senate of the University, it was announced by the Registrar.

Recommendation of the plan was made by the Engineering Faculty entirely on its own initiative. Dean C. H. Mitchell told the Varsity last night. First proposals of the scheme were brought forward at a council meeting of the faculty on Monday, and it was rushed through committee stages in order that it might be presented at the Senate. ## Modern Blood Equipment Set Up in Connaught Lab

TERM EXAMINATIONS

At a recent meeting of the Council of the Faculty of Arts the following resolution was adopted regarding the holding of term examinations:

"That an instructor be free to hold announced term examinations in any of his regular lecture or laboratory periods throughout the session, and that a week for term examinations be no longer prescribed."

As a result of this resolution the first week in February will no longer be the week prescribed for the holding of term examinations.

Capacity for Transmission of Blood Overseas is Stepped Up from 200 to 500 Donors Per Week

SUPERVISED BY DR. BEST

Termed the most modern on the continent, the newly-established blood-bank at the Connaught Laboratories is equipped for the processing of blood to be sent overseas. The blood-bank is under the supervision of Dr. C. H. Best, Associate Director of the laboratories and was made possible by substantial government grants to the Canadian Red Cross.

With the new accommodations it will be possible to handle a greater supply of blood, and consequently, a greater number of donors can be accepted. The usual number has been 200 donors a week, but with the new equipment that number may be stepped up to 500.

Formerly the processed blood went overseas in the form of a serum, but by the new process it is dehydrated and sent over in dry form. Transfusions are taken at 410 Sherbourne St. and then sent over to the Connaught Laboratories for processing.

The time required of the donor at the clinic is about 15 minutes; and the Red Cross provides transportation if required. The hours for donors are from nine to one Mondays and Thursdays. Transfusions from five donors are required for the dehydrated serum necessary to treat one case of shock.

Co-op Members Choose Date for Annual Dance

The white-aproned men of the Campus Co-operative residence at the University have chosen January 24 as the date for their annual dance. The finances of the dance are being handled by John Fornataro who has promised a "dividend" to all attending. Tickets may be secured from him at 75c a couple. Songs by co-op member George Umahara and contributions from former residents in the Co-operative will be on the program.

Forum Club Hears Old San Toy Jinx Hits Peggy Evoy

War was the theme of the two prepared addresses given at the Forum Club on Saturday. This was the first meeting of 1941.

John Ross, IV U.C., dealt with the problem of modern aircraft and suggested rocket motors as a possible improvement. "During wartime," explained Mr. Ross, "new models of aircraft have been coming out almost every day, but I don't think the present model can permit much further development. Our present models use gasoline engines and these will not stand a speed faster (Continued on Page 4)

When Peggy Evoy, who stars in the title role of the Victoria College Music Society's production of "San Toy" in Hart House theatre this week, suddenly picked up a slight case of laryngitis shortly before Christmas, it looked as if there must be some jinx attached to the leading lady's part in this famous musical comedy of Sidney Jones. For seven years ago when the Vic Music Club last produced the show, Pat Lundy, appearing as San Toy, contracted the same throat ailment.

Although Peggy was using her voice no more than she has to in rehearsals last week, she has been promised by her physician that she will be ready to appear when the show opens Wednesday night. She is practically better already but she is taking no chances.

The play will run Wednesday through Saturday nights with an extra Saturday matinee performance.

Little French Author Attributes Nazi Success to a Shocking Lack of French Diplomatic and Industrial Preparation

POLITICAL DISUNITY RIFE

By Larry Smith

The lightning Nazi victory over France last spring was won "not on the battlefields of Flanders in 1940 but in the factories of France and Britain from 1933 to 1939" Sir Andre Maurois, distinguished French historian and author, told The Varsity Friday.

As this little Frenchman, who has written such admirable histories of England and her great men, sat quietly talking in the peaceful seclusion of a third-floor reception suite in Hart House, it was hard to believe that outside lay a world in which his native France had suffered so greatly and England was fighting a battle for life.

Although the word "charming" is only rarely applied to men, after a pleasant half-hour interview it was impossible to avoid applying the adjective to Sir Andre Maurois. It is the only word which fits completely for it is the only one which seems to combine so aptly a gracious manner, a friendly smile, a delightful French accent and a thorough knowledge of present world affairs, all of which describe Maurois.

Elaborating his remark about the reason for the French downfall, Maurois offered a three-point explanation. In pre-war France there was, he said, a lack of industrial preparation, a lack of diplomatic preparation, and lastly a lack of political unity, from which the first two actually sprang. Although everyone seemed to know that Germany was rearming, nothing was done about it. It seemed impossible, further, for France to find any friends, and the reason for this lay in the terrible political disunity. There were so many parties and so many shades of political opinion, that no consistent diplomatic policy could be formulated.

Maurois, who has been on both French and English general staffs, also stressed the "defensive complex," based on the existence of the Maginot Line, as an important factor in pre-war unpreparedness. (Continued on Page 4)

PRINTS FOR ART SHOW

All prints for the Annual Exhibition to be held in the art gallery of Hart House must be handed in by 6 p.m. on Friday, 17th January. Forms may be obtained from the hall porter. This competition is open to all members of Hart House. The Exhibition will open on Tuesday, 21st January.

Murals Feature School At-Home

Red Cross will Get Proceeds from After-Dance Sale of Gigantic Decorations Made by Architects

The big secret is now out: 1200 square feet of coloured murals, completely covering three walls of the Royal York ballroom, are to be the biggest and most novel feature of the School At-Home this coming Friday night. Caricaturing all the different sides of engineers' activities, this enormous work, 300 feet in length including what the censor covered up with a curtain, is the outcome of designs submitted by the individual departments of S.P.S. and put into execution by the architects of the faculty who have had to spend most of the last few weeks painting away down in the basement of the little red schoolhouse.

What is more, the Schoolmen intend to give the Red Cross the proceeds of the sale of the murals to be held after the dance.

The committee also scattered mysterious hints about other features as yet undivulged in which the engineers plan to "win the war on the dance floor," and they stated definitely that War Savings Stamps were to be given away as lucky number prizes.

Bob Shuttleworth is to supply the music for this, the Schoolmen's biggest do of the year—"The dance of the year," they call it themselves—and they invite men of the whole campus to come and verify their statement.

Disciples of Marx? ---No Sale Here!

Last week several hundred students, carefully chosen from representative quarters of the university, were flooded with vicious, subversive letters urging them to organize against a rumoured dismissal threat made to a university professor. That letter, smudged and poorly mimeographed, bearing the signature of what was thought to be a liquidated organization but which appears to be flourishing underground, the Toronto and District Young Communist League, has seriously compromised the position, in the public eye, of the student body, the staff, and the university as a whole.

Unintelligent and contradictory, written from a revolutionary communist bias which twists logic to its own ends, the letter attacks the "imperialist war" and does its best to throw a monkey-wrench into Canadian-American relations by terming American friendship an attempt to capture the British Empire. That is its thesis, and the excuse it uses to toss in its rank propaganda is a hypocritical defence of a university professor with whom its authors have not the slightest sympathy. Those authors called upon students to support the professor—as they were doing and would have done without any unwelcome prompting from the Communists—and unfortunately have placed the student body and some staff members in the position of allies with the Communists.

The average person will have burst into laughter by this time. For the benefit of those few who haven't and perhaps may have suspicions about university students in general, we say that the Young Communists, whoever they may be, are on the wrong track. Students can support a professor without having to be associated with the subversive propaganda scattered broadside by people who profess to support that professor, academic freedom, and various other things. They are both outraged and amused. If the time ever comes in the future, near or far, (and we pray it doesn't) when such action is necessary, then they will "organize protest meetings! Circulate petitions! Maintain academic freedom on the campus!" (quoted from the T and D Communist League), but purely because they believe in the worth of such an effort, and not because they are being forced into nominal association with a group which is doing its utmost to sabotage Canada's war effort and the work of Britain in every way.

Anyone who has doubts about Varsity's loyalty to the university, to Canada and to the cause to which the Empire is dedicated, might profitably spend a day browsing around the campus with eyes open and ears tuned. He would change his opinions quickly!

Thoughts on Torontonensis

For some time there has been developing, in certain student quarters, a feeling of dissatisfaction with the present state of the University of Toronto yearbook, Torontonensis. To make a wide generalization, the criticism is that Torontonensis has become staid, stereotyped from year to year, lacking in originality, and generally uninteresting unless the reader can find his own picture—and when he does find his likeness, it is either in sombre graduation robes (well and good) or else in a very stiff, formal group portrait. There has been little life!

This year signs point to a real improvement in the publication of Torontonensis with a definite attempt to get away from the stereotyped conventional book of the recent past. And in connection with this new policy, a scheme is being employed which will help immensely to make the book lively and at the same time give the multitude of amateur photographers around the campus an opportunity to contribute to the book. We refer to the contest being sponsored by the Editorial Board of Torontonensis offering prizes and recognition for the best camera shots of university life submitted before February 1. Explanatory advertisements have appeared in our columns several times and one is placed just across the page from this column. Read it!

This is a progressive attitude on the part of the yearbook editor, and it is proof of a desire to change the book in line with the constructive criticism which has been advanced. The criticism has raised a thorny problem, however, which is incapable of complete solution except over a period of years. For this year there is real evidence that something is being done about modernizing or streamlining the book; perhaps it won't be a great deal but the start is being made. It is important however that this movement continue in the future and plans should be laid well in advance.

The big problem here at Toronto is financial. When one looks at the beautiful efforts produced at American colleges one is perhaps inclined to be a trifle apathetic towards our own book. But one forgets that those American books had huge sums of money behind them. However, even admitting a financial limitation, we feel that much can be done to improve Torontonensis. Each senior pays an extra four dollars to the S.A.C., a considerable portion of which, it is assumed, goes to the production of the yearbook. With that sum there are possibilities. One suggestion would be to cut down on the number of pages devoted to dull pictures of a hundred-odd interfaculty teams, pictures which cover half a page each. Devote some of this space and photographic effort to a pictorial coverage of various aspects of the university, of big events of the year, of general college life, and of informative features. That is the new trend, and in future Torontonensis should attempt to follow it to a certain degree.

There are numerous other suggestions which space forbids printing, but we would suggest that students interested in the subject—and there are many—do some thinking between now and next fall, and submit any resultant ideas to the editors. We again state that we have no criticism of the efforts being made this year by the editor of Torontonensis and his assistants. We know that they realize the problem and are acting upon that realization, but only a little can be accomplished this year. The rest must come in the future.

Production on the book is well advanced now, but all individuals and groups are urged to get in their pictures and any still-missing biography cards as soon as possible. Cooperation of all concerned is necessary to help the editors in their task, which is made considerably more onerous in this war year.

Art Music Drama

One Sided Show

Thomson and Walker—Toronto Art Gallery

The current show at the Toronto Art Gallery of the work of Tom Thomson and Horatio Walker is one-sided in favour of Tom Thomson, to those who love landscape. Except that both are Canadians these two painters have practically nothing in common, for Tom Thomson belonged to the purely Canadian movement which took its inspiration from the land and developed a technique to suit, while Horatio Walker relied on the older and more conservative European tradition for both manner and subject.

The large Thomson collection was an exciting revelation for I had never seen more than a few of his paintings in one exhibition. The National Gallery in Ottawa and Dr. James M. McCallum have lent the greater part of their Thomson collections in order to make this exhibition truly comprehensive and along with the Art Gallery's West Wind and fine series of sketches and other loans, comprehensive is exactly what the exhibition is.

Thomson's development is shown most vividly in the two sketches cleverly hung together in the west corridor: the first, dated 1912, rather tight and self-conscious but well drawn, and the second, painted during his last four years in the free and bold style

An Open Letter

We of the most humble Victoria Dramatic Society have taken the liberty to approach you most worthy and most esteemed members of the honorable student body of the University of Toronto to be our guests at our miserable attempt at a musical production "San Toy" at Hart House Theatre this week.

We realize that we are most unworthy to present our miserable attempts at entertainment in front of your august and esteemed selves but we humbly beg of you to bear with us and witness our humble two acts and bear with our miserable cast of thousands.

Our unfortunate choice of male and female leads with their fish-hawking voices and our chorus of males supreme in the field of outright woodenness and stupidity will endeavour to amuse you. Though lowly in your all-seeing eyes, we beg of you to consider our worthless talents kindly and we will be amply repaid.

For those most honorable students who do not know, we are presenting the unfortunate production at miserable prices all week. Miserable dishes will be given away on Wednesday night while humble Giant Comic books will be handed to most esteemed Pass Arts students on Saturday matinee.

However, most honorable ones, if you cannot come to see our unworthy production and cannot deign to fork over miserable money to us, we see no reason why we should stick out humble necks to attempt to please stupid students after rehearsing in lousy theatre for half a year and then not make any money. So, if this is the case, most humbly, and with all due respect, to hell with you.

Hank Rooster.

which is usually associated with his name. Almost the whole exhibition is made up of the work of this last period which includes all his best work. The man's versatility is amazing for instead of sticking to one kind of subject and treating it in much the same way as most painters do and as Horatio Walker did, he handles with equal ease the delicate pastels of spring colouring and the crashing colour tones of autumn and yet one can look at every picture and say, "That is a Thomson."

One gallery is dominated by the superb canvas Pine Island which refutes anyone who may have thought that Thomson's painting is harsh. With dark muted colour and twisting pattern of pines it makes one feel the rush of wind before the storm even more than "West Wind". This painting is really great.

Horatio Walker's work, with its fine and exact drawing and extreme care in detail, is as different from Tom Thomson's as it could be. The daily life of the habitants on the Ile d'Orleans was his favourite subject and he portrayed it so well that he has been called the Canadian Millet. Quite a number of his robust canvases of peasant life are in this show, notably Oxen Drinking, Evening Ile d'Orleans, and Maple Sugar Harvest. In complete and delightful contrast are his rather fragile water-colours of landscape with animals.

This is one of the most interesting and satisfying shows that the Art Gallery has had in a long time for there is something in it for everyone. It will be up till the end of January.

Repeat Performance

Peggy Moreland, violinist, at Wymwood

Miss Peggy Moreland, young Hamilton violinist, was the soloist at last night's Wymwood recital. She repeated the capable performance which she had presented to Hart House members on December 13, and received an even greater ovation. The boys in the back row almost formed a claque for her benefit.

Miss Moreland is an excellent technician, for one so young. Her intonation is strikingly accurate, and her

Attention Amateur Photographers

This year in Torontonensis we wish to have a comprehensive Campus Life Section. To do this we need the co-operation of amateur photographers from all the colleges and faculties, particularly those numerically small.

The Editorial Board of Torontonensis will consider any photographs which are submitted for insertion in the 1941 Torontonensis. We would prefer human interest shots, typical of the activities of the various colleges and faculties in the university. Other subjects such as pictures of university buildings, candid snaps of professors, sporting activities, etc., will be welcomed, but we would particularly like representative pictures of activities typical of the college or faculty to which the photographer belongs.

When a selection has been made the pictures will be placed in separate categories. The person who, in the opinion of the judges, submits the best shot in each group will receive recognition to that effect in Torontonensis, and the one who submits the best of all will receive in addition a copy of Torontonensis.

The deadline is February 1st, by which time all pictures submitted must be in the S.A.C. office in Hart House. Each picture should be properly captioned—in choosing the best, the most original captions will be considered. Name and college of photographer must accompany each picture.

The decision of the Editorial Board of Torontonensis shall be final.

bowing, especially in her loud passages, gave her a very pure tone. She is only beginning to have the success which will eventually be hers.

The program, on the whole, left me as cold as it did at Hart House. The interest of the majority of the pieces was injected by Miss Moreland's personality. The only real music on the program was the Mozart Concerto in D Major. The slow movement was the most interesting but the first and last, being lively rather than in harmony with the artist's technique. Corelli sonatas in their original form are much more accurate and carry the mood of Corelli much better than arrangements by anyone, even Kreisler.

Miss Moreland did whatever she attempted in a perfectly satisfactory manner. I wish, however, that she and every other young violinist would pay a bit more attention to those composers who are neglected: to Corelli or Vivaldi and, when they become good enough, to Beethoven and Brahms. I have yet to hear a Toronto violinist play a Brahms sonata, and very few have played Beethoven. Let us hear some music that can bear repetition.

Of Grays and Grains

Hart House Gallery

A fair splash of modernity features the current exhibition at the Hart House Art Gallery, including oils, water colours and wood-cuts by John Hall and wood carvings by E. B. Cox.

In a sense, the work of these two artists is in striking contrast, for the wooden figures of Mr. Cox feature smooth, flowing surfaces while Mr. Hall's work abounds with harsh and jagged outlines.

Outstanding in all Mr. Cox's work is his skillful adaptation of the grain of his wood, giving each figure the effect of complete homogeneity. His subjects are often striking; not every sculptor will choose a newly-sprouted seed as a theme. Particularly effective are his many female torsos, all more or less streamlined.

Mr. Hall runs to landscapes in which a skilful gray blend predominates, and to portraits and studies in still life in various degrees of starkness. His fondness for the grisly is carried to such length that he unhesitatingly paints portraits of his wife which make her look like an opium addict. Though these portraits are very effective and well done, they show an alarmingly pessimistic attitude; perhaps they should be entitled "Portrait of the Artist's Wife Painted Before He's Had His Breakfast."

THE GYM SESSIONS

Trials for the Barton Trophy begin this week in Charlie Zwygand's gymnastic classes. The bar and mat boys will please note that this term's classes will be held from five to six on Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays. This is a reversal to the times at which the classes were held last year.

Last term we extolled the beauties of this Barton Trophy, which is awarded annually to the most-improved gymnast of the year. Without raving further about the handsomeness of the prize, we want to stress just now the opportunity such a contest provides for a hard-working gymnastic aspirant to cop a nice award without necessarily being the star performer. Charlie Zwygand is not only a very able, but a very conscientious instructor, and anyone interested in learning the game is well advised to hike up to the Little Gym for some of these sessions.

A SUGGESTION

The sportscoopers of this daily have been mulling over the idea of keeping a complete record of the standing and scoring in the interfaculty hockey league. We believe that this scheme is workable and will help to give Ross Workman's Ice House the crowds it deserves for these interfaculty fixtures. This year the loop should provide as good hockey as ever, and once again we go to bat with the insistence that now is the time for the fans to get out and root for their respective colleges. We feel that the regular publishing of standings and records will bring out a few more interested spectators. But the execution of the scheme will need the close co-operation of all the referees and score-keepers.

So here comes a plea to the whistle-tooting fraternity who will be policing the ice-lanes at the Arena this winter: Do you think you could see to it that the goals and assists (we would suggest only two of the latter) are recorded by the man with the scoresheet before you face off the rubber biscuit for the resumption of play?

ADDENDA

Speaking of interfaculty arbiters, the officials in the intramural program for this spring are well up to the high standard achieved thus far. Personally we are going to miss the work of Bob Rouland and Jim Shute, who graduated from St. Mike's last spring. In our opinion, these two lads were two of the best refs we have seen on interfaculty basketball courts, simply because they were helpful and encouraging to the players in their handling of the game. They made it fun to play basketball, an element which can frequently be preserved or lost simply by the attitude of the official in charge. . . . As the Dents volleyball outfit clash with Emmanuel A for the Arts Faculty Cup, the Molarmen will be without the services of Bruce Mackenzie, who had his arm broken during the Christmas vacation. An interfaculty title at this point would probably push Dentsistry ahead of U.C. in the T. A. Reed Trophy standing, but those battling Baccrats from the north-east corner of the campus have lots of try and may upset the favoured Tooth-tuggers.

S K I

This afternoon at five o'clock a meeting of the intramural committee in conjunction with the faculty ski representatives will arrange the final details of Russ Smart's comprehensive scheme for fitting skiing smoothly into the interfaculty setup. All the faculties will have to enter their teams then and there so some of the managers will have to get going pretty quickly.

The weatherman gave skiers a break this weekend, beautiful weather on Saturday and nothing to complain about on Sunday, but it sometimes seems as if Varsity skiers are more interested in following flashy females around the trails than in real honest to goodness hard work on slalom practice.

That, of course, excludes the boys of university team standard and also the School boys and some of the Trinity sliders who made good use over the weekend of the skiing facilities at Colingwood, the best skiing in the province of Ontario.

U.C. in particular doesn't seem to be making much response to that big notice in the rotunda calling for interest, expressed for the time being by a list of signatures and telephone numbers pending sufficient numbers to form a team or two.

It's a fair bet that the Engineers will come out on top in the final meet whenever it will be, since they are numerous enough to put in three or four teams, but Trinity should put up a fair fight.

For further news on their speciality the ski acres around the university will have to wait until tomorrow's Varsity when the results of this afternoon's meeting will probably be announced.

Vic Forwards Better on Ice Than Defensemen

Scarlet and Gold Icemen Appear Scanty in Workout — Are Angling for Former Junior Stars

COACH NOT YET CHOSEN

Vic's hockey material looked rather scanty during their regular practice session on the Arena surface Friday night. Neither of the Scarlet and Gold sextets fared any too well in last year's hockey wars, and as it looks now on paper, their chances this winter do not appear much better. A coach for the team has yet to be selected.

Though the ice abounded with a number of good forwards, there is an acute lack of defencemen. Ron MacKenzie, who performed well in goal last season, has turned defenceman, and looked like Vic's best bet in this department. Paul Deacon, who subbed the goalie spot last year, will take over MacKenzie's old position. Ross Cummings is trying out for the cage job on the junior edition, graduation having taken Dick Bridgeman, one of the best net-minders in the interfaculty loop last year.

Johnny Hogg, Gerry Stone and Jack Brown compose the first line of offence, and have been working out together for some time now. Eric Flewelling, Barney Boville and Ed Kirkland, first-string trio of the juniors, are getting together again this year. Also back in uniform were Jack Wolfrum, Cam MacKenzie, Johnny Pallett, Gord Purvis and Hardy.

Vic is angling for the services of former Varsity Juniors McLeod, Bill Young and Dick Wright, and their addition would bolster the team not a little, morally as well as materially.

Short, but sweet today. Exams, you know. Not that we're worried, but we know you won't have time to read much, so—

Hockey practices are on the up and up, and interfaculty matches will be the talk of the tea-hour in the very near future, meaning probably next week. These games take place on the outdoor rink at the Varsity Stadium, usually around 5 and 6 o'clock, and have, in the past, proved to be rousing affairs, to soft-pedal it. If you want some lung exercise, come on out and join us. We'll let you know day, time and, by the way, teams taking part.

Bowling is getting under way, as mentioned previously in other regions of this devastating daily, and it's still not too late to sign up in Room 82, U.C. You can come singly and be put into a team, or make up your own teams of 4, 5 or 6 members. Things will get under way this week, at the Uptown Bowling Academy, Bloor and Yonge Streets, so do not hesitate, buy now!

let's go places

Childlike in her buoyancy and naive manner, Anna Neagle is doing the title role in "No, No, Nanette" at the Uptown this week with a better cast than is usually accorded buoyant.

With such old hands at light humour as Roland Young and Helen Broderick about, a picture has to be pretty feeble to flop, and Billy Gilbert and Zazu Pitts (of all people) add their pleasant presences with effect. Anna Neagle makes a very unconvincing Judy Garland type at best, and is much more likeable when she verges, from time to time throughout the film, on the more mature. Her leading man, who finally turns out to be Richard Carlson, does a quite sound job. All in

VOLLEYBALL TEAMS REACH VICTORIA STAFF CUP FINALS

Dents A came from behind to defeat Victoria in two successive games taking the last one 15-2

VIC'S FIRST DEFEAT

The highly-touted Sr. Vic volleyball team passed from the title picture when they suffered their first defeat at the hands of Dents A in the semi-finals of the Victoria Staff Cup.

Vic started off with a rush and piled up a 9-1 lead in the first game, but the Molarmen rallied and took the game 16-14. In the second game the Scarlet and Gold collapsed under a bruising barrage of spikes from the hands of "Red" Mullett and Ollie Brett and went under 15-2.

Schneider and Smyth did the setting up for Mullett and Brett. Frank Hoffman and Hugh Young did the spiking for Vic with Fallis and MacKay setting them up.

Vic reached the playdowns by breezing undefeated through Group I and downing Trinity A from Group II. Dents reached pay-dirt through Group III. The Molarmen now meet Emmanuel A in the finals.

Sr. Vic: Hoffman, Ferguson, Mackay, Fallis, Rutledge, Young, Rice, Gillespie.

Dents A: Brett, Sproule, Cameron, Smyth, Schneider, Mullett.

on the subject, "The Christian Policy of Work." The following Wednesday Rev. R. Armitage, principal of Wycliffe College will speak on "Prayer in Everyday Life."

It was hoped by John Coleman, secretary of the U. of T. S.C.M., that the men will come to hear more of these professions discussed than the one in which they are particularly interested.

all, the thing has even less plot than the usual musical comedy, and makes the weakest sort of film material, but the gags are good and the laughs lavish.

An interesting news reel, a wacky cartoon, and an enthralling ski film fill the bill.—H.D.H.

GAME LACKED POLISH

Emmanuel A volleyballers climbed over the shoulders of Aerial Navigation into the finals for the Victoria Staff Cup when they shellacked the Fliers 15-12, 15-6 last Friday. Neither team showed the polish which they displayed all year and the game was rather ragged.

The Theologs started off with a rush and held the pace all the way with the Airmen being completely unable to match the consistent spiking of the Purple and Gold. Art Hamilton and Art Young combined to handle the spiking for Emmanuel with Manager Stirling Kitchen and Doug "Call Me Porpoise" Green setting them up.

Ronnie Lake, as usual, was the ace of the Aviators with Johnny Tuckak and Dutch Vanhuyse handling the set-ups.

The Theologs reached the semi-finals by winding up on top of Group IV and downing O.C.E. B, the representative of Group VIII. Aerial Navigation paced Group V and sent Pharmacy A from Group VI into discard in the quarter finals. Emmanuel now meets Dents A today in the finals for the interfaculty championship.

Emmanuel A: Hamilton, Kitchen, Fee, Young, McKennitt, Cupdale, and Green.

Aerial Navigation: Haber, Buchan, Lake, Price, Tuckak, Vanhuyse.

THE WOMEN'S FRATERNITY
RUSHING SEASON IS ON and this leads to all sorts of jollity and frivolity.
For instance, there are six men registered in Physical Education, a course previously open only to women.
The girls of one sorority, full of zeal and enthusiasm, pulled a most amusing boner by sending these six hirsute guys invitations to a rushing tea. Only pressing academic and athletic engagements prevented the gentlemen from attending. . . .

THE LUMINARIES OF FOURTH-YEAR LAW were having a new course in Criminology explained to them by the prof. . . "I," said he, professionally, "will give you four lectures. After that you will have to go to the Psychiatric Ward. . . ."

THE CHARTER OF PURDUE
UNIVERSITY, reports the Indiana
Daily Student, with its editorial tongue budging its editorial cheek, specifies that on the Board of Regents there shall be "one farmer, one woman, and one person OF GODD CHARACTER." . . .

A DAZED VARSITY REPORT-ER, off duty for the holidays, decided to return to the social swirl. . . . So he hid himself to a whee of a party and there proceeded to consort with cafe society. . . . And upon being introduced to a seemingly strange girl, girl, and dutifully muttering "How do you do, Miss X?" was stopped in his tracks as she sweetly replied: "Oh, of course I know you. You're in my English class!" . . .

THE DEAD FISH OF THE

WEEK is awarded to the Canadian High News, which, late in December, perpetrated a really horrible gag. . . .
It had the consummate crust to ask "Why do radio announcers have small hands?"
Then, leering obscenely, it cracked back "Wee Paws for station identification. . . ."

THE WEIGHT OF TELEPHON-
IC TRAFFIC borne by the wires leading into Whitney Hall has long since become proverbial. . . . But it was demonstrated afresh the other evening when a character phoned and phoned and phoned and the line was most persistently bizzzy. . . . So he phoned the telegram company and sent a wire to the object of his adoration. . . . In turn, the telegram company casually phoned the girl and delivered the message over the now uncluttered wire. . . .
Ironic, what?

PICTURE . . . A pair of weary students are gulping a quick coffee on their way home from a long evening session at the Library. They are carrying large piles of large books with them, intending to fill the night with a session of sweet silent thought. Among the tomes is a work by a member of the University's Philosophy Department. A cab-driver near them evinces interest in the books and spots the one by the Toronto prof. . . . He becomes greatly excited, seizes the volumes, flings it down, and makes a very rude gesture indeed. . . . "When that guy gets through educating you, you can come and push a hack around like me," he says. . . . He slams the door as he exits. . . . FADEOUT.

McLennan Prize To Be Presented

At the meeting of the Senate of the University of Toronto held on January 10th, a Statute was passed establishing the Sir John Cunningham McLennan
Prize, the gift of Miss Janet C. Mc-Lennan of Stratford, Ontario, in memory of her brother. This prize will be awarded annually to the student in the final year of the honour course in Mathematics and Physics who is considered by the Head of the Department of Physics to be the most worthy of receiving it.

The Senate was informed that the Accountants' and Executives' Corporation of Canada had provided a bursary of $25 to be awarded to an undergraduate enrolled in the course in Com-

"The importance of oil in the present war" was the topic discussed by Mel Kates, IV U.C. "War is a necessity in our present methods of warfare," explained Mr. Kates. "If United States should enter the war one of the most valuable assets she would supply would be her oil, for she controls 61 per cent of the world's output. Even as affairs now stand Great Britain is in the most favourable position of the three belligerents with regards to oil. Canada has increased her output greatly in the last 4 years and her help enables the mother country to trade more extensively with other countries for other wartime necessities. This superiority is important, if not decisive in deciding the final outcome of the war," stated Kates.

S.C.M. to Hold Usual Conference

An S.C.M. summer conference at Geneva Park on Lake Couchiching will be held as usual next September. This decision was made by an S.C.M. committee which conferred on the question this past week-end at Wymilwood.

Besides the Toronto delegates there were representatives from McGill, Queen's, Western and O.A.C. The group also discussed the work of the S.C.M. with a view to self-criticism, and heard an address from Dr. John Lines of Emmanuel College.

ENGINEERS TO BE RELEASED FOR URGENT WAR SERVICE

regular Senate meeting Friday.

Although the University received no definite proposals from the Dominion Government that such a plan be put into effect, Dean Mitchell said. "The plan should be very well received at Ottawa."

"Normally, the work of the faculty would conclude by April 1 anyway," he pointed out. "This period is usually followed by a break before the formal examinations. Consequently, by releasing these students at the proposed date we will not be curtailing their courses to any great extent."

No formal examinations will be set for students of the third and fourth years, but tests will be arranged and conducted by individual examiners and the marks obtained on these tests submitted to the Secretary in the regular way for the determination of standing on the year's work.

Students in third, fourth and fifth years in Architecture are included in the same class as third year Engineers, and will complete their work by April 1.

There will be no change in the arrangement of courses and examination as prescribed in the calendar for the First and Second years, the announcement said.

"Provision had already been made to deal leniently with students who joined the armed forces," Dean Mitchell said last night in speaking of the plan.
"While many technicians are undoubtedly needed in the army, navy and air force, there is a real need for workers in every branch of the nation's war effort."

He estimated that about two-thirds of the men needed in Canada's war effort today are needed on the home front, and stated that the faculty has been under "tremendous pressure" from the government and from munitions, aircraft and various other plants for personnel.

MAUROIS DISCUSSES DOWNFALL OF FRANCE

preparedness. He pointed out that a defensive war is rarely successful, for it involves giving up initiative and thinning out one's lines of defence over a great area. In the case of France this "defensive complex" had especially serious complications because of a lack of manpower. "The French army, although large for a country of France's population, was nothing against the German army," he said. The lack of manpower was most noticeable and vital, of course, in the lack of reserves.
With thin lines spread out over long distances, and no reservoir of manpower behind the lines to block "breakthroughs," the situation was really hopeless.

The French university situation is not very clear at the moment, Maurois said, but many universities have shifted from occupied areas to unoccupied France and are there carrying on the work. The Sorbonne reopened as usual last September, but reports of student riots were received, followed by the statement that it had been closed.
Whether or not it has been reopened,
Maurois was not certain.

TENORS NEEDED

More first and second tenors are urgently needed by the Glee Club which is beginning preparation for its annual concert. A sectional rehearsal of first and second tenors will be held at 5 p.m. in the Music Room, Hart House. New tenors are urged to be present. Dr. Charles Peaker, director of the Glee Club will be present to test for voice range. Previous experience, or ability to read musical notation are not required.

NUMEROUS DIVISIONS IN METEOROLOGY

dolite—a telescope-like instrument which is used to follow the courses of red and white hydrogen-filled balloons sent up at intervals to determine the direction and velocity of the wind. At night the balloons bear a light. A few experimental flights have also been made in Toronto with instrument bearing balloons which send radio signals representing temperature, pressure and humidity at the elevation of the balloon.

Also located on the tower is a sun-recorder. From this vantage point too, visibility is determined with such scenic points as the McMaster building and the hills across Lake Ontario for criteria.

APPEAL IS SENT OUT FOR RADIO OFFICERS

petent to deal with theoretical and technical problems at these special radio stations.

Candidates must have the necessary education and personality to constitute good officers. They should preferably have a university degree in physics or electrical engineering and a first class knowledge of radio, both on the theoretical and practical side.

It is desirable, but not essential, that they should also have had some experience in short-wave transmission and reception.

Here again it is not possible to make any hard and fast rule. Professional experience in radio is not essential; keen radio amateurs who have made a study of the theory of radio as well as the practice have made excellent radio officers, as also have patent barristers and doctors of medicine who have made radio their hobby. Radio design engineers from radio factories are specially suitable for commissions.

On the other hand, men with those qualifications are rare, and electrical engineers with relatively little experience of radio have proved satisfactory after training. The following may be said to be the minimum requirements for commissions to enable them to understand the instruction which will be given:

A good science degree (or even a good law degree and subsequent experience in patent work in the radio field) and a thorough knowledge of alternating-current theory. Such men should be absolutely "sound" in their theory, and, in particular, in their knowledge of inductance, capacity, resistance, frequency, phasing and of acceptor and rector circuits. In addition they must have a fundamental knowledge of radio transmission and reception.

Knowledge of the Morse Code is not necessary.

The majority of these officers will be required for ground duties.

let's go places

You can add Communist Comedies to your list of Originally Good but Sadly Overworked Ideas. "Ninotchka" was decidedly a good thing, and "He Stayed For Breakfast" had its points, but with "Comrade X" the cycle has definitely reached its conclusion.

The main reason for the lack of amusement value in the film is the closeness of its parallel with "Ninotchka."
To a fairly ordinary spy plot MGM has added the familiar scenes of Russian inefficiency and liquidation, a dead-pan Red heroine, a roving American and a couple of commissars ex machina.
Reluctantly we chide Hedy Lamarr for an unsuccessful attempt to out-garbo
Garbo. Reluctantly we praise Clark Gable for an impeccable job in the main lead. There were several sequences that were really funny, crowned by a scene that we wouldn't have believed possible, in which capital comedy is made out of a massed tank charge.—E.S.

Royal Navy Finds Crete Vital Base

By V. C. Jackson
(A C.U.P. Special Feature)

Winnipeg, Man., Jan. 14—The importance of the Greek bases in strengthening the British navy's hold on the Mediterranean has been somewhat overlooked with the pressure of news of Greek victories in Albania and the British offensive in North Africa. There is no doubt, however, that the possession of Crete as a naval base was a vital factor in the British success. From Porto Bardia to Crete is only 225 miles and Alexandria is 300 miles away. This difference of 150 miles for aircraft and naval vessels undoubtedly increased their effectiveness in battle during the last few weeks and its importance will become more apparent as the offensive moves westward. The exploits of the navy in the Adriatic would have been impossible without the use of Greek bases. The possession of Crete shortens (Continued on Page 4)

Varsity Students Waltz on Skates, Under Zwygard

Charlie Zwygard's figure skating classes, an ever growing side of Varsity athletics, will begin again this afternoon at 4.30. A sign at the stadium points to the ice surface reserved for the U. of T. class.

Three years ago the idea of giving students free tuition in fancy skating was born. Since then the number of pupils has grown steadily under Zwygard's careful guidance.

There are a few simple manoeuvres that must be learned before students are able to waltz on skates, but these can easily be mastered in one season's coaching.

Co-eds and eds combine in Charlie's classes, and each has a different phase of skating to learn. The girls have a slightly more difficult task than the men as they must skate backwards ninety per cent of the time.

The object of the groups is to teach the students to figure skate in pairs with perfect harmony.

It is quite permissible to wear hockey skates in these classes although real figure skates are an advantage. This type of skate is "rockered" so that only slightly more than one inch of blade remains on the ice at one time.

Men students are granted one P.T. credit a week for attendance at the Stadium sessions.

The classes will be held every Tuesday afternoon from 4.30 to 6 weather permitting. You might as well join now as wish you had.

Red Rooster, Star of Vic Show On the Loose as Big Day Nears

Cockeye, the Victoria College Music Club's famous red rooster, has disappeared. That's the latest that can be learned from Bill Graff, Music Club president, about the little red fowl that was billed to star in the Music Club's show, "San Toy."

The rooster, one of the props which Property Man Douglas Stewart had to procure for the opera, was scheduled to be out for the final dress rehearsal at Hart House Theatre Monday night but it failed to show up. Saturday night it appeared for the first dress rehearsal and had its picture taken along with other members of the cast. Sometime, however, between midnight Saturday and Monday morning, the bird flew the coop.

"I'm broken hearted over the whole affair," was all Bill Graff would say when approached about the mysterious disappearance. Others of the club were more vociferous in their demands that the rooster be brought back for the show. Rumor has it that some members of the cast had become jealous of the undue attention paid to the rooster and had taken matters into their own hands. Some even charged that the executive had put the little bird to their own use when it leaked out that the bosses of the club were planning to have chicken dinner in the near future.

"It's all a horrible nightmare," wailed one club member who refused to reveal his identity. "All of us in the cast had counted on Cockeye to bring us good luck as a mascot as well as course, we don't want anyone to give an actor. Now that he's gone, of us the bird."

The bird will be found, if at all possible, before the light opera's last staging Saturday night, according to Property Man Stewart. Meanwhile, the procuring of a stand-in is being considered, in case the search fails.

Plenty of peppy, rollicking tunes will pour forth in Hart House Theatre the rest of this week, when the Victoria College Music Club presents the Chinese light opera, "San Toy", beginning tomorrow evening. Among those taking part in the production will be the two young co-eds pictured above. Miss Margaret Lavery (left) will appear as one of the three English ladies and Miss Margaret Rose (right) is one of the Six Little Wives of Yen How, the Mandarin of Pynka Pong.

Vic Study Groups To be Continued

Study groups of the S.C.M. in Victoria College are resuming their meetings and it is hoped that the members of each group will turn out full force with "new-resolution" enthusiasm.

In case there is some doubt regarding the subject, leader, time or place the list below should afford the necessary information.

Current Affairs, led by Jean Hunter, at Wymilwood on Mondays at 1 p.m.; Social Problems, Mrs. Goudge, Wymilwood, Mondays at 5 p.m.; Freshie Group, Mrs. Riddell, Wymilwood, Mondays, 5 p.m.; Religion and Science, Prof. McCallum, Wymilwood, Mondays, 6.30 p.m.; Hebrew Prophets, Prof. Young, his home, Mondays, 7.30 p.m.; Church Doctrine, Prof. Leslie, Room 21, Vic, Wed. 1 p.m.; Economics and Politics, Prof. Brady, Economics Bldg., Thurs. 4 p.m.; Symbolism in Bible, Prof. Frye, Wymilwood, Thurs. 5 p.m.; Jesus in the Records, John Coleman, Room 23, Emmanuel, Fri. 3 p.m.

ARMoured CORPS

Members of the U. of T. C.O. T.C. desirous of being interviewed with regard to receiving a commission in the Armoured Forces of Canada, are requested to apply in person to Contingent Headquarters, 119 St. George St., without delay. Officers for this arm must be:

1. Keen, quick thinkers and capable of leadership.
2. Possess mechanical or wireless aptitude or training.

REPORTERS WANTED

Owing to increased pressure caused by withdrawal of reporters from the staff, The Varsity can use a number of men reporters this term.

Students interested in journalism who hesitated to join the staff last term owing to military drill or lack of experience, who would be interested in working one or more days a week, should sign the list in the Men's Varsity Office, Hart House, immediately.

Colleges' Dramatic Clubs Compete at Yearly Festival

Trinity, Victoria and University Colleges will Present Competition Plays in Hart House on January 21

FIFTH YEAR

The fifth annual University Drama Festival will take place in Hart House Theatre on Tuesday, January 21, it is announced by the University Drama Committee. Entries for the festival, and the Cody Award Competition which is part of it, will be made by the dramatic societies of Trinity, Victoria, and University Colleges.

The award to those responsible for the winning play will be presented by President Cody. The names of the adjudicators are to be announced as soon as final arrangements are completed.

First on the evening's program will be "An Assyrian Afternoon," a satire by F. Sladen-Smith, presented by the Trinity Dramatic Society, under the direction of Paul Christie.

"The Valiant," by Middlemarch and Hall, a serious play, will be the second presentation, and is the Victoria entry, directed by Tom Paton.

INFORMAL RECITAL

Howard Brown, II Victoria, will play in the east common room of Hart House today from 1.30 p.m. to 2 p.m.

Accept Men Donors Only At Canadian Blood Clinic, Because of Limited Space

REACTIONS TO PLAN VARY AT SCHOOL

Many Engineers Agree that Proposed Tests will Probably be Equivalent to Examinations

S.P.S. OPINIONS

The third and fourth year S.P.S. men interviewed by The Varsity yesterday all agreed that the scheme releasing them from their examinations for technical war work was quite reasonable. It was also the consensus of opinion that the tests on which their year's standing is to be based would probably be very similar to final examinations.

The attitude of some of the Engineers was that there would be the same work to do in former years, and less time to do it. In others, however, felt that due allowance for the limited time would be made by the examining professors.

"It is up to a fellow's honour to do his best," was the way Bill Dafoe, IV Electrical, viewed the matter. He went on to add, "No doubt the country needs us for technical work right away — it's (Continued on Page 4)

Women will be Allowed to Aid in This Service When Facilities Allow, Says Dr. G. R. Sproat

MANY APPLY

Canada's first blood clinic has been in operation for over a year, and as yet, men have been the only donors; but it hasn't been because women refused. By no means: in fact, women have been volunteering. More than one co-ed has dialed the Red Cross phone number out of sheer patriotic fervour mingled perhaps with a bit of curiosity, only to be turned down.

The most recent statement on the subject has come from Doctor G. R. Sproat, director of the Toronto Red Cross Blood Donors Clinic, who informed The Varsity, "Donations of blood to the blood bank will not be accepted as yet from women." Dr. (Continued on Page 4)

Eleven Ski Teams Entered in Meet Planned Feb. 2

"The big point of our skiing scheme will have to be punctuality," said Russ Smart, chairman of the interfaculty executive, at its meeting last night. The first meet is tentatively scheduled for February the second at 9.30 a.m. sharp and those who are not on hand when their turn comes will not be allowed to run in that race.

A complete schedule of weekend meets has been arranged and it now only awaits Mac MacCubbin's O.K. to go into effect. Eleven teams have been entered, three from School, two each from U.C. and Trinity, and one each from Meds and Dents. They will be divided up into groups and two meets will actually be run off simultaneously each day, one group doing slalom and downhill at Edwards in the morning while the other group does jumping and cross-country over at Newton's, and then trading places in the afternoon.

The names of those on each team will have to be handed in on an eligibility sheet by noon on the Saturday before the meet. These are six-man teams.

Ribbon Corsages Replace Posies

"War corsages" in the form of ribbons will replace the customary "flowers for the lady" at the annual School At-Home to be held at the Royal York Hotel this Friday.

It was learned that the Engineers are very serious about their ban of the regular corsage and that they intend to turn over the proceeds of the sale of these "war corsages" to the British War Victims Relief Fund.

Schoolmen are requested to ask their friends not to wear flowers to this party but the committee are making special plans for those who may feel that the wearing of the flower is an absolute necessity. There will be a corsage check room at the door and it is rumoured that the check room will be a wire basket.

Many Methods of Study Popular As Term Examinations Approach

"Women at Work," "Disturb at your Peril"—such signs litter the halls of the residences showing that once more term exams are wreaking havoc among the students.

Superstitions regarding studying abound. Mary Bruck, IV U.C., believes that to hear a milk cart passing in the wee small hours, brings her good luck. One Whitney Hall girl goes breakfast on the crucial morning. Some people confessed that they always wear a favourite sweater or tie, others signing their names on paper the same way each time.

Although many leave studying until the night before, more and more students are seeking quiet in the libraries as the final days draw closer. Attempts to build up fatigue resistance range from the consumption of peanuts to furious smoking or the cutting out of cigarettes altogether. We heard of no wet towels or ice packs but Barbara Crassweller, III U.C., says that she studies best "with both feet up in the air."

Examinations, claimed several girls, require a sense of humour on the part of the writer, the professor who reads them, and most of all when the results are given. Dorothy Ferguson of Vic thinks that there should be two periods of rest just before the studying and that these two periods should not overlap so that a clear mind may be kept for cramming purposes.

Said Glen Eagle and Don MacRae when approached on the subject of studying, "We're from Emmanuel and don't need to study because we receive our knowledge through inspiration."

Walter Swayze, I U.C., compared exams to a track meet for which a runner has been preparing. Those who are pursuing extra-curricular activities at this time, as are the girls involved in the rushing of the women's fraternities, have not had time to do much thinking about the matter.

Many students just quaked and turned pale at the thought of studying although Ian MacLeod of Vic summed it up by quoting

"The more you study the more you learn
The more you learn the more you know
The more you know the more you forget
The more you forget the less you know
So why study?"

Aid To Britain

The most effective possible answer has been given to those who were opposed to Wilkie in the November Presidential elections because they feared he was not sufficiently enthusiastic in his plans for aid to Britain, with Wilkie's support of the lend-lease bill, and the announcement that he will fly to England for a two weeks' survey of conditions there so he will have a better understanding of the international atmosphere. The similarity in the views and aims of Wilkie and Roosevelt is more evident now than it was before the election, when the issue was obscured by election tactics and fears that platforms were merely election promises. Wilkie suffered especially in this respect, but that he was sincere is now fully evident.

The bill, which has been arousing a great deal of controversy in the States because of its sweeping proposals, will be discussed by the government this week. In strong opposition to it are members who are convinced that it will result in the United States entering the war. The 1936 Republican Presidential candidate, Alfred M. Landon, is one of these. When he was rebuked by Wilkie last week for his statement that, in his opinion, the future security of the United States did not depend on a British victory, Landon's rather amazing reply was that "There is no essential difference between Mr. Wilkie's position and Mr. Roosevelt's position, which is to go to war if necessary to help England win. If Mr. Wilkie had revealed it before the Republican National Convention he would not have been nominated, and if Mr. Roosevelt had revealed it before election he would not have been re-elected."

How much truth there is in his statement will be better judged by Americans, but President Roosevelt's views seemed quite obvious last November.

Discussing his reasons for favouring the bill, Mr. Wilkie further revealed the sincerity of his election platform. He stated, "I have examined this bill in the light of the current emergency and I personally have come to the conclusion that, with modifications, it should be passed."

"This is a critical moment in history. The United States is not a belligerent, and we hope we shall not be. Our problem, however, is not alone to keep America out of war but to keep war out of America. Democracy is endangered. And the American people are so aware of the danger that they have endorsed the policy of giving full and active aid to those democracies which are resisting aggression. At the same time the people are virtually unanimous in their desire to build for the United States the strongest defense system in the world."

"It is the history of democracy that, under such dire circumstances, extraordinary powers must be granted to the elected Executive. Democracy cannot hope to defend itself from aggression in any other way. It is for this reason only that I favor grant of power at this time to the present Administration."

The modification to which he referred was that a time limit should be fixed on the proposed grant of powers to the President so that at the expiration of such a fixed time Congress automatically would have a chance to continue these powers or to revoke them. He advised that the bill should provide specifically that the powers granted were temporary and not permanent.

Wilkie also stated that he hoped discussion of the bill would not take the form of opposition to granting power to the Roosevelt Administration just because it was the Roosevelt Administration, and that the discussion would not assume a partisan aspect, even though the Administration pointedly excluded Republicans from the formation and drafting of the bill and daily continues its partisan attacks.

Warning of the opposition the bill would encounter from those who do not wish to aid Britain, Wilkie said—"I hope the debate concerning this bill is confined to the merits of the bill. Appeasers, isolationists or lip-service friends of Britain will seek to sabotage the program for aid to Britain and her allies behind the screen of opposition to the bill. It makes a vital difference to the United States which side prevails in the present conflict. I refute the statement that our national security is not involved in a British defeat."

Explanation of Defeat

The seeming eagerness of the Italians at Bardia to surrender has been explained by most newspapers in a similar manner, coupling the opinions that the Italian is a poor fighter, and that his heart is not in this battle. The New York Times presents a slightly different picture—that of a good fighter fighting without faith in his cause. Says The Times—

"No one can read eye-witness accounts of the fall of Bardia and of Sidi Barrani without being puzzled by the mass surrender of Italian troops which seemed to take place wherever the British got through the defending artillery barrage and approached within small-arms range. Cases of personal gallantry were reported from Bardia; but for the most part the Italians yielded in groups of thirty or more to lone Australians, while more than 2,000 entrenched in a cave submitted to a single British officer. In Albania reinforcements are undeniably stiffening the Italian lines, but observers there noted the same tendency when Greek bayonets first turned back the invaders in swift retreat."

"These are sons of the same men who, on the banks of the Piave, transformed an almost equally hopeless defense into the overwhelming triumph of Vittorio Veneto. The Italian soldier has shown on many a battlefield that he can resist to the last ditch. Indeed, his glory has been that, in spite of his generals, he has remained a rugged individual fighter. What change has come over him? An answer to that might forecast the fortunes of Italy in this war. Political regimentation can organize armies; military discipline can keep them organized behind their artillery; but when the lines are broken and the final melee comes, a man is sustained only by his faith in his cause. His heart must be in it. Since Italy's soldiers of today are only a typical cross-section of the Italian people, are we not entitled to conclude that the present conflict is not a people's war? Prime Minister Churchill put his finger on this vital weakness when he told the Italians that they had no part in the decision to take up arms."

Music by the Minute

You listen to it casually. If it isn't very good, it annoys you and you wish it would stop. If it is good, you don't notice it at all. In this manner some of the best music and a great deal of the worst receive a single performance and then are forgotten.

The motion picture industry is insatiable. It swallows millions of dollars, consumes the work of the greatest actors, directors, producers and technicians. And the result—two hours of entertainment.

Among the greatest sufferers of this prodigious waste of potentials is the musical composer. He writes bar upon bar of music, carefully plotted and scored, draining himself of the musical ideas of half a dozen projected symphonies. He hands in his score and later goes to his neighbourhood theatre to

I Was Hitler's Bat-Boy

By Hans Offbigboy

A thrilling expose of the madman of Berchtesgaden's PRIVATE LIFE by one who knew him intimately. In 1929 Hans Offbigboy was an important figure in the Düsseldorf Sewage Commission, and he befriended Hitler when the latter was just a gigolo. In 1933, the Nazis seized power and took over Düsseldorf Sewage Commission in a gleaming Ford Drive and Offbigboy was thrown into a concentration camp. He escaped from Dachau disguised as a ration card, but was punched in several places and thrown into solitary confinement where only a mastery of the hornpipe saved him from going berserk.

He reached America after a thrilling chase following his escape, disguised as a magnetic mine.

CHAPTER ONE

I vaguely recall my childhood. . . . I was very young. But as time went on I grew up. The peaceful little town of Oberderbachweg is surrounded by charming evergreen forests and cordons of police. Sometimes of an evening I could hear the sound of a musical note followed by the correct time. Such was my youth free from the shadow which was spreading over the world. Little did I know as I whittled by Geometry teacher's wooden leg, in the little Bavarian schule that the New York Rangers were coming up fast. But I was young then, and Roosevelt was running for his first term.

Then came the time when I was to leave my little home town and my heart was heavy. I remember Knapi-bachel the teacher, shaking me gravely by the hand and saying, "Ach Hans, time waits for no one!" He brushed his toupee with a boogie beat as he shook his head and went into the classroom. A minute later there was a loud report. I rushed into the classroom. Knapi-bachel had killed a student. He looked at me under his shaggy eyebrows and pointed to the corpse. "He will thank me for this later," he said.

His words still burn in my memory. Not long after, I met Adolf Hitler, who at that time was understudying the part of Mushmouth in a Munich Little Theatre Stunt Night. His flow of language completely captured me and before I knew it, I WAS LIKE PUTZI IN HIS HANDS!

hear it performed. What he hears is scattered snatches of the original, with garbled instrumentation and tempo, interspersed by irrelevant dialogue and accompanied by the screened image of a pretty girl being kissed by a sleek young man with a moustache. What the audience hears is a continuous flow of agreeable noise.

From the producer's point of view, the music in a film should be no more than this appropriate noise, adding to the effect of a scene with the prescribed number of bars. In Hollywood's infancy these effects were few and simple and were supplied by a pianist, who obligingly ground out Hearts and Flowers, Home, Sweet Home, and appropriate snatches of the Wilhelm Tell Overture as the occasion demanded.

Later the producers realized the potentialities of the classics in this field. For example, the second movement of Tchaikowsky's Pathétique has been immortalized as the love theme of the Greta Garbo-Charles Boyer film, Conquest.

Since then, America's rising young composers have been engaged to supplant the old masters. Original music now accompanies Errol Flynn's duels and Hedy Lamarr's passions. A peculiar idiom of American movie music has

Dentists Lead Emmanuel In Series for Vic Cup

Molarmen Take First Game from Theologs in Best Two Out of Three Series, for the Trophy

15-9; 16-14

By George Forster

Dents A volleyballers moved a step closer to the Victoria Staff Cup by defeating Emmanuel A 15-9, 16-14 in the first game of a best two out of three series for the coveted trophy.

Due to the spiking of Jack Mullett and Ollie Brett the Molarmen had little difficulty in taking the first game 15-9. Emmanuel began to click in the second game and forced the Tooth-Tuggers to the limit. Led by Art Hamilton the Theologs fought their way to game point only to have the relentless Dentists come back to win 16-14. Both games contained some of the finest volleyball which the upper gym has witnessed all season.

Sproule and Smyth did the setting-up for Mullett and Brett. All four of them combined on the fine defensive work for which the Molarmen are justly famous.

Art Young was right behind Hamilton in the spiking department for the Theologs. Stirling Kitchen, who is perhaps the finest set-up man in the whole intramural loop, took care of that end of the job for the Purple and Gold.

The Theologs reached the finals by winding up on top of Group IV and downing O.C.E. B and Aerial Navigation in the semi-finals. The Dents reached pay-dirt via Group III.

The teams will meet again on Wednesday in the second game of the cup finals. Emmanuel must win this game to stay in the running while a win for Dents will give them possession of the cup.

Emmanuel A: Young, Kitchen, McKennitt, Green, Stopleton, Hamilton, Fee, Pritchard.

Dents A: Mullett, Brett, Schneider, Smyth, Sproule, Cameron, Elliott.

SR. S.P.S. BEATS VIC IN BASKETBALL GAME

Scarlet and Gold Fail to Keep Up with Better Practiced Engineers, Who Pile Up Points in First Half

DALES INJURED

Unleashing a power-packed first half attack Sr. S.P.S. ran roughshod over the Sr. Vic basketballers to the tune of 22-14. The game was played in the big gym so both squads used the regulation five men.

The Scarlet and Gold squad showed the results of lack of practice as they failed miserably to stop the Engineers in the first stanza. The Sons of Toke ran in 14 points while holding the Victorians scoreless.

Vic began to click in the final half, and although they outscored the Engineers they were unable to overcome the lead. Don Finlayson sparked the Schoolmen with 6 points and was ably seconded by Barrett and Allen with 4 apiece.

Joe Dales was the Vic high scorer and got 4 points despite a knee injury which he sustained in the first half. Hugh Young notched 2 points and was the best all round man for the Scarlet and Gold.

A total of ten personal fouls were called, five on each team.

Sr. Vic: Hoffman, Ferguson (2), Miller (2), Dales (4), Rice (1), Young (2), Landell, Todd, Gay, Topea (1).

Sr. S.P.S.: Barrett (4), Bell (2), Bryce, Reynolds (2), Allen (4), Schell, Finlayson (6), Halford (2), MacLean (2), Coupe.

FANCY SKATING CLASS BEGINS AT STADIUM

Skimming along on their silver blades and falling on... the ice, Varsity lads and lassies last week inaugurated this season's skating at the Varsity Stadium outdoor rink with a total attendance of almost 10,000.

Although the rink has been exceptionally late in opening this year—"Only once before have we opened as late as December 25th", said G. Ross Workman, Arena Manager,—university devotees of the ankle-bending art have been making up for lost time with crowds that surpassed the 2200 mark on Saturday night.

There is no charge for skating on the outdoor rink every afternoon and Monday, Tuesday and Thursday evenings for those students still possessing their registration cards—with the Athletic portion attached.

As an added inducement to go a Hans Brinker in the Blue Bowl, the management provides free clogging and music, the latter being offered by members of the 48th Highlander Band on Saturday afternoons and every evening.

Classes in figure skating are scheduled to start this afternoon at the Stadium rink under the capable instruction of Charlie Zwargard, Athletic Instructor. It is almost essential for students in such classes to have well-rockered skates, officials suggested.

Speaking OF SPORT

By Stan Westcott

A NEW THRILL

When a frosh comes to town to go to college, one of the first things to surprise and fascinate him is our daily newspaper. Then one day he sees a coy little box leering at him from the front page. The box (the one just mentioned) is entitled REPORTERS WANTED. The mouth of our hero, suppose we call him Dave, falls open, he licks his lips twice, and gapes at the head.

If he is like 90 per cent of his outwardly strutting and inwardly quaking first year brethren, and Dave is, he will glance furtively around him to see that no one is watching, and then gulp to himself, "Gee, I wonder if I could be a reporter."

His next step is hard. He must summon up sufficient nerve to go to The Varsity office in Hart House and place himself in the hands of some demonish ogre in the form of an editor. Our Dave eventually gets himself to the office door after sidling past it along the hall five or six times. He pauses there listening to the rapid staccato beat of the typewriters, and the hoarse guffaws of the hardened newspapermen.

Then taking his courage by both ears he bolts into the noisy room. If Dave is at all red-blooded, noble, valiant, valorous, high-spirited, intrepid, resolute, staunch, stout-hearted, and virile (you can have them too—Devlin's Synonym department and tremblingly bare his heart on the Sports Desk.

Because, being a frosh, Dave is such an illiterate galoot, he will be asked to cover volleyball games and more volleyball games as supposed punishment from his ignorance. Every cub reporter on the sporting pages of this journal since time immemorial has been given the same task.

But last night something happened which jarred the very foundations of our belief in this disciplinary theory. Maybe the editors who gave these assignments showed greater stupidity even than that of an average frosh. Last night we watched two superb and evenly matched teams spar in the first of a three-set series for the interfaculty volleyball title. And we haven't felt the same thrill of delightful, tortuous suspense since Bobby Coulter ran Ottawa out of Varsity Stadium last October.

It may sound silly to you that a mere game of volleyball could chill you with a cold sweat as tingling and as stirring as the one you battle in when a fleet little backfielder hurtles through a maze of red-sweated hero to bring his team a victory that no one thought possible. But if you had seen Varsity's track coach winding himself about the iron rail of the upper gym like a two year old chimpanzee (no biological resemblance of course) in gleeful abandon to intense excitement, maybe you would begin to realize what a thrill there is in the sport.

The fact that Dents A took a very close victory from a hard playing Emmanuel A team isn't as important as the very bumpy road they had to travel to gain that victory. Both teams displayed beautiful precision and fine sportsmanship. Art Hamilton for Emmanuel was the outstanding figure on the floor with his crashing drives from setups.

Whichever team wins the Victoria Staff Cup will have to battle with everything it has before it reaches its goal. But you feel that whatever the result may be, no animosity, no ill feeling, will exist between the teams after it is over. You sense that each squad is straining every nerve to win, yet they really enjoy the sport for sport's sake, and not for the glory victory might bring. They get more fun out of playing than out of winning. This spirit is all too rarely shown these days. Hats off to two fine teams. The next set is carded for Wednesday night, and if a third is necessary, it will be played Friday.

THE NEW THEORY

Four man basketball was inaugurated in the upper gym yesterday afternoon as Jr. U.C. defeated Jr. Meds. Our first impression was to wonder where in the world there was room for five man teams in the stunted space under last year's rules. A few minutes after the game started players' faces began to get drawn and haggard with the strain. Then they drew their second wind and four-man basketball appears to be launched on a successful career. There will be more running around under this system, and more winded players, but each man will have enough room to move at least a couple of steps without sprawling all over a fellow human.

INTER FACULTY TEAMS NEEDED

Two teams are still needed to completely round out the groups in interfaculty sport. There is room for one more basketball outfit and another squad of water-poloists. Whatever faculty avails itself of this opportunity will benefit by improving its standing in the T. A. Reed Trophy Race. U.C. should be able to field a second water polo team.

INTERFACULTY MEET TO BE HELD TODAY IN HART HOUSE POOL

Meen and Clawson, U.C. Aces, Compete with School's Northwood and Moffat. Stars Supported by Able Squads

U.C. FAVOURED

This afternoon at 5.00 in the Hart House pool the final swimming meet between Sr. U.C. and Jr. S.P.S. for the interfaculty championship will take place.

Sr. U.C. has a squad filled with aces such as George Meen, former intercollegiate sprint man and God Clawson, who represented Canada in the breast stroke in the 1936 Olympics. Bill Wadds swam breast stroke on last year's intermediate intercollegiate team and Crawford Biggs was a big shot in the sprint division of the U.T.S. swimming club and is still mighty fast. Besides these four stars they have McIntyre, Brett and Patchett, swimmers of no mean ability.

Jr. School's outfit will undoubtedly give their opponents quite a struggle but it just won't be possible for them to win. They are sure only of one first in the 50 back when their super swimmers Johnny Northwood takes to the water and even here there is a "little" doubt as God Clawson will be no chance to take. Al Moffat is another possibility for a School first in the 50 free but so far his time is a second or so under that of his chief opponent, Meen.

U.C. will win the first medley, the 50 breast and the final relay for sure with a 90 per cent chance of taking the 50 free unless Al Moffat reads this and decides he's show up the Varsity staff. The rest of the School natators are Gottlieb, Graham and Rogers, who are fast sprinters and ought to grab off some seconds and thirds. Anyway the Varsity after due consideration calls the final score to be about 20-12, favour of U.C.

SPORT CALENDAR

It will be directed by Mavor Moore. During the interval between the performance of the plays and the presentation of the Cody Award, while the adjudicators are coming to their decision, a dramatization from Dorothy Parker will be given by two graduate students, Frances Halpeny and Evelyn Cook. Miss Halpeny directed last year's winning production, "Mary of Scotland", in which Miss Cook played a leading role.

Tickets for the Drama Festival will be available after Wednesday, January 15, at Hart House Theatre, and from members of the societies concerned.

Score of 7-4 Gives the Senior Doctors Margin Over Senior School as the Season Opens

FUMBLING FIESTA

Not the least abashed by the absence of a Presidential opening heave, Senior Meds and Senior School rang up with gusto the curtain on the interfaculty muddish scene yesterday afternoon. Meds came out on the long end of a 7-4 count.

The Doctors walloped out two runs in the first inning and were never headed. Their big third installment of four runs scuppered School's final threat. Walt Diak turned in a good effort from the pitching box, but his fielding staff's support fumbled a dozen times too often.

Sr. Meds: Fraser, Green, Cowan, Levy, Findlestein, Nash, Mahood, Davey, Reingold.

Sr. S.P.S.: Barry, Jaffe, Robinson, Starr, Edwards, Barrett, Munro, Reynolds, Diak.

The Sportsman

By Betsy Gowen

It has been breathed abroad on our dear campus that now when the soft snow is falling is the time for all ambitious young lads to trot out their badminton togs, tuck their rackets under their arms and see what invigorating and intriguing recreation is to be had whilst hitting that wee white birdie around.

Believe you us, St. Paul's Church courts will make you forget all your worries in an hour, if you remember to inquire first about the mysterious passageways leading to them.

Yes, yes, enthusiasm for that grand old sport was never higher than this year. The only complaint seems to be that studies leave all too little time for it. Victoria reports a good membership of about 21 with a tournament coming up any time now, whereas Trinity tops that number with 31 members, some of whom need a little encouragement to play often, others who promise to be good tournament material.

U.C. haven't counted their members yet but the number is rapidly mounting. St. Mike's players are few in number but great in spirit—so come on O.C. & P. with your six members and keep them company next week when your time table gets readjusted.

Really, girls, it's well worth the trouble—so cheerio, we'll be seeing you on the courts.

ATHLETIC LISTS

List of time and day preferences for all interfaculty term sports, now in the Athletic Office, closes tonight at 6 p.m. List for referees also closes at the same time.

4-MAN BASKETBALL SEEN FOR FIRST TIME

The interfaculty basketball season was ushered in yesterday afternoon when Jr. U.C. defeated Jr. Meds 30-19. A large crowd was on hand to witness the first exhibition of four man basketball in the history of intramural competition.

The Royal Collegians were a smoother team both offensively and defensively and had little difficulty in piling up a 12-7 lead in the first half and widening the margin still further in the final chukker. George Beattie with 12 points to his credit led the Red and White while Bill Dewar was right behind with 6. Zierler and Clayton were U.C.'s defensive stars and they contributed 4 and 2 points respectively.

Davies and Kucherepa led the Doctors' attack with 6 points apiece, and both shared honours as the bad boys of the game, each having two personal fouls called on him. A total of eight personals were called, distributed evenly between the teams.

THE HOAX OF THE CENTURY was perpetrated over the week-end by one of the brighter boys about the campus. . . . He is a member of the C.O.T.C., see, and seldom bothers to turn up at the drills. . . . So he lets it be known to his loving fraternity brothers that the militia officials have finally caught up to him and are sending him to camp for the regulation thirty days' training period. So the fratmen gather around and stage for him the biggest going-away party in living memory. . . . Hoary alumni come to guzzle, and leave wringing him by the hand and wishing him all sorts of good luck in foreign fields. . . . Contemporaries dissolve in tears and soda-water, as they mourn his leave-taking. . . . Confessed he, the next morning when the fratres evinced surprise at seeing him still around school, that the whole thing was cooked up merely to see what his brothers thought of him. . . . You know what they think now, chum.

Sproat explained that taking transfusions from women would involve separate clinics which do not happen to be available at the present time.

However, Dr. Sproat leaves the feminine element not without hope of opportunity for service in this field of patriotic endeavour. He expressed the belief that in the future, clinics for women will be set up, and when they have been, notice will be given in the newspapers.

At the present moment, the only blood clinic in the Dominion is the one located at 410 Sherbourne Street. The number of donors handled there now is in the neighbourhood of 200 a week, but recent innovations and additions have increased that figure to a potential 500.

Imperial screen this week under the title of "Arizona". Once again the sound of hoofbeats and the shrieks of wild Indians rend the air.

IMPERIAL and once again the bore-AZONA dom becomes more intense. It seems that every other week, a super saga of the West comes to the theatre replete with its cast of thousands, and frankly it bores from within as well as from without.

Not that "Arizona" is a lemon. It is a well built picture with some fine performances and excellent direction throughout. But we've seen the same story so often within the past year that it fails to sustain interest. Jean Arthur takes the lead and handles her "Calamity Jane" type of role with complete control.

However, William Holden is miscast as the young hero with the wanderlust bug in his bonnet, and he lacks the strength and virility for the part. Porter Hall is excellent as usual and Warren William is much better than he has been for years. A newcomer named Eugene Buchanan steals the film with a beautiful little characterization of the easy-going judge of the community. "Arizona" belongs to a cycle that is passe. Much better it should be dead.

CRETE IS ESSENTIAL TO EASTERN VICTORY

the distance to Taranto or Valona by some 500 miles. In considering these distances as factors in the operations one must double the mileage, for with the present condition of the Italian fleet every British vessel makes the return journey.

There is no report of the use of other bases than Crete, but Corfu has a spacious deep-water harbor and the neglected island of Cephalonia, off the entrance to the Gulf of Corinth, has possibilities as a naval base that have long caused covetous glances from the British admiralty. These bases have made the blockade of the Dodecanese Islands absolute and it is not thought that they can hold out much longer. One cannot estimate the value of their surrender, but they might make an admirable prison camp for the I.L.L. (Lousy Latin Legions). All Rhodes pleads to Rome for a relief of the siege, while the Italian navy flumes in the Adriatic.

The strategic importance of Greece in any land action combating a German drive further south into the Balkans is practically self-evident. The German drive, likely to be in the typical and successful smash-and-grab style, would have to choose between an attack on Greece aimed at Salonika or a drive to the Dardanelles. If Greece were attacked, the eastern flank of the attack and the supply lines through Bulgaria would be seriously threatened from Turkey, who could not be expected to stand idly by. On the other hand, a German drive to the Dardanelles would be open to similar flanking action from eastern Greece. In practice, the theory, based on the natural advantages of geography, would have to be carried out with the same speed, spirit and strength that has characterized the co-operative campaign in eastern Libya.

At this point I think it wiser and safer to consider the past rather than the future. Our absorption in the present has prevented, for most of us, the interesting recollection that we presented Italy with the various territories from which we are now trying to drive her. In the Treaty of London, 1915, we bargained for Italy's support by promising her, among other things: the outright ownership of the Dodecanese Islands occupied since 1912, a protectorate over Valona and its hinterland, and an extension of her colonial possessions in Africa, which included Bahr and about half of the present Libya.

not just a matter of skipping exams." Les Shemil, IV Chemical, pointed out that "when it comes to a case of defense on the home front, we should think of ourselves as trained Canadians rather than university students."

Several of the senior Schoolmen felt that they knew too little about the proposition yet to venture an opinion.

All were in doubt as to how they would be placed in firms, whether by voluntary application or at the discretion of the government. They were confident, however, that there would be plenty of positions open to them.

Two of those interviewed quoted one of their professors as saying that a "test" is just another word for an examination.

A fourth year man sounded an optimistic note by remarking that it was highly unlikely any men in his year would be failed no matter how their standing was taken.

Norwegian Air Force Men Use Varsity Rifle Range

Early Morning Practices Are Held For These Flyers Who Witnessed Hitler's Invasion Norway Nine Months Ago

TELL EXPERIENCES

By Bill Armstrong

A number of staff officers of the Royal Norwegian Naval Air Force who have been located in Toronto, now use the range of the University of Toronto Rifle Association for their daily practice. Having begun on January 9, the Norwegians are to use the range for the next month or six weeks.

Every morning now as the average Varsity student crawls out of bed to grope over and close the window, half a dozen Norwegians in the Navy blue and brass buttons of their Naval Air Force line up for revolver practice deep in the bowels of Hart House. From eight to nine o'clock or even an hour or so later, they get ready, aim, and fire at targets 25 yards away.

In guttural Norse tones, their instructor, Lieutenant H. Offerdal, explains the finer points of their Vickers service revolver, of stance, aiming and firing.

A few months ago, all of the fliers witnessed Hitler's assault on their country, and all of them faced dangers many times over in the service of their fatherland.

Lieutenant Offerdal was in Norway for four weeks helping his countrymen in their struggle against the German horde let loose against them. For four weeks he took his plane aloft every night in an effort to stem the onslaught. It was at night that he flew because the defending English might have mistaken his Heinkel for a Nazi plane — the Heinkel had been purchased by Norway from Germany prior to the outbreak of hostilities.

Night flying, however, did not mean that Lieutenant Offerdal's work was any the less effective. As well as sinking at least two enemy supply ships, he bombed Nazi troops and airdromes. "When we sank the ships," he was careful to explain, "we radioed our vessels to come and rescue the bombed crew."

After the four heart-breaking weeks had dragged themselves by, bombs and ammunition were completely gone, and the gasoline supply was dangerously low, so the tall, fair-haired young lieutenant loaded his bomber with as many airmen as it could safely carry, and flew to Scotland.

However, Lieutenant Offerdal is not the only one of the target-shooting officers who could spend hours relating his experiences. Each of the others has lived through hours of bitter battle, bells of rage and destruction, and elating moments of brief success.

Five hundred miles from the Norwegian coast, a single hospital ship was making its way to England last June the seventh; nurses and medical officers did their best to make the wounded comfortable. Suddenly seven Nazi bombers dropped out of the blue and aimed between 70 and 80 bombs at the vessel. It was hit. Lieutenant Norbeck, one of the officers on board, was left swimming in the icy waters of the North Sea. Luckily His Majesty's Ship, Argo, was in the vicinity and picked up the survivors—only one of the whole ship-load was lost.

After five days aboard the British destroyer, the Norwegians were docked in England. This morning Lieutenant (Continued on Page 4)

Adjudicators are Chosen For University Drama Festival

CANON ARMSTRONG TO ADDRESS S.C.M.

Ivor Lewis, Edgar Stone and Gilbert Norwood to Judge 1941 Competition for Cody Award

HELD NEXT TUESDAY

"A Christian Philosophy of Work" will be the theme of an address by Canon R. A. Armstrong, to be given today at 1.30 p.m. in the music room at Hart House. This is the first talk in the S.C.M. Wednesday noon hour series for this term on the subject of choosing a career.

Canon Armstrong is the editor of the Canadian Churchman, the official journal of the Anglican Church, and is specially interested in the social implications of Christianity.

The address is designed to be a background for the whole series. Other speakers in the following noon hour addresses will deal with the problem of choosing a life's work from the point of view of the particular professions they represent.

Three adjudicators have been chosen for the University Drama Festival to be held next Tuesday night in Hart House Theatre, the University Drama Committee announced yesterday. They are Ivor Lewis, well known Toronto amateur actor, who has often appeared himself in Hart House; Edgar Stone, former director of Hart House Theatre; and Professor Gilbert Norwood of this university's classics department.

Victoria, Trinity and University Colleges will present plays at the festival. To the society producing what is considered by the adjudicators to be the best performance will be given the Cody Award. This award was won (Continued on Page 4)

Win War on Dance Floor Motif of School At-Home

Bob Shuttleworth's Orchestra will Provide Music; Hillman Brothers Will Entertain; Schoolmen Plan Stunts

MURALS FEATURED

Six variety acts will make up the floor show which will feature the School At Home to be held Friday night at the Royal York Hotel.

The Hillman Brothers, direct from the Brant Inn, will entertain the engineers and their friends with their unusual and breath-taking acrobatic dancing. Another act that promises to be of unusual interest will be the horse races staged by the engineers, possibly with the help of some of their professors.

Other features of the floor show promised by the committee are "singers, dancers and lovely girls."

Still to be revealed are the committee's plans enabling those attending to "win the war on the dance floor." However, definite word has been received that War Savings Stamps will be given away as prizes.

1200 square feet of murals constructed by School architects will fully cover three walls of the hotel ballroom and will be sold at an auction to be held after the dance. Proceeds of the sale will go to the Red Cross.

Bob Shuttleworth's 14-piece orchestra will provide the music for the dance.

Norwegian Guests Tour Museum

Unheralded and escorted only by a lady-in-waiting and a museum attendant, royalty paid a visit to the Royal Ontario Museum yesterday with the intention of causing as little stir as possible, but entirely disrupted an anthropology lecture.

The third year class changed from students to fans when they discovered that the Crown Prince and Princess of Norway were present. Forgetting that their class was then in progress, they traced the royal couple to the third floor and found them in the midst of an Oriental Art display.

Neither Prince Olav nor his princess gave any evidence of surprise at the unusual interest suddenly being shown by University of Toronto students in the Ming Dynasty; and the outburst of Oriental art enthusiasts spent 20 minutes or more strolling casually past Chinese figurines and Norwegian visitors.

"Until now," he said when the students finally arrived, "I had thought that regard for hereditary positions had greatly declined in modern society."

Silver Foil Hoarded on Campus Finds Way to Metal Companies

By Dorothy Bennett

What do you do with your silver paper? Janet Smart, II U.C., said, "Oh, I give my silver paper to the Girl Guides, but I don't know what they do with it." Margaret Worthing, III U.C., stated, "I turn mine in to my fraternity and I think they give it to the I.O.D.E." Most of the girls in Whitney Hall are saving silver paper but few know its ultimate destination.

Personally, we give ours to a little boy, who gives it to his schoolteacher, who gives it to the Guides, who deliver it to the Salvage Committee of the Red Cross, who sell it to a metal company. It all began with the box for silver salvage in the Medical Building. Who collects the paper? Where does it go from there? According to Miss A. J. Eagles, IV Meds, the silver foil must be flat and free from tissue paper, not in a ball. "Nine shipping bags full of silver foil were collected by the end of November just from the Medical Building," said Miss Eagles. "This was

Who stars in William Saroyan's Pulitzer Prize winner, "The Time of Your Life," which plays at the Royal Alexandra Theatre next week. Miss Haydon was in Toronto two years ago playing opposite Sir Cedric Hardwicke in "Shadow and Substance." Co-starring with Miss Haydon in the Saroyan play is Eddie Dowling.

The Local Council of Women, when questioned, stated that they are acting with the Red Cross upon a request from the government and have a collection depot for salvage material at 684 Church Street. Many schools and individuals have turned in quantities of silver paper and foil. This material, when separated into piles according to content such as aluminum or lead, is put up into cartons of forty or fifty pounds and sold to metal companies. Certain aluminum companies melt the salvaged material down and refine it for war work.

So the next time you throw away your cigarette or tobacco package remember the lowly silver foil that could become a vital war metal with your help.

Mercury Dips Campus Shivers

The coldest wave of the winter swept over the campus yesterday, as the mercury plummeted to a new unofficial low of eight degrees below zero. Clear sunny weather accompanied the cold, and an icy breeze blew down from the north to add to the discomfort of building-to-building walks between lectures.

Turned-up coat-collars, pulled-down hats and expressions of grim anguish were typical of students yesterday as they hurried along to the nearest place of warmth.

One or two individuals admitted to having donned red flannels as an extra protection against the chill breezes. Others shunned such effete precautions, and termed the weather "bracing." One particularly hardy sophomore remarked, between sniffs, "Why, this is just like spring, where I come from."

Scheduled drills of the C.O.T.C. Training Centre Battalion were carried out yesterday afternoon. Heavy socks and mittens were in evidence as the student-soldiers were put through their paces by officers who were just as cold as the trainees.

I.S.S.

All students interested as well as representatives of all campus organizations are urged to attend an organizing meeting of a campaign for funds for International Student Service at 4.30 p.m. today in Wymilwood.

STUDENTS TO HEAR PEARCE IN HART HOUSE ADDRESS

Tumult and Shouting On Parliament Hill

About one hundred and fifty government officials, including the Dominion prime minister and nine provincial premiers, gathered in Ottawa yesterday to open a dominion-provincial conference called to deal with one of the biggest questions since the birth of this nation—the redrafting of Confederation to relieve “the growing stresses and strains in inter-government relations.” There will take place during the next few weeks the much-anticipated debate on the recommendations of the Sirois report on dominion-provincial relations. The atmosphere attendant upon the gathering of the conference, and the events of the first day, are not of a nature to inspire confidence in the possibility of any concrete results.

Our newspapers are filled with reports of conference proceedings, and despite the pessimistic note struck with the unveiling of the curtain, Canadians owe it to themselves and their country to follow the trends in the capital. The Varsity has endeavored on several previous occasions to give a general summary of the report and the issues involved. Briefly, the basic proposals are that the dominion will assume responsibility for unemployment relief for employables and will assume entire provincial debts, while the provinces will in turn give up present subsidies, and will withdraw from the income, inheritance and corporation tax fields. National adjustment grants will be paid to the provinces to ensure the maintenance of a national average of services without oppressive sectional taxation.

The attitude with which provincial premiers and ministers have journeyed to the conference is unfortunate for its future, we feel. The emphasis has been on provincial rights as against national Canadian welfare, and there has been a general attitude of “Well, how much can we get.” In the opening day's activities there appeared to be little of the friendly and intelligent cooperation and compromise in deliberations for which Prime Minister King appealed. From several sections, from Ontario in particular, determined opposition to the adoption of the report has been sounded from the outset, and the press is already talking about the “death knell” having been laid upon the conference.

We have not the intention of supporting or criticizing either case in this editorial. Previously we stated we were in sympathy with the general idea of recasting our federal structure, but that the means of recasting so far presented might not be sound throughout and might not establish a much firmer structure. It is our opinion, however, that there should be a sharp change in the attitude of our public men now gathered at Ottawa to consider the problem. The only thing that can be achieved by a critical, bickering attitude when proceedings are only getting under way is complete sabotage—and it is unfortunate and difficult to believe that anyone would attempt sabotage of a gathering bearing so much importance for Canada's future, no matter what their feelings on the subject. Far better to discuss calmly and quietly as befits the adult nation we profess to be. Far better to discuss thus, even though hope of complete adoption of the report is flickering, for only by such cooperative discussion will some more acceptable plan be evolved, and only in this way will sectional and provincial understanding and sympathy be developed further. That, after all, is what we need in Canada today, and it is the true vehicle for any recasting of Confederation.

Trouble for the Nazis

Germany has overrun a considerable portion of Europe in the course of this war. Numerous once-independent countries lie prostrate beneath her feet, exhausted by lightning war, excessive cruelty, and economic deprivation by the Nazi masters. The picture looks black, and yet stories are constantly leaking out to the brightness of the outside world which indicate that all is not simple for the new masters of countries such as Poland and others which have fallen in the path of war. Constant sabotage, carried out by the supposedly crushed peoples, is said to be impeding greatly production for Germany's war effort. The people just won't be crushed.

In occupied France and the Low Countries sabotage has been reported as increasing in volume, and it has worried the Nazis considerably. One story is told by a correspondent in a current national magazine which, although perhaps exaggerated, illustrates what is going on. Apparently the sabotage by French workers in a huge plane factory turning out aircraft for Germany was mounting steadily, cutting down production, and in the process killing off innumerable German test pilots. A secret Nazi order went out: “We'll use French test pilots.” Somehow the workers got wind of it, called off the sabotage, and produced planes to be tested. The Nazis called for French test pilots, the pilots clambered into the planes, zoomed off and headed for England. (You don't believe it? Well, we're not so sure either.)

In this connection a refugee student from Poland, now studying at the University of Toronto, has some interesting stories to tell about activities in his native land, almost forgotten by the spread of the war to new and far-flung fronts. He points out that the importance of the underground anti-German activities and sabotage now going on in these countries will not be fully realized until an open fight is fought with the Germans on the European continent. It is an element which must not be forgotten, and it is an element which can be counted on. The refugee states that about three million people have died in the occupied part of Poland. He says: “It is wrong however to assume that the people are too terrorized to practice sabotage. The Germans always have been and are now hated in Poland, and there is no compromise with them.”

Don't We Have Fun !!

Yesterday we were thumbing through the New Yorker, which we always thumb through to absorb sophistication and cosmopolitan atmosphere, when we found the following tidbit in an article on the activities of Verne Marshall's office:

“Once we caught sight of Mr. Fisk, we thought better of interrupting him. He was speaking to a pink-complexioned youth with a pad and pencil. ‘I'm from the Princetonian,’ the young man was saying, ‘and we desire to obtain news of your activities.’”

It was wise of the New Yorker's man, obviously a sallow-checked, sunken-eyed reporter such as we see in the movies, to refrain from interrupting the pink-complexioned, health-radiating Princeton journalist. And as for the method of approach—we can just picture the New Yorker's man brushing aside the score of secretaries and suavely entering Mr. Marshall's office with a breezy “Slip me the dope, son” as he drops his cigarette ash on the rug.

Haydn Hamburger

Hart House String Quartet

Debussy and Sibelius came off very well last night; Haydn not so well. The Quartet was in fine fettle for the first and last numbers, but Haydn, squashed in the middle, was evidently suffering from lack of preparation. The program opened with the Debussy Quartet in D Minor. The pizzicato sections of the second movement were well done with beautiful synchronization, but the climax in the third movement, an evanescent shimmering of the time of the afternoon of a Faun. The tonal subtleties and Debussy open harmonies, the ethereal feeling beclouding the movement, were deeply satisfying. The last movement is almost atonal in its beginning and as violent a contrast to the third as could be conceived.

It has always been somewhat of a puzzle why instrumentalists sometimes, after playing a difficult

GREAT HALL COFFEE

Toronto (CUP) — It was reliably reported that late last night a bomber appeared over Whitney Hall. Obviously on a reconnaissance flight, the crew had such great difficulty in getting pictures that the girls were forced to assemble on the roof with flashlights turned upon themselves.

The plane then drifted desultorily on a down draught while the Chief Officer developed the negatives in a secret synthetic labelled Great Hall Coffee.

Suddenly, the girls who waited on the roof with frigid patience heard with fear and foreboding (but mostly foreboding) a shriek of derision, a guttural groan and a cry of “We're wastin' our time!”, with which the plane leaped high in the air and departed.

All hope gone, the girls extinguished their binnacle fires and filed sadly back to their rooms. But at that moment a deep-throated whine denoted the plane's return post haste. Springing to battle stations once again, this time prepared, the girls paved the roof with bed sheets and formed letters thereupon with appendices to the Sirois Report. Selections varied. No code was used. “Fri?” “Sat?” “Friend?”

The crew, it now seems likely, had inadvertently snapped the wrong scene, obtaining by error a cranial cameo of a Trinity freshman leaning from the fifth floor of his Harbor Street haven to stare at his gown. The only casualty of the evening occurred when the freshman, startled by the noise of the returning aircraft, dropped his gown. Unfortunately, he had forgotten to remove it while dusting.

Joe Le Beau

number on a program, “blow up” in the next which may not be nearly so hard. It is no reflection on Haydn to say that his Quartet, opus 76, No. 1, was the easiest selection of the evening. Unfortunately, it was obvious from the beginning of the first movement that Mr. Levey was not at ease. He muffed runs that were really not difficult and altogether did not fit in with the other three instruments who were, by the way, making a marvellous job of Haydn. Although Mr. Levey picked up somewhat in the latter movements, he never showed off with his perfection for the rest of the evening. It is a pity that he did not feel like playing Haydn because this is one of his most dainty quartets, very contrapuntal and especially interesting in the Minuet with its odd scherzo-like phrases and the rollicking Finale.

The highlight of the evening (and the redemption for the Haydn) was the Voces Intimae Quartet of Sibelius. The idea of the title is appropriate to any quartet, but particularly so to this with its central third movement of extreme introspection. If completely understood, it would probably express completely Sibelius' philosophy for it is intensely personal. The north is in it, and Sibelius' son is of the north. When the wild Allegro which closes the quartet arrived, Mr. Levey (and everyone else) showed us what real quartet synchronization was. Fast unison passages for three instruments, except for tone colour, sounded as one; the ‘cello skipped around smoothly where it should have been an impossibility. Like all the rest of this Sibelius Quartet, the last movement was perfect and provided a perfect ending to what, in spite of its limitations was a most enjoyable evening.

I would like to go on record with strong approval of the arrangement which the Hart House uses of God Save the King. It proves that one can be musically as well as patriotic.

Speaking OF SPORT

By Owen Prichard

A NEW FEACHAH!

Somewhere on this page (just where is left to the not-too-tender mercies of the nightditties) you may have noted a new box entitled "Sport in Short", under which head we propose to list from day to day the results of the quotidian contests in interfaculty sport. Our aim is to supply our reader (bless his heart) with a concise statement of the who-what-and-who-won of the previous day's goings on in the intramural loop.

From time to time the team standings by groups in the various sports will also be listed, along with scoring records of the individual players. This method of regularly listing current athletic statistics is a new departure for the page three department, and the sports staff hopes that it will fill a need for an at-a-glance summary of the daily doings of Varsity sport.

THE FINAL VOLLEY

Although the Dents volleyball outfit defeated Emmanuel 15-9 and 16-14 in the first of their two-out-of-three matches, this column is going to don the swami's outfit and polish up the goldfish bowl to make a rash prediction; namely that the Bearcats will win their first intramural championship this year, and that in volleyball. There is one nice thing about predicting long shots; you feel so swell if they win. But what we think are sounder reasons follow.

Firstly, no one conceded the Theologs an even chance at the opening of the finals, and since they were playing with a certain amount of defeatism, they proved easy pickings for the Molarmen, who trounced them 15-9 in the first game of the evening. The Purple and Gold gained a spot of confidence in the second tussle, and had the Tooth-Tuggers at game point four times before bowing out at 16-14.

Secondly, there are rumours of a slight change in playing personnel which is also expected to help the Emmanuel cause. There is no denying that Dents are a stellar aggregation of volleyballers, but the setting-up work and spiking of the sterling Kitchen-Art Hamilton line was nothing short of sensational.

Anybody would be ready for a nice quiet room with bars and padded walls who would under-rate the powerful Dents squad, either offensively or defensively, yet in spite of their wonderful showing last Monday, they will certainly be extended by the Theologs in tonight's encounter, and the Garnet and Blue may be due for an upset.

However it turns out, the game tonight at 7:30 has all the makings of a real contest between two grand teams. (Incidentally, Doug "Sports Splashes" Green, who boldly called U.C. to win yesterday's meet, even prophesying the score, has crawled out from his hiding place behind a coral reef in Hart House pool to join me in these predictions since he is on the Emmanuel team. I will join him shortly at the bottom of the Pool.)

MAKE WAY FOR THE IRISH

This term will see the Double Blue of St. Mike's very much in evidence in the interfaculty scene. The Irish have entered five basketball teams, a great contribution to the groups seeing that so many of the top-rank St. Mike's basketballers are playing in city leagues. Two hockey teams will also carry the Double Blue colours this winter, and two baseball teams and a possible ski team. We congratulate Athletic Director Jack Ronayne on the way he is getting as many as possible of the St. Michael's Collegians participating in some branch of sport.

Junior School Shuts Out U.C. in Hockey Opener

ST. MIKE'S DEFEAT TRINITY, MEDS AND SCHOOLMEN TIE, IN BASEBALL YESTERDAY

A win and a tie was the story of the two baseball tiffs which were played in the big gym yesterday afternoon. St. Mike's A got a handy win over Trinity, taking the Anglicans into camp by a 6-2 margin.

In the second joust, Meds III literally walked to a 4-4 tie with S.P.S. IV. Parchello took the mound for the Engineers, and turned in a no-hit performance, but four walks which he gave to the Medicos were capitalized upon by the Men in White, with a 4-all deadlock as the result. The Medsman scored three tallies in the second frame, and added the tying run in the final inning. Two and two in the first and third was the Engineers' side of the score-card.

ROYAL YORK TO BE SCENE, VALENTINE'S DAY DATE OF COMING DENTAL FROLIC

The students of the Faculty of Dentistry will hold their annual at-home on Valentine's Day, February 14th. "As in the past few years the dance will be held at the Royal York Hotel," stated Ab Effe, Chairman of the Dance Committee. Mr. Effe, producer of the 1940 Dentauntics show, promises that this will be the best dance ever held. The Dental students will cast aside their forceps and drills to dance to the sweet rhythm of Frank Bogart and his Orchestra, who played last summer at the Brant Inn. Bogart is also well known around the campus, having played last fall at the U.C. Follies, and Pharmacy's Junior Ball.

Engineers Show Midseason Form to Whip Royal College in One-sided Tilt at Arena Yesterday

SCORE 2-0

Jr. School opened the 1941 hockey season by blanking U.C. Firsts 2-0 at the Arena yesterday afternoon in a game that they might have won by twice as much.

The Engineers were complete masters of the play throughout the whole contest. Only the miraculous work of McCulloch in the Royal College nets kept the score down as low as it was. This blood, nonchalant net custodian spent more time belly-flopping to the ice to smother driving pucks than leaning on the goalpost.

S.P.S. were vastly superior in their rushing offense, combining in mid-season form on many occasions. U.C. tried hard with individual rushes but any attempt at passing was woefully weak.

Luck and McCulloch kept the Engineers off the score sheet until late in the final period. Then Long John Simpson took a pass from Don Grosskurth and shot. McCulloch stopped the shot, but Rowland picked up the rebound and banged it in.

Moments later Simpson again took the rubber into the U.C. zone and slipped a pass to McLaughlin for the second goal.

U.C. I: McCulloch, Davey, Alcombrack, Rowat, Laidlaw, Nicol, Ledingham, Nichol, Gibson.

Jr. S.P.S.: Winn, Grosskurth, Douglas, Penoyer, McLaughlin, Dickie, Spence, Hamilton, Seymour, Rowland, Simpson.

VICTORIA HOOPSTERS OUTSCORE U.C. TEAM

The hardest-working man on the floor in the upper gym yesterday was referee Fraser Allen, who played a symphony on his whistle as he called the personals in the scrambleball tussle which Vic III won by outscoring University College III 37-15.

The contest was the Scarlet and Gold's all the way as Grant Baker swished the twine for 11 points to lead his team-mates to their initial victory of the season. The experienced Eddie Rice was the other high scorer for Victoria, with seven points scored before he had to come out of the fray, having twisted his knee in a crash against the end wall. Every Vic player crashed the scoring columns in this game.

The over-anxious checking of the Red and White added up to 15 free throws awarded to the Victorians. The winners themselves were lavish in this matter, being nixed for 11 free tries on personals and technicals.

U.C. III: Brown, Hunter (1), White (2), Lichtig, Bitove (5), Kelter (4), Hall (3), Duncan, Wood, Waisglass.

Vic III: Rice (7), McArthur (2), Baker (11), K. Sully (1), R. Sully (3), Paton (1), Nixon (6), Waugh (6).

DENTS DOWN SAINTS IN BASKETBALL TILT

Jumping into an early lead in the first half, the Dents A basketball squad held its margin over St. Mike's A team, emerging victors by a final score of 30-21 in yesterday's encounter in the Upper Gym.

The Irish started slowly, and were outplayed in the first half by the smaller, but efficient Molarmen. Easily the star of the game was the Dents freshman basketballer, Saltzman, who tallied a dozen of his side's points.

The Molarmen were leading 13-7 at the interval, following which the Gaels put up some determined resistance, also potting some baskets to climb within hailing distance of the Tooth-tuggers. But the weaving rushes of Jack Mullett, combined with the accurate sniping of McColl and Saltzman, staved off the threat from the Double Blue.

Dunn and Podcay, with nine and seven points respectively, shared the scoring honours among the Bay Street boys.

St. Mike's A: Murphy (1), Curry, Callan, Podcay (7), Guerinot, Dunn (9), Kennedy, Kittle (4).

Dents A: McColl (9), Hamby (2), Scott, Mullett (7), Saltzman (12).

Bill Moffatt, Outstanding Star of the Meet, Sparkplug of Engineers' Unpredicted Rush to Victory

U.C. DESERVES CREDIT

By Doug Green

Well the unbelievable happened, and the trophies on the S.P.S. mantel are being re-arranged to make room for another championship, after their triumph yesterday over the highly-touted University College natators.

Jr. School's swimming squad came through to take the final meet by an 18-15 score when they splashed through to a close victory in the final four-man relay breaking the 15-all tie, and taking the meet.

Bill Moffatt was unquestionably the individual star of the meet when he did the 50 free in the fast time of 25.6 which victory gave Jr. School a fighting chance to come out on top. Nobody but Jr. School thought they could win the final relay since it had been scientifically figured out by The Varsity, that the U.C. squad of Axon, Biggs, Clawson and Meen average one second faster per man than the foursome of Moffatt, Muller, Gottlieb and Northwood from School. This would mean an almost insurmountable obstacle in a 50 yard sprint, to anyone but S.P.S. who didn't seem to mind this handicap at all but won by over two yards. Ged Clawson, U.C.'s anchor man put on a brilliant sprint and won back several yards but his opponents' lead was too great to be overcome.

U.C. started strongly when their medley squad of Harold Axon, Bill Waddis and Crawford Biggs took control and raked in the first three points when they defeated Dave Rogers, Charlie Rimmer and Tommy Graham of School. Johnny Northwood and Julian Brace, evened the count when they finished on both sides of Ged Clawson of the losers, who came in a close second. The time of 30.8 is the fastest done in the 50 back since the pool opened, probably.

Clawson got his revenge, in the 50 breast, when he coasted in, well in front of Northwood and Rimmer, both of School, who finished second and third. This left the score 12-9 in favour of U.C. at the end of the third event. In was do or die for S.P.S. when the short sprint was called, for a victory by U.C. would have given them 17 points necessary for a win, and no power on earth could have helped them then. Bill Moffatt, the long shot, simply had to win, and he did, but by a hair's breadth, for George Meen was mighty close, and roaring in behind him came Morris Gottlieb, who collected another point for the winners. Then came the last event, the relay and a well-earned victory for S.P.S.

U.C. deserves plenty of credit and lived up to all expectations in putting up a terrific struggle. Biggs was mighty game in his two laps, in spite of being slightly sick from two previous tough races, and Axon, Meen and Clawson simply flew through the water. Gottlieb of School was really good and did his two sprints about 2.5 seconds faster than ever before, and Dick Muller must have done the same since he held his opponent in the same race.

Results:

150 medley: 1. U.C., Axon, Waddis, Biggs. Time 1:38.5.

50 back: 1. Northwood, S.P.S.; 2. Clawson, U.C.; 3. Brace, S.P.S. Time 30.8.

50 breast: 1. Clawson, U.C.; 2. Northwood, S.P.S.; 3. Rimmer, S.P.S. Time 33.5.

50 free: 1. Moffatt, S.P.S.; 2. Meen, U.C.; 3. Gottlieb, S.P.S. Time 25.6.
200 relay: 1. S.P.S., Moffatt, Muller, Gottlieb, Northwood. Time 1:47.

be dealt with exclusively from a curricular point of view.This debate will be the third in the

By Reuven Frank

(A Canadian University Press Feature)

For Sale—Cheap

NEW YORK—There were once a few Dutchmen and a tribe of Indians, and if you have not heard the story then your education has been neglected.The Dutchmen, being very shrewd and canny traders, bought Manhattan Island from the Indians for an indefinite price, generally conceded to be about six blankets, twenty iron hatchets, and an indefinite quantity of beads. Since Manhattan Island (New York proper) is probably the most valuable piece of real estate in the world today, the Dutchmen have been regarded by generations of gaping Gothamite schoolchildren as examples of astuteness, second only to H. Ford and A. Carnegie.
Moreover, had these Dutchmen come to the country with only the shirts on their backs, they would have been the "American ideals" and their descendants would be leaders of thought and opinion and quoted in the newspapers about subjects regarding which they were in total ignorance.But all this is pure speculation. The fact remains that the billions of dollars worth of rocky ground that lies in the Hudson River between Baker's Field and the Staten Island Ferry was knocked down by an unknown primitive chieftain to some almost equally anonymous Hollanders for a trivial sum, even though the quantity of beads involved is indeterminate. Our Dutch ancestors, say New York's Irish and Poles and Italians, as if they ever had any, sure put over a deal on them there Indians.
When along came the researchers in history—probably from Brooklyn.
They delved and they rummaged and they consulted and they cogitated. Then they debunked, as all historical researchers must. And it was a sad day for the Irish and Polish and Italian descendants of the old Dutch settlers.
It was discovered that the Indians had put across the clever deal, and had made a clear profit of six blankets, twenty iron hatchets and sundry beads.
For it seems that they didn't own Manhattan Island in the first place.That, children, was how the Brooklyn Bridge was first sold.Today, if you look quibbly enough, you can buy the new Queen's Midtown Tunnel, the Empire State Building, the Sixth Avenue Subway or a half interest in the Hudson River for a ridiculously low sum. And it is being done every day: no one bothers with gold bricks down here. The strange fact about it all is that the Brooklyn Bridge itself was rarely, if ever, sold.The owner, he said, was not willing to part with it.But what he would do, since you were an honest looking fellow and he had a cousin who lived ten miles from your home town, would be to sell you the toll rights, since he was too busy to look after it himself. I have met people who knew people who bought toll rights for this, that and the other insignificant sums and tried to exercise toll rights but were interrupted by the notoriously unsympathetic police. Or, you could buy the exclusive right to sell papers on the Bridge, and I met theowner of a man who was so badly beaten up by the other newsboys while trying to exercise his monopoly that his family didn't recognize him.Strangely enough, I have never met the victims themselves. The stranger is still fair game in New York.The other end of the sucker game is played by the small-time hawkers, the auctioneers, and the plain, unadulterated moochers. Of the latter group, the most interesting is he who presses his nose against the restaurant window and watches you eat with hungry eyes. If his eyes don't tell their story our hungry friend drools. It can become rather disturbing after a while, and you cannot really enjoy the first steak in two weeks if the poor unfortunate is watching, even if you know he is just a chiseller. A friend of mine, rather than take the coward's way out and not sit by the window, presses his nose to the obverse of the window, staring straight into the other fellow's eyes.
The latter goes slightly cock-eyed and gives up, cursing.Usually, the contact is more intimate and immediate."Have you got a cigarette, bud?"
Bud has a cigarette."Say, bud, I hate to rub it in, but have you got a match, too?"Bud has a match, too, and by this time there is a feeling of camaraderie springing up.

"Say, listen, bud . . ."

Well, if Bud is sucker enough to stick it out this far, he is through.
It may be anything from a nickel subway-fare to several dollars to get an heirloom out of hock. This is sheer profit, but the cigarette pays double.
He squinches his cigarette as soon as Bud disappears from view, and sells the butts three for a penny down at the flophouse where he sleeps.So, take my advice, Bud. Give him a cigarette, if your heart is in the right place. But never, oh never, give him a match.Of course the approach differs with the individual.A swain, strolling through the Fifties with his lady love, and swelling with a feeling of all's right with the world was accosted by a disreputable-looking character in search of alms. (All this is "so help me")"Look here," he said, reeling, "I'm not going to tell you I want doughnuts and coffee. But if you could spare a dime for a glass of beer or two bits for a suifter of hooch I'd appreciate it plenty."This attack was, to say the least, out of the ordinary, and the overwhelming
frankness so overwhelmed the swain
(and his lady love was there beside
him) that he reached for a quarter and contributed it to the cause. Then the lad and the lass strolled down towards Broadway. About half a block away, they were overcome with curiosity: they turned around to see what bar the worthy would patronize . . .. . . and they saw him entering the nearest coffee-and-doughnut stand.Valiant" by Middlemass and Hall;

let's go places

Nearly everybody ends up with a different personality in "East of the River", showing at Shea's this week.
Little Italy in New York is the scene;
the story is about a gangster (John Gar-dubill Bill field) who has a moll (Brenda Marshall), and a white-haired adopted brother who would look good in any Horatio Alger volume. The moll reforms, the earnest brother falls in love with her, and the gangster turns noble in time to keep from leaving you with the impression that he is the laziest supreme. Garfield turns in a faultless performance as the tough guy, and Marjorie Rambeau presents a consistent bit of characterization as the boy's mother. The music is well suited to the action of the piece."She Couldn't Say No" is nothing but a come-on title for an entertaining farce about a boy lawyer and a girl lawyer who are in love with each other despite his objection to career women.
The climax comes (you guessed it) when the pair find themselves on opposing sides in a breach of promise suit conducted in a hick-town by a cast of rustic citizens left over from some Chic Sale comedy. The plaintiff and the defendant are reconciled: ditto the boy and girl lawyers. Like most of the characters, the humour is truly rural.
—O.P.The other end of the sucker game is played by the small-time hawkers, the auctioneers, and the plain, unadulterated moochers. Of the latter group, the most interesting is he who presses his nose against the restaurant window and watches you eat with hungry eyes. If his eyes don't tell their story our hungry friend drools. It can become rather disturbing after a while, and you cannot really enjoy the first steak in two weeks if the poor unfortunate is watching, even if you know he is just a chiseller. A friend of mine, rather than take the coward's way out and not sit by the window, presses his nose
to the obverse of the window, staring
straight into the other fellow's eyes.
The latter goes slightly cock-eyed and gives up, cursing.Usually, the contact is more intimate
and immediate."Have you got a cigarette, bud?"
Bud has a cigarette."Say, bud, I hate to rub it in, but have you got a match, too?"Bud has a match, too, and by this time there is a feeling of camaraderie
springing up.

"Say, listen, bud . . ."

Well, if Bud is sucker enough to stick it out this far, he is through.
It may be anything from a nickel subway-fare to several dollars to get an heirloom out of hock. This is sheer profit, but the cigarette pays double.
He squinches his cigarette as soon as Bud disappears from view, and sells the butts three for a penny down at the flophouse where he sleeps.So, take my advice, Bud. Give him a cigarette, if your heart is in the right place. But never, oh never, give him
a match.Of course the approach differs with the individual.A swain, strolling through the Fifties
with his lady love, and swelling with a feeling of all's right with the world
was accosted by a disreputable-looking character in search of alms. (All this is "so help me")"Look here," he said, reeling, "I'm not going to tell you I want doughnuts and coffee. But if you could spare a dime for a glass of beer or two bits for a suifter of hooch I'd appreciate it
plenty."This attack was, to say the least, out of the ordinary, and the overwhelming
frankness so overwhelmed the swain
(and his lady love was there beside
him) that he reached for a quarter and contributed it to the cause. Then the lad
and the lass strolled down towards Broadway. About half a block away,
they were overcome with curiosity: they turned around to see what bar the worthy would patronize . . .. . . and they saw him entering the nearest coffee-and-doughnut stand.Valiant" by Middlemass and Hall;

Murder Trial for Law Lights

Law Students Enact Real Murder Trial as Part of Course. Complete Trappings of Court

As the zero hour approaches, new heights of excitement and activity are being reached among the eighty undergraduates of the Department of Law. The zero hour in this case is the going over the top for the big murder trial which will come before Chief Justice W. P. Rogers and twelve true jurors in the Moot Court of the University of Toronto at 7:30, January 28 in the U.C. Junior Common Room.

On this fateful diem, Thaddeus D. Lodestone, alias Walter Williston, IV Law, will be tried for the murder of his beloved wife Prudence. Hence the common expression at the Law Building these days, "Who killed poor Prudence?" The accused will be defended by Harold Robinson, IV Law, and the junior member of the firm, Charles Scott, II Law. Acting for the Crown will be Norman Christopherson, IV Law, and his assistant, Bryant Kassirer, II Law. These embryo lawyers will have a renowned reputation to uphold for more than a few counsels in former trials are now distinguished members of the Ontario Bar.

Highlights of the proceedings will include the difficult task of selecting a jury from first year that will satisfy both parties, the technical evidence of "Doctor" Robert Sterling Wiley Campbell, the not-so-technical evidence of the coloured janitor Sandy World, and the startling disclosure which is rumoured will be made by the deceased's French maid Yvette Ladouceur, alias Shirley Hill. The trial will be conducted with all due formality and the learned Chief Justice and counsel will be appropriately garbed in gown and winged collar. The public will be allowed.

MOVIES OF SUN VALLEY AT SKI CLUB MEETING

Movies of skiing in Sun Valley are to be the central feature of the University Ski Club's first open meeting of 1941 at five o'clock this afternoon in room 111 of the Meds Building.

All the faculties are busy organizing ski teams for competition, but the Ski Club is also interested in the hundreds of other skiers around the campus, the competitors of the future, and of course, the co-eds, competitive and otherwise. For these it plans to provide free instruction. It claims to provide about the best skiing terrain within 30 miles of Toronto, and there is talk about providing buses for the transport of those who are unable to get hold of cars.

Students of the whole University are welcome to come this afternoon and find out what goes on in the Ski Club.

COEDS APPEAR INVENTIVE WHEN IT COMES TO GLOVES

Practicality plus novelty is the trend in cold hand-gear fashions this season. Eleanor Weir, first year O.T., leads the parade with a pair of white rabbit skins on the monumental scale. "I've been wearing them since October," she said, "and when the palms wear out, I'm going to replace them with leather." She showed the versatility of the O.T. course by expounding proposed methods of cleaning her furs, suggesting bread crumbs, orris root, corn meal.

Jean Christie, second year O.T., wears a pair of white kid boxing mitts for skating and skiing. They are so warm and so smart that one can overlook their cumbersome size in holding epistles, she said.

From Newfoundland come the ladies' edition of rural driving gauntlets in beige leather and a lambs-wool fabric,

Mackie Outlines Plans Of I.S.S. War Work

Students Are Being Helped in Many Countries — Refugees and Internees from War Areas

POST-WAR POLICY

A university-wide campaign was planned at a meeting for the International Student Service representatives of most of the student organizations on the campus in Wymillwood yesterday. Publicity, posters, pamphlets, letters and personal solicitations will be employed in this drive on February 5th in aid of student war sufferers.

Rev. Robert Mackie, general-secretary of the W.S.C.F., spoke on the need and purpose for I.S.S. work. He described the plight of students trekking into the interior of China, behind the barbed wire of German prison camps, in Swiss internment camps, and as refugees in (Continued on Page 4)

FLORIDA BIOLOGIST TO SPEAK AT CLUB

Dr. C. J. Rogers of the University of Florida will speak at the Biology Club meeting at Wymillwood tonight at 7:30. Dr. Rogers, who is taking the place of Professor Harkness of the biology department, will speak on "Biological Collecting at Night in the Eastern United States." The talk will consist mainly of tales of the field work which Dr. Rogers has done, particularly in Florida.

Doctor Rogers is interested mainly in spiders, their habits and homes, it was learned. In his study of spiders he has encountered great dangers especially with crocodiles or other dangerous specimens.

This is the second of four meetings which the Biology Club will hold this year. They also plan to have a party or dance later on in the year.

LORETTO COLLEGE AT-HOME AT ROYAL YORK TONIGHT

Under the patronage of President Cody the traditional annual Loretto College At-Home will be held on Thursday, January 16, in the roof-garden of the Royal York Hotel.

Decorations are to feature blue and white, the school colours. According to Miss Audrey Devlin who is convening the dance, about sixty-five couples are expected to attend. Music will be presented by Bob Shuttleworth's orchestra.

A number of novelty dances will include lucky number and spot dances. A coffee party at which the dean and staff will receive is to be held in the college at 8:30 p.m. before the dance.

COEDS APPEAR INVENTIVE WHEN IT COMES TO GLOVES

Rosemary Squires, I Pass U.C. wears. She thinks they're fine for this climate as well as for the windy east. Spotted on the campus was another pair of gauntlets, in which embroidered blanket cloth, and rumors are abroad of fabric gloves, of a more delicate type for dressy occasions with red finger-nails painted on them.

And Helen Hoffinger, II Pass U.C., besides wearing ski-mitts, valued for their ability to keep the draft out of loose coat sleeves, wears long red finger nails, real ones, because they don't burn when your cigarette gets short!

Hand knit mitts and gloves in wool and angora are seen almost everywhere, and leather gloves in spite of the lack of insulation remain with the conservative.

SUNOAY CONCERT

Eighty single tickets which will admit men students only to the Sunday Evening Concert to be held in the Great Hall on Sunday next, 19th January, will be issued at the hall porter's desk after 1 p.m. today.

PHOTOGRAPH EXHIBIT OPENS NEXT WEEK

"An undetermined number" of prints submitted in the Hart House Annual Exhibition of Photographs are added to the House's permanent collection each year, an official informed The Varsity yesterday.

The Exhibition, which is to be held in the Hart House Art Gallery commencing Tuesday, January 21st, is the nineteenth under the auspices of the Camera Committee of Hart House.

There will be two divisions in the display — senior and junior; and photographs are to be entered under one of the following classifications: Pictorial, Record, Scientific and Nature.

Any member of Hart House may enter prints, subject to certain rules contained on the application forms which are obtainable at the Porter's Desk in Hart House.

Students Start Losing--- Anything May Turn Up

Best Time for Rarest Collections is After Social Function. Co-eds Are Very Absent-minded

MUCH UNCLAIMED

"Finders keepers, losers weepers." Does not seem to be true of the students who lose things on this campus. In fact, judging from the number of lost articles collected in the offices of the various buildings, it appears that some students are rather indifferent about claiming their possessions.

"Sometimes articles are not claimed even after we have advertised them," Mr. Scott at the caretakers' office in University College told The Varsity. A record is kept of all the things which are found in the building and most of them are claimed before the end of the year. This week a scarf which was lost last November was claimed. Gloves, starves, pens, notebooks, and keys seem to be the things that students find easiest to leave in classrooms.

The Hall Porter's desk is the haven for articles lost in Hart House and a list of the things which are turned in is posted there. Usually after a dance there is an imposing collection of feminine accessories which are called for by embarrassed men.

Dolls and other toys found in Hart House were not the property of Pass Arts as rumoured, but were left by British children quartered there during the summer. Articles of clothing which are unclaimed by the end of the year are turned over to the University Settlement. Last year a sheepskin individual in stocking feet tip took up to (Continued on Page 4)

Canon Armstrong In S.C.M. Series

Speaker Stresses Need for Consistency in Daily Human Conduct — Christianity in Business

Speaking on the topic of "A Christian Philosophy of Work" at the S.C.M. Wednesday noon hour address yesterday Canon R. A. Armstrong emphasized the necessity of applying Christian principles to business. Explaining how this Christian social order is to be achieved he said, "The only true source of good will is Christ."

The speaker pointed out the inconsistency between the home and business life of many men. In their own home they seek to live a Christian life but when they go to work they have a "grabbing" attitude and think only of their own gain.

Considering the practical details of a Christian order in the economic world he referred to various statements of the Archbishop of York. This distinguished cleric advocated that labour should have a louder voice in the control of industry than capital. He also described the practice whereby the interest on certain loans continues indefinitely as "ludicrous."

The Canon explained that education and culture have failed to realize a state of good will in the world. Only by the spirit of God in them can men achieve this goal.

The talk was the first of this term's noon hour series on the topic "Your Job and God."

S.P.S. LIFE FEATURE OF MURALS AT DANCE

Deep down in the dark Stygian depths of the basement of the School building half a dozen hardy students have been working during the Christmas holidays and the better part of January. No—they have not been studying, they have been painting the 1200 square feet of murals for the School At-Home.

The boys practically lived there with paint brush in one hand and hammer in the other. Tools were laid down only long enough for a few hours' sleep or to nip out and buy a bottle of milk from a passing milk wagon.

These murals depict the life of School in its many phases working and playing in serious or in jocund mood. The chap who went swimming in the hydrobath is there. So too is Professor Arthur who was taken out tobogganing by his 'class to break his leg.

A representative was sent around to all the departments to spy out the most typical and outstanding incidents of the year.

STUDENTS KNOW LITTLE OF SROIS REPORT

In answer to the question, "What do you think of the Rowell-Sirois Report?" a shocking ignorance seems to prevail on the campus, especially among engineers and first year students of most other faculties.

John Jackson of I Trinity, when asked what he thought, replied "I don't." A wordier version of the same brain-wave was pronounced by Marg Hogarth of I English Lang. and Lit.: "Tell me what it is and I'll make a bright statement," blushed she, pleading lest her previous remarks on the subject be published. And again, "Don't quote me," exclaimed Bob Harris, Med Frosh, with his usual scholarly aloofness.

Among those who had considered the matter was Earl Brown of II Law. "The Varsity should be commended for

Rev. Dr. Frank Langford Succumbs to Heart Attack

Secretary of Board in Charge of Emmanuel College Had Just Led Emmanuel Student Service

BROTHER REGISTRAR

Students of Victoria College in general and Emmanuel College in particular were shocked to learn late last night of the death of the Rev. Dr. Frank Langford, Secretary of the Board of Religious Education of the United Church of Canada. Dr. Langford died suddenly from a heart attack, while sitting in his car which was parked in front of the main entrance to Victoria College.

Dr. Langford had spent the afternoon meeting informally the students of Emmanuel College and leading an informal discussion on Religious Education. Later he had had dinner at Burwash Hall. In the evening he had conducted a short service for the members of the Emmanuel College Residences, leaving about 6:50 p.m. His body was not discovered until about ten o'clock, by a passer-by.

The late Dr. Langford was born in London, Ont., in 1882. He received the early part of his education in St. Mary's Collegiate. He later attended Victoria College, graduating in Arts in '08 and in Theology in '09. His pastorates were in Saskatchewan. He became Secretary of the Board of Religious Education of the Methodist Church in 1915 and he retained this position until the formation of the United Church, when he and his organization were absorbed into the new body. His board was responsible for all the Theological Colleges of the United Church. In his responsibility as head of the Board in charge of Sunday Schools he had visited more than one third of the United Church's 6000.

His brother Rev. Dr. Fred Langford is Registrar of Emmanuel College.

OPENING AUDIENCE ENJOYS 'SAN TOY'

"San Toy" opened in Hart House last night to an audience which obviously enjoyed the fun and music of the team of Edward Morton and Sidney Jones. Produced by the Victoria College Music Club and directed by Thomas J. Crawford, the work is another supposed opus on life as it should be in China.

San Toy, a Mandarin's daughter, masquerades as a boy to avoid joining the numerous wives of the Emperor of China. The Emperor eventually catches on and complicates things, especially since San Toy is in love with a Captain Preston, an ambassador's son. Things eventually straighten out, but not for about two and a half hours of entertainment.

Torontonensis is adding a new section this year, "Campus Life" to its pages, which is intended to make the book more interesting and to give the numerous amateur photographers on the campus a chance to contribute.

The Editorial Board of Torontonensis is sponsoring a contest for the best "shots" of University Life. Human interest pictures, typical of the activities of the various colleges and faculties in the university are preferred by the Board but other pictures such as university buildings, candid snaps of professors, sporting activities, are acceptable.

it by the elected representatives of the people."

Soc. and Phil. students on the whole are impressed by the size of the report: as you might realize they have to study from it. Typical of many was the remark of Mary McKeown of Vic who said: "It is printed in very heavy books." Another one of them was Judy Tich, who, after long and borsome explanations from your reporter, guiltily admitted: "I guess I'd better read it now."

The present Dominion-Provincial Conference seems to have been ended for the present, as far as discussion of the momentous Sirois Report is concerned, through the declarations of three provincial governments that they consider the present time inopportune for discussion of constitutional questions.

Freedom

The type of thing which must be almost incredible to the government-suppressed peoples of Germany and Italy took place in London last week-end when a convention of anti-government citizens met, with the full knowledge of the government, to make plans for overthrowing it. It is a long time since any anti-government groups could meet in either of those countries without fear of the most serious consequences. The fact that England carries her principles of democracy so far as to permit such political meetings even in wartime is sufficient proof that she knows she has little to fear from them.

The meeting, attended by a few who wanted mainly what everyone else wants, including the government, defined their aims as: higher standards of living; better protection from air raids and better care for the injured; civil liberties; and a peace based on "the right of all peoples to determine their own destiny." They also asked freedom for India and friendship with Russia.

It would be very interesting to be able to read the thoughts of the German people as they are treated to such spectacles of democracy as the people of the United States deciding who will be their next leader. Perhaps they think back bitterly to the time when they elected Adolph Hitler and from then on did little electing; or perhaps they have been sufficiently drilled in Nazism to share some of Hitler's contempt for the "weak democracies." Whatever their views, they could scarcely help but be amazed and envious that such things as freedom in every sense of the word actually still exists.

It Looks Nice

Last fall the University of Minnesota, with much fanfare and wildly enthusiastic publicity notices, opened its new $1,850,000 Student Union and all the other universities were properly impressed by descriptions of a luxuriously furnished recreational centre complete with dining halls, ballrooms, bowling alleys, soda fountains, lounges, music rooms, cinemas and night clubs.

Either the press notices were a bit too enthusiastic or else some people are just hard to please, but it didn't take long for the Minnesota Daily to come out with the following editorial against what Time referred to as a rival to the Hanging Gardens of Babylon:

"One thing we love about Minnesota students is that when they get angry they get furious. No one, with the possible exception of Donald Duck, can get as angry as a Minnesota student.

Right now our choleric colleagues are irate about the new Union which, it appears in letters to the Daily, is nothing but a Hollywood cardboard setting concealing a mass of tarpaper and rubble. What with the blaring radios and the general disorder, it appears the place is much like a Gestapo torture chamber, and the Union Board of Governors skulls behind barricaded doors while the frenzied students mill around outside and howl for their blood.

For instance, H.J.L. and R.D.B. inform us that 'cigarette packages, cigarette butts, gum wrappers, papers of all description and even the ruins of ice cream cones litter the carpets and floors of the lounges.' A long list of writers, ranging alphabetically from Howard Aamodt to Charles B. Wood, cry desperately, 'For Heaven's sake do something about the radio programs forced upon us at the Minnesota Union.' If we don't they warn, 'the speaker is some day going to be torn bodily from the wall.'

Postoffice box 1845 writes us that the bag lunchers are now stacked six deep anyway, and that at the first sign of bad weather, well... The writer signs himself ominously 'Just Wait and See.' The bad weather is here, and we are morbidly seeing visions of another Black Hole of Calcutta.

'Another Pocket Gopher' found the commuters' lunch room 'furnished with tables that the administration should be ashamed to place in such an expensive and elaborately decorated building.' Bernard Light says the joint is full of crap-shooters.

I. Scream says they make 4½ cents profit on every five-cent cone over there, and Dissatisfied and I. M. Hungry report you have to take an hour off to get a ham sandwich from the clutches of the hired help. Distressed says there are plenty of times when he gets sick of W.B. and adds the shocking statement that 'even political science lectures can grow boring.' Bruce Finen backs him up with a blast at the grain and egg futures.

All in all, the place seems to be a combination of Dunkirk after the British evacuation and Gomorrah on Saturday night. We hope the state health inspectors and the city morals squad don't get in there and touch off a national scandal.

The editorial, by the way, was headed "Well, it looks nice from the outside."

Here and There

In a Connecticut industrial city where national defense contracts have boomed laborers' wages sky high, champagne has begun to put a little sparkle into the humdrum lives of factory workers. Sales have risen 300 per cent, due almost entirely to their purchases. One store owner said that a customer who usually bought a dozen bottles of beer each week-end walked in last Saturday and bought three bottles of champagne.

"My girl friend has high-class tastes and she wants champagne just like what they have in the movies," he said.

Those who claimed that the banning of silk stockings in Great Britain would be no hardship to women may have changed their minds when they read that a new crime wave among women there is being attributed to the rapid dwindling of the silk stocking supply. Many of the women caught said that they had never stolen anything before.

Life in China

San Toy in Hart House

After a dangerously weak (but obviously first-night weak) beginning, San Toy wakens up and becomes an excellent performance of a rather patchy light opera. It is patently in imitation of Gilbert and Sullivan—if their brilliancy had not set such a high standard both in libretto and music Edward Morton, Sidney Jones, and others would not have had as hard a time.

The whole performance suffered from the beer hall "orchestra" imported straight from its homeland and as unsatisfactory musically as such combinations usually are. I understand it was professional. It drowned out the singers, even the chorus, and played notes which were obviously not in the score. It is regrettable that much of the good singing which the cast was trying to get across was completely unintelligible because what was meant to be background became foreground. Surely something will happen to them before tonight's production. Some of them might die or emigrate.

The cast shone in spots and at least glimmered everywhere. Jack Watson, as Li the buffoon secretary to the Mandarin, would have made a perfect Koko, after whom his part was modelled. His solo When him go-ee La-di-da was the one spot of fun in the first act. It had been topicalized and sparkled with undergraduate wit. Watson's delivery was just that added touch which put it across with a roar. Sir Bingo Preston (a Punjab Englishman) was tailored to Court Stone's pith helmet. Edwin Kirkland and Elmer Phillips were both capable in their roles of the military attack and Sir Bingo's son. The immense Peter Bryce walked off with the equally immense "Little" Emperor of China. He sang from the depths. One could see all the male leads fitting into something really good, like Gilbert and Sullivan.

Vera Argument and Peggy Evey share the ladies' honours. The former as Dudley, the maid to Sir Bingo's daughter, cuts up in a completely fascinating manner. If the orchestra had only let me hear her I could tell you how good she was. The general drift of the time and her ability were evident, however. Peggy Evey as San Toy, about whom everything else revolves, is said to be suffering from laryngitis. It sounded more like a bad case of orchestra. Nancy Robson as Sir Bingo's daughter, Peggy, fell just short of completing the trilogy. Victoria College is to be highly congratulated on the mobs of beautiful girls which seem to be endlessly available when choruses are wanted.

There was a great deal of fun and good singing through the evening. Li's perfection of the first act has been mentioned. The male quartet The Twentieth Century Days—a bit of real modernity injected by the director, T. J. Crawford—was an hilarity which ended with an explanation of why San Toy had been chosen instead of Gilbert and Sullivan. The amateur soldiers of the campus got more fun out of the scene with Li directing the Emperor's Amazon Guard through elementary paces ("As you used to be!") than anywhere else in the second act and its climax Chinese Sage-man did not disappoint them.

The exuberant direction of Mr. Crawford did more than can be credited towards the success of the evening (and the greater successes of the immediate future). The enunciation of the chorus was, however, atrocious. Perhaps that could not be helped in the rush of preparation.

If you are lucky enough to see San Toy you'll certainly enjoy it. First nights are always at least somewhat of a strain on the east.

Littlefield Ballet

The Littlefield Ballet, which visited Massey Hall last night, is, as ballets go, to say the least, unique. Some of its members are quite good dancers, and none are lacking in enthusiasm and vitality, but the sum of their efforts must, I feel, have been rather amazingly unimpressive to all but the most insensitive of philistines, who happened to be present in numbers large enough to save the show from actually laying an (Continued on page 3) egg. This, and other remarks which I may make before I go home, will probably be taken as unnecessarily carping and bitter. Let me, therefore, assert with much vigour that they are observations rather than criticisms.

There are several obvious reasons for this near-fiasco. The ballets chosen were mediocre in point of both story and music, with one exception in each case; the orchestra—half-local—was inadequate and incompetent, and had clearly not been put through the formality of a rehearsal; and the lights and staging, no doubt because of poverty, were primitive. But the real trouble was that the whole thing lacked glamour; reasonably or not, effective ballet for us is Russian, exotic, half-Oriental. It needs Slavic sophistication, coloured lights, anything to create an aura of unreality and enchantment. The Littlefield Ballet is a group of nice, earnest young Americans putting on a display of clever physical agility and corny humour. I kept expecting Robert Taylor to come on.

The best of the three ballets presented was Aurora's Wedding, though its music is the dullest Tchaikovsky I have heard. Among its brightest spots were a couple of bluebirds and an epistle called Puss-in-boots and White Kitten which reminded me, for some reason, of Buck Rogers in the Twenty-fifth Century. The best music was Ferde Grofé's score to Cafe Society. The cafe represented, however, is the damndest place, being frequented by boxing champs and ringmasters and chorines and glamour girls and New Yorkers—just about everybody but Wendell Willkie. Saroyan does this sort of thing better. The final item, Barn Dance, was just what you might think, only more so. However, the herd liked it. Choreography throughout was by Catherine Littlefield.

During Aurora's Wedding there were a number of slight catastrophes which must have kept performers as well as audience annoyed. It looked as though some cad had tried to queer things by pouring acid on the stage with soap or butter or something.

FLUKE BOVILLE GOAL GIVES VIC 3-2 WIN

A fluke goal hoisted from centre ice by Barney Boville served up Vic Seconds with a 3-2 victory in their afternoon meeting with Senior Meds yesterday. In the preceding game the junior instalment of the Doctors suffered a 5-0 trouncing at the hands of Trinity. Late in the first period, with the score tied at one each, Boville took a short pass from Johnny Pallett near centre ice and lifted a bouncing backhander that hopped over Pritchard's stick and into home port. Bothwell scored again for the Scarlet and Gold just before the stanza ended and Meds' second-period efforts fell one goal short. Paton drew an assist on the goal.

Cam MacKenzie took a relay from Paton to start proceedings in Vic's favour, but Hec Gillespie, a smart rusher on a bone-crushing Meds crew, tied it up. It was again Gillespie that put the Medicos back in the running with his counter midway through the final canto, as he slapped the rubber between Cumming's legs after a solo rally.

Ernie Flewelling and Barney Boville were the best that Vic had to offer, and they were properly stopped by a hard-hitting Meds rear guard. Hec Gillespie was by far the standout man on the ice, well deserved his two goals.

Sr. Meds: Pritchard, Warren, Wilson, Fulton, Dennis, Dent, Dandwell, Spence, MacDillan, Gillespie, Stephens. Vic II: Bothwell, Pallett, MacKenzie, Cumming, Wolfraim, Cass, Flewelling, Livingstone, Boville, Paton.

TRINITY PUCKSTERS BLANK JUNIOR MEDS

Trinity A pucksters didn't pull any punches in their initial square-off yesterday afternoon as they blanked a helpless Junior Meds sextet 5-0. Trinity, last year's Jennings Cup champions, are, to all intents and purposes, out to hang onto their title.

Reliable Johnny Henderson started the parade of goals in the first period, and added another before the contest had run its course. Phil Frewer notched a brace as well, and Cayley rounded out the total. The Anglicans were well braced by Don Boxer and Jack Whittingham, the latter who performed with Varsity Juniors last season.

Trinity A: Martin, Cayley, Andrews, Frewer, Whittingham, Henderson, McClelland, Boxer, Phillips. Jr. Meds: Cole, Willinsky, Cross-weller, St. John, Sterioff, Arthur, Smythe, Parrott, Pritchard, Wallis, Rotenberg, Gentles.

Speaking OF SPORT

By Dave MacIntosh

UNIVERSITY NIGHTS

Saturday night on this campus is as dreary a place as one might find this side of Aklavik. What to do? Where to go? Warren Stevens, back at his desk after a session with Friend Flu, has given us the answer—University Nights.

These Varsity Nights are in part an effort to replace the athletic nights of the past two years. But they are to be far more than that. This year no drawing card, such as five intercollegiate tussles can be offered, which was the actual case last year, but they promise to offer much more from the individual standpoint.

The idea is to saunter over to the athletic wing of a Saturday Eve, and there to thoroughly enjoy yourself. Last year we put in an appearance merely to view the proceedings, but this year it will be simply a matter of everybody talking part and joining in the fun and frolic.

There are to be five and possibly six university nights, starting a week from Saturday or the following Saturday at the latest. Regular highlight intramural games will be featured as well as one meet on each occasion. Already planned are novice and senior boxing, wrestling and fencing meets, a senior gymnastic meet and a senior individual swimming meet for the Fitzgerald Trophy. Plans for the final and best meet have not yet matured, for which reason we refrain from mentioning it at the moment.

But this is not the main reason for which we believe you studies will turn out en masse for these events. Any amount of games will be set up in the various rooms, cards, table-tennis, shuffle-board, darts, to name a few. There will be movies, mostly of the instructional type, such as How To Be Made a Man In Seven Days. There will be swimming. There will be refreshments. And there will be dancing. Yet more features are under contemplation and await official announcement.

Each of the big faculties will act as host in turn, provide the entertainment and introduction committees. They (the faculties, not the entertainment committee) will put up the home teams for the interfaculty features.

This will serve to fill an extreme need on this campus, which lacks almost altogether anything approaching an all-university informal get-together. No need for a date. Come tag, come in groups, bring your friends, meet people, get together, have a good time. The fee will certainly not be more than a measly two bits. It will solve your problem of what to do and where to go Saturday night.

ODDMENTS AND ENDMENTS

Inspired by the deadly fear of counter-prediction, instilled in them by our boss, Dents A won handily last night from as determined a bunch of Emmanuelties ever assembled. . . . We liked the sporting spirit of both teams. . . . Hats off to soccerite, tennis, basketball, and general Dentist booster, Jack Mullett.

. . . And to Art Hamilton and Kitch Kitchen. . . . It was a particularly hard pill for the Bearcats to swallow, for it meant that their second chance at their first intramural title slipped through their fingers. . . . Last fall the Engineers snatched away the tennis championship from under their noses after the Theologs had apparently already donned the laurel wreath. . . . Bill Wilson, chairman of the hard-working Intramural Committee has departed to join the R.C.A.F. and Henry Aboud of Trinity has been elected to the chairmanship. . . . Jack Ronayne was made vice-chairman. . . . We're waiting with expectancy to see what the Irish can come through with this term. . . . Last year at this time the Geds had tucked away two championships, rugby and lacrosse, and appeared headed straight for their third in hockey, which intents were unfortunately interrupted by Trinity. . . . To date the Boys from Bay Street have yet to produce. . . . Already, with the interfaculty hockey loop only three games old, there are four tied for top scoring honours. Henderson of Trinity, Frewer of the same, Simpson of School and Paton of Vic, each with two points. . . . Junior U.C. has turned up with a nice aggregation of mushballers, and turned in a shut-out performance last night. . . . The O.C.E. cage squad looks like pretty powerful stuff on paper. . . . It includes the two Browns, Charlie Prince, Charlie Betchamber, et al, all top-notch hoopers. . . . And so, yanking the collar high about the neck, we tie home to rest. . . .

Well, we did have a schedule but it's a woman's privilege to change her mind so you can plainly see when six women get together. . . .

Vic have decided they are only going to have one team instead of two which might have been a good idea two weeks ago, but golly! All I'm thinking of is that I thought I had a column and now I ain't, so please, if you were thinking of changing your mind, don't!

Hockey begins next week, alright, as we have previously said, but can you wait till tomorrow to know the details? Gee, thanks!

AERIAL NAVIGATION TOPS ST. MICHAEL'S

The high-flying Aerial Navigation basketballers outscored the double blue boys of St. Mike's 38-30 in a fast cage contest in the upper gym of Hart House yesterday. The flyers laid just that extra edge to keep the Irish a few points behind during the tussle. The score at half time was 24-19 in favour of the aviators.

Guerinot and Driscoll scored ten and nine points respectively for the Bay Streeters while Scott and Van Huysse were the big guns for the airmen.

Aerial Navigation: Lake, Tuchak, Price, Scott and Van Huysse.

St. Mike's: Ragusa, Battersby, Wilpers, Coughlin, Guerinot, Driscoll and Mahoney.

VIC FAILS TO SCORE, U.C. PITCHING STRONG

Junior University College baseballers blanked Jr. Vic 6-0 in the main gym of Hart House yesterday. The Royal Collegers garnered eight hits but the Scarlet and Gold were kept hitless and runless due to the beautiful hurling effort of Saul Fox, who delivered eleven strikeouts throws.

McKinley, Faber and Ballaash were outstanding for the Red and White. University College: Ballagh, Faber, Grant, Rotenberg, Beatty, Fox, McKinley and Nichol.

Victoria College: Taylor, Hardy, Macdonald, Lalley, Beharrell, Sherrow, Smiley and Fenton.

Emmanuel, Despite Early Lead, Lose Out to Dentists with Leak-Proof Defence. Draws Large Crowd

VIC STAFF CUP

The Faculty of Dentistry took over possession of the Victoria Staff Cup last night when its A volleyball team defeated Emmanuel A 15-13, 15-1 in the second game of the intramural finals.

The Dentists took the first game in the best two out of three series Monday night by downing the Bearcats 15-9, 16-14. The largest crowd to witness a net tilt this year was on hand to see one of the season's finest exhibitions.

Emmanuel forged into an early lead in the first game, but the Dentists quickly took over only to have the Theologs come back to knot the count at 13-all. Two beautiful spikes by Jack Mullett put the game on ice for the Molarmen.

The Theologs were bogged down in the final game by the perfect defensive game of the Molarmen. Time after time the Dentists made the hard, driving spikes of Hamilton and Young look easy, even running up the wall to retrieve some shots. Mullett and Brett in return, sent their spikes out of reach of the Bearcats almost continually.

Hamilton, Young, and Kitchen were the cream of the crop for the Purple and Gold, the latter handling the set-up department.

Olle Brett and Jack Mullett did the spiking for the Dentists with Eddie Schneider setting them up.

The Theologs reached the finals by winding up on top of Group IV and downing O.C.E. B and Aerial Navigation in the semi-finals. The Dentists reached the cup via Group III.

Emmanuel: Hamilton, Kitchen, Fee, Young, Pritchard, Green, Stapleton and McKennitt.

Dents: Cameron, Sproule, Schneider, Brett, Smyth, Mullett.

ENGINEERS TRIUMPH IN MUSHBALL GAME

Junior Engineers outslugged the young medics 12-3 in a free-scoring mushball contest in the main gym of Hart House yesterday. Jr. Meds were kept off the tally sheet until the fourth and last inning when they came through with a three-run splurge.

The Schoolmen piled up their commanding lead in the first three frames and were never seriously threatened. Cameron and Winbaum played fine ball for the doctors.

Jr. S.P.S.: Wilson, Perkes, Moses, Cawley, Heslin, Gibson, Mason, Brant, Small and Ashton.

Jr. Meds: Cohen, Hill, Rottstein, Spring, Cila, Ludwig, Brown, Winbaum, Cameron, Cameron and Dixon.

MACKIE TELLS AID GIVEN TO STUDENTS

Unoccupied France.

Mr. Mackie pointed out that many of our fellow students in China were undernourished, ill clothed, often lacking shelter, and on this account fall easy victims to sickness. Study materials are urgently desired by the students among the three million prisoners in Germany who, if they cannot keep occupied, "fall to pieces".

The speaker told how the I.S.S. was aiding Chinese students with food, clothing, hostels, medical supplies, and books. As yet there is only one I.S.S. secretary in Germany working to locate and help student prisoners. The internment in Switzerland and the refugees in France are being enabled to continue their studies with I.S.S. books and financial aid.

Mr. Mackie explained how enlightened leadership for post war reconstruction was being created in this way.

Following the address the campaign methods were discussed. A room-to-room coverage of all the residences was considered. Due to the greater need it was urged that the campaign be on a wider scale than last year. Whereas the drive last year netted between thousands dollars this year's objective is twenty thousand dollars.

YOU REMEMBER THE ONE we told on Tuesday about the Hoax of the Century... It would now appear that those who conned the item were perhaps a little hasty in their judgement of the hoaxer... We understand that the hoaxes took the affair in the way it had been intended: as a superlative Jape calculated only to draw forth a chorus of laudatory cries of "Cool!"

... And the brothers were badly in need of an excuse for a big brawl anyway... So there seems little reason for ex-acquaintances of the party of the first part to Cut Him Dead in the Tuck Shop, as we learn they have been doing... Let us record here also that the brothers have not always been too kind in their treatment of him... Why the very night of the historic binge in honour of him, they left him sitting forlornly in a restaurant facing a bill which he was totally unable to meet... The poor guy, obviously much more sinned against than sinning, hooked his overcoat and sallied forth, only to find that his friends had absconded with the keys to his car... Therefore, let us shed a tear for the gent, and fling aside our Pharsalistic attitude... FOR HE'S MORE TO BE PITIED THAN CENSURED...

AND SPEAKING OF Tuesday's Hither, we should have noted that we were in the process of observing, bare-headed amid the mighty music of the organ, the fifth anniversary of the institution of this column in the noble pages of The Varsity... Yass, yass, on January 14, 1936, the Hither and Yon was born... Faintly we hear a distant cry of "Better It Should Be Dead," but, undaunted in the face of adversity, We Carry On...

TRINITY CONVERSAT TO HAVE BLACKOUT

Continuing a novelty dance feature originated on the campus last year by the late Pat Strathy, a "blackout" dance will highlight the Conversat, annual formal dance of Trinity College, it was learned yesterday. The entertainment session will take place between the hours of nine and two on January 24.

Total extinguishing of the lights in Simpson's Arcadian Court, with an orchestral accompaniment reminiscent of dive-bombers and air raid sirens, provides a wartime novelty which was "highly popular" last year, according to a spokesman of the Trinity Literary Institute, which is sponsoring the dance.

The Conversat, annual social splurge of the beguined Trinity students for more than three-quarters of a century, is making its last stand outside the college walls this year. In future, owing to the new accommodation now under construction, the dance will take place in old Trinity itself.

"Stan St. John and his 10-piece band proved so satisfactory at last year's Conversat that they are playing a return engagement this year," the spokesman asserted, launching warmly into the advantages of ample floor space, cabaret seating, and free, heated parking offered by the Arcadian Court and promising all sorts of lavish entertainment.

Students of Wyldlife College, which has no yearly formal dance, are being asked to attend, and it is expected that many will attend.

the one who considered himself to be nothing more nor less than a champagne glass... He would walk about and sit down with the greatest of care, for, as he said, "I have to be so careful all the time. I might break!"

THE OLD ORDER CHANGETH DEPT... The pie-lets which the Tuck Shop vendors are no longer in the old familiar. Birdenhead's purplish-purplish wrapper and are replaced by a flamboyant job in sickening scarlet, sporting the name Taylor... Of course we admit that we are hopelessly conservative at times, but we don't like these radical moves at all... We were just adjusting our digestion to the old kind.

SOME OF THE BOYS were innocently taking their ease in their refined Willcocks Street inn... The conversation turned, as conversations will, upon their philosophy prof... They roared him right roundly, and reproduced his idiosyncrasies neatly by mimetic synthesis... In short they made game of him... Glancing at length over their shoulders, whom should they perceive seated at the next table but the great man himself... With a cry of horror they collapsed into their soup...

THE JANE ARDEN OF THE VARSITY STAFF caught this instructive little note in the classified advertisement columns of one of the downtown evening dailies... (a minor Whig pamphlet)... WANTED. Neal Girl for Hamburger.

COMING TOMORROW... Heading the 1941 march of guest stars in the Hither is Willie the Kid Armstrong, Assistant News Editor of The Varsity, teller of shaggy-dog tales, and the Man with the Brush Cut... Willie is the famed Varsity newshawk who gave his blood for a story last year... We warned him that the public might be out looking for more of the vital fluid if he attempted a Hither, but he has bravely consented to do one JUST THE SAME.

VICTORIA FORMAL FEATURES QUARTET

"Twill be music à la Glenn Miller when careworn Visters collectively banish sorrows and worries at their annual At-Home Friday the fourteenth of February. The yearly get-together-formally is slated to be staged in the at-home atmosphere of Simpson's Arcadian Court.

The Commodores, favourites at the Brant Inn last fall, have been secured to set the pace and rhythm of the occasion. As well as a number of Brant Inn engagements, they have played at a great many special parties held here in the city and throughout the province. Ballrooms in both the King Eddie and the Royal York have echoed their fanfares and syncopeations on many a special club date.

The Commodores themselves answer to the down-beat of one of the country's outstanding saxophonists, Jack Wachter, who doubles on a versatile clarinet. Don Ferguson, Social Director of the V.C.U., points out that the name band most closely resembled by the Commodores is none less than the juke-box king, Glenn Miller.

But the Commodores are not at all the only attraction on the bill. After the eleven o'clock sit-down supper, the high point of the floor show will be the Bob Quartet giving out with a brand new list of ditties in their own special manner.

LAW STUDENTS TRY MEMBER FOR MURDER

most momentous practical event of the year for the campus legal lights. The last of these trials to reverberate hither and yon was the famous libel suit two annuums ago when the then prominent Swing Club sued for unstated damages as the result of a statement made by feature writer Joe College in the Varsity about "the public nuisances and malicious influences" of that club on undergrad life.

Over and above the crucial character of the case and the deep drama that always attends a murder trial, there is even more involved for the participants since valuable points in the competition for the Roundtable Memorial Shield will be awarded on the basis of impressions made by counsel. This Shield is given each year to that Inn of Court which amasses the most points in weekly cases in the Appellate Division and the Magistrate's Court. All eds and co-eds in the Law course are divided into four such Inns, Duff's, Blake's, LaFleur's and Rowell's. The announcement of this year's winner will hinge to some extent on the murder trial and will be made at the annual Law Club banquet, February 7.

COMING ST. MIKE'S BALL JOINS GRADS AND STUDENTS

Students of St. Michael's College will put away text books and half-finished essays on the evening of January 24th to attend their third annual ball in Hart House.

Many grads from all parts of the province, as well as from United States will join in the festivities and bring the attendance well up to the 600 mark, according to Tom McDermott, chairman of the undergraduate committee.

"We expect to have some novelty to replace corsages," he added, "but our plans are not complete yet."

During the sit-down supper, incidental music will be supplied by the college orchestra under the direction of Cesar Borre, while George Hooley will provide music for dancing from nine to two.

The Double Blue of St. Mike's will be the motif for the decorations and this will be carried out on menus and programs as well as in the gym.

In charge of arrangements are: Dr. Florence Quinlan, chairman of the graduate committee; Tom McDermott, chairman of the undergraduate committee, and Ed Crawford, president of the college students' council.

BULLETIN BOARD

DRAMA COMMITTEE
Mr. Sam Pearce will speak on William Saroyan in Hart House Theatre at 1.30 today, under the auspices of the University Drama Committee. All students are invited to attend.

U.C. STUDY GROUP
John Coleman's S.C.M. group will meet in 73 St. George Street this evening from 7 to 8.30 p.m. This is a group of men students and new members are invited to attend.

FORGETFUL STUDENT LOSES MUCH IN YEAR

the desk to claim his shoes which some of his playful pals had removed while he was sleeping peacefully in the West Common Room.

The University Library boasts an amazing collection of handbooks as well as costume jewelry (even frat pins) and the usual quota of pens. The librarians must gently but firmly refuse all Public Library books and text books which students push feverishly over the desk as this is apt to cause confusion. Books coming in from the women's reading room are sometimes found to contain letters and photographs.

In the office of the Medical Building are, among other curiosities, several pairs of glasses, a stethoscope, found after the At-Home last year and a pair of white ear muffs (the nice fuzzy kind) carefully enclosed in a white canvas bag. The student who loses something in the Biology Building should not lose hope until he has explored the gloomy lower regions of the building where the store room is hidden and inquired there, "Illicht" laundry which "disappears" from the bathrooms of Whitney may be redeemed at a small cost.

Most students are quite experienced at losing things on the campus although a few have not had the thrill. "I have never lost anything here except ambition," said Ruth Bolt, I Vic. "After an exam I was in such a flurry I left my new $2.25 note book in the room and I went back and back to the caretaker's office in vain," sighed Marion Smith, III U.C. "Two years ago I lost a charm bracelet in Hart House," added Eva Verner, also III U.C. Mary Ferguson, I Vic, divulged that she had lost her heart "too" but that involves a loss of appetite, "too" but she did not seem particularly worried.

judged according to the category under which they come and the best picture in each group will receive recognition in Torontonsis, while the best picture of all will receive a copy of Torontonsis as well. The contestants are to submit their own captions with their pictures and the originality and appropriateness of these will be considered by the board in choosing those pictures which are to be published.

Torontonsis has long been an object of criticism among University of Toronto students as being "staid," "conventional," "stereotyped from year to year," "lacking in originality," "uninteresting." Although Toronto cannot afford to spend as much on her year-book as many of her American sisters this year's Editorial Board of Torontonsis are hoping that this new "Campus Life" section will be a step towards a more original and interesting book.

Band Leader at School Dance Once Jived with Cotton Clubbers

The story of one of Toronto's greatest days of jazz was told last night by Bob Shuttleworth, who is playing for the School-at-Home tonight. This was probably the biggest "jam session" in Toronto's history and featured four with members of Bob's own band.

Calloway was appearing at Shea's theatre for a week last winter and Shuttleworth invited some of the men up to his home for a party. "Chin" Berry, rated as one of the world's finest tenor saxophonists, "Crazy" Cole, Calloway's drummer, "Fump" Hinton, on bass, and "Dizzy" Gillespie, trumpet, all arrived after their last show and, after "knocking themselves out" listening to records of themselves, they got down to the serious business of playing.

To supplement the aggregation of coloured men, some of Shuttleworth's boys sat in and gave a very good musical account of themselves. One of the most interesting parts of the evening was the battle between "Dizzy" Gillespie and Bob Farnon, who recently came into prominence when his first symphony was performed by Sir Ernest MacMillan. ## Two Days Left To Pay Your Fees

Crowds of Arts students hustled into the quiet corridors of Simcoe Hall yesterday in an eleven-hour struggle to evade the dollar-a-month penalty imposed by the university on all who fail to make the final payment of their fees by Jan. 20.

For students who have managed to let the bogey of the final payments slip their minds, there yet remains duty and Monday, between the hours of 10 a.m. and 1 p.m. to clear off the account. Bursar C. E. Higginbottom will not accept fees on Saturday.

Many students who wish to avoid the tedium of the long line may save themselves this inconvenience by mailing their cheques payable to the Bursar, University of Toronto.

'Smashing Atom' Is Lecture Topic

An outstanding authority on nuclear physics, Professor L. A. DuBridge, Dean of the Faculty of Arts and Science at the University of Rochester, will address the Royal Canadian Institute. The title of the lecture, which will tomorrow night in Convocation Hall, be illustrated by experiments, is "Atom Smashing Goes to Work."

"A few years ago 'Smashing the Atom' was a supposedly impossible feat. Today, dozens of giant machines for atom-splitting have been built and are in daily operation, taking atoms apart on a large scale," according to an announcement by D. B. Murray of the R.C.I.

"The science has developed so rapidly that atom smashing is now emerging from the laboratory and taking an important part in the hospital and in industry. The production of radioactive forms of common material has possibly been the greatest achievement of the atom-smashing machines."

"These radioactive materials, having properties similar to radium which can be bestowed upon ordinary substances, have found widespread applications in medicine and biology, in industrial laboratories and in many other fields. Professor DuBridge in his lecture will discuss some of these important applications."

Most of the attention of the evening centred around "Chin" Berry. Unobtrusive as he was, leaning against the piano and playing very softly, still he stole the whole show and left everyone with his mouth hanging open. "That was one of the greatest nights of my life," said Berry. "It was wonderful to play with such fine musicians and I was thrilled to receive Christmas cards from them. Those coloured men enjoyed getting together and playing with white men for a change and certainly appreciated having a party given in their honour."

Melodrama from Vic, Comedy from U.C. Complete List of Entries for Annual Dramatic Event

"THE VALIANT" INCLUDED

Comedy, satire and melodrama will appear on the program of the University Drama Festival, to be given next Tuesday night in Hart House Theatre, according to the directors of the three plays to be presented by the Trinity, Victoria and University College dramatic societies.

"It is an impressionistic satire, dealing with the effete Assyrian aristocracy and their reaction to Noah's art-building," stated Paul Christie, referring to "An Assyrian Afternoon," by F. Sladen Smith, to be presented by the Trinity Dramatic Society. The members chosen for the cast of this play are Rita Hayman, Betty Gairdner, Max Clarkson, John Martin and Stewart McKewen. Miss Hayman appeared last year in the Dominion Drama Festival, and Max Clarkson in "The Rising of the Moon," produced in this year's Wednesday afternoon series.

"The Valiant" by Middlemass and Hall, the Victoria entry, will be performed by John Mantley, Tom Nixon, Mary Ellen Fenwick, Doug Harris, Bryce Wilson and Jim McLellan.

This play will be familiar to many of its audience, as it is a comedy, and the Victoria director, "but we are trying to give it new interest as a melodrama by the use of the Stanislavsky method of acting. This is one by which the cast endeavours to live the play, and behave as they feel, rather than deliberately exaggerating outward expressions of feeling, with an eye to the audience rather than the play."

The heroine of Christopher Morley's "Bedroom Suite" is the title of girl he later delineated in "Kitty Foyle," declared Mavor Moore, director of the University College Players' Guild presentation. Further information he designed to offer, on the grounds that it would give the plot away. The cast consists of Bud Milnes, Jane Hughes, and Barbara Salter, all of whom have been seen by university audiences this year.

INFORMAL RECITAL

Lorne Watson, young Toronto pianist and pupil of Ernest Scits, will be guest artist at the Recital today at 5 p.m. in the Music Room, Hart House. Mr. Watson was awarded the gold medal in the examinations at the Toronto Conservatory of Music last June.

Route Chinese Bandits; Costly Tapestries Saved

Originally Belonged to Manchou Dynasty; Bought by Missionary at Low Price and Saved by Ruse

USED IN "SAN TOY"

Precious Chinese tapestries hundreds of years old are being used in the Victoria College Music Club's current production of "San Toy," The Varsity learned yesterday.

The silken tapestries, each about seven by fourteen feet, are embroidered with symbolic figures. The main theme seems to represent the "eternal triangle" with two farsoung creatures, human, half-dragons, snarling at each other across the smiling figure of a noble Chinese girl.

The tapestries were originally in the possession of the Manchou Emperors of West China. When the dynasty fell in 1911, the royal family was forced to flee. To raise funds, the tapestries, along with many other royal possessions, were mortgaged.

In 1921 Mr. F. C. Stephenson, a United Church missionary, heard of the tapestries, now reposing in a Chengtu pawnshop. He managed to buy them for a very reasonable price, but the money-lender warned him that the bandits who were over-running the country would never allow him to leave China with them.

Dr. Stephenson set out down the Yachow-King through bandit-infested country. Early in the trip a volley of

New Series Of Lectures Starts To-day

First Series of Lectures on "Problems of Modern Government" Sponsored by Department of Pol. Economy

PROFESSOR SPEAKS TODAY

Dr. Charles McLwain, professor of government at Harvard, will deliver a lecture at 5 p.m. today in the Economics Building. This is the first of a series of lectures on the subject "Problems of Modern Government" sponsored by the Department of Political Economy. President Cady will introduce the series prior to Dr. McLwain's address. These lectures will be open to the public, and the admission will be free. The speaker today has chosen as his topic "Historical Perspective and Recent Historical Development." Prof. McLwain is a recognized authority on political theory and constitutional history.

The second address in the series will be given on January 24th by Prof. J. A. Cory of Queen's University who will deal with the important topic of "The Federal Dilemma." This will be followed on January 31 by Charles H. Bland, Chairman of the Civil Service of Canada speaking on the subject of "The Dominion Public Service." "Canada and the Balance of Power" will be discussed by Prof. R. A. MacKay of Dalhousie University on February 7th, and "Democratic Possibilities in a Totalitarian World" by Prof. H. McD. Clouke of the University of Manitoba the following week.

The series will be concluded on February 21st by Prof. A. W. McMahon with an address on "Taking Stock of Federalism in the United States."

BOOKS FROM ENGLAND ALL ARRIVE SAFELY DESPITE WAR HAZARDS

"Not one shipment of books from England has been sunk in this war," the manager of the University Press revealed today in the heart of London along the Strand and on Charing Cross men keep on working while "Jerry" drops his bombs.

By far the greatest number of textbooks is ordered in the fall to supply the demands of the students. In spite of the extreme shortage of paper in Britain there has as yet been no hit in deliveries. The shipments usually come in three weeks. The main difficulty so far has been in obtaining microscopes as the factories that usually manufacture these have been turned over to war-industries.

Books swept across the deck, as bandits appeared on the river bank. Natives on board the boat with the missionary advised him to "appear on deck and be nonchalant." He went up to the deck, and to his surprise, when the bandits saw a clergyman on the boat they fled. When he enquired the cause of their fear, his native servants explained that "an Anglican bishop had come up-river two days before with a machine-gun."

The tapestries, which would probably be impossible to replace in this country, have been lent by Dr. Stephenson to the Vic Music Club for the "San Toy" production. Paul Deacon, publicity director of the club, explained.

"There are still several tickets available for the remaining performances of 'San Toy.' Bill Graff, president of the Victoria College Music Club, told The Varsity as he denied rumours of a complete sell-out for the show. Full houses have greeted the show in its first two performances Wednesday and Thursday nights, and it is expected that there will be capacity audiences for the three remaining shows."

Tonight will be Patrons' Night at "San Toy," according to Graff. Patrons of the club include Sir William Mulock, President and Mrs. H. J. Cody, Chancellor and Mrs. E. W. Wallace, Mr. and Mrs. John Jennings, Mrs. C. G. McEachern, Principal and Mrs. W. T. Brown, Miss Jessie Macpherson and Mr. J. R. Gilley. Also present will be members of the executive, including Honorary President Mrs. F. N. G. Starr, Bill Graff, President, and Miss Norah Patterson, Associate President.

Announce Spring Program For Womens' War Service At McGill Mass Meeting

Saroyan's Plays Are Discussed By Guild Lecturer

Audiences Like Saroyan Form of Drama; Uses Simple "Boy Meets Girl" Plot in New Play

To a small but enthusiastic audience in Hart House Theatre yesterday at 1:30 Mr. Sam Pearce, lecturer for the Theatre Guild of New York, spoke informally on William Saroyan's approach to the theatre. "In the history of every art," he said, "there comes a time when an artist finds it impossible to say what he has to say in the set form of his art. Among these he listed Wagner, Puccini, Gertrude Stein and William Saroyan."

He went on to say that although Saroyan's latest play "The Time of Your Life" has been awarded the Pulitzer Prize there is doubt in the minds of some critics as to whether his "impish innovations" could capture the imaginations of provincial audiences. Although he considers himself Saroyan's missionary in putting over these "impish innovations" Pearce finds that the audiences in the theatrical "sticks" take readily to the Saroyan form of drama.

"Saroyan's appeal may be found in his expression of the fundamental good in man which appeals to him," he said. "Our conception of what is meant by the term 'play' has long been fettered by non-essential additions to the basic definition. Saroyan uses a simple 'boy meets girl' plot in his latest play, but the virtue of the stage lies in some thing older than plot. Vaudeville is the basis of the production and even if you decry 'The Time of Your Life' as a play you must agree that it is a good show."

Mr. Pearce concluded his talk with a description of a few of the characters of "The Time of Your Life" and gave a few short readings of their key lines.

ENGINEERING SOCIETY SHOWS HYDRO FILMS

Ontario Hydro Commission moving pictures of the construction of the Beauharnois Transmission lines were the major attraction at the Engineering Society's first 1941 meeting yesterday. The colour pictures showed the construction of the towers and line-stringing methods, and engineers showed particular interest in the rigging used to assemble the large towers. Following the Beauharnois pictures, two cartoons on boxing and wrestling proved popular with the audience.

FOURTH YEAR ENGINEERS COMPETE FOR PRIZES

The Toronto Section of the American Institute of Electrical Engineers will hear addresses by fourth year engineers competing for prizes at its meeting at 8:15 p.m., Jan. 20, in Room 21 of the Electrical building, it was announced yesterday.

The competitors will include R. Henderson, P. E. Pashler, R. Scott, and J. W. Simpson, and guest for the meeting will be E. W. Settemann, President of the Toronto Section, and H. H. Henline, National Secretary.

W.S.T.D. Girls Like Uniforms But Some Men Sadly Confused

The appearance of co-eds in natty gray-odd-blue uniforms has produced various reactions from the student body. It was revealed in a survey conducted yesterday. The uniforms have recently been issued to members of the Women's Service Training Detachment and are to be worn on days when there are W.S.T.D. lectures or drills.

Most members of the detachment expressed satisfaction regarding their outfit. However, there were a few complaints. Nora Noble found it difficult to keep her cap on, while Lois Davidson thought the material rather rough on the skin.

Among non-members the W.S.T.D. uniforms had a mixed reception. "Just about the nicest things there could be for girls," enthused Jean Crawford, 111

Principal James to Present Schedule which Includes Comprehensive Study of Food, Health, Housing

800 TAKE COURSE

By Harriet Bloomfield
Women's Editor, McGill Daily

Montreal, Jan. 16 (CUP) — McGill co-eds will gather at a mass meeting Tuesday to hear the second term's schedule of war services for women. Dr. F. Cyril James, Principal of the university, will be the guest speaker and will give a general presentation of the whole program for the remainder of the year. A six-week course on the principles and practices of First Aid given by the St. John Ambulance Association has already been completed.

The coming program includes the study of treatment for shock, exposure and exhaustion; some techniques of nursing, especially under emergency conditions; preventive measures in relation to public health; the nature and spread of exposure diseases (such as colds, influenza and pneumonia); and the importance and place of physiotherapy. The 800 students enrolled in the course will attend.

The supplying of food, shelter and heat under emergency conditions, both for workers and for victims, will be considered, involving study of the regular channels of food supply, food values, the organizing of canteens, and emergency rationing. The contamination of milk and water supplies, the nature and menace of water-borne diseases and various methods of decontamination will also be studied.

Other problems to be dealt with are emergency housing and the establishing of temporary dormitories and problems of heating and clothing in relation to adverse climatic conditions. A knowledge of fire hazards and air raid patrol measures will be supplied to aid in an understanding of the whole physical and administrative organization of the community.

Students will also become familiar with various governmental and volunteer organizations which function when disaster befalls a community. Problems for the handling of evacuees will also be discussed.

Co-op Dance Held At Oddfellows Hall

Jim Bottomley and his orchestra, who play hot or sweet "as how you like it," will feature at the Campus Co-op dance at the Oddfellows Hall, Friday night, January 24.

George Umahara, supervisor of the program, told The Varsity last night, "They're having a super-colossal floor show including song and dance specialties by university artists."

"This dance," he said, "is unique in the history of the Co-op. It is the first time we have been able to get all our friends and the friends of the Co-operative movement together."

John Fornatore, house manager of the Campus Co-op declared that the dance was to be run in accordance with the rules of the organization; that is, profits will be eliminated. "The more tickets bought," he said, "the better the show."

Vic "We're green with envy," said freshly. Alice Evers, members of whose year are excluded from the detachment. While he admired the smartness of the uniforms, Jack Livingston, 1 Vic, considered them "rather a waste of money." Glen Eagle, Emmanuel, denounced them emphatically, claiming that they were too mannish and that the ties and collars were "unbecoming."

David Peebles, 1 Vic, suggested that the uniforms would be greatly improved by the addition of greatcoats, an opinion which was shared by several others who were interviewed. Most violent of the objectors to the new outfits was Don Graham, 11 Vic, who sheepishly told of the night when he found himself inadvertently kissing an Air Force man.

Canada---Our Problem Or, Long Live Politics

In two short days, aye in a matter of hours, this nation of ours—if we may call it that—has revealed to all the world its helplessness, puerile groping for adulthood, its political bungling, its petty selfish provincialism, and its emphasis on party and politics as ends in themselves rather than merely means toward the intelligent efficient government of the country. Truly it is difficult at a time such as this not to throw one's hands in the air with an anguished "Oh, Canada!" and agree with one of our downtown contemporaries that we are led by pygmies.

On Tuesday morning the delegates to the dominion-provincial conference gathered to hear the words of the Prime Minister opening proceedings. Before noon the fate of the conference was sealed and by the evening of the following day the delegates were on their way home, after singing "God Save the King." But it is what happened and what was said in that intervening space that matters for Canada—the Canada which unfortunately seems more than ever to be nine provinces.

"Discuss Calmly, Quietly"

On November 20, after reviewing the Sirois report, The Varsity wrote, as so many other newspapers have written these past months: "It is to be hoped that the provinces will forget sectional grievances long enough to give the plan the fairest of considerations." Two days ago we criticized the early attitude of some delegates, stating: "Far better to discuss calmly and quietly as befits the adult nation we profess to be. Far better to discuss thus, even though hope of complete adoption of the report is flickering, for only by such cooperative discussion will some more acceptable plan be evolved, and only in this way will sectional and provincial understanding and sympathy be developed further."

Undignified Sabotage

There was not the slightest bit of that at Ottawa. From the outset certain provincial groups made plain their stand that they firmly opposed the report. On the following day those three provinces "walked out" on the conference, leaving it to be buried in the graveyard of lost Canadian opportunities. There had been no constructive discussion, either of the Sirois report or of any other means whereby national unity could be strengthened and the national economy bolstered. The only result was a flow of violent, undignified language across the floor of the conference, resulting in misunderstandings, bad feeling, and appeals to the voters back home. The saboteurs of the conference now pose as patriots devoted to the war effort and as noble upholders of provincial rights.

There are people who will criticize The Varsity for opening its mouth on the sacrosanct subject of dominion-provincial politics, but the editor and the students he represents are, after all, Canadian citizens and have an equal right with anyone else to discuss such public matters. We are not criticizing anyone for not accepting the Sirois report. We maintain that it has its very good points, and that it was a sincere effort to do something for the Canadian structure. We admit that there are numerous defects, and that a pretty good case can be built for Ontario opposition to the report. So we restate that we criticize no one for opposing adoption of the Sirois report.

Politicians Fail Canada

But we do criticize Canada's politicians for the way they have let the country down. It was not necessary to sabotage the conference, so long awaited, without giving any chance for fair discussion. The provinces were not expected to vote yes or no for the whole report; rather, they were expected to talk the thing over, to accept or reject various aspects of the proposals, or even to find some new basis upon which to work. But instead a few men turned the discussion away from the report, dragged in (perhaps with ample justification) the dangers to the Canadian war effort, and tossed out for public consumption such unfortunate statements as the following: "... withdraw and leave these wreckers of Confederation under the guise of patriotism to carry on their nefarious work."

Patriotism Absent in Methods

Those who opposed the report had every right to do so—but they had no right to walk out on the conference before allowing a fair discussion of our problems. We are inclined, in the light of circumstances, to agree that it was perhaps unwise to call the conference in war-time, even though it was urged that the adoption of the recommendations would help our economy stand the strain of war. These grounds, garnished with patriotic flourishes, are the grounds upon which three provinces sabotaged the conference. Our complaint is that they failed to live up to the least of the standards of national statesmanship in their methods. If they had patriotic thoughts in mind they would surely have given some intimation to the Prime Minister that their stand was to be adamant opposition, and the whole thing could have been quietly postponed until victory had been achieved. That would have been their method had the welfare of Canada and her taxpayers been their consideration, and this is what should have been done in view of future events. But no! Seeing a chance perhaps to appeal to petty provincial politics or to place political opponents in a bad light, they withheld all statements on the matter, preferring to blast the conference once it had gathered, and bring the shame into the open.

"A Political Crime"

There our leaders have failed us. It is not a question merely of the Sirois report being shoved into a pigeon-hole. As Mr. King said, it will probably see the light again. Rather it is that our leaders have shown themselves incapable of putting aside provincial prejudices for a moment and meeting together in a spirit of friendly tolerant cooperation. We agree with the sentiments of one delegate: "It is not only folly but an approach to a political crime for members of these provincial delegations to return without a discussion of this report." Of small import is it that officials are claiming the conference revealed all provinces solid behind the war effort. That was apparent anyway, and what the conference has really revealed is a serious condition in our national life which must be remedied in the future ere we grow in stature.

Come Join The Fun

The approach of mid-term exams and the realization that there is no much time left this year to do a seemingly impossible amount of work has taken a heavy toll of the men's news staff of The Varsity. One day this week the news editor found, when making up the assignment book, that there was only four reporters available for that day, although the original list had contained some fifteen or twenty names.

Exams or not, publication must go on. We appreciate the efforts of those present members of the staff; and we urge any undergraduates who are at all interested in news reporting, to drop around and sign up. In fact we'll welcome you with open arms and assign you a story on your first day. We can assure you that you will be participating in an interesting, refreshing and worthwhile university activity.

Salute To Beauty A Dialogue

He: I think that I shall never see,
A poem lovely as a lass.
A she whose brow is so so fair,
A she with lots and lots of hair
That falls in cascades o so bright
Its radiance lights up the night.
A she whose saddle shoes all mud,
Are ever ever hard to mud
With light and fairy tread the halls,
So often frequented by molls.
A she with whom (when on a date)
A Grecian goddess does not rate.
But comes the morning lecture round
This lovely one cannot be found.
For sweater, skirt and saddle shoes
Make all as one; it's hard to choose.
And could I choose I would not choose
Because I hate those saddle shoes.

She: Though saddle shoes are not so light
As dancing pumps you saw last night,
And skirt and sweater make you frown
As did not my flowing gown,
I will forthwith break the rule
And wear my pretty gown to school
If you too, all you males,
Will go to classes in your tails.
Of course you fully realize
This order includes clean white ties.
And if in some science lab
Upon your tie you get a blab
Of acid, this spatter,
Will to you really matter;
And homeward you will wend your way
To get a clean white tie that day.

Phone Wires Hum As Queen's Men On Corsage Hunt

Long-distance phone wires hummed across the miles in the wee hours several nights ago. After several attempts the operator finally managed to rouse a weary editor-in-chief. He lifted the receiver and the words which poured into his sleepy ears started the mighty Canadian University Press machine rolling on one of its strangest assignments—the purchase of 250 corsages for a dance two hundred miles away.

"Here's the story," barked the worried editor of the Queen's Journal, whose publication is sponsoring the annual Arts Ball at Queen's University tonight. "You see, we banned corsages, but decided to sell special corsages at the door to aid the war effort. Well, we ordered 250 at 50 cents apiece. But what happens? The florists tell me today they have to charge 75 cents. So see what you can do."

Summoning all his floral knowledge the local editor copied down the instructions—125 corsages with two red roses, play the mood perfectly and they will fill of fern and sweet stavia, tied with a yellow and blue ribbon, and 125 corsages with two yellow roses, filler of fern and sweet stavia, tied with a red and blue ribbon. (Get it? — Queen's colours!)

Next morning he started phoning, and found all florists willing to fill the order at fifty cents apiece. So today the 250 corsages are on their way to Queen's by train where they will be sold tonight for the war effort. A triumph for the C.U.P.!

regularly this season to Eaton Auditorium in the Music Masters Series, playing to half-filled houses, but playing to an audience of music lovers.

The highlight last night was the Brahms Sonata in F Major for 'cello and piano. Both Miss Garbousova and her accompanist David Sturmer could play the mood perfectly and they achieved that unity of purpose which, it present, cannot fail to make success. The whole selection, besides being deeply musical, is a tour de force for the 'cello, difficult enough to show up the flaws in anyone's technique. The Haydn Concerto in C Major was delicate and airy, especially in the final movement, in which the 'cellist's bowing was light as any violinist's.

More technique was let off after intermission. The Fauré had even more subtle pianissimo effects than had been previously heard. Zapateado of Sarasate, played in the violin range, imprinted on the sonority of the 'cello.

POWDERED SNOW LURES SKI CLUBBERS

The Ski Club was treated to a sight that turned them green with envy at their meeting yesterday as they drank in a coloured movie showing the glistening powder snow of Sun Valley to put to a fitting use by champion skiers. Scenes of mountain beauty were interspersed with thrilling down-hill runs and slalom races in slow motion.

Becken Reid, Jack Fleming, the president of the club, gave a resume of the various activities of university skiers during the Christmas holidays, which were drastically curtailed by bad weather. He also discussed competition plans, the first meet being scheduled for February, the second up at the club property. These meets are only for the male section of the club, so the co-eds are to have their own meeting at the end of next week's gathering.

Also in the wind was talk of the Ontario Ski Zone's scheme for training instructors. All interested in a week-end course on how to teach the fundamentals of skiing should give their names to Jack Fleming.

Speaking OF SPORT

By Owen Prichard

That was a rousing struggle staged by the basketball artists of University College and Meds in the Little Gym yesterday. After a few more jousts like that 17-11 tie and the fans will begin to trickle Athletic Wing-wards in increasing numbers to see the interfaculty teams in action.

There was not much clever basketball in yesterday's tilt, and there was a little too much giving of the solid shoulder to the fellow in possession of the ball; but what made it a game was the way in which both teams showed plenty of try in every rush and check.

The Meds edged the Red and White in the number of field goals scored, needlessly blew their chance to win the game by a poor performance in the free-throw department. Out of ten passes allowed them, the Doctors counted only three points.

Martin Sachs and Wilson were valuable assets in the Meds line-up, in fact both teams looked good in this their first game in the interfaculty loop of this year. Some more accurate sniping and a better passing attack, both of which will doubtless come with more practice. In the matter of passing, the Meds failed time after time to make use of good opportunities. For instance, Bob Murray of the Meds outfit (who scored many valuable points for the Doctors last year) might as well have been running around the track for all the times anyone thought of throwing a pass his way. After all, there are only four men on a team in the Upper Gym these days, so why not utilize the whole quartet?

What we liked about the University College squad's play was the continual drive of Cuddy Faber, who did not spare himself in trying to take the ball up the floor and through his dogged persistence topped his team-mates in scoring. Four of his six points were tallied within half a minute, when he twice broke up a Meds rush and hot-footed it down the hardwood to score field goals. Faber, with his team-mates Sonny Gold and Mel Kates staved off the final attack by the Doctors by continuing to snag rebounds from the Medsman's shots.

It is an interesting thing sometimes to take your eyes off the lads who hang around the enemy's hoop waiting for a pass so that they can score, and consider the chappies who follow their checks and clamp firm mitts on any rebounds or short shots. The hoopster who is adept at this sort of thing is a tower of strength to any cage squad. One of the best of this type we have seen in the past year is Howard McCartney, co-captain of the Wayne University outfit which played in Hart House last spring. And if you want to see the art of wrapping the paws around rebounds as displayed by our own Varsity students, we would suggest you take a gander at the under-the-basket work of Don Finlayson of School and U.C.'s Hal Axon, who is at present playing for Simpson Grads in the city league.

GRAHAM SCORES TWO AS TRINITY B SIX BLANKED BY KNOX

MEDS BASKETEERS COME FROM BEHIND TO TIE SR. U.C.

Knox A pucksters trimmed Trinity B to the tune of 4-0 at Varsity Arena yesterday afternoon. The Knox men dominated the play in spite of the hard-fighting Trinity team.

For the winners, Graham, although slightly injured in the opening scramble, opened the scoring in both periods on passes from Self. A solo fight by Henderson accounted for another Knox goal, and the final corner came from Jacks, assisted by Redford.

Turner in goal for Trinity worked hard, and the forward line of Garret, Rustard, and Ried tried several ganging attacks, but were turned back by the Knox defence.

Knox A: D. Anderson, Self, MacKay, Graham, Jacks, Redford, Cameron, Henderson, Swallow, MacSwen.

Trinity B: Turner, Garret, Rustard, Ried, Livingstone, Jackson, Mercer, Stinson, Loft, Clark.

Will all those interested in skiing at Caledon this week-end please look at the notice in the lodge.

Senior Meds came from behind to tie Senior U.C. 17-17 in the five o'clock basketball fixture in the Upper Gym yesterday.

This game was the most hotly contested hoop tilt of the season thus far. Martin Sachs proved to be the star of the Meds, topping a nice performance throughout the game by breaking away with less than a minute left to play to score the tying bucket.

The Men in White were pretty confident at the opening of the match, but were tossed in the scoring race by the hard-working Royal Collegians.

Wilson, Levy and Murray, with Sachs, were outstanding for the Medsman, while Cuddy Faber, Sonny Gold and Mel Kates kept the Arts lads in the fight by their fast breaks and steady work around the baskets.

Sr. U.C.: Faber (6), Ferguson (2), Jones, Pyne, Gold (3), Kates (5), Fox, Francis, Gibson (1), Abrams, Sr. Meds: Sachs (6), Kaplan (2), Culiner, Finkelshtein (2), Levy (2), Murray, Wilson (4), Levitt (1), Kling.

DENTS B CAGERS DRUB TRINITY B

The first game of a basketball twin-bill in the Upper Gym yesterday saw Dents B outscore Trinity B by a count of 40-11.

Sending the apple through the hoop with easy regularity, the Molarmen rang up 25 points in the first period to put the game on ice. Four field goals was the best the Red and Black could do in the way of scoring in the first frame. In the second half of the tilt both sides were checking more closely, but the Garnet and Blue were too good for the Anglicans, outscoring them 15-3 to make the tally 40-11 at the final whistle.

THEATRE notice from the Daily List of Baylor University: "Rites of Youth will Be Served" with Jane Withers. . . . On toast?

FELLA name of Wilkie Davey, class of '41, and a well-known U.C. athlete, drives a coupe bearing the license number 471.

AND then there was the dumpy and ogling provincialite who wandered into Vic's the other day and lined up at the box office with those buying tickets for "San Toy"—After a few minutes' wait he reached the wicket and mumbled, "I wanna get a birth certificate."

WAY down University of Toledo way, the campus paper took a survey of the pockets of the men around the place. . . . Findings: a quarter of them carried cigarettes; half of them carried matches.

WELL . . . you were warned yesterday.

CANADIAN NICKEL

STRENGTHENS SINEWS OF EMPIRE PROTECTION!

LIKE GIANT ANT-HILLS are the mines where three shifts of workers push production without cease. Drills burrow, ore cars rumble. Crushers pound. Shafts vomit ore.

From the International Nickel Company's mines in the Sudbury District in Northern Ontario come thousands of tons of ore a day to feed the smelters, refineries and rolling mills of the company in Canada, Great Britain and the United States.

In these mines new production peaks have been reached to bridge the Empire crisis.

For Canadian Nickel, vital to peacetime industry, is also vital in time of war. When alloyed with other metals it makes them tougher, stronger, more resistant to wear and corrosion. So it is used not only in aircraft and motorized equipment, but also in the machinery, tools and equipment being rushed into service to produce the sinews of war.

Sir William Mulock, Chancellor of University, Celebrates 97th Birthday

SIR WILLIAM MULOCK

Chancellor of the University of Toronto and former Chief Justice of Ontario, who celebrated his ninety-seventh birthday yesterday.

Former Chief Justice of Ontario Came to University in 1859 to Enter Modern Language Course

WAS POSTMASTER-GENERAL

Sir William Mulock, Chancellor of the University of Toronto and former Chief Justice of Ontario, was 97 yesterday.

When interviewed by The Varsity at his Jarvis Street residence, Sir William was calm and unexcited by the event. His day was just "normal", without fuss or undue celebration. After church, an intimate family gathering was all Sir William wanted. There wasn't even a birthday cake.

Sir William entered Varsity in 1859 to study Modern Languages—French, German, Italian and Spanish. Since graduation he has held many high offices including the postmaster-generalship in the federal cabinet.

Sixty years ago, in the same year in which The Varsity came into being, Sir William was elected Vice-Chancellor of the university. Since then he has been in constant association with the university, first as Vice-Chancellor, later as Chancellor, the office which he now holds.

Professor Taylor Elected President By Geographers

Professor Griffith Taylor, Head of the Department of Geography, University of Toronto, has been elected President of the Association of American Geographers, President Cody announced Friday. The annual meeting of this Association was held recently at Baton Rouge. Membership in this Association is restricted to geographers who are engaged in research work and only five or six new members are admitted each year. Those who apply for admission must be able to show that their research is up to the required standard. This is the first time that a geographer

Sandwell to Talk In U.C. Thursday

"Canadian Literature Today" is the subject of the series of lectures to be given in Room 8, University College, every Thursday at 5 p.m. for the next four weeks. The first lecture, "The Background of Canadian Literature" will be given on Jan. 23 by Mr. B. K. Sandwell, editor of Saturday Night.

This is the second series of lectures to be given this year at University College. The first, in the Michaelmas Term, was also based on literary topics. Last year's lectures were based on subjects of common interest, the war, etc. These lectures are given for the benefit of the public as well as any of the students who are interested, and are free of charge. They have been well patronized in the past and the U.C. English Department expect that they will continue to be so.

McIlwain Opens Series Of Lectures

Harvard History Professor Speaks on "Historical Perspective and Recent Historical Development"

INTRODUCED BY CODY

"When final victory comes and come it will," stated Dr. Charles H. McIlwain in the first of the Friday afternoon lectures sponsored by the Department of Political Economy. "It will mark the end of the third serious crisis in the history of government, not only that of England but also of all constitutional government. The effect of recent events on the study of history will be to show the past in the light of the present, not the present in the light of the past."

President Cody, in introducing the speaker, noted that for many years he had had the chair of History of Government at Harvard. Professor McIlwain's address on the subject "Historical Perspective and Recent Historical Development" introduced the series of lectures on "Problems of Modern Government" which is designed to strengthen the position of political science in the university.

"Constitutional government," Dr. McIlwain continued, "is the antithesis of arbitrary government but is not necessarily self-government, although it is in its present form. Government is not an end in itself but a means to preserve the sanctity of liberty and minority rights."

England, explained the lecturer, although she did not originate it, is the only country in Europe to retain constitutional government, once common to all.

"The guaranties of the Magna Carta were of slighter importance than the

Weather No Obstacle To V.C.F. Sleigh-Ride

Freezing rain greeted some seventy enthusiasts who turned out to the Varsity Christian Fellowship sleigh-ride last Thursday night. But fierce snow fights throughout the evening did not permit the dampening effect to be more than skin deep. Since two sleighs were never meant to hold so much humanity, even in layers, the remainder trailed along behind. Inevitably certain laggards mysteriously got lost in a maze of winding roads. Unfortunately they turned up at the rendezvous before all the hot doughnuts, cocoa and apples were consumed.

JUDGES OF DRAMA FESTIVAL OUTLINE PRIZE PLAY REQUIREMENTS

A well-chosen play with good elocution and movement will win the Cody award at the University Drama Festival tomorrow night, according to Mr. Ivor Lewis, Mr. Edgar Stone and Professor Gilbert Norwood, who will adjudicate the festival plays. Entries are being made by Trinity, Victoria and University Colleges.

"If the lines can't be heard, the play is valueless," said Mr. Lewis. "Indistinctness of utterance is one of the commonest faults." The general quality of the production, as indicated by lighting, stage-settings and so on, and the quality of the direction, which affects the movement, and way of speaking of the actors, Mr. Lewis declared are important factors in determining his judgment of a festival play. "We try to avoid being carried away by one actor, and to judge the play by all its characters," he added.

"The greatest fault in this type of production is that the actors do not listen to each other," said Mr. Stone. He explained that this fault prevents their dialogue from seeming spontaneous, and sounding as though it is being spoken for the first time. Mr. Stone criticized university performers for sometimes taking only enough time over the choice and rehearsal of their festival play simply to make an entry, and also for choosing too high above their interpretative ability; on the other hand he felt that for a university group to

Officers of Local Corps Write New Text-Book Prescribed for C.O.T.C.

Major B. E. Tolton, Captain W. A. Bryce of "E" Company Are Co-authors of "Army Work Book"

APPROVED BY H.Q.

Two officers of the local contingent of the Canadian Officers' Training Corps are the authors of a new military text book which has been approved and authorized for general distribution by the authorities of Military District No. 2 Headquarters.

"Army Work Book" by Major B. E.

Tolton and Captain W. A. Bryce, published recently by the University of Toronto Press, employs an instructional method based upon the latest developments in educational technique. "It is designed to develop the soldier as a thinking individual, reacting to emergencies in the correct automatic sequence," Major Tolton told The Varsity Saturday.

"Originally," he continued, "military instruction, like any other form of education, was delivered verbally. In the army this practice continued because, until comparatively recently, the standards of education of the average soldier have not been such that he could best gain information from reading text books. In consequence, those text books and pamphlets which have been published are for the most part synopses of lectures. In other words they employ the verbal method of instruction."

"Learning facts in this way requires skill in memorizing and in reproducing by rote, but information thus acquired may not be of much value when it has to be applied in practice. By employing newer educational techniques in our book, Captain Bryce and I feel that we have provided a means for the student of military matters to acquire and to learn information simultaneously."

The specific purpose for which the "Army Work Book" was written is to act as a guidance for candidates for the 2nd Examination Paper, Infantry (Rifle) and related Arms. It is to become a prescribed text for members of the C.O.T.C., and copies of the book are to be made available shortly. In addition, the book will be useful for reserve units, senior N.C.O. classes, active units, and any individual soldiers who wish to augment their knowledge of military matters. Major Tolton pointed out.

"Army Work Book" is to be used in conjunction with Training Pamphlet No. 1 and Infantry Section Leading 1938. "Together the three books contain all the information necessary to pass the second paper," Major Tolton said. "And the method which our book offers for the co-ordination and arrangement of this information will enable the student to understand and apply it most fully."

One of the outstanding features of the new book is the series of practical exercises which it contains. The questions in these exercises are worded as examination questions, but are graded according to difficulty. They are based upon the information contained in the first part of the book.

Major Tolton is a member of the staff of Humber College and Captain Bryce is a member of the staff of North Toronto Collegiate. Both are military lecturers. Major Tolton is in command of "E" Company of the C.O.T.C., a graduate company of riflemen. Captain Bryce is his second-in-command.

FELLOWSHIPS AVAILABLE AT DUKE UNIVERSITY

Twenty-five fellowships, an equal number of Graduate Scholarships, and numerous Assistantships in Arts and Sciences are available at Duke University, Durham, North Carolina, according to information received at the Registrar's Office. For further information concerning these and similar literature concerning other universities, students should consult the bulletin board in the Registrar's Office, Simcoe Hall.

UNIVERSITY SYMPHONY

Players of instruments are still welcome to join the University Symphony Orchestra, and they are urged to do so as soon as possible as the orchestra will be putting on its usual annual concert about six weeks from now. Practices are at 7.30 every Monday evening in the Women's Union.

Wycliffe Students Cheer As Taylor Honoured

To a vociferous rendering of the Wycliffe yell which he himself composed, Rev. Dr. William Edington Taylor, professor of the history and philosophy of religion at Wycliffe College, received the degree of Doctor of Divinity on Friday night in Convocation Hall. Dr. Taylor has served with all four principals of the college.

The occasion was the installation of the Rev. Dr. Ramsay Armitage as principal of the college, by the Hon. Henry Hague Davis, Chairman of the Wycliffe Board of Trustees.

Also presented with the degree of Doctor of Divinity was the Rev. R. C. Owen, chaplain of Vancouver General Hospital.

Elliott to Address Campus Historians

Historians of the campus will hear stories about pioneering in Ontario from Dr. J. H. Elliott when the Modern History Club meets this Thursday evening at 8. This, the third meeting of the year, will be held in the theatre of the Women's Union.

Dr. Elliott, who is professor of the history of medicine in the university, has long been interested in pioneer life in Upper Canada and particularly in pioneer industrial life. He comes himself of pioneer stock; his family moved into Durham and Northumberland counties in 1831. Dr. Elliott has studied closely the lives of some early settlers and traced their lives in relation to the history of their communities and their province. He is particularly interested in the districts of Rice Lake and Bowmanville which he has travelled intensively, plotting centres of early industrial life. Dr. Elliott, too, possesses a large collection of books on early life in Upper Canada.

Anyone interested in history or in Dr. Elliott's subject, as well as the members of the Modern History Club are invited to be present at the meeting Thursday evening. Refreshments will be served followed by dancing and general merriment.
